Agent of Anti-Vice Society Suddenly Called by Littleton.

Tells About Several Communications He Had From Thaw.

Complained of Parties He Said Were Wronging Young Girls.

New York, Jan. 22.—It was 10:20 o'clock when the Thaw trial was resumed today and Mr. Littleton, of the defense, began at once the preliminaries of proving Harry Thaw's will and codicil executed the day of his wedding to Evelyn Nesbit in Pittsburg. Miss Frances Pierce, who witnessed the signatures, and who testified at the last trial, was called to the stand.

Miss Pierce identified the papers, but District Attorney Jerome objected to the introduction of the will in evidence until witnessses had come forward to prove its custody from the time of signing up to the present moment. Mr. Littleton declared the district attorney's objection simply would delay matters, but he temporarily withdrew the offer of the will. Justice Dowling said the condition of the will, a long rambling affair, was such as to make the proof of custody desirable. There are many changes and alterations in it. As to the codicil, Mr. Jerome objected to its introduction, on the ground that it was in the defendant's own writing, and was a self-serving document. Justice Dowling said the codicil was a compact, continuing document, and was competent as evidence.

Mr. Littleton then read the codicil to the jury. The codicil, it will be remembered, provided a number of bequests to lawyers and others, to aid alleged victims of Stanford White to prosecute claims for damages against him, and for the prosecution of all persons engaged in "such unlawful practices as said Stanford White."

Among those to whom the funds were made available were R. Ross Perry of Washington, Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst and Anthony Comstock. Thaw named a number of young women now on the stage as possible claimants against White.

Comstock Called to Stand.

Following the reading of the codicil, Mr. Littleton created something of a stir by calling Anthony Comstock to the stand—his first appearance in the case. Mr. Comstock said he was vice president and special agent of the Society for the Suppression of Vice and inspector in the postoffice department, having held these positions for many years.

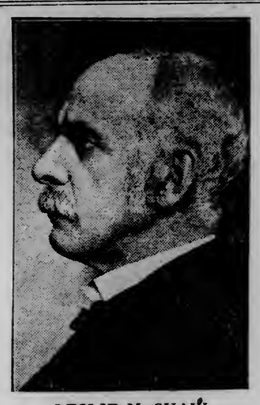

"Do you know Harry Thaw?"

"Yes."

Mr. Comstock said that Thaw called at his office in February, 1904, and complained of a party who was wronging young girls. Thaw went into details, which the witness repeated as far as he could remember. Mr. Comstock also said that he had received several letters from Thaw.

The witness identified several communications from Thaw, one of the papers being a diagram of the premises

LESLIE M. SHAW,
Former Secretary of the Treasury, But Lately President of the Carnegie Trust Company, Has Resigned and Will Again Enter Politics.

PRIMA DONNA IS GIVEN TINY DOG

Chicago, Jan. 22.—A tiny Japanese spaniel, fast asleep and nestling in a bed of carnations and roses, was the unusual gift which was passed over the footlights at the Auditorium last night to Miss Alice Nielsen, prima donna of the San Carlo Opera company. Miss Nielsen had won her audience, and was being heartily applauded when the flower filled basket was handed up to her. The prima donna's bowing and smiling ceased when suddenly the diminutive spaniel aroused from his slumbers sat bolt upright and blinked at the bewildered audience. Miss Nielsen hurriedly bowed herself and the basket off the stage.

SHAW TIRES OF BANKING

Former Secretary of Treasury to Quit Trust Company.

Says He May Shy His Castor Into Political Ring.

New York, Jan. 22.—Leslie M. Shaw has resigned the presidency of the Carnegie Trust company, which he assumed early last March on his retirement from the treasury portfolio at Washington.

In explaining his resignation last night Mr. Shaw said that he had "small differences" with Charles C. Dickinson, the organizer and chief owner of the trust company. Of his future plans he would say nothing definite beyond this statement:

"I may shy my castor into the political ring."

The Carnegie Trust company was organized in January, 1906. In February following Mr. Shaw was made president with an annual salary of $25,000. Friends of Mr. Shaw said last night that he might become the head of another financial institution or possibly return West. Others thought that the political arena would attract him.

Earlier in the evening Mr. Dickinson had refused to confirm the report of the change in the company's management. He said, however, "If Mr. Shaw secures political preferment he will quit the Carnegie Trust company."

LOCHREN MAY RESIGN.

Retirement of Federal Judge Said to be Imminent.

Washington, Jan. 22.—A conference on Thursday, between the president, Senator Knox and Milton D. Purdy, is followed by the statement from a reliable source that the retirement of Judge Lochren from the federal district bench is imminent. Although Mr. Purdy, who is now special attorney general in charge of the trust prosecutions, has been mentioned as Judge Lochren's successor many times during the past year, it is understood that a change on the federal bench for the Minnesota district is now assured. It is understood that Senator Knox went to the president to personally urge the selection of Mr. Purdy for the judgeship, which will be vacant when Judge Lochren retires. Mr. Purdy was made assistant attorney general when Senator Knox was attorney general, and has always held the close friendship of Knox.

DOWN GOES THE RATE.

Paris, Jan. 22.—The Bank of France has reduced its rate of discount from 3½ to 3 per cent.

PEOPLE OF VANCOUVER

Exceedingly Angry Over Continued Influx of the Japanese.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 22.—Strong language was used by members for Vancouver in the British Columbian parliament yesterday, discussing the proposed legislation aimed to restrict Japanese emigration. Mr. MacCowan declared that the situation was growing desperate at Vancouver and if the aggression continued it might be possible that a resort to arms might occur for self-preservation. He said the Japanese of Vancouver were thoroughly armed, and if steps were not taken to disarm them, Vancouver citizens would arm themselves. Dr. MacGuire of Vancouver suggested that the amount of $20,000,000 held to be due British Columbia, should be used to provide armored cruisers, which would assist to defend the Pacific seaboard of Canada, and urgent steps should be taken, whether Japan opposed or not, to exclude the Japanese.

TO GUARD INFORMATION ON CROP STATISTICS.

Washington, Jan. 22.—At the close of a day of excitement in the house, an amendment was added to the Code bill, making it a criminal offense for any officer or employe of the government to give out advance information regarding any crop statistics authorized by the law to be prepared. The original amendment was by Mr. Burleson of Texas, who made a strong plea for its passage, but a substitute by Mr. Sherley of Kentucky, with a brief declaration by Mr. Olmstead of Pennsylvania, was accepted. The necessity for its adoption was conceded by nearly every member who addressed the house and its safe running of the gauntlet was greeted with applause.

UPROAR IN REICHSTAG

When Von Buelow Refuses to Reply to Socialist Query.

Berlin, Jan. 22.—Chancellor Von Buelow refused categorically, in the reichstag today, to reply to a Socialist interpellation on the subject of the Prussian suffrage. This precipitated a deafening uproar from the members, during which all the ministers left the house. The debate was then continued before the half empty benches.

Trouble with the people had been expected, particularly in view of the street disorders of yesterday, and in order to be prepared for a recurrence of violent encounters between the police and the populace, the buildings of parliament were surrounded from early morning with a strong force of police, armed with pistols and sabres. Furthermore, the principal thoroughfares of Berlin are being patrolled constantly by police, both mounted and on foot.

Skillfully Worded.

The interpellation was very skillfully worded, in order to bring it within the official authority of the reichstag. The question was framed as follows:

"On what ground does the chancellor consider manhood suffrage, as already granted for the elections to the imperial parliament, to be harmful to the interests of one of the federal states?"

There was some doubt early today as to whether the chancellor would make a reply or not. It has been his custom to avoid discussing Prussian affairs in the reichstag, but others thought he might empower Dr. Bethmann-Hollweg, minister of the interior, to respond for him.

Prince von Buelow opened the reichstag proceedings by a warning against further manifestations, which he declared did not affect the government in the slighest degree. He threatened, amid ironical cheering from the Socialists, that the leaders and organizers of all demonstrations would be dealth with severely.

SUBMARINES ON LONG TRIP

New York, Jan. 22.—The trip of three submarine torpedo boats, Tarantula, Viper, and Cuttlefish, from Newport, R. I., to the New York navy yard, is causing much interested comment in naval circles. The trip was made in seventeen and a half hours, although much of it was through heavy seas and in the teeth of a very stiff breeze. This is the first time that boats of their class have made such a trip, under their own power. The boats will go into dry dock today and after scraping and repainting they will go to Newport News, said to be the longest trip ever attempted by submarines. There they will undergo a number of tests. The three boats are eighty-three and a half feet long and have a beam of eighteen feet and are fitted with 250-horse power six cylinder gasoline engines. They were launched Oct. 24.

MURDERER CONFESSES

He Killed Three Men and One Woman at Florence.

Story Secured From Neroni by Skillful Italian Detective.

Denver, Jan. 22.—The Republican today prints an alleged confession secured by an Italian detective from Antone Neroni, alias Bavori, charged with the murder of four Italians, three men and one woman at Florence, Colo. The detective is Frank Sandesko of Pueblo, who, according to the story, gained the confidence of Neroni, who is now confined in the county jail at Canon City by pretending to be a member of the Black Hand society from Pittsburg, Pa. The two were permitted to converse in a cell in the jail, Sandesko explaining his presence there by telling Neroni that he was being held on the charge of murder committed in Omaha.

During the conversation Neroni expressed a desire to belong to the Black Hand and when Sandesko told him that it was necessary for him to prove that he had committed twelve murders before he could be admitted, Neroni replied that he was eligible. Sandesko states that Neroni then related to him a series of murders he had committed, beginning with the killing of a neighbor, who had abused him in Italy when he was but 12 years old. The narrative gradually brought him to a recital of details connecting with the disappearance of the four Italians at Florence.

Sandesko says that Neroni confessed that he killed the woman because she would not marry him and disposed of the three men in most brutal fashion because he believed they suspected him of murdering the woman. It was his intention, Sandesko says, to kill the wife and two children of one of his victims also, but the opportunity did not afford itself before he was arrested.

CHARGED WITH KILLING BABY

Paw Paw, Mich., Jan. 22.—A jury was secured yesterday in a murder that is attracting unusual interest here. The defendant is aged M. D. Morehouse and he is charged with shooting to death at South Haven, Nov. 21, Willie Fralick, the 2-year-old son of Morehouse's adopted daughter. The mother of the child had left him in the old man's care while she went on a visit to Grand Rapids, the defendant and the baby spending the night alone as they had frequently done before. About 2 a. m. Morehouse notified a neighbor that the baby had been shot and the child was found lying unconscious with a bullet wound through its head. The baby survived until 8 o'clock that evening. A loaded pistol with one of the cartridges discharged lay outside the house not far from the door. Mrs. Fralick had separated from her husband and her foster father had shown great affection for the baby.

LURED FROM HOME, GOPHER MEETS FATE

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Lured from his winter home by the summerlike weather, a gopher met a tragic death near here. Small boys killed him soon after he appeared. The gopher was unable to run very fast and fell an easy victim. Rarely has a gopher been found roaming around in this section in January.

KELLOGG AND SEVERANCE COUNSEL IN RAIL SUIT.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Attorney General Bonaparte has named Messrs. Kellogg and Severance as special counsel for the government in the suit to be filed to dissolve the combination of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific railroads—the Harriman lines. They were of the government counsel in the Standard Oil case.

Former Senator Clark of Montana, who built the San Pedro railroad, now a Harriman line, may be a witness for the government.

FIREBUGS ARE SHOT

Two Negroes Attempting to Fire Building Killed by Guards.

The Tobacco Factory at Clarksville, Tenn., Scene of Operations.

Clarksville, Tenn., Jan. 22.—An attempt was made last night to set fire and dynamite the loose tobacco factory of the Hayes-Sory Tobacco company, local representatives of the Italian Regies, and two negroes, Tony Allen and Walter Watkins, alias "Frog Eye," were killed while trying to escape, by one of the night watchmen. One other negro escaped, but is thought to have been wounded.

The Regies Tobacco company factory, since the recent trouble in the dark tobacco district, has been closely guarded. The guards usually take lunch at 11 o'clock, and shortly after this hour, when Guard Shanklin was making his rounds, he noticed three men standing in front of a door of the factory on the west side.

The men were bold in their actions and Shanklin at first thought they were guards. One of them struck a match, however, and when he did Shanklin asked who it was. Shanklin was a short distance away and instead of replying to his question the negroes broke and ran. Shanklin followed and at a distance of sixty yards away fired three times at the fleeing men. One of the negroes dropped dead in his tracks, and the second ran about seventy yards to a colored tenement house where he died. The third negro is thought to have been wounded as Mr. Shanklin heard him yell.

An investigation showed that the door of the factory had been saturated with coal oil and four sticks of dynamite placed against it. When the bodies of the two negroes were searched sticks of dynamite were found on their persons in sufficient quantities to wreck the building.

Interment which was private, was made in West Laurel Hill cemetery in this city.

NO DANGER FROM SPIES

To Locks of Panama Canal is Belief of Goethals.

Are Too Far In to be Damaged by Naval Shells.

Washington, Jan. 22.—At the hearing of the senate committee on interoceanic canals, which continued today, Col. Goethals gave assurance that the Panama canal, when completed, would be reasonably safe from military invasion, and said that the chances of the crippling of the canal by spies, armed with dynamite, will be very small, providing armed guards are maintained at the Miraflores and Gatun locks. The locks themselves, Col. Goethals explained, are located sufficiently far from either coast to render them safe from naval attacks. The Gatun lock is located several miles from the Atlantic, and the Miraflores lock eight miles from the Pacific. Shells fired blindly over this distance, in the opinion of the commission, would do very little harm. He also remarked that ships do not waste ammunition when far from their base of supplies. In discussing the possible injury of the locks by spies, Col. Goethals said it was not possible for one or two men to carry sufficient dynamite to do much harm.

Gatun Locks the Vital Point.

He said that perhaps the most vital point along the canal will be the Gatun lock, where an injury to the sluice gates would cause the water to be let out of the lake. This point could be easily guarded, however. The change of plans concerning the locks on the Pacific side, resulting in their removal to a considerable distance from the coast was approved by Col. Goethals as a military necessity.

In response to question by Senator Brandge, Col. Goethals said that very

LIFE PRISONER GOING INSANE

Pardon Board Commutes the Sentence of Phil Sherry.

St. Paul, Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Phil S. Sherry, sentenced to the state prison for life from Swift county, Dec. 7, 1906, will soon be eligible to parole as the result of action of the pardon board, yesterday, in commuting his sentence to fourteen years. Sherry is said to be losing his mind in the prison and an improvement of his mental condition is expected to follow his release from imprisonment.

E. P. Olney of Minneapolis, who was county attorney of Swift county when Sherry was convicted, appeared before the board last Monday and urged that some action be taken to save Sherry from the mental collapse which is imminent. He stated that he is now convinced that Sherry is not guilty of the crime for which he is serving a sentence and that he knew nothing of the shooting.

The board refused to grant the petition for a commutation of the death sentence of Merton S. Munn to life imprisonment. Munn was sentenced to be hanged on Oct. 5, 1907, at Bemidji for the murder of August Franklin at Spooner. It was in pronouncing the death sentence upon Munn and Peter Mathiasen that Judge McClenehan collapsed.

HARDNESS OF THE ARTERIES

Will Determine When the Chicago Policemen Are to be Retired.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Policemen in Chicago are to be retired in order of the hardness of their arteries.

"It has been determined beyond dispute that a man is as old as his arteries," said Health Commissioner Evans last night in explaining the plan on which the retiring board will work.

"While it is a universal rule that as a ban grows old, his arteries harden, yet the process of hardening does not move evenly with the years. The arteries of a man of 50 may be harder than those of another man of 65. It depends on the way he has lived."

The machine for testing the arteries is a hollow rubber band put around the biceps of the arm and connecting with a rubber tube which runs to a common pump bulb in the hand. By working the bulb the person being examined forces air into the band around the arm until it swells enough to stop the pulse. A mercury standard attached indicates hom much pressure this takes.

Wittig will now look over various halls or auditoriums in the big cities, and later will accept the most advantageous offer for holding the match.

TRAGEDY IN RESTAURANT

Woman Shoots Man Five Times and Then Herself.

New York, Jan. 22.—Several hundred persons, most of whom were women shoppers, witnessed a murder and suicide in the restaurant of a large Broadway department store today. Frank Brady, an advertising solicitor for a newspaper, was shot five times and instantly killed by a woman whose name is believed to be Mary R. Clark of 219 West One Hundred and Thirty-third street. The woman then shot herself and died in the hospital to which she was taken.

Mr. Brady was sitting at a table in the restaurant on the eighth floor of the department store and the large room was crowded with shoppers and employes of the store who had gone there for lunch when the woman approached the table where Mr. Brady sat and fired five shots from a revolver into his neck, face and chest. Drawing another revolver from her muff the woman quickly fired three shots into her own body and fell backward on the floor. Witnesses of the shooting sat transfixed until the last shot was fired. Brady was dead when they reached him, but the woman was still alive and was hurried to a hospital, where she died within a short time.

J. S. LANE'S EDITORIAL

You can't expect a good thing like my "20 Per Cent Reduction Sale" to last forever.

It looks to me from the way I am taking orders that I shall soon have to call a halt.

However, I'll give you due warning.

I would suggest, though, that you select your cloth as soon as possible.

There's some mighty nifty stuff in the bunch, and when you consider that for $28 (regular $35), $30.40 (my regular low price $38), or $32 (regular $40), you get the same workmanship, linings and trimmings, and same fabrics that other good tailors would charge you $40, $45 up to $50 for, you must see the wisdom of stacking up now, even if you don't want to use the suit or overcoat till next fall.

You take absolutely no chances in dealing with me, for if everything is not entirely to your liking—then no sale. Yours truly,

IS CAUSING COMMENT

Alderman Haven's Business Record Was Not Known to Many.

Meeting of the Third Ward Democrats is Called.

Alderman Haven's "business record," published last evening in The Herald, was a rather bitter surprise to many people in the city, and it has caused no little comment.

Many who did not take an active interest in the mayoralty campaign, looked upon Mr. Haven as the wise choice of the Republican party, and were not aware of his record as a persistent office-seeker, and of the methods by which he was nominated in the star chamber session of the famous committee of forty.

The faction of the Republican party which supports J. Adam Bede for congress is working diligently in Alderman Haven's behalf. Mr. Bede's political fences are not considered any too sound, and if his friends should aid in electing a mayor in Duluth it would be of material benefit to them in the approaching campaign for congress. A Republican mayor friendly to Bede in the largest city in the district, could be of no little assistance to J. Adam in maintaining his hold on his seat down at Washington.

Members of the Bethany church, where Watson S. Moore pulled off his political meeting Sunday night, have not finished talking about it yet. The more they think of it the angrier they become.

"I wish I had attended the meeting," said a prominent West end Scandanavian, who is a member of the church in question, a Republican and a former Haven supporter.

"I would have stood up and protested against such a speech in church, if I had been there. It was a most unfair advantage to take, and a most uncalled for attack. Mr. Tessman had as many friends in that temperance meeting as Mr. Haven did, but none of them liked to get up and make a scene in a house of worship."

There will be a meeting of the Third ward Democrats at Tessman headquarters in the St. Louis hotel tomorrow evening and all Third ward citizens interested in Mr. Tessman's campaign are invited to attend.

Judge Smith took the case of Michael Bailey against the Wisconsin Central Railway company away from the jury yesterday and ordered judgment for the defendant. A similar action was taken in the case of Frank Batley against the railroad company. The plaintiffs sought to recover wages claimed to be due on road construction. They hired out to a contractor who met with financial reverses and the men sought to hold the railway company responsible for their money.

ARMED STRIFE MAY RESULT

Seattle Man Says Japs in British Columbia Will Fight.

E. C. Rollins of Seattle, Wash., at the Spalding today, when shown a press dispatch regarding the grave anti-Japanese feeling in British Columbia and the sentiment of the parliament of that province toward adopting radical measures in meeting the situation, said that from what he knew of the race feeling across the line the report did not exaggerate the crisis that is arising on the Canadian side of the Pacific coast.

Mr. Rollins said that the day after the race riot in Vancouver, when a mob attacked the Japanese and Chinese quarters, destroying stores and houses, every hardware store and place where firearms were sold was almost completely bought out by Japs in an effort to arm themselves against any future occurrence of a similar nature. The Japs will fight and the Chinese will hide, is the way Mr. Rollins characterizes the different attitude of the two races toward the hostile sentiment of the Canadians on the coast.

The race feeling that is liable to develop into a serious clash, according to Mr. Rollins, is entirely local, in that it lacks the sympathy of the Canadian government officials outside of British Columbia. The citizens and provincal officials know this, he says, and are prepared to act upon their own responsibility.

In Seattle the race problem has not assumed such a serious aspect; in fact, Mr. Rollins says they merely dislike the Japs there. But the immigration laws of Canada permit the coming of the Japanese by the ship load, and they are crowding the Canadians out of the labor field. Mr. Rollins does not believe that any such radical action will be adopted as was talked of in the parliament, but says that people on the coast realize that both the officials of the provincial government and the citizens of Vancouver are prepared for desperate measures.

ENJOY PICNIC IN MIDWINTER

Jamestown People Have Very Unique Outing in January.

Jamestown, N. D., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—A picnic in midwinter with all the characteristics of a midsummer affair of that sort has just been pulled off here. The anamolous stunt was given at Jamestown park, yesterday, under the leadership of Mayor John Severn. It was a warm day, and the songs of birds mingled with the inspiring strains of Tunstall's band, which was on the scene in full swing. Everyone wore a straw hat, and the majority of the ladies appeared in white gowns with summery looking bonnets. A number of June boys in white duck trousers, and silk shirts, coatless and airy were very much in evidence. Free lemonade was dispensed with, and pop corn wagons did a thriving business. A half holiday was declared in the public schools and every school child appeared at the park and had their pictures taken.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 22.—One of the most remarkable recoveries of the bodies of mine victims in the history of Butte was marked yesterday afternoon by finding the remains of Steve Hartnett 1,200 feet down in a shaft of the East Stuart mine, where it had lain for two weeks covered with many tons of rock.

Senator Clark owns the East Stuart and the order was given to spare no expense in recovering the body. Four shifts worked day and night, each man receiving double pay.

Hartnett fell while timbering the old shaft and his body, bounding from timber to timber, dislodged an enormous mass of earth which buried him.

C. A. Marshall of the Lyceum theater has received instructions from the manager of Mrs. Patrick Campbell to see that no steam is turned on in the dressing rooms or anywhere behind the curtain at the two performances Saturday. It is explained that the English are not accustomed to steam heat in their home country, and that their voices are liable to be affected by it, to the detriment of the performance. Mr. Marshall has replied that not only will the heat be turned off, but that electric fans, ice and cold air draughts will be provided, because of the excessive warmth of Duluth's winter climate.

ANNUAL BONSPIEL OF NORTHWESTERN CURLING ASSOCIATION IN FULL SWING

Weather Man Finally Relents and Gives Freezing Weather.

Play Will Continue Night and Day Until Saturday.

The long sought relief for the impatient curlers, waiting in Duluth for the opening of the big bonspiel of the Northwestern Curling association, which was postponed on account of the soft weather, came last night in the shape of a cold snap and this morning, ten glistening sheets of ice presented inviting surfaces. At the rink of the Duluth Curling club early this morning, the roar of the stones, the shouts of the skips and the whisk of the brooms were heard at the rink and at 8 o'clock, the first draw in the Duluth Curling club event was put on the ice.

The ice was in excellent condition, considering the soft weather of the past few days. The thaw had merely resulted in sheets of water on top of the ice and had not rotted the foundations. The result was that the freezing of the surface gave firm smooth ice and the curlers are under no handicap on that account. The only cloud in the sky now is the possibility of a return to the warm weather, but the weather bureau holds out hope and while the ice lasts, it will be in almost constant use.

One draw will be put on each morning at 8 o'clock, another at 1:30 and others will follow at 3:30 p. m., 6 p. m., 8:30 p. m., and 11 p. m. The arrangement will keep all ten sheets of ice in use from 8 o'clock each morning until about 1 o'clock the following morning and if it is necessary for the completion of play, curling will be continued all night during the latter part of the week.

Many Duluth people have wondered if they can witness the games at the bonspiel now in progress. There is no admission fee charged, and spectators are not only admitted but are invited and welcomed by the club, which has provided a steam heated observation room for their benefit. Curling is in progress continuously from 8 a. m. until 11 p. m. or later., Anybody interested in curling is invited to come and stay as long as they please.

THE IMMORTAL "BOB" DUNBAR "GETTING THE BROOM."

A. J. ROCHON

Forty-two Entries.

Many spectators visited the rink this morning, and, if the weather continues cold, the bonspiel will be fully the success it was expected to be had it started as was originally intended. There are forty-two rinks entered, which falls short somewhat of the expectations, but there are a sufficient number and a variety of localities entered to inject the rivalry and enthusiasm desired in the play.

The members of the Duluth Curling club have arranged everything for the convenience and comfort of the visiting curlers and those, who gather to watch the play. The rink has been decorated throughout with bunting, curlers' trophies and other decorative materials and the appearance of the ice, with the crowds of players in its picturesque curling costumes is one to draw the attention of those who have time to visit the rink. The curlers have nearly all adopted the customary mackinaw and "Tam O'Shanter;" in their joy over the turn the weather has taken and the possibility that the bonspiel will be successfully completed, they wield their brooms with more than wonted vigor and give vent to their enthusiasm in hearty shouts. The scene and the atmosphere charged with hearty enthusiasm is impressive and not soon to be forgotten by the visitor, to whom the bonspiel is new, and to be reveled in by the old-timers.

There can be no question about the quality of rinks entered in the spiel. It is the classiest bunch of curlers that ever assembled for a bonspiel in the Northwestern association, and there are some rare contests in prospect. Curlers like Dunbar of St. Paul, Rochon and Braden of Winnipeg, Hastings of Minneapolis, MacKenzie of Winnipeg, Tom Cameron, Stewart and Evan Rees of St. Paul, and a dozen other noted skips are here, and their attendance is enough to insure the success of any bonspiel.

Bonspiel Notes.

The Great Dunbar, generally admitted to be the greatest individual curler in the world, is, of course, the center of attraction at the spiel. "Bob" is as popular as he is famous among the curlers.

Winnipeg is represented by a contingent of pretty keen curlers. Kinks like those skipped by Braden, Rochon and MacKenzie can hold their own in any company.

The local curlers are delighted to welcome back the Phillips "bunch." The Phillips club was represented here last year and made many friends.

A. K. Smith of Superior is always a dangerous opponent. "A. K." is one of the veteran skips and knows the game from A to Z.

T. F. McGillvray was the last Duluth skip to enter his rink. "If weight counts for anything, we score," said T. F. "We're the 'Shadows,' since we weigh only half a ton in the aggregate."

West Duluth is more largely represented this year than in any previous "spiel," and the men from the western end of the city are counting on taking something back with them.

Neil Smith of Superior was the last skip to enter his rink, but he counts on not being the last in the standings, when the grand average is counted up.

• • •

J. H. Blackwood is the busiest man connected with the spiel. The work of the curlers is child's play compared to his activity in making drawings and taking care of the impatient questioners who line up before his desk.

MEETING OF PILGRIM CHURCH

A most interesting and highly satisfactory annual meeting of the Pilgrim Congregational church was held last evening at the church parlors and the reports of the various organizations of the church were heard with applause by the 200 members assembled. The church is in fine financial condition and the treasury of every department reported all outstanding indebtedness paid and a balance on hand.

The report for the Ladies' union of the church for the year was read by the retiring president, Mrs. Frederick Bates. This organization has paid during the year $1,000 to the church building society, besides the running expenses and ends the year with more than $100 in the treasury. ROSS CASE IS LEFT WITH JURY

The case of the state against Jim Ross, who was indicted for stealing $70 from Moise Trouche, Dec. 4 last, was given to the jury, this morning, after a trial lasting about two days. Ross, who is a tie-maker by trade, is claimed to have taken the money from Trouche's pocket while the two were asleep at a boarding house in this city.

When Trouche went to the police with the story of his loss Jim Ross is claimed to have left the complaining witness and gone to an Italian friend on First street. Ross was arrested shortly afterward and $10 in gold was found on his person. The police and other witnesses for the state claim that Ross made certain statements as to how he happened to have the money, that the defendant absolutely denied when on the witness stand. It is claimed that he "planted" the remaining $60 between the time he left Trouche and his arrest.

DINNER POSTPONED.

THINKS BRYAN COULD NOT WIN

Washington, Jan. 22.—"Governor Johnson is a great admirer of Mr. Bryan, and if the latter is nominated he will give him hearty support, but Governor Johnson is now confessedly receptive, and is simply waiting for his Democratic friends to call him to take the standard of the party," says Representative W. S. Hammond, Democratic member from the Second Minnesota district, in an interview in the Washington Post.

"It is true that Mr. Bryan is today the strongest man in the party," said Representative Hammond, "and he deserves to be ranked with the great men of the country, but I do not believe it will be wise for the Democratic party to nominate him for the third time. I am not favoring Governor Johnson simply because he is governor of my state, but I believe Governor Johnson will develop greater strength and will rally all the antagonistic elements of the party more surely than any other tentative candidate whose name has appeared.

Strength of Johnson.

"I do not deny that the mention of his name has somewhat angered some of my people who are partial to Mr. Bryan, and a few of the more prominent of these, misconceiving the attitude of Governor Johnson toward Mr. Bryan, have disparaged the former's strength in his own state. No fair-minded Bryan partisan can ignore the fact that Governor Johnson carried the state of Minnesota in the last gubernatorial election by about 75,000 majority, the largest majority ever given a candidate for any office in the state of Minnesota.

"I would not draw invidious comparisons, but Governor Johnson's popularity is not adventitious, not depending on some sudden outburst of popular favor; it has depended upon a steady growth, while we all know that Mr. Bryan's startling speech in the Chicago convention in 1896 was an unexpected flash of a new luminary in the political firmament.

"To be practical and to face a condition, it is certain that Governor Johnson can carry his own state. This Mr. Bryan cannot do, and I claim that this makes a good beginning. No one will deny that Governor Johnson can carry every Southern state, and this Mr. Bryan cannot do. Mr. Johnson has a chance to carry such states as Illinois, Michigan and other Northwestern states; this Mr. Bryan cannot do. It is a conjecture, judging from the vote cast, that Mr. Bryan cannot carry New York state, and Governor Johnson might.

Carry Old Line.

"Without being radical, without anything that looks like the demagogue or mountebank, Governor Johnson will be able to satisfy the Gold Democrats as well as the ultra wing of the party; while Mr. Bryan has not only alienated beyond recall the old-line Cleveland Democrats, but he defies them with evident scorn."

Representative Hammond enlarged upon Governor Johnson's private and public record, and added: "I am sorry that other members of congress do not feel justified in speaking out their true sentiments touching the probable results of the next election if Mr. Bryan is nominated.

"I think it should be done, in justice to the great commoner, as he would then probably see the futility of accepting a third nomination, it being estimated that almost 75 per cent of the members of congress do not believe that Mr. Bryan can be elected if nominated."

A. H. SMITH,

It Stops Itching

HEALS THE SKIN.

It is because Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment possesses in a remarkable degree the ability to stop itching and heal raw skin, that it has become known the world over as the most successful treatment for such diseases of the skin as eczema, and salt rheum.

Any one who is familiar with the life of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author, knows that few physicians ever had such an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the most effective medical treatments, and nothing that the doctor ever put his name to has been so marvellously successful as

Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment

You can prove this absolutely in any case of eczema. After the first few applications the wretched, stinging, itching sensations are relieved, and gradually and naturally the raw sores become smaller and smaller until they entirely disappear. 50 cents a box, at all dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. Ed. Kenelly, Sr., Dannemora, N. Y., states:

"I was troubled with a severe form of eczema; itching so bad I could not sleep, but kept scratching all the time. Am pleased to state that Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment cured me, and I have had no recurrence of the trouble."

SEE EXPERT DRILL WORK

Modern Samaritans Give Apollo Degree Team Rousing Reception.

Officers of Alpha Council Installed With Appropriate Ceremonies.

A large attendance of Modern Samaritans and members of the beneficent degree turned out to the Armory, last evening, to witness the exhibition drill given by the seventeen women comprising the famous Apollo team of the order at St. Paul. The team has been drilled to a high degree of excellence in its work and its exhibitions here, as elsewhere, merit the highest praise. The fancy drill was considered one of the finest things of the sort ever seen in Duluth and the ladies were frequently applauded.

It had been intended that the Apollo team would exemplify the secret work of the beneficent degree, but as there were a number present who were not members of the order that portion of the program had to be omitted.

The program was presided over by C. E. Lovett and was participated in by M. M. Hanna of Two Harbors and Andrew Nelson of this city, both of whom made short addresses. Miss Adele McLaren recited and Miss Harris and Charles Applehagen sang.

In behalf of Alpha council, W. A. Hicken made presentations to the sick committee and entertainment committee of the order.

The escorts whose drill was a feature of the evening, were: Nellie Johnson, Hattie Peterson, Mary Tierney, Ottine Dake, Selma Telander, Edna Lindgren, Ruby Soderberg, Ellen Jacobson, Judith Anderson, Hilda Benson, Annie Johnson, Hannah Klang, Edith Hedburg, Hannah Nelson, Isabel Adams and Alma Dawns.

After the evening's program, an orchestra furnished music for dancing.

A BIG PURSE FOR MITCHELL

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 22.—Perhaps the most eloquent speech President John Mitchell of the United Mine Workers, ever made, was delivered yesterday afternoon when he declined to accept a personal gift of $2,700 tendered him by the miners of Montana and Wyoming, as a token of their appreciation of President Mitchell's efforts to make their conditions better. As he spoke, trying to check his emotion, tears came to his eyes.

"Give it to Mrs. Mitchell, and the children," he said, trembling with emotion. Big, hardy miners shed tears with him. Thomas Gibson, president of the Montana miners, had come to the platform, carrying a draft for $2,300. He said the draft was backed by a smaller amount that would bring the amount up to $2,700.

"We do not come with a loving cup," he said, "but we feel it is our duty to give some testimony of our appreciation of what President Mitchell has done for us."

Then President Mitchell arose.

"Gentlemen of the convention," he said, "and particularly the miners of Montana and Wyoming, I cannot explain to you how I appreciate this expression of good-will and confidence.

"I don't know what to do—I don't want the money. If I could ask you to take it back and give it to the men who sent it here and feel sure they would know I appreciate their confidence as much as though they had given me as many millions as they have hands, I would feel bettef about it.

"I prefer that you take the money back, but if you cannot do that without danger of giving offense to the good people who sent it to me— then send it to Mrs. Mitchell and let her use it to educate our boys."

The draft will be sent to Mrs. Mtchell.

HUGHES WILLING TO BE CANDIDATE

For Nomination for the Presidency If Republicans So Wish.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 22. — Governor Hughes, last night, publicly declared his attitude toward the movement in favor of his nomination for the presidency in a letter to James S. Leahmir of New York, acknowledging notification of the resolution of endorsement recently published by the Republican club and appointing the evening of Friday of next week for a meeting with the club at which, he intimates, he will still more definitely declare himself.

"I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred upon me," said the governor, "by my fellow members of the Republican club in the passage of the resolution to which you refer, and it will give me pleasure to accept the invitation. In accepting it, it is proper for me to re-state my position:

"It is my desire that the sentiment of the party shall have the freest expression and that action shall be taken for its best interest. I do not seek office nor shall I attempt to influence the selection or vote of any delegate. The state administration must continue to be impartial and must not be tributary to any candidacy. I have no interest in any factional controversy and I hope there shall be deliberation in the party will and policy. I cannot fail to recognize the great honor which the nomination would confer or the obligation of service which it would impose. Nor should I care to be thought lacking in appreciation and confidence and esteem which prompt the efforts of those who sincerely desire to bring it about. The matter is one for the party to decide, and whatever its decision is, I shall be content.

"I shall be glad to meet with the members of the club as you suggest and to make such further statement as may be appropriate. In view of the engagements already made I do not see how it will be possible to have such a meeting before the evening of Jan. 31. And if that date suits your conveniences arrangements for the meeting may be made accordingly."

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 22.—That Governor Hughes has determined under no conditions that can be foreseen to accept a renomination as governor, is stated with increasing positiveness by those who have talked with him. He will not discuss the matter at all for publication, but has been candid on the subject with those in his confidence. It can be said with assurance that those who have stated this to be his opinion have not misrepresented him.

SUBSTITUTES FOR THE ALDRICH BILL

Washington, Jan. 22.—Financial bills which will be offered as substitutes for the Aldrich financial bill are being prepared by Senator Bailey and Senator Hansbrough.

Most of the Democratic members of the senate committee on finance are expected to co-operate with Senator Bailey on his measure which will be ready to present when the finance committee again meets. It is in effect a bill providing for the issue of money by the government through deposits in banks. The emergency securities that the Aldrich bill specifies, such as municipal, county and railroad bonds, will come into use through a system of deposits in national banks by the government for which the securities will be taken and held by the government, and on which certain rates of interest will be charged the banks.

Senator Bailey is endeavoring, as far as possible, to retain the specific terms of the Aldrich bill, by reversing the provisions in such a way as to cause government deposits of currency in banks instead of government issues of curreney to banks. Under the proposed system the government will issue notes that are secured and deposit them in banks in quantities that correspond to the securities offering making the securities at such values as the bill will specify. There will first be an attempt to have railroad bonds eliminated as securities from the Aldrich bill, but if this action is defeated, Senator Bailey will take that action as the will of the committee and place them in his substitute.

Senator Teller is known to favor the Bailey substitute, railroad bonds, and all, and it is believed that the remaining Democrats of the committee will also urge the substitute and accept Senator Bailey's view of the situation.

The central bank bill, which Senator Hansbrough introduced in the senate early in the session, also will be offered as a substitute for the Aldrich bill.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

One of the most important of the committee meetings of the Women's Council for the year was held yesterday afternoon at the Washington school when plans for the proposed art school for Duluth were discussed at length. The committee has received the consent of the board of education for the use of a room of the Washington school building for the school and it is hoped that arrangements may be completed to receive pupils in the spring. The object of the art school is to provide instruction for Duluth young people, who may desire it in design and craft work, which will be equivalent to the regular first year of work in the best art schools of the country. It is planned to have the work a self-supporting one from the first and the representative women of the city interested in the progress of Duluth along practical and cultural lines are identified with the movement.

As there has been but little given to the public in regard to the work the following detailed report of the chairman, which will be presented at the next meeting of the Women's Council will be of interest:

"The Arts and Crafts committee of the Women's Council shall appoint a sub-committee to act as a board of managers for the art school subject to the approval of the Women's Council.

"This committee shall consist of twelve women.

"This sub-committee shall be again divided into four committees to be as follows:

(a.) Committee to secure teacher.

(b.) Committee to arrange course of study.

(c.) Committee on rooms and equipment.

(d.) Committee on pupils and terms of admission.

"The committee on teacher, shall be given power to choose and engage a suitable teacher, the maximum salary to be fixed by the managers.

"Other teachers shall be engaged by the committee of three as a demand for such teachers and the income from the fees of pupils warrant such expenditure.

"It is proposed that the school shall be self-supporting from the first.

"There shall be a secretary appointed from among the pupils, who shall act as custodian of supplies, and this secretary shall receive a full scholarship as payment for services performed.

"The committee on pupils and terms of admissions, shall arrange for this officer.

"The committee on rooms and equipment shall secure suitable rooms for the use of the school and arrange the terms upon which the rooms can be used, rent, lighting, heat, janitor service, number of days in the week the rooms can be used by the school, number of hours in the day.

"This committee is further empowered to expend a sum not exceeding $50 in equipping the room for the use of fifteen or more pupils.

"The committee on course of study is instructed to arrange a plan of work which will correspond to the first two years' work in any of the best schools of the country, thus carrying out, as nearly as possible, the purpose for which this art school is organized, namely, to give to art students in Duluth, the course of study which will enable them to receive full credit for work done, if, at the end of two years, their talent should warrant them in entering the lerger schools for advanced study.

"The committee on pupils and admission shall secure the names of pupils, and arrange a register of the same for the benefit of the board of managers. The pupils shall be divided into classes, according to work done, and further divided into classes of those wishing the full course of six days in the week for a term of three months, and those wishing fewer lessons in the week.

"No pupils will be received for less than the term of three months. The rate for lessons will be based on the rate charged in similar schools.

"The school year shall consist of nine months, divided into three terms of three months each.

"A summer school of three months may be maintained if there is a demand for such a school.

"It is recommended that a circular be prepared by the committee, on pupils and terms of admission, giving the course of study and the charge for lessons.

"This circular shall be sent to all probable pupils ,through the medium of the schools, the various clubs and organizations of the city, or in any manner the committee may think best.

"It is further recommended that the school be opened by April 1, 1908, if the work of the committee can be completed and the proper number of pupils secured.

"As this school is under the direction of the Woman's Council, all money received and disbursed shall come from the council and be accounted for to them. A report of the work of the managers of the art school shall be submitted in writing to the council at each meeting of that body.

"This outline of work having been accepted by the arts and crafts committee at their first meeting on Jan. 21, 1908, shall serve as a basis for organization, subject to the approval of the woman's council. Submitted by the board of managers of the art school, Mrs. Joseph D. Titcomb; Mrs. John B. Weston, Miss Gertrude Carey, Miss Mary Naughton, Miss Robertson, Miss Ella Roe, Mrs. W. B. Phelps, Mrs. Henry S. Mahon, Miss Lydia Poirier, Miss Jessie Thompson, Miss Jessie Hopkins, Mrs. Henry C. Marshall, chairman.

Committee to engage teacher—Mrs. J. W. Titcomb, Mrs. J. B. Weston, Miss Carey.

Committee on rooms and equipment —Miss Roe, Mrs. W. B. Phelps, Mrs. Henry I. Mahon.

Committee on pupils and admission —Miss Lydia Poirier, Miss Jessie Thomson, Miss Jessie Hopkins.

The state art exhibit will be shown in this city in June or July under the direction of the Duluth Art association and the arts and crafts committee of the Women's Council.

The committee which will prepare for the annual arts and crafts exhibit for Duluth and the surrounding country will consist of Miss Mary Naughton, Mrs. Homer Collins, Miss Jessie Hopkins, Mrs. Ralph N. Marble, Mrs. Robert Morris Seymour and Chalmers Agnew.

Roman beauty apples, 90 cents a peck.
Nuts.

Unseasonable things are never or at least seldom desirable. For instance soup for breakfast, or strawberries in January or buckwheat cakes in July or May weather in winter. The wonder of any one of these things may hold attention for a time but eventually a spell of discontent will seize one and a plaintive "It's not like things used to be," will seem the greatest grievance on earth. This is all apropos of the weather. One can imagine Nature all tired out with always having winter weather in the winter time and summer weather in the summer time, just simply deciding to herself that for once she'd get ahead of the earliest settler and fix up a dose of weather that would deserve the attention which it would undoubtedly receive. And so early spring weather has been provided for the winter time to the perfect dismay of those people who hate change and who love the first accepted order of things.

Send up a barrel of apples and half a bushel of pop corn, please.

JEWISH WEDDING.

Interesting Orthodox Service Takes Place at Synagogue.

An interesting wedding service took place yesterday afternoon at the synagogue on East Third street, when Miss Hattie Shapira, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Shapira, of 207 East Second street, became the bride of Nathan Ripstein of Winnipeg. The interesting Jewish orthodox wedding service took place at 5 o'clock, with Rabbi Arensohn of St. Paul officiating. The bride had as her maid of honor Miss Mary Shapira, and the bridesmaids were Miss Jessie Markovitz and Miss Rosie Ripstein of Winnipeg. The bridegroom had as his attendants Max Byalin of Winnipeg, Max Levinson and Hyman Ripstein of Winnipeg. La Brosse's orchestra played the wedding music. The bride wore a gown of white satin, trimmed in lace panels. Her veil was caught with a cluster of lilies of the valley, and she carried bride's roses. Miss Markovitz wore a pink gown, and carried roses, and Miss Ripstein wore a white lace gown.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the old Masonic Temple hall, and was followed by a large reception. Two hundred guests were present. La Brosse's orchestra played.

Among the out-of-town guests for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. I. Rubenstein of Chicago, Mrs. B. Berger and daughter of Burlington Vt., Mr. and Mrs. D. Ripstein, Abram Lechtizer and Mrs. M. Codden, all of Winnipeg; Mrs. Grengard of International Falls, Mrs. B. Milavetz of Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. M. Rogalsky and Miss Bessie Shapira of Hibbing, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Summerfield and daughter, Fanny, and I. Summerfield, I. Markovitz and Max Markovitz of Cloquet, Miss Betty Arensohn of St. Paul, and Miss Ossia Bloom of Minneapolis, Harry Shonedling, Hibbing and T. Levant of Eveleth.

Mr. Ripstein and his bride left last evening for an Eastern wedding trip. The bride's going away dress was of brown chiffon broadcloth, with a hat to match. After Feb. 25 Mr. and Mrs. Ripstein will be at home at the Occidental hotel at Winnipeg.

Informal Bridge.

Mrs. James T. Hale entertained informally, yesterday afternoon, at her home on East First street, in honor of Mrs. A. D. McRae of Winnipeg. Bridge was played at four tables, and the favor was won by Mrs. D. W. Stocking. Mrs. McRae has been the guest of honor at several informal affairs during the week.

Simple Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Anna B. Trausch and Charles Helmer will take place this evening at the parsonage of the German Catholic church. The bride will be attended by Miss Florence Moran, and the groomsman will be Thomas Bernhardt. The service will be read by Father Hufnagel, at 6 o'clock. Mr. Helmer and his bride will be at home in this city.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. William Chapman of Minneapolis is the guest of friends in the city.

Miss Hazel Hobbs left yesterday for Grand Rapids, Mich., where she will take a position as assistant manual training instructor of the public schools of that city.

It Does the Business.
Mr. E. E. Chamberlain, of Clinton, Maine, says of Bucklen's Arnica Salve: "It does the business; I have used it for piles and it cured them. Used it for chapped hands and it cured them. Applied it to an old sore and it healed it without leaving a scar behind." 25c at all drug stores.

DIRECTORY OF AMUSEMENTS

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT.

LYCEUM — Mack-Leone company in "Christopher, Jr."
METROPOLITAN—Burlesque.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the greatest of English actresses, who is to give "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" at the Lyceum Saturday night, rarely talks of her work or of her theories of art. Interviewers of the famous star are apt to find themselves interviewed before they realize it, for Mrs. Campbell is fond of turning the tables on her visitors after the fashion of Chinese diplomacy.

The other night at the Lyric theater, New York, however, Mrs. Campbell in talking to a lady, gave a sharp and unusually interesting glimpse into her reading of the character of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray."

"You ask me why I make Mrs. Tanquery a woman of such great refinement. Why, my dear, think of the society in which she moved! She has to be a lady, otherwise would men have invited her to act as their hostess on board their yachts—even bachelor yachts? No, no! The obviously immoral woman does not attract gentlemen. She is repulsive. Perhaps you don't understand the kind of woman Mrs. Tanqueray represents. We have them in England, so many of them."

The Mack-Leones.

The Mack-Leone company repeated "Christopher, Jr" at the Lyceum last evening before a large audience. The new company is one of the strongest stock organizations outside of the big Eastern cities, and is giving most creditable performances.

The Burlesquers.

Pat White, the star of the organization at the Metropolitan this week, is nothing if not an eccentric dancer, as he shows in one of his stunts in "Casey at the Bat," which is the skit which opens the Gaiety Girls' performance. The entire company, divided up into half dozen squads, does international and eccentric dances and the gay Pat leads every number. The costume he wears durnig the trick is a hit also.

LOWRY WILL STICK.

Hennepin County Republicans Divided Into Three Camps.

Minneapolis, JaJn. 22.—Two Republican conferences were held yesterday in Minneapolis. One gathered in a New York Life building office, and was attended by the main spokes in the Lowry organization. The other meeting was held at the Commercial club, and it was the nucleus of the Taft organization, soon to be formed.

There was some prospect of the two elements getting together, but no overtures came from either side, and the Republicans of Hennepin are still divided into three camps, the La Follette organization forming the third. The Lowry men, after their conference, gave it out flat-footed that Mr. Lowry's name would not be withdrawn. It was determined in the meeting to go ahead and perfect their organization, and, for the present at least, to force the situation hard in Mr. Lowry's interests.

MR. HAVEN'S BUSINESS RECORD.

If elected I propose to devote all my time to the office, and to give the city a thorough-going business administration.—Alderman Haven's platform.

These are fine words, but fine words butter no parsnips. What would count a great deal more, from a candidate for mayor of Duluth, is a successful business record. Managing a city is a business affair, and it takes a business man to do it. Mr. Haven's statement that he proposes to give the city a "thorough-going business administration" opens the way for a fair inquiry into his capacity for doing what he says he will do; and the best way to judge of his fitness is to examine his business record.

With this idea in mind, The Herald has made an investigation of his business career, the results of which were published last night. In doing this The Herald was aware that comparatively few residents of Duluth knew much about the gentleman; in fact many of them had not heard of him before his selection as the Republican candidate for mayor behind closed doors in a star chamber session of forty self-constituted leaders.

Apparently Mr. Haven has fluctuated, during the past five years, between the holding of small political places and short-term incumbencies of private employment.

Through all this period he has been an alderman of the city of Duluth, but that hardly comes under the head of business record. He was secretary of J. Adam Bede's campaign committee in 1902, when the present congressman from the Eighth district was first elected. He was chairman of the county committee in 1904, during the Dunn campaign, and in 1906 he was chairman of the Bede campaign committee. In each of these services he "devoted all of his time to the office," as he proposes to do to the office of mayor.

Scattered in between, he was director of the census in St. Louis county in 1905; assessor of unorganized territory for the state; clerk in the county auditor's office; temporary secretary for J. Adam Bede; bookkeeper for the LeDew Implement company; bookkeeper for the Stevens tug line, and for a short time until recently he was a small partner in the firm of L. R. Helbing & Co., being part of the time president of the Builders' exchange.

Incidentally, too, he was a candidate for receiver of the land office, a candidate for state weighmaster in the grain inspection department of the state, and now he is a candidate for mayor.

The Republicans of Duluth had recognized the need of having a business man as their candidate for mayor, and at a meeting called for the purpose of looking the situation over the names of Watson S. Moore, Frank A. Brewer, C. S. Wilson and others were considered. None of them would accept, and finally, at that star chamber session of the famous "committee of forty," Mr. Haven was chosen.

There is nothing in this record discreditable to Mr. Haven. His tastes have led him into politics, and he has been in a position to drop his private calling, whatever it may have been, to take charge of a campaign, to fill temporarily any small political office that presented itself, or to seek a better one.

Yet is this a record warranting the voters of Duluth in turning the city's affairs over to him in a period of vital importance, when they have as an alternative, in Mr. Tessman, a man who has been a successful business man, and who has made politics not a business, but a duty of citizenship?

THE FINNS.

The theory that the Finns are Mongols, and as such are not entitled to citizenship, was no doubt a great surprise to many people when it was advanced by the government. Judge Cant's decision, handed down yesterday, that they are entitled to citizenship, was much less of a surprise.

It is true that a slender strain of Mongol blood exists in the Finnish people. But it goes so far back, and it has been so diluted by intermixtures with Caucasian blood of various sorts, notably Teutonic, that it is merely a memory, and creates no racial characteristics that attract notice.

The Finns are very numerous in this section of the state, and the great bulk of the Finnish population is included in the most desirable element in the recently-arrived population. It is true that the Finns, like all nationalities, have their black sheep, but the great majority are sober, honest, industrious and public-spirited. There is no nationality that seeks the soil more readily than they. Thousands of them, after a few years at ordinary labor, have settled upon the fruitful soil of St. Louis county, and are redeeming the wilderness.

The decision that they are entitled to citizenship is thoroughly sound, and in accord with public policy. According to the state census of 1905 they were the most numerous among the foreign-born residents of this county, numbering 12,076. They are tillers of the soil, thrifty, temperate and law-abiding. They should be welcomed to citizenship.

THRIFTY IMMIGRANTS.

A bulletin of the federal bureau of labor contains some facts and figures that show that the people of this country can, if they are so minded, take lessons in thrift from some of the immigrants that are now flocking to these shores.

The amount that some of the common laborers among the immigrants can live upon is nothing short of astounding. For instance, it is stated that among Italian laborers the average monthly cost of food per head in the railroad commissary department is $5.13 to $5.48. In contract commissaries the cost is a little higher, $5.90 to $7; and in exceptional camps the average is $8.50 to $10. The highest cost, therefore, is $10 a month, and it runs as low as $5.13.

Slavs and Hungarians require more. Their minimum food cost, on the co-operative plan, averages $8.43 to $11, and in boarding houses, including lodging, it is $12 to $18.

An incident is related of an Italian laborer who acted as interpreter and subforeman on railroad work at $1.50 a day. He sent to his folks in Italy $220 as his surplus saving after six months' work. During the preceding month his total food expense was $4.48, divided as follows: 36 loaves of bread at 8 cents, $2.88; 7½ pounds of fatback, 90 cents; 10 pounds of macaroni, 70 cents. On that diet this Italian laborer kept up his working force and maintained his health.

The report says that the Italian laborers save more money at the same wages than any other class of European laborers in the United States. According to a commissary clerk of years' experience in hourly touch with them, "in every 100 Italians employed on railroads at 14 cents an hour, ninety-five men will save $25 to $27 per month after paying for food, shanty and clothing." A table in the report shows that the average surplus earnings of 679 Italians in a month in 1905 was $27.29, and in 1906 the average was $30.28 a month for 1,530 men, after paying for food, rent of shanty, clothing, tobacco, soap, etc.

In the seven years ending with 1906, money orders sent from this country to Italy, Austria-Hungary and Russia, averaging $28.08 each, amounted to $119,757,895.86, and about the same amount was sent to other countries.

The thriftiest immigrants—those who will live on the least and save the most, come from these countries. During the seven years ending with 1906 there was sent from this country to Europe $29.54 for every man, woman and child born in Italy and living in this country. During the same period there was sent to Europe $19.81 for every man, woman and child from Austria-Hungary and Russia.

These figures furnish food for thought. The fact that the money goes to Europe is not so important as the danger that the knowledge that the laborers can live on so little may—and perhaps does—lead employers to crowd wages down to a point where less thrifty workers cannot exist.

CITIZEN LOWRY.

There is cheerful news for the plain people in this morning's News Tribune. They are assured that the name of Thomas Lowry will not be withdrawn as a candidate for delegate at large to the Republican national convention. They are assured that his forces are not dismayed, and that they will stand valiantly for the election of that sterling friend of the people's nickels and for an uninstructed delegation that will not be likely to imperil the national prosperity by supporting any candidate who would continue the Roosevelt policy.

The morning paper has been very busy of late in its endeavor to cheer up the plain people with news of this sort. One day, snugly tucked away in a general review of the political situation, appears the comforting intelligence that the people are calling for the selection of Mr. Lowry and that his victory is certain. Another day a Minneapolis letter brings similarly cheerful news. The next day that demand of the people for Mr. Lowry is again impressed upon the readers of the morning paper.

There is great comfort for the plain people in this intelligence. Mr. Lowry stands for an uninstructed delegation composed of friends of the people like himself. He thinks little of Taft, because Taft is likely to carry on the crusade begun by President Roosevelt, and that means vexation to those dearly beloved friends of the people, the big interests. His idea is, no doubt, that if enough uninstructed delegations go to Chicago, it will be easy to stampede the convention for some such true and tried friend of the plain people as Speaker Cannon, Senator Foraker or Vice President Fairbanks.

And the News Tribune, delicately and judiciously, is doing its little best to help him along.

GOVERNMENT RATE-MAKING.

The Philadelphia Ledger says that "the principle of governmental regulation and fixing of rates has been incorporated into the nation's laws."

The Pittsburg Dispatch says that this is a mis-statement, and a common one. Is it?

The interstate commerce law as it now stands provides that where shippers consider themselves injured by a railroad rate, they may appeal to the commission to have it adjusted to its proper level. That is the law, and that is the practice. The question whether this is "government rate-making" or not seems hairsplitting. The government has not yet taken the stand that it can deliberately go into the railroad offices and fix the rates the railroads shall charge before the rates fixed by the railroads are complained of, but it has definitely taken the stand that if rates fixed by railroads prove unjust to shippers, it has the right to alter them to square with justice. That is not only the government's right, but it is the government's duty.

It is true, as the Dispatch says, that the railroads still have the power to fix their own rates, and that the government does not originate them. Yet the railroads know that if they fix unfair rates, aggrieved shippers have the right to complain of them and the interstate commerce commission has the right to lower them. This is government rate-making in effect, if not in practice, since the railroads will naturally be guided in their fixing of rates by the knowledge that there is an arm of the government whose duty it is to see, upon complaint, that their rates are fair.

The proposal to bring about a governmental valuation of railroad property, which has the support of President Roosevelt and of many other statesmen, foreshadows a more complete government rate-making than the interstate commerce law now provides. That involves the possible discovery that certain roads are charging such rates as to earn unfair dividends on their actual values. If such an appraisal were made, and a railroad should be discovered charging rates high enough to pay dividends upon stock and bonds amounting to twice as much as the property is fairly worth, the obvious duty of the government would be to see that that railroad's rates were reduced to a point where they would yield a fair dividend upon a fair capitalization. That would be government rate-making in a much more advanced form than any now proposed.

Yet it is not to be supposed that if such an appraisal is made, and such discoveries follow, the government will fail to go into rate-making to this extent. It would be only fair to the people, however much grief it might cause to the owners of the watered stock.

However, that is a step that is still a long way in the future, and while events may hasten the time when it will be taken, it is not bothering the railroads very much now.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Precedent in the drama is as strong as in the ancient game of spiritualism. There is always a tall dark man, with a black mustache, for the villain, when as a matter of fact statistics show that many of the perfidious ones were of the short stature. Clear back in the Greek dramas a villain wore a black mustache and was tall; since then all nations have been following out the line laid down by the Greeks for the proper appearance of the villain. Whether or not the Greek villain inhaled the cigarette, emitting "curses you" with the smoke, is a fact that has escaped the notice of the old century dramatic reviewers. Of course, even in the old Greek pleasure providers, the hero crabbed his efforts, for he was always a stalwart boy, with biceps that had a much better opportunity of being appreciated under the old Greek costume than do those of the modern brother thespian, whose swelling muscles that come to the assistance of femininity in dire distress, must hide under the classic garb of a dress suit.

Some traveling men, with chairs drawn up and cigars drawing nicely, were discussing the "drammer" at the St. Louis, last night.

The villain phase came into the discussion, and one man wanted to know why the trouble maker of the modern play was always a city man, and why he always secured a mortgage on the old homestead. One sugested that the farms that we are told about in plays must have been of poor subsoil, or else the old man, who comes tottering in at the end of the first act, must have been an awfully extravagant old cuss, for all the melodrama farms are sewed up tight with a mortgage, the city man holding the mortgage and threatening to foreclose and drive the old folks away from the elm trees unless the blonde daughter, who wears a multitude of diamonds, although the daughter of poor parents, will consent to honor and obey. A man who sells calendars, suggested that he might be a cashier in a bank, and, therefore, have access to the stuff that makes the buying of mortgages as well as matramonial ventures, possible. They all agreed, however, that it was a shame to cast all the odium on the guy who wore kid gloves, smoked coffin nails and hailed from the busy marts of commerce. Then again they all were of the opinion that many men from the city are not guilty of wearing red neckties against a pink or lavender shirt bosom.

Of course, it is always the strong-armed youth, who lives on the adjoining section, that saves the old homestead to the old folks. Where he gets the greasy and obese roll to keep the old farm from being cut up into town lots is a mystery that dramatic license has taken full advantage of. He is there with a scrapping science never learned on the farm for the big fight, in the third act; he tells his love in words that must have been learned while he was earning that lucre a la Bobby Burns—drying his well-trained lungs and guiding the plow with one hand and earnestly perusing "Beacon Lights of History," which was firmly held in his left mitt. Anyway, it all comes about. He has accomplished all these things and more, although in the first act the heroine could not see him with a pair of double-lenz field glasses.

A man who travels for a cigar house pointed out that it was only the righteous folks in the pastoral dramas that smoked cigars. He explained this as a moral. It is always the old man, who has been saved from going to the poorhouse by the timely assistance of the boy hero from the neighboring farm, that smokes the Havana when all the trouble has blown over. The villain invariably puffs at the insidious cigarette.

Some one wondered why the railroads got so much free advertising out of the drama. There is always a railroad specialty staged in one of the true thrillers. A nimeber of the group, who sells supplies to druggists, suggested that a popular brand of liniament might be rung in as a panacea for the bruises of the vanquished villain, who has suffered untold battering from the boy hero from the rural district. Then an insurance man also believed that farm and accident insurance could be appropriately woven in the fabric of the drama. If the old man had carried the right kind of farm insurance, his daughter, with the wealth of blonde tresses, would not be confronted with the awful prospect of marrying the gent with the crimson tie and noisy shirt. If the villain carried an accident policy, he might not have to go back to work for two or three weeks, thereby having time to nurse his mortified spirit and aching limbs in the seclusion that misery at times longs for. Here again the machinery man spake up. If the old man, who has let the old homestead run down, had used a cream separator, he suggested, probably he would have never had to face the project of leaving the old home and beholding his daughter carried off by the man from the city.

After going over the productions staged during the dawn of the "melodrammer," the bunch, whose cigars were becoming mouldy and crumpled, unanimously agreed that some enterprising manager could discover a new field of dramatic endeavor by incorporating into the plot an up-to-date line of devices that serve to save time and undue effort. It would prove an innovation; it would also prove a relief from the time-honored precedents.

THE WEATHER.

Comfort for the curlers, this morning, a little for the ski-runners, too, for awhile, but it was not lasting. But it was colder, and the sight of flying snow was grateful. The weather man says the snow was nothing, but temporary squalls, and that tonight and tomorrow will be fair and colder. Last night's lowest temperature was 12 degs. and yesterday's highest was 44 degs.

The sun rose this morning at 7:44 and set tonight at 4:56, making 9 hours and 11 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Cold wave conditions prevail throughout the Northwest, this morning, as a result of a strong high pressure area which moved from the plateau region to Saskatchewan. Zero temperatures occur in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Eastern Alberta, and freezing weather extends southward including Western Texas. The storm central Tuesday morning over Lake Superior has moved its center to New England states, causing light snow or rain over scattered portions of the lake region and rains over Tennessee and Gulf states. Mild temperatures are the rule in Atlantic and Gulf states. The northwestern high pressure favors a further drop in temperature in this locality tonight and the weather will continue cold and fair throughout Thursday."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures:

SUNNY GEMS.

Philadelphia Ledger: Sailors of the fleet had reached Pernambuco.

"Shall we forget that we are Americans on shore leave?" they asked.

The consensus of opinion favoring the negative, they proceeded to lick a few local policemen.

St. Louis Times: Mrs. Knicker—Was your gown a good fit?

Mrs. Booker—Fine. Ned's bank account shows just 48 cents left.

Chicago Tribune: Adam Zawfox—You've heard of the Thousand Islan's, I reckon. Well, I used to own one of 'em. I've spent many a winter there.

Job Sturky—Yes, I've heard of your island. They call it Blackwell's, don't they?

"I wouldn't wonder; I know he isn't leading a single life."

Philadelphia Press: "We thought," said the reporter, "you might care to say something about these charges against you."

"No," replied the crooked public official, "I believe that 'silence is golden.'"

"Well," replied the reporter, "perhaps the public might believe it's merely gilt in this case."

Washington Star: "No intelligent person pays any attention to ghosts," said the dogmatic person.

"Perhaps not," answered Miss Cayenne, "unless the ghost has been able to secure an introduction from some psychic research society."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The fat colonel who had received orders to take a horseback jaunt, came out of his quarters and looked at the horse.

"Will he stand without hitching?" he asked.

"Yes, colonel," the orderly replied as he touched his cap.

The colonel looked at the horse again. "Then let him stand," he said, and went back and filled out his resignation.

Bryan and Johnson.

Atlanta Constitution: The New York Press, the staunch Republican daily of New York city, sees a peculiar potential menace to Republican victory next fall in Governor John Johnson of Minnesota.

It names a tentative Democratic ticket of Bryan and Johnson—and proceeds to tremble for the fate of their Republican opponents.

Its reasoning is at least impressive.

It shows that when Johnson ran for reelection in 1906 he swept the former Republican stronghold of Minnesota by a plurality of 77,000. It is fair to assume, moreover, that the personal strength of the man is sufficient to keep the state in line even during presidential years.

Now, with Bryan delivering the Southern electoral votes and making a few inroads on the North and East; and with Johnson delivering the eleven votes of Minnesota, with those, presumably, of the surrounding states where his personality has made a local impression—who may predict the result?

The Press uses the combination as an argument in favor of Hughes. It is true. It is an interestingly debatable question if it could not be applied with effect against any other Republican nominee.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

A company has been formed to build a railroad from Duluth in a direct route to the great prairies of the West. The title of the new line, the Duluth, Northwestern & Winnipeg, fully explains its importance and course. It is proposed to start surveying corps out in February at or near Cloquet northwesterly toward Grand Rapids, and to complete the survey and the grading of this section of sixty miles before another winter. Then the road will be continued in an almost due west course to a point on the Red river between the Northern Pacific at Fargo and the Manitoba at Crookston. Branches are also contemplated toward Winnipeg and other points in the wheat country. The incorporators and directors of the company are: R. S. Munger, J. D. Ensign, D. A. Duncan, H. H. Bell and L. Mendenhall of Duluth; C N. Nelson of the C. N. Nelson Lumber company; J. B. Holmes, president of the Duluth & Manitoba road, and C. A. Wells of the Wells-Stone Mercantile company. R. S. Munger was elected president and J. B. Holmes, vice president. The capital stock is put at $3,000,000. It is proposed to organize a construction company and go to work at once.

Over 600 citizens have joined in a paper requesting John B. Sutphin to become a candidate for re-election as mayor and he has consented. It is signed by representative taxpayers, by representative workingmen and by representative business men, who believe in a progressive policy for Duluth and in the continuation of the system of improvements that has been inaugurated during his administration.

E. G. Swanstrom says that he is not a candidate for mayor and will not be.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Bemidji Sentinel: The Crookston Times has a long article on "Treating Fence Posts." That's a new one on us. We saw a lumberjack trying mighty hard to induce a dummy in front of O'Leary & Bowser's to take a drink, but we have never seen it tried on fence posts.

Thief River Falls News: A spirited contest is on in Hennepin county for delegate to the national Republican convention between Tom Lowry and Tom Shevlin. We are glad that we do not live in Hennepin county, for we certainly would not have much choice.

Elk River Star-News: "Sherm" Smith, a well-known Minneapolis politician, has been hauled up before the federal court on a charge of jury fixing. Those Minneapolis politicians will always bear a close inspection, and then some.

Spring Valley Sun: Tom Lowry and Tom Shevlin for delegates-at-large to the national Republican convention. Ye gods and little fishes! Talk about harmony and the uniting of the Republican party! Isn't that a regular Hennepin county move for harmony?

Rush City Post: In Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Great Britain women are eligible to municipal offices, and in Norway they have full parliamentary suffrage. Women also vote in Queensland, Australia, and have a proxy right in Russia. The United States, the most enlightened nation in the world, still withholds the right of suffrage to women. But it is coming.

Mora Times: A. J. Rockne of Zumbrota, one of the leaders of the last house, is being mentioned for attorney in the event Attorney General Young is not a candidate to succeed himself. Rockne is an able lawyer and always right on public questions. His nomination would be no mistake.

Anoka Free Press: One paper has actually wasted the space required to tell the public that Sam Van Sant, the nobody who rattled around in the governor's office at the Minnesota capitol some years ago, would be willing to do it again if given a chance. Talk about nerve! Well, here is a sample that ought to bring the cookie (not cuckoo) off the shelf!

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Wanted—by the Republican party of Minnesota as a candidate for governor, a man of ability, honesty, clean, and with executive force, seasoned with diplomatic skill, who can unite all the factions of the party. Such a man will be given the right-of-way in a new and square deal.

Warren Register: They are resurrecting a lot of has-beens, plutocrats and tax-dodgers in Minneapolis and trotting them out as candidates for delegates to the Republican national convention. If the party can't do better, it should disband. Will some one tell us who or what Capt. Snider, Judge Collins, Tom Lowry, Tom Shevlin or M. W. Savage represent? Give some of the live ones a chance.

A "Frank, Free, Courteous Discussion."

Buffalo Courier: The spirit in which some of the Bryan organs treat the mere mention of the names of Judge Gray, Judge Harmon, Lieutenant Governor Chanler, Governor Johnson and others in connection with the nomination for president is not conducive to the good health and the vigor of the Democratic party at the beginning of the presidential year. In view of the results of the last three presidential elections all Democrats should welcome this year a free, frank and courteous discussion of not only Democratic policies but of Democratic candidates.

Dubuque Telegraph-Herald: Governor Johnson has not and will not permit himself to be made a tool of predatory plutocracy.

A Democratic Warning.

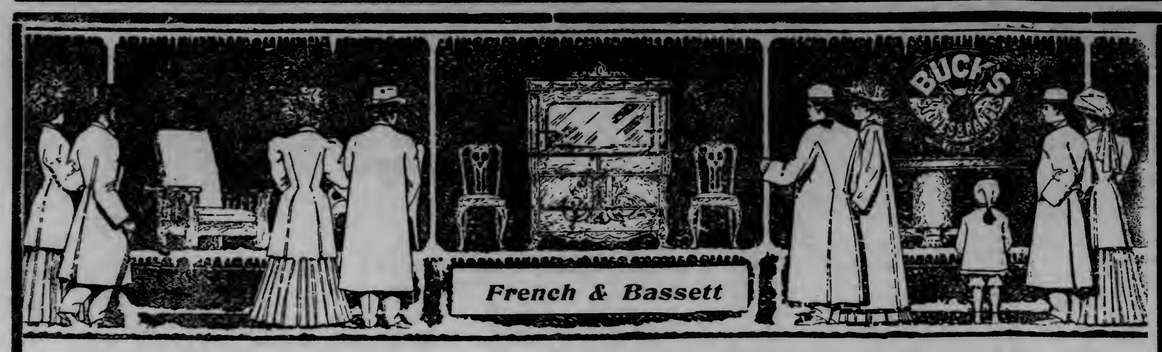

Charleston News and Courier: Before going to the Denver convention, it is well to remember that the state has many lady Democrats, and that it will be leap year.

C. P. BORDMAN WILL SPEAK

Will Deliver Address at Big Labor Meeting Friday.

Charles P. Bordman of Minneapolis, fraternal delegate from the Congregational Ministerial association to the Minneapolis Trades and Labor assembly, will be one of the speakers at the big meeting to be given under the auspices of the Federated Trades assembly at the Armory Friday night.

It will be a mass meeting open to the general public. W. E. McEwen, secretary of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, and G. B. Howley, president of the state federation, will be among the speakers. They will present labor's side in the present struggle of the unions against the open shop movement. Mr. Bordman will speak on labor unions as he has seen them in connection with his work as delegate to the assembly.

Aside from this meeting, there seems to be nothing special in regard to the labor situation. The situation remains about the same as it has been for the last week or two. The boilermakers are still working, and it does not look as if they intended going on strike because of the open shop declaration on the part of their employers. Until the latter take action in the way of decreasing wages, or otherwise changing working conditions to the detriment of the men, there probably will be no trouble.

The Socialists will have a meeting Sunday night, and an effort is being made to have Mother Jones here from Chicago to address the audience. It has not been learned whether she will be able to come or not.

RAILROADS

LINE TO COAST.

Northwestern Road Said to be Contemplating Such an Extension.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 22.—That the presence here of a number of prominent officials of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad company affords ample evidence that an extension of the system from Belle Fourche, S. D., to Miles City, Mont., thence to the Pacific coast, is being contemplated by the Northwestern, is the opinion prevailing in railway circles.

The Northwestern completed its line to Belle Fourche within the past year. Surveys have been completed to Miles City, and it is understood that steel sufficient to build to Miles City has been collected at Belle Fourche. In the party of officials now here and en route to the Northwest are Edward Brigham, general freight agent, and C. A. Cairns, general passenger agent, both of the Northwestern; E. B. Ober, general freight agent, St. Paul & Omaha, and G. R. Macrae, assistant general passenger agent of the same road.

ELECTRIC ROAD.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The St. Paul, Minneapolis & Seattle electric railway scheme has been laid before a number of the directors of the Commercial club. President Webber of the railway laid out the proposition, while several of the club directors discussed the proposition.

No action was taken in regard to the matter, it being the sense of the meeting that the company shall again come before the club when the proposition has been worked out a little further and then, if the plan should prove satisfactory, the city would very likely do its part in the work.

The St. Paul, Minneapolis & Seattle Railway company proposes to construct a line between the Twin Cities and Seattle to be operated by electricity. Mr. Webber's plans were presented by him at this morning's session, he stating that the railway was to be built by the sale of stock, the company being capitalized at $500,000,000.

There was not a quorum of directors at today's meeting, and no action could be taken. Further investigation into the proposition will be made by the club members interested, and it is possible that at some future date the matter may again be brought up.

F. B. Walker Appointed.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—F. B. Walker, resident engineer of the Lake district of the Great Northern road, has been appointed resident engineer at St. Paul to succeed Alfred Jackson, resigned. The two districts have been combined. Mr. Walker is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and took a course in the Massachusetts Technological institute.

MORE INDICTMENTS.

Polk County Grand Jury Finds Thirty-One True Bills.

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thirty-one indictments were reported by the Polk county grand jury last evening. This finished the work of the grand jury, and the court dismissed the members with thanks for their faithful service.

There were eighteen indictments in all against Carl Lindberg, Ole Lindberg and J. N. Hengstrom, who are alleged to have sold liquor to minors, and to have kept their saloonss open after closing hours. Frank Novak, who has a government license at Tabor, and Anton Sireck of Tabot, also having a government license, were indicted for having sold to minors. Sireck pleaded guilty and was fined $25.

PROPOSE GEN. A. L. GRANT

As Commandant of Soldiers' Home to Succeed Capt. Compton.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Friends of Gen. L. A. Grant of Minneapolis are starting a movement to secure his appointment as commandant of the Minnesota Soldiers' home, to succeed the late Capt. James Compton. Gen. Grant was a brigadier general in the Civil war, and was breveted major general about a year before the struggle closed. He was assistant secretary of war under President Harrison, much of the time serving as acting secretary. This service, together with his business training and experience, will be advanced as good reason why he would meet the administrative and executive requirements of the position at the soldiers' home.

The trustees of the home will meet Feb. 11, in semi-annual session, at which time the vacancy will be considered.

DEAN GETS NEW TITLE

Made Inspector in Charge of Local Immigration Office.

Indication of the Importance of Duluth as Port of Entry.

United States Immigrant Inspector William H. Dean, stationed at Duluth, has been promoted, and now bears the title of "Inspector in charge." A substantial increase in salary comes with the promotion. This action on the part of the immigration department is in recognition of the importance Duluth has attained as a port of entry for immigrants.

Two assistants have been added to the force at the local office during the past year, and it is considered altogether likely that more inspectors will be required during the coming season, if business continues to increase in future as it has in the past.

A few years ago Duluth had almost no importance as a port of entry, so far as alien immigrants were concerned, but the influx of foreigners through Duluth has been increasing steadily, until this station is now one of the most important along the boundary. Unless Canada takes steps to lessen the number of immigrants landing at the Atlantic coats ports which is hardly likely, it is expected that the number coming through Duluth will increase right along. The movement probably will begin earlier than usual this spring, for it is anticipated that navigation between Duluth and Canadian ports will be open much earlier than usual. As soon as boats begin running between here and Port Arthur and Fort William, the aliens will begin to arrive.

LINDBERGH FOR OPSAHL?

Believed He Will be Recommended for Postmaster at Brainerd.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Representative Lindbergh returned to Washington from Philadelphia yesterday. He said he had not made up his mind about the recommendation for postmaster at Brainerd, and would not until endorsements, now on the way, reached him. He said there are only two candidates in the field, Postmaster Ingersoll and A. M. Opsahl, the report that Former Sheriff Erickson is a candidate being incorrect.

Lindbergh stated that he would recommend the man who has the best indorsements, and it is believed here that he will indorse Opsahl. If he does, he will have to fight out the case at the postoffice department, as the rule for the reappointment of men with good records has been followed rigidly.

COURT-MARTIAL OF TWO COUNTS BEGINS.

Berlin, Jan. 22.—The trial by court-martial of Counts Von Hohenau and Lynar, arising out of the articles published in Die Zukunft by Maximilien Harden, and the subsequent Harden-Von Moltke libe suit, opened today before five judges, under the presidency of Gen. Von Loewenfeld. The military court was ordered by Emperor William, and Gen. Von Loewenfeld is a member of his majesty's military staff. There were 130 witnesses present, who were composed mostly of troopers, guardsmen and members of other cavalry regiments stationed at Potsdam. After reading the charge accusing the prisoners of abuse of their authority, the court room was cleared and will not be reopened until a verdict is reached.

Maximilien Harden, according to his physician, is suffering from appendicitis. He did not appear in court today.

ORIGIN OF THE FINNS

Dr. Jackola Says They Bear No Relation to the Mongols.

Finnish People Much Pleased With Decision of Judge Cant.

"We, Finnish Americans, are very deeply sensible of the justice and importance of the ruling of Judge William A. Cant of the district court in granting citizenship papers to our kinsman, John Svan, of Eveleth," said Dr. John Jackola, one of the most prominent Finnish residents of Duluth, today.

"The ruling is important because it affects, directly or indirectly, all the Finnish people in America, and it is just because the relationship of Finns to the Mongolian race is very remote, if there is any closer relation between the Finns and the Mongolians than there is between the Mongolians and Celts, the Southern Germans and the Slavonic people. It is interesting to review in this connection the most recent views regarding the relation of the races of Europe to us Finns.

"It was accepted for a long time as a foregone conclusion that when the Arians marched westward from their primitive homes in Central Asia they found Europe in possession of a nomadic non-Arian people, whom the invaders began to exterminate with the bronze weapons which they brought from the East. It was generally believed that the Finns in the North and the Basques in the South were the only survivors of the much distressed and hard-pressed Turenian people.

"But since anthropology became a science, this so called Finnic theory of Max Muller, which was based entirely on comparative study of languages, was severely attacked by the anthropologists. They maintained that the broad-headed Finn and the long-headed Basque could no more belong to the same race than the long-headed Teuton and the broad-headed Celt. On the other hand, they pointed to a close relation of the Basques and the Teutonic people, of the Celts and the Finns. Anthropologists regard the projection of the jaws, the color of the hair and eyes, and the shape of the skull and orbits as much less variable characteristics than the speech of the people, in regard to which it may well be asked, 'Does our Southern negro population become Anglo-Saxon when they learn the English language, or would the Finns become Slavs if the Russians would succeed in imposing upon them the Slavonic speech?'

"The linguistic map of Russia shows sporadic settlements of Finnic speaking people scattered about the Baltic sea, Lake Onega, the Arctic ocean, on both sides of the Ural mountains as well as over the entire valley of the Volga. These settlements of the various people speaking Finnic dialects give a checkered appearance to the linguistic map of the Russian empire and bear witness to the fact that the blood of over one-half of Russia is Finnic. Not many centuries ago the Finnic speech was more nearly coextensive with the blood. In the seventh century Finnic dialects were spoken almost exclusively in the Baltic provinces. Now they have given away to the Slavonic. In the tenth century, Moscow was in a Finnic territory. Now it is in the heart of Russia. Everywhere the Slavonic tongue has been arrogating the province of the Finnic dialects, but have our kinsmen in reality become Slavs?

"It is a well-known fact that a race is not necessarily coextensive with a language, and that many races, even during hisoric times, have exchanged their own language for another, either for political, social or religious causes, and these same causes also exerted their influence during prehistoric times.

"The excavations in Europe have shown that instead of having recently migrated from Asia, the so-called Arians already lived in Europe when Italy and Spain were still connected with Africa, and England was a peninsula of the continental Europe; that is, before the stone age. They passed in Europe from the age of stone to that of bronze and then to the age of iron. On the other hand, the so-called Turenian people make their appearance in Europe much later. Sir Isaac Taylor, in his 'Origin of the Arians,' argues that the Arian civilization was brought to Europe by the Finnic people.

"On the basis of physical resemblance, Dr. Thurman maintained that 'the brachycephalic (broad headed) races of Britain, France and Denmark are cognate with the modern Finns.' Prof. Huxley went still further, and considered that the type of Switzerland, the South German, the Slavs and the Finns all belong to one great race of fair-haired, broad-headed, xanthocrol, who have extended across Europe from Britain to Sarmatia, and we know not how much further to the East and South.'

"Neither is the resemblance physical only. In the acceptance of religious authorities and political rulers a marked contrast is noticeable between the long-headed and the broad-headed people.

"The long-headed people of England, North Germany and Scandinavia could not endure the rule of the popes. On the other hand, the Southern Germans and the Celtic people of Ireland and France readily accepted the Catholic religion, while the Slavs and the Finnic people of Russia became Greek Catholics. Even Tacitus, the Roman historian, noticed this difference in the character of the two people inhabiting Germany. The Southern Germans were submissive and had a high priest, who was the head of their pagan religion, while the Northern Germans were independent and self-reliant, and worshiped their pagan gods as they pleased. The many independent denominations give further proof of the love of personal freedom so characteristic of the long-headed people. During the Reformation the Finns were under the Swedish rule and became Lutheran. However, they have given their bishops almost papal authority."

SEVEN INVESTED WITH THIRD RANK

Knights of Pythias Feast, Initiate and Hold Social Session.

Seven candidates had conferred upon them the rank of knight, before a large attendance of Knights of Pythias from Duluth, Superior, Two Harbors, Aurora and other raneg towns, by the degree team of North Star lodge, No. 35, at Elks' hall last evening. The Two Harbors knights came down by special train and returned to their homes about 1 o'clock this morning.

The initiatory ceremonies were preceded by an elaborate spread at the castle hall and were followed by a social session at which remarks for the good of the order were made by a number of the visitors and by local members.

Rev. John W. Powell enlivened the occasion with a fund of humorous stories and gave an impressive talk along the line of brotherhood and all that the word implies. He held that the proper spirit of brotherhood was that which sought not what it could get out of the world, but what it could put into the world.

Grand Chancellor Frank L. Young of this city, who has recently returned from a trip over his district, told something of the general progress of Pythianism in the state and complimented North Star lodge on the excellence of its work.

Chancellor Commander Evans of Two Harbors lodge, No. 83, made a few remarks of a complimentary nature as did Chancellor Commander Vanderpool of Aurora lodge. The latter gave the local members of the order a pressing invitation to visit Aurora. Capt. Thomas of Biwabik responded briefly for his lodge, and Capt. Nicholas of Aurora gave an interesting talk along the line of Pythianism, enlivening it with several appropriate stories.

Rev. Mr. Sooth of the Aurora lodge and Rev. James L. McBride of the Second Presbyterian church of this city, who was a member of the class initiated, gave short talks of an entertaining nature. Sergeant Boyce, the United States army recruiting officer at this point, who was initiated last evening, made a few remarks of an appreciative nature and told a "new one" on the Knights of Pythias.

The festivities were brought to a close in time for the East end members to catch the last car, the Lakeside contingent being taken home on the Two Harbors special.

Next Tuesday evening the social club of North Star lodge will give another of their monthly parties, an invitation affair.

RESTFUL SLEEP.

Mr. John A. Tholens, of Syracuse, N. Y., who is 75 years of age and has just celebrated his 50th wedding anniversary, extols Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as the greatest tonic stimulant known; says it strengthens his nerves, aids digestion and produces restful sleep.

In a recent interview Mr. Tholens said: "I have been using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and am still using it as a tonic stimulant. I have received very marked benefit from same. I follow your directions and take the medicine in small doses. It strengthens my nerves, aids digestion and brings me restful sleep.

"A few weeks ago I met a friend who had been ailing all winter and I advised him to get a bottle of Duffy's Malt Whiskey. I met him again a few days ago and he told me he was taking it and was receiving great benefit from its use. Send him a Medical Booklet.

"My stomach trouble is about gone. I can eat a square meal without after distress, and my heart, which behaved badly, perhaps on account of the stomach trouble, is decidedly improved. Next Tuesday I will be 75 years of age, and am a veteran of the War of the Rebellion. Mrs. Tholens and I have just celebrated our golden wedding anniversary."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a malt essence, which is the most effective tonic stimulant and invigorator known to science; softened by warmth and moisture its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

Sold by druggists, grocers and dealers, or direct. $1 per bottle. Illustrated medical booklet containing testimonials received from grateful men and women who have been cured, and doctor's advice free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

RECIPE FOR BAD BLOOD

Better Than Patent Medicine and Said to Build Up System.

Relieves Blood Disorders by Restoring Action of the Kidneys.

All medical authorities are agreed that the blood is the great source of disease or of health in the human system. If the blood is pure, the individual is strong and healthy, if the blood is impure or diseased then there is sickness or decay in the whole system.

Rheumatism is strictly a blood disease. It is caused by excessive uric acid. Sores, pimples, etc., mean bad blood. Catarrhal affections must be treated through the blood to get permanent results. To get well, to feel strong, hearty and vigorous one must have good clean blood and lots of it. You can't clean the blood thoroughly unless the kidneys are made active. Bad blood means clogged, inactive kidneys and liver which causes, too, such symptoms as backache, nervousness, bladder and urinary difficulties and other sympathetic troubles.

Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce, Compound Kargon one ounce, Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime. The ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy at small cost.

Here the readers of this paper have a simple yet powerful and effective remedy for all forms of blood, kidney and bladder diseases which should relieve rheumatism and catarrhal affections and replace that weak, worn-out indifferent feeling with strength, vigor and health.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

WILL SAVE MUCH LAND

Bill Before Congress for Reclaiming Half Million Acres

Near Red Lake Reserve Has Support of Duluth Men.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mayor Hamre, accompanied by Daniel Shaw, visited the Twin Cities and Duluth recently in the interest of the drainage bill introduced in congress by Congressman Steenerson. They visited the commercial bodies of these cities and were assured of the assistance of these organizations as well as of prominent citizens. It is the purpose of the bill to provide for the drainage of the government lands lying to the east and north of the Red Lake Indian reservation, a portion of which was opened to settlement four years ago.

About half a million acres of valuable lands are now for a part of the year too flooded to permit of their cultivation and if the government puts in the ditches that the geegoiical survey has mapped out there will be opened to entry a large and very rich tract of land. These lands are by no means swamp, but consist of the same soil formation as the remainder of the Red river valley, but the drainage of the Red lakes becomes diverted every spring that there is high water and backs up into this territory and the surplus water lies on the lands too late in the spring to permit of successful cultivation. The geological surveying party is continuing the work of completing the levels this winter and hope by spring to have the whole tract under survey.

LIFE SENTENCE FOR MATHIASEN

Slayer of Johan Johanson Has Escaped the Gallows.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Peter Neilson Mathiasen, the convicted murderer of Johan Johanson, in Beltrami county, will not pay the penalty upon the scaffold as the state board of pardons, late yesterday afternoon, commuted the punishment to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary.

The evidence brought out at Mathiasen's trial, at Bemidji, a few months ago, showed that Mathiasen and Johanson were working together near Gull Lake, north of Bemidji, near Tenstrike, about a year ago, living in the same cabin, that Mathiasen disappeared and Johanson's body badly bruised was subsequently found in the lake. A money order and other valuable papers belonging to the dead man were missing and by means of these Mathiasen was subsequently traced to Vancouver, Wash., near Portland, Or., and arrested, being trapped at the postoffice by means of a decoy letter. He was tried at Bemidji and convicted. When the court passed sentence upon Mathiason another convicted murderer, by the name of Munn, was also sentenced to hang and the scene was so nerve-racking that the judge was nearly overcome.

Mathiasen is a Dane and ever since his conviction fellow countrymen have been working in his behalf claiming that he had been convicted through his ignorance of the method of administrating justice in this country. It was also claimed the evidence was largely circumstantial. The editor of a Danish paper published in Omaha and others of that nationality have been working industriously in Mathiasen's behalf.

RECLAMATION SCHEME

To Restore About Ten Thousand Acres Near Washburn, N. D.

Washburn, N. D., Jan. 22.—A large and enthusiastic meeting of farmers and residents of this city has been held here to consider the proposition of forming a water users' association for the purpose of obtaining funds from the reclamation service for the irrigation of about 10,000 acres of land along the Missouri river, from Washburn to Painted Woods.

W. H. Storrs, electrical engineer in Trenton projects, and State Engineer T. R. Atkinson addressed the meeting as the principal speakers, and answered the many questions asked. They showed the people the benefits to be derived from irrigation, and the best methods to pursue in order to obtain funds from the reclamation service to hasten the construction of an irrigation plant.

State Engineer Atkinson has been making preliminary surveys and plans for the work during the past month, and is pleased to note that the irrigation of the tract is practically assured.

MARPLE WENT WEST.

Minneapolis Printer Reported to Have Pawned Jewelry and Fled.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The veil of mystery that surrounded the whereabouts of J. A. Marple, a well-known linotype operator on the Journal, who dropped out of sight last week, has been partially lifted by the discovery that Marple pawned some valuable jewelry and left for the West. Friends aided by the police have followed him, step by step, and it has been definitely proven that he went to Abe Cohen's in St. Paul last Thursday and left his watch there for sale. When he returned Friday and found that no purchaser had been found he took his watch, and two diamond rings to another pawnbroker and pawned them all for $75.

The same source of information says that Marple spent at least $25 of this amount in the Twin Cities and then made his way to the coast. He did not make any statement of his reasons for leaving, outside of saying that he had had some trouble with a member of his family.

WIFE WOULDN'T TALK.

Unusual Grounds Upon Which Divorce is Secured.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 22.—Louis P. Tangen was granted a divorce from Augusta Tangen. It was alleged that the defendant had an ungovernable temper, was abusive at times and would not talk to her husband and at other times would sulk and would refrain from talking to him for a month at a time.

A divorce was also granted to Amy H. Bartholomew in her suit against John S. Bartholomew. The couple were married in Chicago, Nov. 16, 1905. Cruel and inhuman treatment was alleged.

WISCONSIN IN BRIEF

He was brought before Justice Oettinger, who discharged him on the ground that the complaint was willful and malicious and without probable cause.

Ashland—The saloons were all closed tighter than drums Sunday. The Perfect Woman Is Not a Fat One.

Artists say the ideal proportion of weight in a woman is 26 pounds for every foot of her height. This would make a woman of 5 feet 4 inches weigh 136 pounds 8 ounces.

If you weigh more than this in proportion, you are on the danger line, and are likely to get too fat in a few years. Check it by taking a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime of this recipe: 1½ ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 2½ ounces Syrup Simplex. Get the Marmola sealed, and mix it with the other ingredients at home. This mixture is harmless, will not cause wrinkles, and has been known to take off seven pounds of fat a week without any help from exercise or dieting. It is inexpensive.

DYSPEPSIA-PROOF.

How Any Meal Can Be Thoroughly Enjoyed By Any Stomach.

Men, as a rule, are first discovered by their enemies. Their antagonists turn on the searchlight, and the proof of merit will lie in being able to stand the flash.

It was only in this way that Mr. White ever knew that dyspepsia was one of Mr. Black's worst enemies. Sitting face to face at a two-by-four table, he handed his afflicted friend the bill of fare:

Oyster Cocktail. Stuffed Olives.
Boston Clam Chowder.
Strained Gumbo.
Sirloin Steak with Mushrooms.
Roast Beef Hash.
Boiled Ox Tongue with Sauerkraut.
Lobster a la Newburg.
Baked Pork and Beans.
Combination Crab Salad.
Hot Mince Pie.
Pineapple Fritters.

Mr. White ordered a "little of each." Mr. Dyspepsia Black ordered crackers and a glass of milk. "I had such a big breakfast this morning," he said, "that I'll just take a bite to keep you company." But Mr. White could not be deceived: "I am afraid you can't stand the gleam, Mr. Black. Why don't you say you have dyspepsia and be done with it?" You'll always have that hungry look anyhow, as long as you have dyspepsia. Now, listen. My stomach was in just as bad condition as yours at one time. But now I can eat anything, at any time. For instance, this clam chowder, or sirloin steak or even the lobster would be just as welcome to my stomach as your crackers and milk. You don't realize how this dyspepsia business is robbing you of your spirit, of your energy and ability to think quickly. I can't help notice it. You haven't the cheer and sociability you had three months ago. Now, I'll tell you what to do," and thereat the cheerful Mr. White took a vial from his pocket and extracted a wee tablet. "There, there is a tablet that contains an ingredient, one grain of which digests 3,000 grains of food. For even the worst dyspeptic it's the only thing that really gives relief. The reason is it relieves the stomach and stimulates the gastric juice. I can't get along without them. They are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You can get them anywhere on earth for 50c a package."

Yes, it is true. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets absolutely stop heartburn, nausea, indigestion, dyspepsia of the worst type, sour stomach, bloaty feeling and all eructations and irritation, and freshen and invigorate the stomach. They cheer you up, and make you get all the good there is in your food. You will forget you ever had a stomach to worry you.

MONEY IS SENT BACK

Virginia Will Not Take Pay From Hibbing for Work

Of Its Firemen at Recent Burning of Miles Hotel.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Considerable discussion and some excitement among the citizens was created yesterday when the Mesaba Ore of Hibbing reached here bearing a "roast" on Virginia because a bill of $100 had been presented to the village of Hibbing for the services of eleven volunteer firemen who had responded to the call for aid from Hibbing at the time of the Hotel Miles fire. This was the first that the members of the council, the citizens generally or even a number of the members of the department had heard of the matter, and as a result quite a number gathered at the council chambers last evening to learn what the council would do about it. There was general discussion of the matter by citizens and councilmen and the general sentiment was that the check should be returned to Hibbing and the men paid by the city of Virginia. Chief C. S. Stevens of the fire department stated that he had directed City Clerk Bickford to make out the bill and send it in after consultation with ex-Mayor Eaton and the fire chief of Hibbing. In the correspondence read by City Clerk Bickford it transpired that in the first letter of thanks sent to the Virginia chief and volunteers by Mayor Wierick of Hibbing, he wrote that if the department would send in a bill for its services the Hibbing council would "gladly" pay it. In his letter accompanying the $100 order, however, he seemed to have changed his mind about being "glad" and became very sarcastic instead.

Mayor Hawkinson stated it as his opinion that the matter had been handled improperly and Chief Stevens admitted that he had exceeded his authority, but stated that in his former experience it was customary for villages calling for assistance in time of fire to reimburse those who volunteered, and as Hibbing seemed willing and anxious to do likewise, he instructed the city clerk to send in the bill.

Check Is Returned.

Finally a motion was made and seconded that the order be returned to Hibbing, and that the men be paid by the city of Virginia. Before it was voted upon, however, Alderman Johnson interposed an objection on the ground that the council should have nothing to do with the matter now, because it had no hand in the affair previously. Then a motion was put and carried that the check be returned to Chief Stevens.

The matter was warmly discussed by several citizens, notably J. H. Fleming, who said that the Mesaba Ore of Hibbing had rendered a valuable service to the people of Virginia by calling their attention to this transaction, which he characterized as a disgrace to the city.

The general sentiment was that if Hibbing volunteered to pay anything, it would be a different matter, but it not, Virginia should pay the firemen and say nothing. It was recalled that after the last big fire in Virginia the Eveleth department was paid $360 by Virginia for services of its men and the loss of about 200 feet of hose, which was burned, although the Eveleth department came without being asked.

CAPT. M'ILHARGY VIRGINIA CHIEF

Former Officer of Duluth Fire Department is Honored.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles McIlhargy, former captain in the Duluth fire department, was chosen as chief of the Virginia fire department at the council meeting last evening. His salary was fixed at $125 per month. Over this latter proposition there was considerable opposition, Aldermen Johnson and Mattson, and Mayor Hawkinson holding that the salary was too high. However, in his application, Mr. McIlhargy said that he would not come for less than $125, and the other four aldermen were in favor of hiring an experienced and capable chief. Accompanying the application was a very strong letter of recommendation from Chief Black of Duluth.

One of the horses recently purchased for the fire department has played out, owing to the fact that he was too young for the heavy work, and the fire committee was given authority to purchase another horse, also a wagon for general utility purposes.

A petition was presented to the council from a number of citizens, asking that the city provide a room to serve as an armory, in case a militia company should be organized here, and the matter was referred to the city attorney to look up the law in the matter, and report at the next meeting.

The bond of Health Officer Crowe was fixed at $500.

SEARCHING FOR FIENDS.

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The excitement here over the attempted murder of Capt. Nicholas and his family at the Mohawk mine Monday by setting off an explosive is still intense. The officers are on the trail of two men who were seen passing Scott-Graff's lumber camp early Monday morning, and the Ely police are on the lookout for them. It is believed that these two men are the criminals. The citizens of Sparta, Capt. Nicholas' old home, held an indignation meeting Monday and sent a committee of four to Aurora to offer their assistance.

The dynamite did not wreck the house as badly as first reported. It is a six-room house, and Nicholas, his wife and 16-months-old baby were sleeping upstairs directly over the explosion. All were thrown from the bed, the captain received a bad cut on his head, and the baby was badly stunned. The two boys in the rear room were not injured. All that saved their lives was the fact that it was what is termed by miners as a sand blast, with no covering, and that the house stood some two feet from the ground.

The lower rooms looked as if some one had destroyed their contents with an ax. Furniture was piled up, pictures smashed, cut glass and china dishes broken, and even the castors on the dining table broken. The shock shattered the windows of eight houses in the vicinity and shook the buildings in Aurora, two miles away.

The captain has sent his wife and family to Sparta to stay with friends, and later she will go to her old home in Ishpeming, Mich., until spring.

EVELETH SALARY LIST AGREED ON

William Malon Elected Fire Chief by Three to Two.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the meeting of the council last evening, the salary question was considered.

The salary of aldermen was made $100 per year, the same as last year. The mayor's salary was fixed at $150 per year; city treasurer's, $55 per month; superintendent of thec ity waterworks $100 per month; city attorney's, $50 per month; city clerk's, $90 per month.

Members of the volunteer fire department will receive $1 for each call, $1 for the first hour spent at fires, and 50 cents for each succeeding hour and fraction thereof.

Messrs. Johnson and Brown were appointed pumpmen at the station of the city waterworks, and their appointment was approved. Their salaries will be $80 per month.

By a vote of 3 to 2, William Malon was appointed chief of the fire department.

It has been the custom in this city that the offices of chief of the fire department and fire warden should be held by one man, but some of the aldermen thought that the offices in question should be held by two men, instead of one, as at present, and after some argument on the point, the salary of the chief of the fire department was fixed at $80 per month.

Up to the present time the street commissioner's salary was figured on a per diem basis, but the commissioner now in office informed the council that he could no longer work on this basis, and that he desired a monthly salary in preference. This matter was referred to the committee on street commissioners.

Health Commissioner Johnson's report was read and approved, and the action which he recommended necessary was referred to the board of health.

In taking up the matter of procuring a correct map of the city's sewer and water system, a matter of great importance was touched on. The city has long been in need of such a map, and by the action taken last night the city will have before long a very necessary record, which will be open to the inspection of all citizens.

It was decided to have a competent accountant audit the city's books, and Mr. Plummer of the Fayal offices was recommended for the work.

The city clerk was ordered to advertise for bids for the city's printing.

The bond of the city clerk was placed at $500.

FUNERAL IS STOPPED

On Advice of Health Officer, and Mourners Are Mad.

Biwabik, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. C. W. Bray, the health officer, refused to permit the funeral of 4-year-old Mary Antony, who died Saturday at the home of her father, August Antony, of diphtheria, to be held in public yesterday afternoon, and Father Saloven, the priest, stopped the funeral processsion at the church doors. The health officer took this step when notified by Dr. Farmer of McKinley that the child had died of the contagious disease, despite the claim of the child's father that the disease was not diphtheria, and a public funeral would be held. A party of Austrians from McKinley, who accompanied the body, and afterwards visited friends here, were denied tickets on the Iron Range to return, at the instance of Dr. Bray, and when they finally reached McKinley, were placed under quarantine. The Austrians became excited over the various proceedings of the day, and made numerous threats, that came to nothing.

LACK OF EVIDENCE.

Results in Proceedings Against Italians Being Dropped.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 22. — (Special to The Herald.)—Carlo Giovanni and Leo Corlo, the Italians, who were arrested by Officer Henry Westan, on the charge of shooting off dangerous weapons, were arranged before Judge Price, but were released, owing to the evidence not being sufficient to hol dthe men. The local officials were handicapped in so far as the place where the shooting took place was two miles out of the city and since Deputy Sheriff Kent resigned there has been no deputy in Eveleth and it was some time after the shooting before the necessary papers could be served.

VICTOR SHERMAN BURIED.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The funeral of Victor Sherman was held yesterday from the Swedish Lutheran church and was largely attended. Many members of the Good Templars and F. H. and E. F. attended a long line following the body to the cemetery.

VIRGINIA MUST KEEP HUSTLING

If Obstacles in Way of Free Delivery Are Overcome.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Unless the citizens of Virginia take some concerted action to show the Washington authorities that they are in earnest about desiring free delivery it is altogether likely that it will be a long time before this convenience is forthcoming.

Albert E. Bickford, who, as secretary of the Virginia Commercial club, wrote to Congressman Bede regarding the matter on the 2nd inst., has just received a reply, in which the congressman says he has been working "hard and long" on this matter, and encloses a letter from the department dated Jan. 11. In this letter the first assistant postmaster general says:

"This department is in receipt of a report from one of its representatives who states that some of the residence districts are not provided with good sidewalks, that house numbers and street signs are lacking, and that the postoffice premises are too small to accommodate letter carriers. It is not deemed advisable, therefore, to take favorable action until the requirements of the regulations relative to the establishment of city delivery service are met and arrangements are made for adequate postoffice facilities. Owing to the depleted condition of the appropriation it will be impossible to establish city delivery at any office before May or June, 1908, and then only the most meritorious cases can be given consideration."

Since this matter was first talked of the city council has had all houses numbered and street signs placed at every corner. Hence, the only real drawback at this time is the alleged inadequate size of the postoffice. Since the postoffice department does the leasing of postoffices in cities of this size, the people of Virginia are doubtlessly willing that the department shall secure larger quarters if they are needed. The real hindrance to the establishment of free delivery is without doubt the "depleted condition of the appropriation," it is probable that Virginia is destined for a long wait unless something is done to loosen a few bands of red tape down in Washington.

In his letter Congressman Bede says: "If your club will stir up the people of Virginia and arouse interest enough to do away with the obstacles now existing, so that everything will be in readiness when the new appropriation is made, I will keep on working at this end of the line and will do all possible to have free delivery installed at that time.

Virginia now has as many miles of good sidewalks as any city of its size in the country and since the houses are numbered and the street corners labeled it would seem to be up to the Washington authorities to do their part and establish the service to which Virginia is entitled by law.

AURORA BOND ELECTION.

To be Held January 29 Excites Interest.

Aurora, Minn. Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The special election to be held here Jan. 29 for the purpose of bonding the village for $20,000 for a sewer system and for $10,000 to extend the water system, is arousing great interest, and is bound to be voted on successfully. Aurora expects to have the system completed by fall. In 1907 the village installed its water system and erected an eighty-foot steel water tower with a tank of 50,000 gallons capacity.

HAWKEYES COMING.

To Minnesota to Settle on Land Adjacent to Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—According to M. S. Reed of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, there will be quite an influx of citizens of the Hawkeye state to this section early in the spring to take land for farming purposes. Mr. Reed recently purchased 1,000 acres of land situated twelve miles south of here and announces he will make of it one of the largest stock farms in the Northwest. He predicts many Iowa people, who find farming on the high priced land around Cedar Rapids unprofitable, will come to this section and acquire land at a smaller figure and permanently locate.

CHISHOLM COUPLE MARRY.

Chisholm, Minn., Jan. 22. — (Special to The Herald.)—Asmand Abey and Miss Wilham Minnie Johnson were married at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Chris Swanby, on Chestnut street, Saturday evening, Jan. 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Abey left Monday on a two weeks' honeymoon trip to the Southern part of the state. They will be at home in their new house just completed Feb. 1.

BOARDING HOUSE BURNS TO GROUND AT AURORA.

Aurora, Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Miller location was visited by a disastrous fire Saturday night, one of the large boarding houses burning to the ground. The fire started at 6 o'clock in the evening from a lamp being knocked from a table, and the flames spread so rapidly that little furniture could be saved. The Aurora fire department, seeing the building could not be saved, directed their efforts to saving the building adjoining and were successful. This is the second bad fire to visit the Miller in a week, three houses burning the first of the week.

SHUN SMALLPOX CASE.

Man Said to be From Embarrass River, Unloaded on Tower.

Tower, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is no little discussion here over the arrival from the South of a man whose name cannot be learned, who came from a logging camp, on the Embarrass river, afflicted with smallpox. It is said the man desired to go to Two Harbors or Duluth, on the Iron Range train, but Conductor Woolen refused him passage. Later he was picked up by the northbound passenger and taken on to Ely. The health authorities refused to allow the man to get off there. He was kept on the train and brought back to Tower Junction, where provision was made for caring for him at the detention hospital in Breuting township, outside of the city, where an attendant is caring for him. The question is being asked here who is to pay the expense of caring for the man under the ruling of the state board of health.

NOT ALARM CLOCKS.

Managers of telephone systems all over the country are objecting to the use of the telephone as an alarm clock, and at the national meeting of independent companies, which opens at Chicago today, the matter will be considered, and probably special action will be taken with a view to putting an end to the practice.

In Duluth, as elsewhere, a great many people seem to think that the central office is supposed to act as an alarm clock, and make it their custom to leave calls for certain hours in the morning, despite the fact that the girls have strict instructions to pay no heed to such requests.

large ships would probably be able to pass through the canal in less than eight hours. He said there would be plenty of room for ships to pass except possibly in Culebra cut, and also that more than one vessel could occupy a lock at the same time.

"The entire United States fleet," said Col. Goethals, "can be accommodated at one time in Gatun lake, when completed."

Col. Goethals gave it as his opinion that the prevalence of "slides" and "pinches" at different points on the route of the canal would not greatly hinder the canal construction and he added that the engineers were gradually overcoming them. He also said he had little apprehension about earthquakes in view of the fact that there had been no serious seismic disturbances at Panama since the seventeenth century.

Col. Goethals said that the records concerning the canal left by the French company had been of great value in the construction of those parts of the French route followed by the American engineers. Several employes who worked under the French are at present in the American force, among them being one chief draughtsman. Of the French equipment turned over to the United States use has been found for 100 locomotives, between 200 and 300 cars and four dredges.

A Cure for Misery.

"I have found a cure for the misery malaria poison produces," says R. M. James, of Louellen, S. C. "It's called Electric Bitters, and comes in 50-cent bottles. It breaks up a case of chills or a bilious attack in almost no time; and it puts yellow jaundice clean out of commission." This great tonic medicine and blood purifier gives quick relief in all stomach, liver and kidney complaints and the misery of lame back. Sold under guarantee at all drug stores.

where he declared evil men were carrying on criminal practices. Thaw declared that workmen on buildings near these premises hnd heard young girls scream, and suggested that men be sent to watch the entrances to the place. Thaw also said he had communicated with the secretary for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, suggesting that a search warrant be issued, and an investigation made of the house, which was located in Twenty-second street.

"Thaw told me he had been followed to my office the second time by men who were employed to watch him," continued the witness. "I sent several men out in the hallway to see if any one was there."

Mr. Jerome objected to the witness telling the result of this search, but it came out in the discussion that no one had followed Thaw.

Could Get No Evidence.

"When Thaw came back to see me the third time," resumed Mr. Comstock, "I told him I had been unable to secure any evidence, as the house in Twenty-second street seemed to be closed. He said he would furnish me the names of several girls who had been there. I told him it would be necessary to corroborate their stories, and we talked the matter over some little while."

Mr. Comstock here identified three more letters from Thaw, one having been received as late as April, 1906, two months before the tragedy.

Mr. Littleton first read to the jury a communication from Thaw to Comstock written in November, 1904. It attempted to give in detail a description of the Twenty-fourth street house, with crude diagrams appearing here and there in the text. Thaw declared that one room was furnished like a forest and that secret stairs led from it to the room of the mirrors. The door in the forest room was hard to find, the letter declared, and there was no escape for the young girls, who were drugged. Thaw claimed that six or seven "criminal scoundrels" controlled the place and that three or four decent young men, who did not know of the criminal acts, often frequented the place.

"Thousands of crimes have been committed there and many felonies," Thaw wrote and added that there was a little room to which access was gained by a door behind a picture. "In this room," the letter went on, "there is a valuable French painting of a woman and of peculiarly infamous suggestivity."

In another letter Thaw suggested that plumbers working on a building adjoining the Twenty-fourth street house might be induced to drop some heavy article through the skylight and reveal what was below. Thaw also called attention to the fact that there was a libel suit in Paris instituted by a young woman who had been mentioned as posing for the picture previously complained of. Thaw declared that the houses in Twenty-second and Twenty-fourth streets were "consecrated to orgies by a gang of arch-criminals.

Cross Examination Ended.

District Attorney Jerome's long and severe cross-examination of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, at the trial of her husband came to an end late yesterday afternoon.

The attorneys for the defense then succeeded in placing in evidence a letter written by the defendant in the fall of 1903 which completely corroborated the claim that the girl, who was to become his wife, did tell him the story of her relations with Stanford White much as she has related it upon the stand at this and the former trial.

This letter was one of a dozen read to the jury as tending to corroborate young Mrs. Thaw's testimony and as further tending to show the effect her story had upon the defendant's mind. Most of these letters were read to the jury in the former trial and were considered as one of the strongest bits of evidence in the hands of the defense. Mr. Jerome objected to their introduction into the record, but was overruled by Justice Dowling after Thaw himself had made a waiver of the confidential relation of counsel and client when Frederick W. Longfellow, his former attorney, appeared on the stand to identify the letters.

The first letter Mr. Littleton read was a repetition, largely, in the defendant's own words of the story the Nesbit girl says she told him in Paris in 1903. In it, however, Thaw refers to two "drugged champagne" incidents—one at the photographic studio in Twenty-second street, and the other in the Twenty-fourth street house, where, as Mrs. Thaw twice testified, that while luncheon and wine were served during her posing at the photographic place, nothing out of the ordinary occurred. Thaw's letter corroborated Mrs. Thaw in that he declared it was in the Twenty-fourth street house that she and Stanford White first were alone.

FORFEITED BOND MONEY

Is Recovered for Hubbard County After Five Years.

Akeley, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Five years ago, M. Fornler, charged with a criminal offense was released on a $750 cash bond, to await action of the district court. The $750 cash bond was deposited with a bank at Park Rapids that went surety for the man. When the case was called he failed to appear and the case was decided against him. The bond being forfeited but was not paid, the bank using the money.

The county attorney recently discovered that the money had not been paid over to the county authorities by some oversight of the bank, and so he immediately brought the attention of the judge of the district court to the matter, and moved that the bond be forfeited and the bond be paid. The court granted the request, and the county treasurer received the $750 deposited by the man, five years ago in the bank.

County Attorney Dampier is looking up the records to see if he can find any other big bonds that have been unpaid into the treasury. It is thought he will not find any other $750 unpaid.

The bank paid over the $750 willingly when ordered by the court.

SCIENTIFIC METHODS CURE SURGICAL DISEASES WITHOUT KNIFE—DRUGGING THE SYSTEM SLOWLY KILLS THOUSANDS

The human body is more complex than any machine or device ever invented, and if anything is going wrong with any of its parts, the ends of the nerves send the message by their numerous strings up to the brain and there the danger is manifesting itself in pain, because of the inflammation, pressure, or decay which impedes upon the nerves of the suffering parts. People make the greatest mistakes in constantly drugging and doping the body in order to rid themselves of the pain, and instead of going to doctors who know how to cure chronic diseases they go to the drug stores, buy some dope which deadens and poisons the nerves. Meanwhile the distructive work of the disease goes right on and the body slowly will be destructed; that is the reason why people lived longer in olden times when they didn't have so many drugs and pain killers. We are getting away too far from nature and that is the reason our young people are looking old and die young.

Science has made a greater advance in the last 50 years than it did in 2,000 years previously, and the method of dissolving chronic pathological lesions and diseased organs is one of the greatest achievements of medical specialists. In Duluth, the Progressive Medical Specialists on Superior street and Lake avenue are the only ones who practice this method. A man don't like to have steel, sharp and cutting, put into his abdomen to get rid of his gallstones or appendix. Nor does he like to have the knife or red hot iron put into his rectum to be relieved of piles or cancer or a sharp cutting instrument put into his bladder to cut a stricture or prostatic gland. That method of getting rid of diseases is old and barbarious. This process of dissolving is the most wonderful, though natural, process. There is no pain nor cutting, nor blood shedding, and it never fails to get results in the hands of these Expert Specialists. You can be cured by this proces of Cancer, RUPTURE, kidney trouble, lung and throat disease, paralysis, skin diseases, syphylis, rheumatism, liver, varicocele, hydrocele, gleet, gonorrhoea, bladder trouble. Or if you are an unfortunate victim which forces you to practice that secret vice which leads you to ruin, loss of manhood and the insane asylum, you can be cured and made happy. Remember that these doctors are Experts in men's diseases and can cure you of your trouble, no matter how long you may have had it. You may consult them without any cost from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. and it would pay you to have their opinion and advice free of charge.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

A Square-Deal

Is assured you when you buy one of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and attested under oath as being complete and correct. They are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native, medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. While potent to cure they are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children.

Not a drop of alcohol enters into Dr. Pierce's leading medicines. A much better agent is used both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles, viz.—pure triple-refined glycerine of proper strength. This agent possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable anti-septic and anti-ferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, "heartburn," foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

For all diseases of the mucous membranes, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific. Catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or pelvic organs is cured by it. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures even in the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption in its advanced stages, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on-coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate hang-on, or chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

It's an insult to your intelligence for a dealer to endeavor to palm off upon you some nostrum of unknown composition in place of Dr. Pierce's world-famed medicines which are OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. Most dealers recommend Doctor Pierce's medicines because they know what they are made of and that the ingredients employed are among the most valuable that a medicine for like purposes can be made of. The same is true of leading physicians who do not hesitate to recommend them, since they know exactly what they contain and that their ingredients are the very best known to medical science for the cure of the several diseases for which these medicines are recommended.

With tricky dealers it is different.

Something else that pays them a little greater profit will be urged upon you as "just as good," or even better. You can hardly afford to accept a substitute of unknown composition and without any particular record of cures in place of Doctor Pierce's medicines which are OF KNOWN COMPOSITION and have a record of forty years of cures behind them. You know what you want and it is the dealer's business to supply that want. Insist upon it.

BECKHAM'S ELECTION

As Senator From Kentucky is Advocated by W. J. Bryan.

Thinks National Democratic Party Has Good Chance for Success.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 22.—The climax of W. J. Bryan's visit to Frankfort was reached, yesterday afternoon, when he spoke to the Democratic members of the legislature behind closed doors, advocating the election of Former Governor Beckham as United States senator. Mr. Bryan said neither Governor Beckham nor anybody else had invited him to Frankfort.

He declared that he had no fears for himself. He said he was told in the Goebel campaign that he might hurt himself if he came to Kentucky.

"I am not afraid of hurting myself when the interests of the Democratic party are at stake," said Mr. Bryan.

"I might be a candidate this year," he said. "I do not know. Only two delegates have been elected, and they have been instructed for me, but they are not enough to elect me. If what I say here affects my chance of election, it is not a sufficient bribe to keep my mouth closed. I am in the habit of saying what I think."

He said he had come to Kentucky, not for Beckham, but for the Democratic nominee, and that if McCreary were the nominee for senator, he would be here speaking for McCreary.

"I am here," he said, "because I believe the Democratic party has a good chance to be elected this year. I do not know who the Democratic standard bearer may be, but I know that it takes a Democratic senate and house to uphold the president. I do not want to be here simply to sit in a chair, but to do something for the people.

Adopted Democratic Principles.

"All the popularity of the Republican president has come from the adoption of Democratic principles and reform. We cannot rely much on Republican senators. We may get the house, but it will require an overwhelming victory to get the senate. I am hopeful we may make enough gains to secure the senate for Democratic reform. On the vote of one senator may rest the fate of the Democratic people.

"For a generation we have had a government under corporate control. This government was sold to the highest bidder, and since that time a saturnalia feast has existed at Washington. The only relief is a Democratic triumph this fall; not only the White House, but also the house and senate. The legislature of Kentucky faces a great responsibility, and should arise to the occasion and elect a Democratic senator, on whose vote the deliverance may rest."

He said personalities should not be allowed to figure in politics. He said it was wrong for Democrats to refuse to support men just because they did not want them. He said, in 1904 he took his medicine in Parker. Parker was the man of all others he did not want, "but," declared Bryan, "he stood for more Democracy than the Republicans did, and he accepted him, and did what he could for him. Give me a bitter enemy, and if he stands for the same things I stand for, I will do more for him than my best friend."

S.S.S. MADE FROM ROOTS AND HERBS

A SAFE AND RELIABLE BLOOD PURIFIER

In the time of our forefathers the forests and fields were the only laboratories from which they could procure their medicines. They searched out and compounded the different roots, herbs and barks into remedies, many of which have been handed down to succeeding generations, and continuously used with satisfactory results. Among the very best of these old time preparations is S. S. S., a medicine made entirely from roots, herbs and barks, in such combination as to make it the greatest of all blood purifiers. This absolute vegetable purity of S. S. S. makes it the one medicine that may be used without fear of harmful results in any way. Most blood medicines on the market contain mercury, potash, or some other strong mineral. These act with bad effect on the system, upsetting the stomach, interfering with the digestion, affecting the bowels, and when used for a prolonged period of time often cause salivation. No such effects ever result from the use of S. S. S., and it may be taken by children as safely as by older people. For Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Malaria, Scrofula, Skin Diseases, and all other troubles caused by impure or poisoned blood, S. S. S. is a perfect remedy. It goes down into the circulation and removes all poisons, impurities, humors or unhealthy matter, and makes the blood pure and rich. It eliminates every particle of the taint of inherited blood trouble, purifies and strengthens the weak, deteriorated blood, and establishes the foundation for good health. S. S. S. is Nature's Blood Purifier, and its many years of successful service, with a steadily increasing demand for it, is the best evidence of its value in all blood troubles. SPORTS OF THE DAY

PRIZES FOR SKI RIDERS

Fifteen Men Will Get Inside Money at National Tournament.

First Day Will be Given Over Entirely to Amateurs.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Duluth Ski club, held last night, final arrangements for the big tournament of the National Ski association, to be held here Feb. 11 and 12, were made.

It was decided to divide the tournament into two classes, amateur and professional, on two different days. The amateur events will all be held on the first day of the tournament, and the professionals will meet on the second day. Every attention will be given the amateur sport by the local club, and the amateurs will be as earnestly encouraged to enter as the professionls. There are a large number of ski riders, who will not enter for cash prizes, and over $100 will be expended to secure suitable prizes for the successful ones in that class.

On the second day the professionals will compete, and then, it is expected, the new records will be made. Invitations have been issued to every ski club within a reasonable distance of Duluth, and it is expected the number of entries will be greater than for any tournament since the National association was organized. Cash prizes, aggreating nearly $1,000, will be given. The first prize, to go to the man having the highest number of points, will be $80. The second will receive $70, and the other prizes will decline by $5 each until the fifteenth prize, which will be $5, so that fifteen men will get inside the money. In addition, there will be $10 extra for the longest standing jump, and $10 for the best tandem jump. It is also expected other special prizes will go up before the meet goes on.

The amateurs on the first day will be divided into two classes. Class A will comprise those under 18 years of age, and Class B those over 18 years. The prizes for the different classes will be gauged to suit, and will be in medals and merchandise.

John Rudd, the ski rider, who has created something of a sensation by his spectacular somersault on skis, will also be at the tournament, and will probably exhibit on both days. The feat will be a big attraction, as it has never before been accomplished with such perfection as Rudd shows.

It is expected a number of Duluth ski riders will go to Chippewa Falls, Wis., next Sunday for the tournament there, provided a fall of snow comes and gives the club an opportunity to pull it off. Thus far there is no snow on the Chippewa Falls hill, and unless a heavy fall comes soon, there will be no tournament.

From all over the Northwest comes news that Duluth is the only city able to pull off a ski tournament. There was to have been a tournament at Ashland last Sunday, but lack of snow prevented, and the hills in all of the other cities and towns are bare. Duluth riders are well pleased with conditions here, under the circumstances, for the national tournament could take place if no more snow should come at all.

GOOD GOING ON WET TRACK

John Runquist's O. F. Wins Henderson Cup Race on Ice.

O. F., the big bay gelding owned by John Runquist, showed a clean pair of heels to a field of four yesterday afternoon on the slushy track at the foot of Twentieth avenue west. The thaw of several days has put the ice in wretched condition, but a large crowd gathered for the races and the horsemen decided to go on with them.

O. F. took the first heat without being pushed very hard, going it in 1:09½. In the second heat, Maggie Medium showed some of the speed, which won for her the race last week, and broke away in front, crossing under the wire first in 1:07½. The third heat was a close go between O. F. and Captain C., but the Runquist pacer was too fast and kept the head all the way, equalling the track record of 1:05½ for the half mile.

Tomango showed poor form throughout the three heats, finishing last in each. The water on the ice evidently disturbed him and his pace was fitful and uneven. Captain C. showed surprising form, keeping close up to the leaders in all three heats and landing second in two of them.

The summary follows:

Horse and Driver.	Finish.
O. F., b. b.—McKay	1	2	1
Maggie Medium, blk p.—Randall	3	1	3
Captain C., gr. g.—Phillips	2	3	2
Tomango b. g.—Stevens	4	4	4

Time: 1:09½ 1:07¾ 1:05¼.

THOMAS OUTCLASSED.

Former Coast Champion is Badly Beaten by Jack Sullivan.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 22.—Jack (Twin) Sullivan of Boston outclassed Joe Thomas of San Francisco before the Pacific Athletic club last night in a ten-round bout, but Thomas, by an exhibition of remarkable gameness, turned what seemed like a fiasco in the first round into one of the bloodiest and most exciting battles ever seen here.

Thomas stayed the ten rounds, although he was at the mercy of Sullivan for half the distance, and was almost out when the final gong rang. Sullivan slugged Thomas unmercifully in every round, but Thomas staggered through round after round utterly defenseless, except for frequent rallies, which brought the crowd to its feet with cheers for his gameness. In conformity with the law, no decision was rendered.

BASKETBALL AT THE BOYS DEPT.

High School Sophomores Defeat Juniors---The Interscholastic Series.

The second game in the high school basketball series was played yesterday afternoon, in the boys' department gymnasium, between the Juniors and Sophomores by a score of 29 to 11. The committee in charge of the interscholastic series met at the boys' department, last evening, and arranged the schedule for the coming season, which will commence this Monday afternoon, at 4:30, when the Jeffersons and Jacksons will meet. The teams winning the largest number of games will play a series of three championship games, the winner to be awarded the school championship for the city. They will receive the boys department pennant and will also be banqueted by the losing teams.

DATES FOR TOURNEY.

Jay Gould Will be Called Upon to Defend His Title.

New York, Jan. 22.—The committee in charge of the schedule for court games have set the racquet championship tournament for the Boston Tennis and Racquet club courts beginning Feb. 18. The court tennis championship will be held on the courts of the New York club, beginning April 5. Charles E. Sands, Joshua Crane, Pierre Lorillard, Jr., and Kingdon Gould will be among those who will try to wrest the title from Jay Gould. Eustace Miles, from whom Mr. Gould won the English championship, has been invited to take part in the tournament.

Gould will be unable to go abroad this year to defend his English title, and it is said that it is not unlikely that Miles will come to America for an opportunity of again meeting his young conqueror.

PAPKE BEATS STANTON.

Valley Falls Scrapper Has It Over Pacific Coast Boy.

Boston, Jan. 22—Bill Papke of Valley Falls, Ill., who claims the middleweight championship of the world, defeated Walter Stanton of San Francisco in four rounds at the Armory Athletic association, here, last night. Stanton was the aggressor in the first and second rounds, but in the third Papke started in to fight, and soon had Stanton tired.

Trick Skater.

Manager Shea of the Temple roller rink has arranged for one of the best attractions of the season at the Temple roller rink, in John F. Davidson, the St. Paul trick and fancy skater, who claims the championship of the world in his own line. Davidson has several feats, which have never been seen at the Temple rink, and he is counted upon as a great attraction. He will give four performances, beginning tomorrow night and ending Saturday night.

GLEANS in the SPORTING FOG.

Play the puck! It's an injunction that has been given hockey players from time immemorial. Some of them take and digest it, stick to it all through their career and they are the boys who advance the puck most and shoot the most goals.

The player, who plays the man, when he should be playing the puck, isn't wanted on any hockey team. The netting of the little disc wins the games. Regardless of the number of men carried off the ice with injuries, the number of aching toes and paining shins, the number of cuts and bruises, the victorious team must shoot more goals than their opponents or they don't win.

The man who plays the man loses sight of the object of the game. With rancor in his heart he "lays" for his opponents. When one of them comes down the ice with the puck he doesn't try to secure the rubber for his side. He crashes into the man, uses the point of his stick to check or pulls off some other contemptible trick which gets him nothing for a few minutes on the bench and the consequent weakening of his team for that period.

Roughhouse hockey players have been stars. But not because of their roughhouse measures. Though they may have taken an occasional crack at an opponent they always had an eye open for the puck nd a possible chance for a goal. They didn't play the man in their long rushes for the opponents' goal. They avoided the man, played the puck for all they were worth and became stars.

Roughness isn't necessary to hockey. It's a clean, scientific, fast game at its best and should remain so. The rowdy who thinks only of injuring his opponents in the hope of gaining an advantage, gets only heavy penalties for his pains and usually loses for his team.

Duluth boys are taking up hockey. It is well for them to remember the injunction and stick to it. Leave the man to take care of himself, but play the puck, first, last and all the time, and victory is more probable than under any other circumstances.

When Hegewisch, Ill., turned Battling Nelson loose upon the world, it endowed him in overflowing measure with gall, that intangible commodity, which goes a long way in this crafty old world. Fighters are usually supposed to have ability to take care of themselves. Perhaps Bat hasn't, speaking of physical ability, but when it comes to match-making, the astute Billy Nolan is backed clear off the board by his understudy-that-was.

Nelson and Packey McFarland are talking fight. The boys were once friends, but the best of friends must meet in the prize ring, when championships are involved and Nelson and McFarland must settle a vexatious question. But the match has only reached the talk stage and it will remain right there if Bat insists on the stand he has taken, in his misguided opinion of his own importance and fistic ability.

Packey must make 131 pounds at 6 o'clock on the day of the battle, says Nelson. That from a man who has been defeated by Joe Gans and later by Jimmy Britt. That from a man who forced Joe Gans into a corner and dictated terms without a blush. He pulled down the big end of the purse that time by losing, but if he does that with Packey McFarland, the Irish lad must be far lacking in foresight.

Nelson took on a dub the other night and beat him. Now he thinks he is the Nelson of two years ago, in a position to dictate to whom he will; a man on an unassailable pedestal, placed there for the homage of the great unwashed, people have come to know Nelson and his egotism. It's up to him to get down and mix with "de gang" and to fight for his meal ticket like any other bruiser.

McFarland hasn't a blot on his record. If anybody is in a position to dictate, it is he, and Nelson's stand in the fight talk is a hugh joke to the pugilistic world.

FIVE TEAMS TIED.

Good Average Speed Maintained at Kansas City Grind.

Kansas City, Jan. 22.—Maintaining an average speed of more than twenty-one miles an hour, the five leading teams in the six-day bicycle race at Convention hall are still tied for first honors. Every attempt by any of the riders to gain a lap yesterday was foiled. A spurt by any one was quickly followed by the entire bunch and then all the racers would settle down to a monotonous grind until another ambitious rider would make the effort and fall. Mitten spurted more than the others, but last night, at the end of the eleventh hour, Sherwood was leading. At that time the standing was as follows:

	Miles.	Laps.
Root-Fogler	330	7
Lawson-Morgan	330	7
Bardgett-Mitten	330	7
Hopper-Holbrook	330	7
Sherwood-Wiley	330	7
Monroe-Morgan	330	4

Monroe-Morgan were lapped twice last night by a spurt started by Bardgett.

GOTCH BEATS LUNDIN.

American Champion Throws Swede in Straight Falls.

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 22.—Frank A. Gotch and Hjalmer Lundin wrestled for the heavyweight championship of America, at the opera house, last night. Gotch won, getting two falls in succession, after a gruelling series of twists. The first fall was in 24 minutes and 33 seconds, and the second in 16 minutes and 21 seconds.

Will Meet Sutter.

Friday night at the Metropolitan opera house Charles Sevoni of Wausau, Wis., will meet Charles Sutter of Proctor in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match, best two in three, pin falls. Sevoni has something of a reputation in Wisconsin and Sutter showed his ability last Friday night, when he gave Mauritz Harris a hard go at the Metropolitan. The men will strip at about 135. The match will follow the regular performance.

Horses Are Matched.

A match race has been arranged between Anna A., owned by Charles Larson, and Price, Dr. Oredson's fast pacer. The race will be for a side bet of $25 and will be pulled off on the ice track at the foot of Twentieth avenue west next Sunday afternoon. The horses raced New Year's afternoon and the mare won. Anna A is a green horse, while Prince is a campaigner with considerable experience.

You in-door people—women or men—Cascarets are for you. They do what exercise does—what out-door life and coarse foods do—for the bowels.

Your food, when digested, is sucked into the blood through myriads of ducts in the bowels.

Decay generates poisons. Then those myriad ducts suck the poisons into the blood.

More than half the ills that we suffer come in just that way.

The remedy is to clean out the bowels.

Not in a harsh way—not with salts, castor oil or cathartics. But in a gentle and natural way—with Cascarets.

But this way is better yet:

Don't wait till the bowels are clogged. Keep them active. Take one Cascaret the minute you need it. Carry a box in your pocket.

If we keep the bowels clean, we save all those bad hours which are wasted by neglect.

That's why we make candy tablets, and put them in pocket-size boxes. We want you to learn how easy it is to keep well.

There is nothing so natural in laxatives—nothing so gentle—as Cascarets.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The price is 50c, 25c and

FLEE FROM THE FLAMES

The Blaze in Drygoods Store Causes Wild Panic.

Fire Department Was Confused Regarding the Location.

A stock boy stepped on a match in the basement of Stack & Co.'s dry goods store, at 21 and 23 West Superior street, yesterday afternoon, and in a minute or two 100 customers and clerks were making a wild scramble for the exits, to escape the smoke which came shooting up the elevator shaft.

The alarm was turned in by telephone, and the headquarters company responded at once, but three other companies got mixed up on the call, and went to 2123 West Superior street, by mistake.

In the meantime there was wild confusion inside the smoky store. A majority of those there were women, and at the first signs of fire they became hysterical. Cool heads among the male clerks directed them out of the building.

Most of those in the rear of the store made their escape by the rear entrance, but Miss Barbara Dramer, who lives at Fourth avenue east and Sixth street, started across the main floor from the balcony at the rear. When she had traversed half the distance to the front door, she was overcome by smoke and fell unconscious.

As she fell, Miss Dramer gave a little cry, which was heard by one of the male clerks. Although the smoke was getting thicker every second, pouring up from the basement everywhere, he made his way to the girl's side and, picking her up, carried her safely to the street.

She was taken to a nearby store, and a physician was called. Miss Dramer had inhaled quite a little smoke, and it was some time before she recovered. When she did she was little the worse for her experience, but was sent home in an ambulance.

Although no one with the exception of the stock boy, was in any immediate danger from the flames, several had narrow escapes from being overcome by smoke. Clerks and customers on the second floor of the store raced wildly for the ground floor and the street.

With the exception of Miss Dramer, all the women got out of the building without mishap. The male employes of the establishment remained till all the women were out.

Mike Sharkey, the stock boy who started the fire when he accidentally stepped on a match, tried his best to put out the flames before he was obliged to flee, and give the alarm.

Cotton goods formed the principal contents of the store rooms in the basement and there was quite a little lint scattered about, which was quickly ignited when the sparks from the match flew. Young Sharkey suffered some slight burns about the face and hands, from his contact with the fire.

The damage on the building and stock was estimated today at $18,000, which is fully covered by insurance. Water was turned on only in the basement, the damage in the rest of the store being largely caused by smoke, which was very dense while the fire lasted.

The building is two stories high and of brick, and owned by D. B. McDonald of Virginia, Minn. It was erected about two years ago and has been occupied by the Stack establishment practically ever since.

RAILROAD CASUALTIES RAPIDLY INCREASING.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Startling figures appear in the accident bulletin just issued by the interstate commerce commission, covering the month of July, August and September, 1907. The report shows that the number of casualties on railroads during that quarterly period were 23,063, including 1,339 killed and 21,724 injured. This is an increase of 157 in the number killed and 3,056 in the number injured as compared with the corresponding period of 1906.

Collisions and derailments in the quarter numbered 4,279, including 2,245 collisions and 2,034 derailments, of which 320 collisions and 22 derailments affected passenger trains. The damage to cars, engines and roadway by these accidents amounted to $3,605,696. This shows an increase in the number of collisions and derailments of 607 over the corresponding period of 1906.

DEPUTY COLLECTOR BUSY

Making Inventory of Tobacco and Cigar Factories.

Bemidji, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Guy A. Aubole of Crookston, deputy internal revenue collector for this district of Minnesota has just completed taking inventory of all cigar and tobacco factories in the district, upon order of the internal revenue officials.

There are twenty-four cigar factories and two tobacco factories in the district. As these factories are scattered over a wide territory, the task of completing the inventory of each before Jan. 20, as Aubole was ordered was a difficult one; but he hustled and finished his work within the time prescribed in the order.

Mr. Aubole states that he was obliged to cover some 2,000 miles in traveling over the territory covered by the factories, and that he was at his home in Crookston but once since he commenced the inventories.

HIS DOGS WIN PRIZES.

"Pat" and "Biddy" are full-blooded Irish terriers. Mr. Squier brought the dogs to the United States with him when he returned from a visit to Ireland, last September.

WHITEROCK SENTENCED

Judge Cant Sends Young Criminal to State Penitentiary.

Chicago Authorities May Get Him When Sentence Expires.

Philip Whiterock, alias Philip Eisenfeldt, who was convicted early this week on the charge of grand larceny in the second degree, was sentenced to the state penitentiary on the reformatory plan, by Judge Cant, this morning.

Before sentence was passed Eisenfeldt admitted that he had served time in the New York state prison for burglary committed at Buffalo in 1904, but alleged that he pleaded guilty to the charge to save a friend from being convicted and sent to prison for the offense charged.

Whiterock made a plea to the court for leniency, declaring that if he were given a short term he would turn over a new leaf and endeavor to be straight in his dealings hereafter.

The jury that convicted Whiterock, or Eisenfeldt, recommended him to the mercy of the court, but in view of the accused's criminal record, which the jury did not know, the court stated that he would have no hesitancy in passing a sentence that the defendant seemed to deserve.

Eisenfeldt is wanted by the Chicago authorities to answer to the charge of burglary, and the authorities there will probably keep advised about the time he is released from Stillwater, to take him to Chicago to stand trial for the theft of nine fur overcoats valued at $50 each.

In Eisenfeldt the police believe they have captured and placed in a secure place, for a time, at least, a pretty bad customer.

Ward, alias Kennedy, alias Green, is now serving the first of his two sentences for petit larceny.

Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup acts upon the bowels and thereby drives the cold out of the system. It contains no opiates—it is pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

REGISTRATION FAIRLY HEAVY

More than 8,000 voters of the city have now registered, the registration in the different wards yesterday bringing over 1,000 new names.

Yesterday was not particularly heavy as a registration day, for the reason that interest in the primary election was so keen this year that an unusually heavy vote was cast then.

The registration vote yesterday averaged about 150 in every ward.

Saturday will be the last registration vote before the election, the last chance for those who have not set their names down at the polling places in the different ward precincts.

LUNCH WAGONS FARED BADLY

"Carl Carlson," called Judge Cutting.

Two forlorn looking specimens of humanity arose from chairs in the courtroom and faced the court. "What's this?" mused the judge, as he glanced over the docket. There were two Carl Carlsons, both arrested at the same time and place and charged with being drunk and disorderly. "Carl Carlson" was asked his plea and the duel personalities pleaded not guilty simultaneously. They were both led away to be given a trial this afternoon, with Thomas M. Madden and Roy Butcher, who also pleaded not guilty to disorderly conduct.

Carlson No. 1 and Carlson No. 2 went into Madden's lunch wagon last night about 6 o'clock. No. 2 ordered a sandwich and paid for it, though he kicked on the price, 15 cents. Madden says No. 1 ordered a sandwich also. No. 2 says he doesn't know whether No. 1 did or not, and No. 1 says he did not. At any rate, while No. 2 was disposing of his feed, No. 1 stepped out. He returned, but his actions were objectionable and he was thrown out. On the outside, Madden, it is said, tried to collect for a sandwich, which No. 1 says he didn't order.

There the stories diverge. Madden and Butcher say the two Carlsons jumped on Madden. The two Carlsons say Butcher and Madden jumped on them. At any rate, the Scandinavians went down and out in short order and were pretty badly beaten up. The story of the lunch wagon men was taken as true by the policeman called, and the two Carlsons were toted to the station in the wagon.

When No. 1 was taken into the station, there was consternation for a few minutes. To all appearances he was dead. A gash over his eye, evidently caused by a kick, looked like the fatal wound, and the police thought No. 2 would surely lose his number. A physician was called, but when he arrived he announced Carlson was "dead," but dead drunk, and No. 1 came back into his own in a few minutes.

Street corner lunch wagons suffered more than their share last night. While the Carlsons were acquiring notoriety in the St. Croix district, Charles Peterson, who has been in police court before, was also doing some damage out in the West end and getting into court, via the lunch wagon route.

Peterson was in a lunch wagon at the corner of Garfield avenue and Superior street last night and got into an altercation with another man. They went out in the street to mix it and the proprietor started out to find a policeman. While he was gone Peterson returned and, it is said, he assaulted the boy left in charge of the feed-wagon. He pleaded guilty to a disorderly conduct charge this morning and drew $25 and costs or thirty days.

CLAIMS HUBBY FRISKED A GUN

Fanny Helen Wilson has petitioned the district court for a divorce from Frank E. Wilson, on the ground that he has treated her in a cruel and inhuman manner, and has refused and neglected to support her. The complaint, filed today by William Marx, attorney for Mrs. Wilson, alleges that they were married in Duluth, Nov. 5, 1907, so that their married bliss has been of short duration. Mrs. Wilson is 19 and her husband is 26 years of age.

Mrs. Wilson claims that her husband has on several occasions shown her a loaded revolver and threatened to take her life. She alleges that these threats have caused her to become physically prostrated.

Besides a divorce, Mrs. Wilson desires suitable allowance in alimony, attorney's fees and suit money. She also wishes to be restored her maiden name of Fanny Helen Proudlock.

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 22.—Charles M. Smith, aged 75 years, veteran of the Civil war and widely known among Grand Army men as a teller of the story of his escape from Andersonville prison, was striken with apoplexy last night, dying immediately.

Southampton, Jan. 22.—Capt. Benjamin Parker, one of the best known yachting skippers of the present generation, died here yesterday after a long illness. Capt. Parker, for many years, sailed the German emperor's yacht Meteor and won many races with her. In 1899 he was engaged by Sir Thomas Lipton to take charge of Shamrock I, and subsequently of Shamrock II in the America's cup contests. The captain went to the United States in 1902 for the purpose of bringing back to this side the yacht built in America for Emperor William.

His Fun Proved Serious.

Arthur John McDonald was in a playful mood yesterday and was up on a petty larceny charge this morning. According to the report of the police, McDonald, while riding toward West Duluth on a street car, picked up the conductor's gloves, which were lying on the floor. He left the car at Eleventh avenue west, and the conductor followed him to get the gloves, whereupon, it is said, McDonald threw them in the gutter. He pleaded guilty to a petty larceny charge, saying he didn't want to steal the gloves, and was given $15 or twenty days in jail.

COMMITTEE.

RHOADES IS CONVICTED.

Fargo Telegraph Operator Faces a Ten-Year Sentence.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—After deliberating six hours, the jury in the district court that heard the sensational evidence in the case against Clayton Rhoades, a Western Union telegraph operator, who was tried for committing an assault upon Adella Koebernick, a waitress, returned a verdict of guilty. As the minimum punishment for the crime is ten years, the convicted man faces a long term in the penitentiary.

The accused roomed in the same house as the complaining witness, and she alleged he forced his way into her room, and, armed with a pistol, ruined her. The testimony was of such a nature that Judge Pollock barred everyone, even the reporters. During the presentation of the evidence of the woman the scene was so affecting that several of the jurors and others present gave way to tears.

CLAIMS MONEY WITHHELD.

Bank at Deer River Sues Its Collection Agent.

The First National Bank of Deer River has started suit against F. W. Parsons to recover money which he is alleged to have collected for the bank and wrongfully withheld after repeated demands were made on him for it. The case is one brought to the district court of this county on change of venue from Itasca county. The bank alleges that in the course of its business it placed a check on a Twin City bank in Parsons' hands to act as agent for the collection of the same. It is alleged that he collected the face of the check, together with the protest fee, but failed to turn it over. C. O. McCarthy of Grand Rapids represents the plaintiff.

CLAIMS DAMAGE TO BUSINESS

Keitel & Co. have instituted a suit in the district court to recover from the Duluth Brewing & Malting company $12,725.35, alleged to be due as damages for an alleged breach of contract.

The plaintiff alleges that in October, 1905, the parties entered into an agreement whereby the Brewing company was to furnish Keitel & Co. 150,000 bushels of choice malt, at 47 or 48 cents, depending on whether the stuff was taken on time or for cash, to be sold out as the plaintiff company found customers.

Keitel & Co. claim that under the agreement they received 62,239 bushels, and disposed of it, when the brewing company is alleged to have refused to furnish any more malt under the contract. The plaintiff contends that it had the opportunity to sell the malt for 69 cents a bushel, and that its business was damaged to the extent named.

NO MORE MEN FOR PHILIPPINES

Maj. Gen. A. C. Ainsworth, commander-in-chief of the army, telegraphed to the local recruiting station yesterday, informing the recruiting officials that no more men should be enlisted for Philippine service. This order from the head of the army means that no more men, for the time being, will be accepted for foreign service until the war department decides to send additional troops to the Philippines.

The order will probably increase the needs of regiments for home service, as it is most likely that some of the men that will go to compose the two regiments sent to the Philippines will be transfers from home-service companies.

Practically all of the enlisting done here and at the sub-recruiting stations at Bemidji, Hurley and Ashland was for recruits for the Philippine service. This foreign service has been recruited so rapidly that for the next six months no recruits for foreign service will be accepted.

Most of the men composing the two regiments sent to the island will be raw recruits, recruited specially for that service. There will be some transfers from other regiments, which will leave places to be filled. The order stopping recruiting soldiers for the Philippine service will have no effect on the enlistment of men for service in the United States, as the army needs all the men it can get.

Recruiting at the local office and at the sub offices has shown a pickup the present week. From the present indications enlistments will be heavier from now on than has been the case the past month.

WHEAT HAS WEAK TONE

Market is Rather Dull During the Session Here.

Flax Has an Easier Tone in Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 22.—Wheat was quiet and weaker during most of the session today and closed easier on both sides of the Atlantic.

There was no particular news during the day. Foreign advices were rather bearish and car receipts in the Northwest were considerably larger than a year ago. Liverpool closed ⅜d to 1½d lower, Budapest 2½c lower and Berlin ⅞c higher.

The May option closed ⅜c lower in Duluth, ½c lower in Chicago and New York, ⅝-⅝c lower in Minneapolis and ⅝c lower in Winnipeg. The July option closed ⅝c lower in Duluth, unchanged in Chicago and New York, ⅝-⅝c lower in Minneapolis and ⅝c lower in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ⅞c higher in Chicago and ⅛@¼d lower in Liverpool. May oats closed ⅜c lower in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"There was a steady tone to the market at the start and values were unchanged. There was no particular interest shown by traders, but the undertone was steady as a result of the firmer American cables yesterday. During the morning, offerings became larger, due largely to the lack of support and prices broke sharply, losing ⅝d to 1¼d, the principal weakness being in the nearby month. Trading continued at the low level and selling was accelerated by the poor demand for wheat in all positions. Prices at midday were ⅝d to 1¼d lower than Tuesday.

"Corn was steady during the early dealings and ¼d higher, being influenced by the better American cables. Later easiness developed, prices losing ⅛d to ¼d in sympathy with the weakness in wheat."

Car receipts were 64 against 7 last year, and at Minneapolis 277 against 164 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 341 against 161 last year. Chicago received 42 against 25 last year. Winnipeg received 187 against 36 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 614,000 bus, last year 325,000 bus. Shipments 383,000 bus, last year 255,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 487,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 1,933,000 bus, last year 547,000 bus. Shipments 180,000 bus, last year 468,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 153,740 bus.

Wheat was dull all of the session in the Duluth market. May wheat opened ⅝c lower at $1.10¾, advanced to $1.10⅞, went off to $1.09⅝, reacted to $1.10½ and ranged between that and $1.09⅝ during the rest of the session, closing at $1.10½, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday. July wheat was inactive and closed ⅝c lower than yesterday at $1.11 nominal.

Durum wheat closed ⅜c lower and cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was sick. May flax opened unchanged at $1.20⅜ asked, sold as low as $1.20 and closed at that price, a loss of ⅜c from yesterday. July flax was inactive and closed ⅜c lower than yesterday at $1.22 nominal.

Coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, on track, $1.12½; to arrive, No. 1 northern, $1.10½; No. 2 northern, $1.07½; on track, No. 1 northern, $1.10½; No. 2 northern, $1.07½; May, $1.10½; July, $1.11; No. 1 northern in store, $1.07½; No. 2 northern in store, $1.04½; durum on track, No. 1, 85¾c; No. 2, 83⅝; May durum, $1.½; July durum, 92¾c. Flax—To arrive, $1.17½; on track, $1.17½; May, $1.20; July, $1.22. Oats—To arrive, 48½c; on track, 48½c. Rye—74-75c; barley, 65-85c.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 64, last year, 7; corn, 1; oats, 12, barley, 3; flax, 11, last year, 5.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Has Weak Opening With Commission Houses Chief Sellers.

Chicago, Jan. 22.—The wheat market today opened weak because of lower prices in Liverpool. Commission houses were the chief sellers. May wheat opened ¾@⅞c to 1@1⅛c lower at $1.01¾ to $1.02, and sold at $1.02⅛. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 284 cars against 480 cars last week and 186 cars one year ago.

Corn was weak, chiefly because of the break in wheat. May corn opened ¼c to ¼@⅜c lower at 60¼c to 60⅜c and for a time held within that range. Local receipts were 484 cars with two of contract grade.

The oats market was easy along with wheat and corn. May oats opened ¼c lower at 54¼c and sold at 54⅜c. Local receipts were 188 cars.

The provisions market was active and prices were weak. The depressing influences were realizing sales, and larger receipts of live hogs than had been expected. May pork opened 7½c to 17½c lower at $13 to $13.10 and sold at $12.92½. Lard was 5c to 7½c lower at $7.87½ to $7.90, and sold off to $7.80@7.82½. Ribs were 7@7½c to 7½@10c lower, at $8.92½ to $8.95.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.02¼@¾; July, 98¾c; September, 85¼c. Corn—May, 61⅜@⅛c; July, 60@c; September, 59¼c. Oats—May, old, 54¼c; May, 52@⅓c; July, old, 47¼c; July, 33¾c. THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Opens Low, Rallies Slightly and Then Moves Up.

Minneapolis, Jan. 22.—Receipts here of 727 cars against 154, an increase of 425,000 bushels in elevator stocks and the lower market in Liverpool put wheat down from the opening at $1.09¼@1.09⅝ for May to $1.08½. The market then rallied to $1.09. Toward the close it began to move up, on good buying and May sold to $1.09¾. Closing at $1.09¾. July closed at $1.10@1.10¼.

Better cash markets and slightly better tone to the milling trade started the shorts covering. Cash wheat was firmer at May price for No. 1 and 2c under for No. 2. Elevators and millers bought. No. 1 northern closed $1.09½, No. 2 northern, $1.07@1.07½; No. 3 wheat, $1.03½@1.05½.

Better demand for flour. A car or two of patent was worked for export. Domestic sales were somewhat lower. Shipments were the largest for some time, 63,685 barrels. First patents, $5.45@5.60; second patents, $5.35@5.45; first clears, $4.30@4.40; second clears, $3.50@3.60; firm as quoted.

Barley: Market, strong; principally low grades received; malting barley, scarce. Everything firm and from 1@2c higher; range, 93c. Flax closed at $1.17¼. Bran in bulk, $20@20.25.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: There was a decided irregular wheat market from first to last. First prices were at a decline because of the surprisingly weak Liverpool cable. There was also a bad break at Budapest. Northwest receipts were more than double those of last year. Kansas City reported an increase of 100,00 bushels in two days. When all the bear news was at hand, this market broke down to $1.01⅜ for May. Two or three times the price recovered and late in the session when corn showed strength the price firmed up, holding about half a cent under last price of yesterday. There was fairly good demand for cash wheat reported from all markets. Prices will turn very likely on heavy shipments from Argentine.

Corn—Local traders started in to sell corn because of the weakness in wheat. The market had an early upturn because strong people took all the offerings. Late in the session there was a break of 1c in May oats, and the May corn dropped back to 60½c. From this point began good buying, which gave the market its strongest turn for the day. Bad country roads are likely to interfere with shipping. The situation is such that there is nothing to do but buy the corn on these dips no matter what the cause of the selling.

Oats—There was selling of May oats by a leading house at one time sufficient to start a break of 1c in the price. There was a rally following the upturn in corn. It is a narrow professional market.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Both markets were dull today and showed little change in price. We think good people are buying stocks on the reaction, and that the upward movement will be resumed by the end of the week. Amalgamated was fairly active today and seemed to rally easily. It ought to be a leader in the next movement. Calumet & Hecla people are bullish on La Salle, and are taolking 25 for it. The selling pressure on Butte is over, but the floor traders have a line of it which will have to be taken before it can advance much.

Boston, to Gay & Sturgis: The markets today opened weak under pressure of profit-taking but as the day progressed it became more and more evident that no large amount of stocks were for sale and the demand existing was more than sufficient to take care of them. A slow recovery took place, leaving prices some higher than last night. Commercial reports and railroad earnings continue to be very depressing and act as a chilling influence on speculative sentiment and the factor of easy money will soon be an old story. Consequently any general rise from here does not seem likely for the present until such time as general business begins to stop receding. Special movements in certain stocks are about all that can be looked for.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Jan. 22.—Cotton market opened steady at an advance of 6 to 8 points, in response to higher cables, but quickly eased off to within 2 or 3 points of last night, under liquidation and bear pressure encouraged by the larger estimates for receipts at Houston tomorrow, while fresh buying was restricted by uncertainty as to Lancashire labor disputes and the census figures tomorrow. Business continued quiet and the market acted nervous during the middle of the morning.

Spot closed steady; middling uplands, 12.10; middling gulf, 12.35. Sales, 1,780 bales. Futures closed barely steady. Closing bids: January, 11.26; February, 11.26; March, 11.37; April, 11.45; May, 11.48; June, 11.43; July, 11.29; August, 10.99; October, 10.46.

STOCKS ARE UNSETTLED

The Early Tendency Was Downward, But Market Recovered Sharply.

Profit-Taking Towards Close Caused a Drop in Prices.

New York, Jan. 22.—The opening stock market was dull and irregular with small losses predominating. St. Paul declined 1¼; Distillers' Securities, 1, and Baltimore & Ohio, ¾. The American Smelting stocks were up a point and Canadian Pacific and Mexican Central large fractions.

A rally of a point in Reading caused the list to turn upward temporarily, but the market subsequently went to a lower level than at the beginning, when the selling of St. Paul became urgent. Delaware & Hudson yielded 2¼; St. Paul, 2⅜; Great Northern Ore Certificates, 1¼, and Union Pacific Northern Pacific, Reading, Amalgamated Copper, 1. Another temporary check was followed by renewed declines. Granby Mining gained 4 and American Sugar 1⅛.

After some further recessions prices made a substantial rally and in many instances a full recovery. Northern Pacific rose a large fraction over last night. Delaware & Hudson fell 3¾; Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis preferred, 3; Illinois Central, 1½, and Pennsylvania, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Colorado Fuel, Consolidated Gas, United States Rubber and Central Leather preferred, 1. Railway Steel Spring preferred gained 3; American Smelting Securities preferred "B," 2½, and Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred, 1. The market had become extremely dull at noon.

The market presented no particular features during the noon hour, aside from the uncertain movements of Reading. Prices were hardening when the hour expired. Interborough - Metropolitan preferred declined a point.

The advance made more progress before it met a check through the renewed selling of Pennsylvania which declined to the lowest. The rise reached 1⅝ in Northern Pacific and 1 in Union Pacific. Atchison, and Great Northern preferred. Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis sold up 5, and Delaware & Hudson extended its loss to 4¼.

The market closed heavy and dull. Price fluctuations were somewhat hesitating. Brooklyn Rapid Transit and American Smelting advanced 1⅜ and Amalgamated Copper, 1. Green Bay & Western income "B" rose 3 on an initial distribution of profits to holders. Pittsburg C. C. & St. Louis preferred fell 5. Pullman, 6; Federal Mining preferred, 2¾; United Railway and Investment preferred, 2¼, and Wisconsin Central preferred, 1. There was a general yielding of prices again later.

Stock Gossip.

New York—Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The stock market was unsettled today, the tendency being downward i nthe early session. However, around noon, the market recovered sharply under the leadership of Great Northern, Amalgamated and Smelters, but towards the close considerable profit-taking in those specialties was noted. There was not much news of importance, but the recent decline has clarified the situation and strengthened the position of the market as quite a large short interest has been created. Although it is generally admitted that we are in the midst of a depression in general trade conditions, at the same time it should be realized that the majority of standard issues are selling at a level warranted by their merits, and although there may be some decrease in dividend payments, we are disposed to think that the same has been greatly discounted.

NORTH DAKOTANS FAVOR W. H. TAFT

Republican State Central Committee Declares for Ohio Man.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—William H. Taft of Ohio was declared by the Republican state central committee today to be the choice of North Dakotans for the presidency. The committee selected Minot and May 14 as the place and time for the state convention to elect delegates to the national Republican convention. The apportionment is based on two delegates at large from each county and one delegate for each 100 votes averaged on the basis cast in each county for the highest and lowest candidates for state officers, making 440 delegates in all.

A resolution of condolence was passed for three members of the committee, who died since the apportionment. Both factions of the Republicans have endorsed Taft.

REVOLUTIONISTS GAINING.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The revolutionists appear to be making some headway in the northern part of the island of Hayti, according to information received at the state department today by Consul Livingston at Cape Haytien. In his dispatch to the state department he says that that place is threatened and that the revolutionists are in possession of the neighboring villages.

KISSES DO NOT SPREAD DISEASE

But the Little Mouse is Great Menace to Society.

New York, Jan. 22.—"Kisses are harmless, but beware of mice," says Dr. E. Paller, who has just completed a series of experiments regarding the spread of dangerous microbes, especially those that produce pneumonia.

"I do not believe disease is at all likely to be spread by kisses," said the physician. "Experiments prove to me that all bacilli from human beings must first pass through some other animal organism before becoming dangerous to a human being. Microbes might pass from mouth to mouth a thousand times without being dangerous, but let them first pass through the body of some other animal and they will kill.

"I have been engaged in a series of experiments regarding the microbe which is now generally believed to produce pneumonia. My experiments have generally been with mice, and as a result of that I am convinced that the littel house mouse, infecting almost every home, is the leading cause of pneumonia.

"I have found that sputum from a healthy man or woman will in three cases out of four kill a mouse inoculated with it. Following this my tests show that the body and blood of the dead mouse are full of microbes which, in turn, will produce pneumonia in a healthy human being.

"It is hard to speak on this subject without becoming technical, but I can say that the microbe causing pneumonia is very polymorphous, and a similar microbe is found in the mouths of all healthy individuals. Before virulence I have found that these microbes must first pass through the body of a susceptible animal, and of all animals the mouse appears to be the most susceptible.

"As these microbes are found in the mouths of all individuals it would appear at first as if kissing were fraught with danger. If this were true May and June, the months of the year in which the most love-making and the greatest number of marriages, would record the greatest number of cases of pneumonia.

"On the contrary, we find pneumonia most prevalent in December, February and March. We do not find any evidence that pneumonia is unusually prevalent in affectionate families where much kissing is done, but we do find it prevalent among weak individuals.

"The young mouse wanders about the living rooms in a house looking for food. They easily get inoculated with human sputum, and its effect is deadly, as proved by my experiments. After their death their decomposing bodies spread virulent microbes, which may cause disease by either inhalation or by inoculation.

"Rats are not particularly susceptible to the microbe, and while they may spread other diseases they do not spread pneumonia.

"Housekeepers must learn to regard a dead mouse as one of the most dangerous objects possible about a house."

PARK POINT TRANSFERS.

Claimed Increased Business Would Quadruple Present Receipts.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I am not one of those who desire to stir up a feeling of opposition to public utility corporations. On the contrary, I give due recognition to their worth as factors in our progressive civilization; but when one or more of them persist in maintaining an attitude of indifference to the just claims of my fellow-citizens, upon no plea, but that a technical construction of their charter does not require them to comply, I feel like appealing to public sentiment for aid in influencing them to do for the people, what in good conscience they ought to do.

When it can be shown that the thing to be done contemplates a great advantage to the public, no financial loss to the corporation, on the contrary, a probable gain, and the corporation managers stubbornly refuse to give the accommodation, and fortify themselves behind a strained or technical construction of the terms of the franchise, we do not wonder that the public become more and more distrustful of corporations generally. It is hoped that our Duluth corporations do not desire to add further fuel to a sentiment already too predominating.

I have in mind two home corporations, both of whom are enjoying certain exclusive rights, privileges and immunities, which it is extremely doubtful if they could have obtained today, and were granted in the days of probably honest, but very loose municipal legislation. I refer to the Duluth Street Railway company for one, and the Minnesota Street Railway company, operating on Park Point, for the other.

The Park Point people have petitioned those corporations again and again to accord to them the same rates of transportation that are enjoyed by the citizens of Woodland, Lester Park, West Duluth and Duluth Heights, but thus far without avail. The companies know that owing to the loose terms of their franchise-day obtained franchises they cannot probably at this time be compelled by law to accede to the Park Pointers' very reasonable request.

It seems passing strange that the companies take no note whatever of the fact that the city expended over $125,000 to make connection between the two roads at the canal and that it costs the city annually over $4,000 a year to maintain it, and the corporations are receiving the full measure of benefit therefrom.

I have considered the question from every conceivable standpoint, and it is my honest conviction that if the transfer system was in vogue by the companies at the canal, the increase of business would more than quadruple present receipts by both roads. Can not influence enough be brought to bear upon the companies to grant so reasonable a request? This letter is written in a spirit of "malice towards none, charity for all" and only to contribute my mite towards obtaining justice for all. Yours respectfully,

JOSEPH SHARTEL.

HEAVY DAMAGES SOUGHT FROM SOO RAILROAD CO.

St. Cloud, Minn., Jan. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The largest amount of damages sought in one action ever instituted in this district court is desired by the Pipe Rapids Power company, which has commenced suit against the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie railroad (the Soo), to recover $800,000. The plaintiff alleges the railroad company has appropriated a dam site it owns on the Pike Rapids, near Royalton, without its consent, and erected thereon a bridge to span the Mississippi. It is also set up that the railroad has trespassed on thirty-six acres of land belonging to the power company, which, by such trespass, has been rendered useless.

SWEDEN ATTACKS TRUST.

Sugar Industry Aimed at in Bill Before the Rigsdag.

Stockholm, Jan. 22.—Finance Minister Schwartz wants to crush the sugar trust by having the rigsdag pass a bill to levy a manufacturing tax of 23 per cent on sugar made in Sweden and at the same time lower the present customs duty on imported sugar.

The proposition has created great consternation, because, if carried out, it would result in the practical ruin of the Swedish sugar industry and probably put an end to the company organized last fall with a capital of 155,000,000 kroner ($38,875,000). Sugar stocks have fallen disastrously.

New York, Jan. 22.—Among those who obtained licenses at the new marriage license bureau in the city hall yesterday, was William Brooks Mason, colored, who gave his occupation as a "minister of the gospel." He made an affidavit that he is 136 years old. He said he was born in Havana. His intended wife is Miss Ella Haynes, who said she is 28.

ACCUSED FREED.

Complaint Failed to Say Victim Was Human Being.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 22.—Because the original complaint charging F. W. Kramble with first degree assault for shooting George H. Woody failed to state that Woody was a "human being," District Judge Dunlan held the information faulty and dismissed the complaint.

CONFERENCE AT CHICAGO

Longshoremen Will Meet With Employers to Fix Wages.

Three Delegates Will Attend From West Duluth Union.

At a special meeting of the Longshoremens' union at West Duluth three delegates were elected to go to Chicago to attend the conference between the Longshoremens' union and the Lake Carriers' association concerning the wage scale to be paid next season.

The Chicago meeting will be held Jan. 30 and the three local delegates are Mose LaFave, Pat McGraw and Peter McIntyre.

The conferences between the longshoremen and the carriers is always held in the winter with the view of having the agreement on the wage scale consummated before the shipping season begins.

Last year the wage scale was 50 cents per hour. It is understood that the same scale is likely to prevail the coming season.

WAS OLD SETTLER.

John Lenroot Had Lived at Spirit Lake Since 1865.

John L. Lenroot, aged 81 years, who died at his home at Spirit Lake Saturday, and whose funeral was held Monday of this week, is said to be practically the only pioneer resident of the place who, at the time of his death, was living on the original homestead that he took up when Duluth was in its swaddling clothes. Although he was never a member of the Old Settlers' association, Mr. Lenroot was well-known to all the pioneer residents of the city. A farmer by occupation, he at various times was overseer of the roads in the western end of the city, and before Oneota became a part of the city, was a supervisor in the township of that name.

Mr. Lenroot was born in Sweden, Aug. 23, 1827. He came to the Head of the Lakes in 1865, and settled on an 80-acre homestead at Spirit Lake, where he made his home up to the time of his death. Of his original property holdings, Mr. Lenroot owned about 200 lots, which have been platted as Lenroot's addition to Ironton, and which are regarded as valuable holdings at this time by reason of their proximity to the site of the new steel plant.

JOHN L. LENROOT.

Mrs. Lenroot died about twelve years ago, and since that time Mr. Lenroot has made his home at times with his daughters, but most of the time has continued to live at his own home.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Matt Amundson of this city, and Mrs. T. M. Erickson, of Oregon, and several nephews, Edward Swenson, Albert Swenson and Louis Lenroot of Duluth, and Irvine, Arthur and Louis Lenroot of Superior.

Mr. Lenroot was held in high esteem as a citizen and neighbor, and his sterling qualities as such were recognized by all that knew him.

DISTRICT CONVENTION

Of Modern Brotherhood Being Held in West Duluth.

The Modern Brotherhood of America of the Eighth congressional district will hold its semi-annual convention in West Duluth this afternoon and evening.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock at Gilley's hall the district meeting was conducted by G. F. Peterson of Hibbing, Minn., president of the convention; Erve Smith of Virginia, secretary of the district convention, and Capt. A. B. Brindage of Hibbing.

This evening the fraternal lodge No. 860, M. B. A., will hold installation ceremonies at Gilley's hall at 8 o'clock. John J. Goar, district manager and J. M. Goar, district deputy or Montevideo, Minn., will install the local lodge's officers with proper formalities, aided by Capt. Brindage's crack drill team, composed of fourteen members, from Hibbing. After the installation rites, District Manager Goar wil imake a presentation speeoh conferring the honor of the past president's badge on W. G. Holcomb.

The West Duluth lodge expects to entertain about sixty delegates from the different lodges of the district. Hibbing alone sent thirty representatives, counting its drill team.

Those that arrived this morning were Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Moore, Estella Stevens, Miss Mary Champion, Miss Minnie Brindage, Mr. Hearley, G. F. Peterson, Mrs. Hattie Kane, Hazelcamp of Hibbing, Gibson Jewell of Eveleth, W. L. Mallory of Mora, John J. Goar, and J. M. Goar of Montevideo.

The Modern Brotherhood of America have grown and spread widely within the last few years. Next summer they expect to install lodges in Duluth and the West end.

FARE BADLY.

West Duluth rinks fared badly at the bonspiel this morning, all three of them that played losing their games.

The Evered rink lost out to the Frick rink of the Duluth club by the score of 8 to 5, and the Silger rink, after a hard fight, lost to the Brewer rink, by the score of 12 to 11. The Heimbaugh rink of Superior defeated Emil Zauft's quartet by the score of 9 to 8.

This puts all three rinks out of the Duluth event.

HIT BY STREET CAR.

Driver of Wood Cart Has a Narrow Escape.

John Goldenstein, who is well known in the western part of the city as the man who drives a wood cart, narrowly escaped meeting with a very serious accident, and perhaps death under the wheels of a street car bound east along Oneota street on the bridge at Fortieth avenue west last night at about 6:30 o'clock. Goldenstein was driving his cart across the bridge on the street car tracks, when a car came up behind him and struck the back of the wagon at almost full speed, throwing the driver from his seat on to his horse. The whole cart, wood and all, was projected across the narrow wagon road, on to the sidewalk and up against the railing. It was miraculous that Goldenstein was not thrown under the wheels of the moving car or over the railing into the ravine below. His horse was killed and his cart badly broken up. Probably his failling on the horse saved him from injury.

The conductor claims he did not see the wagon until he was about three feet from it and then it was too late to stop the car.

This is the second time that Goldenstein has been run into by a street car. The last time it occurred it was at Fifty-second avenue west, when he received a slight injury to his leg.

SAYS SHE WAS NOT STAR BOARDER

Theoline Lindland Sues Her Brother-in-Law for $810.98.

In Judge Ensign's room today a jury is sifting the testimony in an action brought by Miss Theoline Lindland against her brother-in-law, Charles G. Firoved, a local barber, to recover money alleged to be due her for services as a domestic in the Firoved household.

According to the claims of the young woman she was asked to enter the household of the defendant in October, 1905, and she continued there, with the exception of two months spent on a visit, until last fall. She alleges that she was promised $5 per week for her services and that she only received, for the whole time, $157, leaving a balance of something over $800 still due.

Miss Lindland further claims that she loaned Firoved $60 which he promised to repay in two weeks, but, as alleged did not do so. She also says she spent $7.98 for clothing for the Firoved children and was never repaid. She demands $810.98 with interest.

Mr. Firoved asserts that his sister-in-law came to his home to live, without any solicitation, or promise of pay on his part, that it was understood that she could remain there and help about the housework for her board and room. He claims that after his wife died in 1905, Miss Lindland continued to be a member of the household, but that she did no heavy work, on account of feeble health, but merely looked after the children. The defendant says he gave her money from time to time although her board really came to more than her services were worth.

Mr. Firvored admits borrowing $45 at one time, but he alleges that he paid it all back long ago. He claims that he even tendered his sister-in-law the $7.98 she spent on the children but she would not take it. The defendant claims that he gave the plaintiff money to use whenever she wanted it.

Miss Lindland is represented by I. Grettum and the defendant by H. B. Fryberger.

It is absolutely necessary to health that we give relief to the stomach promptly at first signs of trouble. Take something once in a while, especially after meals; something like KODOL For Dyspepsia and Indigestion. Sold by all druggists.

SHERMAN SMITH FOUND GUILTY OF CONTEMPT OF COURT BY JUDGE MORRIS

Was Tried on the Charge of Tampering With Jury

Who Were Sitting on the Case of Wisconsin Grain Company.

Judge Morris Scores the Prisoner in No Uncertain Terms.

St. Paul, Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Morris in the United States district court today held Sherman S. Smith, a well known politician of Minneapolis, to be guilty of contempt of court. Smith was recently arrested on a charge of jury tampering in connection with the government prosecution of the charge of alleged fraudulent use of the mails by the four Wood brothers and the Wisconsin Grain company and its officers. The charge was that Smith had approached Jurors Benedict and Batchellor, who were also arrested, but later released on the government's admission that it had failed to make a case against the jurors.

After deciding Smith to be in contempt, Judge Morris scored Smith in no uncertain terms, and announced that sentence will be passed this afternoon. Smith was recently elected vice president of the Fourth Ward Republican club in Minneapolis and was for two terms a member of the lower house of the Minnesota legislature. On the witness stand in his own behalf he gave as his reason for associating with the jurors that he wanted them to use their influence to have him appointed as a sergeant at arms to the Republican national convention.

SHERMAN S. SMITH

SUIT TO RETAIN SWAMP LANDS

The Attorney for Indians Asks for Injunction by the Court.

Washington, Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The secretary of the interior has not yet decided the claims of the state of Minnesota to swamp lands in the ceded Indian reservations, but has expressed himself as disinclined to overturn the decision of his predecessor, on the ground of treaty rights, which is the chief contention of the Indians. Their attorney, C. E. Richardson, today filed in the supreme court of the district of Columbia, a bill for an order restraining the secretary of the interior and other commissioners of the general land office, from disposing of the lands referred to, by any method other than that prescribed by the Nelson act of 1889, and the Morris act of 1902.

The bill of complaint cites the fact that the so-called Chippewa Indians of Minnesota are the equitable owners of large tracts of land in Minnesota under various treaties, running back to the treaty of Prairie du Chien in 1825. It is also claimed that under the Nelson act of 1889, these lands are held in trust for the Indians, and the title to them has been with the Indians from time immemorial.

It is also stated that the secretary of the interior has expressed himself as favorable to the claim of the state of Minnesota to numerous tracts recently asserted without valid foundation, and that he has threatened to patent these tracts without warrant in law and in violation of the rights of the Indians, and that if the threatened action is pursued, the White Earth Indians alone will lose upward of 200,000 acres of land without due process of law, and in violation of the Constitution of the United States. The bill of complaint asks the court to issue an injunction against the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of the general land office, enjoining them from making another dispositon of the lands in questions other than in the manner provided in the Nelson act of 1889, and the Morris act of 1902.

BURN SCHOOL BOOKS TO STOP SPREAD OF DISEASE.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—In order to prevent the spread of scarlet fever, the board of education, at a special meeting yesterday, decided to burn at least 750 text books in use in the Kenwood and Douglas schools. Though there are only thirty-six cases of scarlet fever in the city, according to Dr. P. M. Hall of the health department, yet the appearance of the disease among school children has alarmed parents.

KILLS HORSE IN DEATH RACE ONLY TO LOSE.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 23.—In a frantic effort to reach the bedside of his dying brother, Charles Davis started to ride horseback from Missouri to Massena, Iowa, seventy miles away, where Leslie Davis lay horribly mangled from a gasoline engine accident. At Clearfield his horse gave out and died and Davis pushed on afoot, walking all night and reaching the home of the injured man completely exhausted several hours after the death of his brother. Fear is felt that he, too, may not survive.

OLD LOVE REVIVED.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 23.—Robert Coughlan, aged 75, left last night for New Bethlehem, Pa., where he will marry Elizabeth Ritchie, his sweetheart of fifty years ago. Coughlan fell in love with her again when she attended his wife's funeral at that place a few weeks ago.

MONEY IS VERY EASY

Discount Rates of Foreign Banks Are Again Reduced.

English Rate Now 4 Per Cent and France 3 Per Cent.

London, Jan. 23.—The rate of discount of the Bank of England was today reduced from 5 to 4 per cent.

The reduction of the bank rate was a foregone conclusion, owing to the rapidly improving financial conditions prevailing everywhere, which caused the market for discount rates to fall to 3⅞ per cent. The return of cash from the country considerably swelled the reserve, which further will be increased in the near future by the receipt of gold from Egypt and Australia, as well as bar gold now en route to London. This will include $5,000,000 worth of gold which probably will be secured by the Bank of England on Monday. Further influences, tending towards the reduced bank rate, are the improving conditions prevailing on the continent, forecasting early reductions in the bank rates of France and Germany, and the likelihood of a return of gold from America, or the shipment of gold from America to Argentine republic, thus relieving the demand on London.

The announcement of the reduction of the bank rate had a favorable effect on the London stock exchange.

Paris, Jan. 23.—The Bank of France today reduced its rate of discount from 3½ to 3 per cent.

NOTHING HEARD OF MISSING BOAT

Believed That Amsterdam Survivors Have Been Carried South.

Hook of Holland, Jan. 23.—No news has yet been received of the missing boat from the steamer Amsterdam, one of several that put off from that vessel after the collision Tuesday night with the steamer Axminster. It is believed that this boat has been carried south by the currents and that she will make a landing somewhere on the coast. The heavy fog, which still continues has interfered with the search for the missing boat, but all the vessels anchored in the Fairway have been visited and not one had heard of her. The boat carries twenty-eight persons, of whom twenty-one are passengers. She is said to be well provisioned.

At the time of the collision the Amsterdam was coming from Harwich with fifty-six passengers on board. All the other passengers and crew were transferred safely to the Axminster. The Amsterdam was beached.

AMERICAN HAS YACHT BUILT IN SCOTLAND.

Glasgow, Jan. 23.—The Vanadis, a large turbine yacht for C. K. G. Billings, of the New York Yacht club, was successfully launched here this morning. The new vessel is 296 feet long over all and her gross tonnage exceeds 1,000. She is magnificently appointed, the owners suite and eight guest cabins being upholstered in palatial fashion. The plans for the Vanadis were prepared by a New York firm of yacht designers and she was built by the firm that constructed King Edward's new yacht.

POLICEMEN ARE READY

To Prevent Any Demonstration of "Unemployed" of Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Preparations for a possible clash between the police and the "unemployed" commenced in earnest early today and the police were massed at the down town stations in anticipation of trouble.

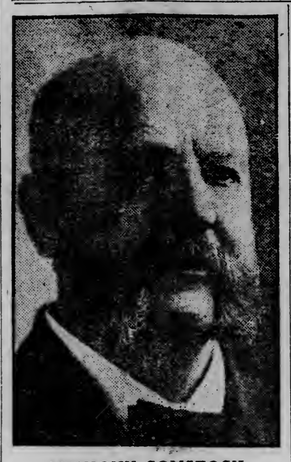

Last night thousands of copies of circulars, calling on unemployed men to meet at 2 o'clock on the lake front and from there march to the city hall and demand work, were distributed in saloons and the lodging house district. Chief of Police Shippy, who had repeatedly declared to the managers of the parade that it would not be permitted, issued orders for all members of the police force to remain in reserve at their stations during the night, and early today large numbers of the officers were brought down into the business section of the city. The detail of mounted police was ordered to patrol the lake front during the day and allow nobody to loiter there. The fact that this was the coldest day, thus far, of the winter, and that a thirty-mile gale was tearing across the lake front aided the police greatly in keeping people on the move.

The leader of the preparations for the parade is Dr. Ben L. Reitman, who has declared that he would have 40,000 men in line at 2 o'clock, and said that he would march "police or no police." Today he was inclined to take a milder view of affairs, and said that if the police called upon him to disperse his marchers after they were formed, he would do so. Chief Shippy declared that he would not be allowed to form a line of march at all.

SUIT AGAINST "WHITECAPPERS"

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 23.—The suit of Willis F. Griffon against Charles Allshouse, former deputy sheriff and eleven other citizens of Granby, in which the plaintiff claims $10,000 damages for alleged "whitecap" assaults, is on trial in the court here. Griffon states that in February, 1906, while living at the home of Dr. Weed in Granby he visited a neighbor's house, Mrs. Weed being there at the time. When they started to go home, he testified he was attacked by "whitecaps" who put a rope around his neck and dragged him across the state line, telling him never to return. He says one of his ribs was broken, the sight of one eye was practically ruined and that he received other injuries. He also testified that his sister, with whom he went to live in New Britain, lost her reason and died because of his sufferings. The defense, it is said, will be that Griffon was obstructing the highway and threatening to shoot people and that no more force was used than was necessary to remove him and prevent his injuring others.

JUDGE DIBELL HOLDS THAT MISTAKE WAS MADE IN COUNTING VOTES ON THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

ANTHONY COMSTOCK,

CABINET IS VICTORIOUS

A Motion to Censure the Japanese Government Fails.

Debate Long and Furious and Vote Was 177 to 168.

Tokio, Jan. 23.—A motion to censure the government was defeated in the lower house of the diet today by 177 votes to 168. The debate on the motion lasted for three hours and a half.

The debate turned entirely on the budget, no mention being made of the immigration question or the government's policy thereon.

An unusual feature of the vote tonight was the combination of the representatives of the Progressives with the Daido club and the Yuko Wai party.

The combination resented a deter-

ALIENISTS TESTIFY

Learned Doctors Occupy Witness Stand in the Thaw Case.

New Evidence as to Thaw's Acquaintance With White.

New York, Jan. 23.—The end of the second trial of Harry K. Thaw, charged with the murder of Stanford White is in sight. The greater part of the evidence in the case is now in the hands of the jury, and save for the technical evidence of the alienists, practically all the testimony that the defense is expected to offer has been given. It is likely that several alienists will be called upon to dispute the defendant's experts and some of the minor points of the defense may be questioned or contradicted by the prosecution, but there is now little doubt that the case will be finally placed in the hands of the jury by the latter part of next week.

Dr. Charles L. Bailey of Albany, N. Y., who arrived in New York last night from the island of Jamaica, was called as the first witness in the Thaw case when court convened at 10:20 a. m. today. Dr. Bailey was called to attend Thaw on a New York Central railway train between Hudson and Albany, in April, 1906.

Thaw Was Chattering.

"When I was called in to see him," said the witness, "Thaw was chattering something like this: 'Shasta, shasta, shasta; the Pennsylvania runs into the New York Central.' He kept on repeating this for some time. His eyes were bulging and he appeared unsound. I gave him a hypodermic of morphine, with the assistance of the porter. When Thaw saw the syringe he said: 'Take away that die stuff.' I was very close to him and could not detect the odor of alcohol."

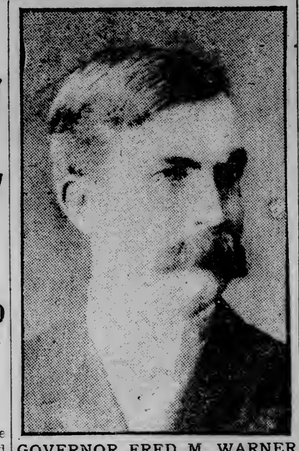

On cross-examination Dr. Bailey said that Thaw did not respond to his interrogations, but rambled on incoherently. His pulse was about ninety.

The non-arrival of the steamer Odriatic upset the plans of the defense somewhat and prevented the calling of several witnesses who were expected from abroad.

Dr. Charles G. Wagner of Binghamton, N. Y., the alienist, who began his testimony yesterday afternoon, succeeded Dr. Bailey on the stand.

District Attorney Jerome and Mr. Littleton had a long argument as to the admissibility of Thaw's statements to

GOVERNOR FRED M. WARNER
Of Michigan, Who Indignantly Denies the Charge of Former State Treasurer Glazier, Who Resigned From Office Wednesday.

TREASURER OF MICHIGAN

Former Governor Rich Accepts Position to Succeed Glazier.

Governor Warner Denies Charges Made by Former Official.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 23.—Governor Warner last night announced that Former Governor John T. Rich had accepted an appointment as state treasurer to succeed Frank P. Glazier, who resigned yesterday.

Detroit, Jan. 23.—The resignation of State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier of Chelsea, and the appointment of Former Governor John T. Rich to succeed him, were accompanied by an attack of the retiring state treasurer upon Governor Fred Warner, who had demanded Mr. Glazier's resignation, and a reply last night by the governor, who denies the charges made. In reply to Mr. Glazier's charge, in his letter of resignation, that the governor was familiar with the conditions in Mr. Glazier's savings bank at Chelsea, which is now in the hands of a receiver, Governor Warner says that the bank reports received at the executive office do not show who are the borrowers from the bank, or what collateral is furnished. Governor Warner denies that he ever mentioned to Mr. Glazier during the year 1907 the matter of a deposit of state funds in the Detroit National bank of Detroit, of which the governor is vice president, Mr. Glazier having charged that Governor Warner solicited this deposit which last year ran up to $250,000. Governor Warner, in his statement declares that the books of the Chelsea savings bank show that Mr. Glazier deposited state funds in that bank late in November, "at a time when he absolutely knew that both the bank and he, himself, were insolvent."

When the bank closed it had $684,000 of state funds.

Have Already Been Received for Vanderbilt-Szechenyi Wedding.

New York, Jan. 23.—Private detectives have been engaged to guard the Vanderbilt residence on Fifth avenue where, on Monday, the wedding of Miss Gladys Vanderbilt and Count LaSzlo Szechenyi will take place. The wedding presents, which have already been received are valued at approximately $1,000,000. It is stated that less than two hundred guests will attend the ceremony, which will take place in the grand ball room of the residence at 1 o'clock in the morning. A wedding breakfast will be served at noon. A party including Count and Countess Denes Szechenyi, Count Stefan Szechenyi and Count Paul Esterhazy, who are to attend the wedding, left here last night in Alfred G. Vanderbilt's private car to visit Niagara Falls. The party will remain at the falls for two or three days.

WERE SIMPLY VISITORS.

Portland, Or., Jan. 23.—A special to the Oregonian from Fort Stevens says: An investigation by the commanding officer of Fort Stevens yesterday developed that the two Japanese taken into custody in the west battery Tuesday were simply visiting Fort Stevens. After their examination was concluded they were put off the reservation. It developed later that the men were saw mill hands.

RULES AGAINST TAX AMENDMENT

Real Estate Exchange Wins Out on All Its Claims.

The Good Roads Amendment Declared Carried by Court.

Tax Amendment Was Defeated Instead of Being Passed.

The tax amendment was not ratified and adopted by a majority of the electors voting at the general election in this state last November, and the good roads amendment was ratified and adopted by a majority of such electors.

Such is the text of a decision filed in the district court of St. Louis county this morning by Judge Homer B. Dibell of the Eleventh judicial district.

The decision is filed in the contest case instituted by Samuel G. McGonaghy, an elector in the city of Duluth, and F. A. Watkins, an elector in Carlton county, Minnesota, contesting the decision of the state canvassing board that the tax amendment was adopted and the roads and bridge amendment was rejected by the electors at the election held last November.

The two contest cases were instituted at the instance of the Real Estate exchange of Duluth, which organization has raised the funds and employed the counsel to press the contest.

The contestants were represented by H. H. Phelps of this city, who was assisted at the trial by C. O. Baldwin, of the firm of Baldwin, Baldwin & Dancer. The state canvassing board was represented by Assistant Attorney George Simpson.

The contest entailed a great deal of expense to the people prosecuting it, as they had to pay the wages and the expenses of three ballot inspectors appointed by the court who were at work steadily all last summer making a recount of the votes cast on the two amendments.

An attempt was made to have the last legislature take steps to provide for the expense of a recount but it failed. The decision rendered by Judge Dibell is an important one and the contest will undoubtedly be carried to the supreme court. Under the decision of the district court the contestants win and the Duluth Real Estate exchange win out on all points.

The amendments referred to in the contest were those passed by the legislature in April, 1905, and submitted to a vote of the people for ratification or rejection. The so called tax amendment provided that the power of taxation should never be surrendered or suspended; that taxes should be uniform on the same class of subjects and should be levied for public purposes; that cemeteries, schoolhouses, hospitals, colleges, churches and charitable institutions used exclusively for charitable purposes; that personal property in the amount of $200 should be exempt; that the legislature may authorize municipalities to levy and collect assessments for local improvements on property benefitted thereby without regard to cash valuation, and that nothing in the law should be construed to affect, modify or repeal any existing law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads.

The other amendment provided for the lending of aid in the construction of public highways and bridges by the creation of state road and bridge fund.

Findings By the Court.

The court finds that at the election last November, 284,360 electors voted and that the state board of canvassers found from the returns submitted to it that 156,051 electors voted for the tax amendment and it was declared adopted. It is also found that the state canvassing board declared the good roads amendment defeated by reason of a vote of only 141,870 electors in its favor, less than half the total number of votes cast at the election.

The court finds that owing to a mistake in the printing of the ballots submitted at the election the places of the tax amendment and good roads amendment on such ballots became changed, so that the amendments did not have corresponding positions on the ballots and the tally sheets.

By reason of this inadvertent transposition of the amendments the court finds that election officers quite generally, over the state, made mistakes in making up the returns and credited to the tax amendment the votes intended for the road and bridge amendment, and vice versa.

The court further finds that the ballot inspectors recounted the votes in 651 election districts, canvassing in all 141,609 ballots during an interval of six months. The inspectors were unable to make the recount in 71 districts because the ballots had been lost or destroyed. The ballots in 65 districts were withdrawn at the trial on the objection that they had not been properly preserved. The court finds that the ballots in the remaining 489 precincts, that were inspected and recounted, were received in evidence except 470 which were referred to the court by the inspectors. It was stipulated that these should be counted in favor of the tax amendment, and against the good roads amendment.

Out of the 83 counties in the state the inspectors, so the court finds endeavored to recount the ballots in all but 2 and that ballots from 73 counties were offered and received in evidence, but not all the ballots in any one county were so received.

The court finds that in the precincts not in evidence, the state canvassing board found 83,712 affirmative votes to have been cast for the tax amendment, when in fact, there were only 83,349 affirmative votes in those precincts, the difference of 363 being the mistakes of various county canvassers; that in the precincts received in evidence, the official count resulted in 72,339 affirmative votes for the tax amendment, when the actual number of affirmative votes in the precinct was 57,395.

Judge Dibell finds that the total number of affirmative votes for the tax amendment in the state was 140,714, and that the amendment, therefore, failed of ratification by 9,470.

The court finds the total number of votes for the good roads amendment to have been 157,377, which count ratified the amendment by a majority of 15,193.

Judge Dibell concludes that the tax amendment was not ratified and that the good roads amendment was ratified

ASKS POLICE TO FIND HUSBAND

Mrs. John Henry and Two Children Stranded in City.

Carrying two children, both suffering from the cold, and she herself none too warmly clad, fatigued and sick at heart after a long, fruitless search for her husband, Mrs. John Henry Martineau of Bayfield, Wis., called at the police station this morning and requested the aid of the police in her quest.

Mrs. Martineau arrived in Duluth Tuesday night in response to a letter from her husband, who had sent for her and the children. On arriving at the Union depot she found that the grip, in which the letter from her husband had been placed, was lost and she did not have his address. She began a search for the man, but with nothing to direct her, it was unsuccessful, and, her money having practically given out and she being without hope of finding her husband without assistance, she appealed to the police.

She doesn't know where her husband works, what trade he works at, if he has any, and nothing about his Duluth connections, so the police have nothing to work on but the hope that publicity will bring the man around to claim his family. He did not know when they were to arrive in Duluth, and consequently did not meet them. Until Martineau is found the police will care for the woman and her children, and they will make every effort to reunite the family immediately.

THE AGITATION IS SPREADING

Brunswick, Germany, Jan. 23.—The agitation in favor of manhood suffrage is spreading also throughout this state. In Brunswick, as well as in Berlin, and elsewhere in Germany, there is a disposition to make governmental conditions responsible for business depression. The Socialists are constantly advancing the idea that the economic reorganization of society cannot be attained until the right of government is derived solely from the people, and contend that the first great step toward making living easier is to win control of the state through elections.

Motions have been drawn up by both the Socialists and the Conservative parties, asking how the present electoral laws could be amended and improved, and today they were introduced in the diet. It was decided to consider them, and the house thereupon appointed a committee to deal with the subject.

INDIANS AS LUMBERMEN

Washington, Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Senator LaFollette, from the committee on Indian affairs, today reported the bill to authorize the cutting of timber, the manufacture and sale of lumber, and the preservation of the forests on certain lands, reserved for Indian reservations in Wisconsin, notably with reference to the Menominee Indian reservation, but applying generally to all Wisconsin reservations.

Under the bill as proposed, the secretary of the interior is authorized to employ all the assistance needed to properly educate the Indian in the care of the forests and in the manufacture of forest products. It is provided that the Indians are to do the logging, that they make roads, improve streams, build saw mills and to manufacture the timber into lumber and that the lumber is to be sold upon the market.

In a word, it provides that these Indians shall be made a factor in our industrial life. In this way, they shall become self-reliant, they shall learn to know the value of their heritage and shall master the best methods of its preservation and continuance.

HEAVED ROCKS THROUGH GLASS

When employes of the Polish Printing & Publishing company, 115 Second avenue west, arrived at the place this morning, they found that some miscreant had heaved rocks through the two big windows in the front of the place and wrecked them. The stones had struck the sign of the company squarely, so as to smash it up, but nothing was damaged inside.

The affair is believed to be an outgrowth of the dissension among the Polish people of Duluth over church matters. The printing company backers are said to be active in the independent Polish church and the supposition is that some irate fanatic, enraged at their activity, or some expression, which was turned out from their press, took this means of showing their disapproval.

The manager of the office was bland but unconfiding this morning. He said he is a member of the independent church, probably has enemies in the regular branch of the church, but doesn't know of anything being issued by the office, which might have been responsible for the outrage. "Probably some drunken man threw the rocks through the windows; probably they didn't," he said. "I have my suspicions, but I can't explain them to you. The glass is insured, I don't lose anything but the price of the sign, so what's the use being disturbed."

The matter has been reported to the police, but they know nothing except that the rocks were thrown. It isn't likely drunks would resort to such tactics, unless the affairs of the church were concerned also, and members of both churches are somewhat disturbed that violence should be shown by either.

Coffee, in many people, destroys the red corpuscles and impoverishes the blood. A definite change is made by leaving off coffee entirely and using well boiled, delicious Postum in its place. You can prove this by trial. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

NOT TO ASK FOR DEATH PENALTY

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Four more jurors were secured today in the trial of Mrs. Dora McDonald for the murder of Webster S. Guerin, making a total of eight.

It was brought out today that the state has no intention of asking the death penalty. The assistant state's attorney has asked many prospective jurors if they had any objection to the infliction of the death penalty on a woman, and several have been challenged because they replied in the affirmative. Today Charles McGrath, one of the newly accepted jurors, after being sworn turned to the bench and said to Judge Brentano:

"Your honor, I am unalterably opposed to the infliction of the death penalty under all circumstances. That question was not asked me, and I thought that maybe you ought to know how I feel about it."

Judge Brentano looked at Assistant State's Attorneys Rittenhouse and Daly, but neither of them offered any objection to Mr. McGrath, and he was accepted.

MOTORMAN HAS HEART DISEASE

St. Louis, Jan. 23.—As a well filled Bellefontaine car was crossing Market street at Fourteenth street today at full speed, Motorman George W. Reaves was suddenly stricken with heart disease and collapsed. The car ran on several blocks before the passengers became aware that the motorman was helpless and unable to control the speed. A panic ensued and passengers began jumping from the vestibules and through the windows. A policeman sprang on board and forcing his way to the controller stopped the car just as it had turned into congested Sixth street. Motorman Reeves was taken home in a cab. No passengers were hurt.

Mrs. Lydia H. Josselyn, 501 Westminster St., Providence, R. I., Treasurer of the Editors' League of R. I., chartered in Providence. She writes:

"My experience with Peruna has been most gratifying. Last winter I contracted a severe cold, and for several days I coughed until my voice failed me. When other remedies did me no good, I decided to try Peruna, and within four days the cold was broken up, and the cough abated.

"Within another week an increase in my usual strength and vitality told me that Peruna was doing all that it promised, and more.

"I also consider it very superior for tired, worn-out mothers, and have advised several to try it, and have seen most gratifying results from its use.

"I give it highest praise."

Systemic Catarrh.

Mrs. J. L'Hommedieu, 150 Calyer St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I gladly write in praise of Peruna. It has effected a wonderful cure in my case.

"I was taken very bad with catarrh. It affected me all over. My head ached so I could not sit up all day. I was treated by my physician without the least bit of relief.

"I commenced to take Peruna. Within less than a week I felt better, and now I have finished taking two bottles, and I consider myself well.

"I speak in favor of Peruna to all I know. It is wonderful what it did for me. I wish everybody would try it."

Mrs. Adelia Rush, R. D. 8, Cambridge, Ohio, writes:

"I feel that I owe you many thanks for the help I received through your advice and the use of your medicine.

"I had suffered with my stomach and inward trouble for a long time, and did not know what ailed me, but last winter our doctor gave us a copy of your almanac and I read it and found my symptoms, and I concluded to try it, and I found help in the first bottle. Now I feel myself again.

"I will not forget to praise Peruna always."

Throat and Nose.

Mrs. W. K. Good, Broadway, Va., writes:

"When I was fifteen years old I had catarrhal fever, and for nine years I have had catarrh of the head. Through neglect it went to my throat and nose.

"After consulting you I used Peruna for four months as directed, and I am entirely well and have my natural health.

"I cannot praise Peruna too highly. It will do all that it is recommended to do."

Catarrh for Many Years.

Mrs. Joseph Vittur, 5709 Erie street, Austin, Sta., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"Your medicine Peruna was of great benefit to me. I suffered with catarrh of the nose and head for many years.

"Three bottles of Peruna cured me, after I had considered it impossible to ever be cured again.

"I now always keep Peruna in the house, and recommend it to every one suffering from catarrh.

"As soon as one of my children commence to cough I give them Peruna, and it is soon gone.

Could Not Sleep for Cough.

Mrs. Emma Martin, Odessa, Mo., writes: "For two years I doctored my cough, which cost me many dollars, but still I seemed to get worse. My cough was so bad I could not sleep. Finally I purchased a bottle of Peruna. In a short while I felt better, and after I had taken a second bottle I felt entirely well."

RAILROAD NEWS

MR. MILLAR WILL SPEAK

Has Interesting Subject for Northern Railway Club Meeting.

Will Talk on Relations of Railroads to the Country.

What is expected to be the biggest and by far the most interesting meeting in the history of the Northern Railway club will be held tomorrow evening at the Commercial club. E. L. Millar will be the speaker of the evening. His subject is particularly opportune at this time, and will prove a big drawing card to the membership.

"Did the Railroads Make This Country, or Did the Country Make the Railroads," will be the subject of his address. Those who know Mr. Millar and his abilities along the line of public speaking, can readily imagine that in the speech he has something good in store for them. After he has concluded his talk there will be a general discussion of the matter. The subject opens a wide field of possibilities, and should prove an interesting topic for discussion.

There will be the usual musical program and smoker in connection with the meeting, and special trains will be run from Proctor and Two Harbors for members who are residents of those towns. It is expected the attendance from outside the city will be large. Charles Applehagen will be one of the soloists of the evening.

Some Big Photographs.

Oscar L. Hill of Minneapolis, Northwestern freight and passenger agent of the Chicago & Alton railroad, is in the city today. Mr. Hill has some photographic reproductions of Alton engines and trains that are "corkers" in their way. The Alton has a photographing outfit that is claimed to take the largest photographs in the world. A photo of one of the big Alton engines, to be exhibited in Duluth in the near future, measures 5x7½ feet.

Railroad Men Here.

When traveling freight and passenger agents come to Duluth they seem to have a habit of arriving in bunches. Several are here today. Besides Oscar L. Hill of the Alton, there are in town today W. E. Witherspoon of the Minneapolis & St. Louis, Charles E. Webb of Houghton, Mich., general agent of the Chicago & Northwestern, and Neil Mooney of Chicago, general western passenger agent of the New York Central lines. E. R. Porch of the Erie was in town last night.

CARS VERY PLENTIFUL

Roads Have $440,000,000 Tied Up in Useless Equipment.

New York, Jan. 23.—Figures prepared for one of the large railroad companies, says the Tribune, show that a week ago there were 320,000 idle freight cars in the United States and about 8,000 locomotives which are laid up because of the falling off of traffic. As there are 2,200,000 freight cars in the country, this would show that 14 per cent of all the cars owned by railroads are stored on railroad tracks waiting for loads. Figuring the value of cars at $1,000 each and of locomotives at $15,000 each, the statement shows that the railroads have $440,000,000 tied up in rolling stock for which there is no present use. The great shortage in rolling stock last year caused large orders for cars to be placed by railroads. As late as last October the reported shortage was 87,000 cars.

Estimating the average freight train at forty cars, the 320,000 cars now idle would be equivalent to 8,000 trains, for handling each of which four men are ordinarily required, so that it may be estimated that more than 30,000 men less are needed than if all of these cars were in service. Many men have been laid off—the New York Central, for example, since the beginning of this month, has laid off enough to make a saving of $250,000 a year, in addition to previous cutting down of the force—and many others have been placed on short time. But fixed charges of a railroad must be met in dull times as well as in active, and maintenance and other expenses must be provided for, and in view of all the facts, the managements of many railroads are understood to be discussing the question of reducing wages, as a disliked, but necessary measure.

APPLAUSE FOR WATTERSON.

Washington, Jan. 23.—The appearance on the floor of the house yesterday of Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier Journal, and a former member of the house, was the signal for a demonstration. As he strolled down the aisle, accompanied by Representative Kimball of Kentucky, and took a seat beside Champ Clark, he received great applause from both sides of the chamber.

Drunken Woodsman Gets Sentence.

Albert Johnson, a woodsman, who in a drunken condition abused the passengers on an Omaha train, was sentenced to a six months' term on the rock pile by Judge Parker yesterday. Several persons, who were passengers on the train, testified to the abusive conduct of the defendant and the latter did not make a denial. He blamed his actions to the whisky he had imbibed. The testimony showed that Johnson threatened to demolish the satchel of one passenger.

Change in Management.

E. E. Compton, formerly storekeeper at the Spalding hotel in Duluth, will assume the duties of manager of Hotel Superior today, succeeding H. W. Cullyford, who recently resigned. The latter's plans have not yet been announced.

SEATTLE CHURCH ROBBED.

Thief Carries Off Furnishings and Fixtures in Express Wagon.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 23.—The First Methodist church has lost a part of the furnishings and fixtures which were removed from the old building on Third avenue a year ago. Carpets, sash and doors, chairs and electric fixtures to a value of $1,200 were stolen from the storehouse.

The theft was discovered by the former janitor, who has visited the storehouse every week to look after things. He reported the matter to the police. The same day the thief drove to the store with an express wagon and while a member of the congregation was standing near by watching him, carried sash, windows and doors out and drove away.

The watcher thought it was some carpenter who was working on one of the small churches in the suburbs to which the large church has been donating the fixtures of its former building. The thief sold the stuff to second-hand dealers and through them a good description of the man was obtained.

GRIP CLOSES FACTORY.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Turner Sash & Door factory on North Seventh street has been closed down for several days because of the illness of a majority of the men employed in the institution. It seems that the men have been laid up with the grip, at present so prevalent in the city, and the mill became so short handed that it was considered advisable to close down for a few days.

COLDEST OF THE WINTER

Eighteen Degrees Below Zero—Cold Spell is General.

Fur caps were in demand this morning. Today is the coldest of the winter. Below-zero weather prevails throughout the entire Northwest, so Duluth is not especially favored in this respect. The government thermometer on the hill top registered 13 degs. below shortly after 7 o'lock this morning. The coldest point was in Manitoba, west of Winnipeg. The mercury there rested at a point 18 degs. below zero.

In this mildest of mild winters, 8 below has been the lowest point previously recorded in Duluth. Tomorrow probably will be warmer. The weather man thinks there will be a moderation tonight and tomorrow, although the difference in temperature will not be enough to create an active demand for straw hats and outing flannels. It is expected that the mercury will hover around the zero mark tonight, and it may not get as high as the little circular mark. It probably will pass it tomorrow, however, and Friday should be many degrees milder than today.

There is not much variation in the temperatures recorded throughout the Northwest, today, except, of course, for the Pacific coast regions, where it never gets as cold as it does this side of the mountains. The cold spell is general through Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Western Ontario, Western Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Northern Montana. In Michigan they had a blizzard yesterday, and several inches of snow fell in certain sections.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

CONCERNING WOMAN.

The following letter is one that a Duluth woman didn't write to her cousin, who isn't in Florida for the winter:

"Dear Jane: The one part of my letter that I am always perfectly sure of is the 'Dear Jane.' I plan that part of it ahead for ever so many weeks and I am always perfectly sure to get that in whatever else goes by the way. I never can remember the dates and I like to write by the window which of course is far removed from the calendars. The reason I like to write by the window is because I can look out sometimes and you never can tell but that maybe sometime during the day a carriage might go by and then of course there would be something to tell you. A carriage going by is an event in Duluth, this winter. We have risen to such heights of self-contentment and joy in simple things that all you have to do is yell: 'I hear a carriage going by,' and everybody runs to all the curtains and pulls them aside, and when we have watched the last of it with straining eyes, we all hurriedly get together and talk. 'Where do you suppose that carriage was goin?' we inquire of each other and we haven't the remotest idea. 'Do you suppose the girl in the next block is getting married quietly without letting us know?' But we dismiss that as out of the question entirely. 'There isn't a reception in town' we say 'so it can't be anybody going to to a social function. And gradually the heat of excitement and pink flush of interest dies out and we return to our several duties. Mine is writing to you.

"This weekly chronicle due rich relatives wintering away from here is getting on my nerves. Why didn't you stay in Duluth yourself and keep in touch with things. You'd have to keep in touch, just the way a part of a glass of jelly keeps in touch with all the rest. We have had weather in Duluth and the grip. Your friend, Mrs. C. had the grip. It began with a cold in her head and the cold wandered. So far as I can see it might just as well wander as stay in one place too long. But in telling me about it she seemed especially annoyed that it had wandered to her chest and her back and her head and her arms and other portions of her anatomy. I haven't heard from her since this morning at 10, so of course I don't know just how she is now. Your friend, Miss A., also had and is enjoying a spell of the grip. Her's began with a very heavy cold on her chest and instead of moaving around it stayed there and it's funny but she was as fussed about it as if it had wandered. It stayed long and has developed delightfully complex symptoms and she is really expecting pneumonia. You can readily understand how interesting that will be when everybody else is having just plain grip. One can hold the center of the stage in Duluth this winter by having pneumonia in place of ordinary grip. Mr. C. is home from business for a few days because of grip. Our next door neighbor, the one you remember with such a happy selection of children is wading right through a spell of grip. They all had it and when I am dropping with somnolency just go in there and hear all the symptoms. They are remarkably diverse. One day it seems that your head is aching frightfully, but you wake up the next morning and find out that it was your throat that was sore. You get slightly accustomed to that, but by evening you discover that it was an ear ache. By this time you are petulant and you can't and won't eat. I have listened to many other signs of the disease and if you are interested, let me know and I will tell you more. I can tell you one thing though, don't come back to Duluth without a large list of symptoms for the person without them is hopelessly lost and forgotten in any conversation parties that may arise.

"There are very few people going away. There are fewer coming back. Two tables of bridge is wild excitement and sewing parties of three or four flourish to such an extent that every girl in town will be a billowy bunch of embroidered beauty when summer comes.

"Most people are taking quinine for the grip.

"It is the medicine being used by our best families.

"If you want to remember yourself to any of your friends here, it is perfectly safe for you to write and say on the picture postal that you are glad they are getting over the grip. That would be all right, of course, unless they had died in the meantime. If you are palpitating for more of this interesting gossip about your friends or if you happen to want a companion, without the grip, please let me know. I await your pleasure, dear Jane, with throbbing intensity. R. S. V. P.

"Duluth, Jan. 23.

"P. S. Later. I've got the grip and I think I am going to die. Don't worry. R. S. V. P."

FOG FOR COMPLEXION

Mrs. Patrick Campbell Has Only One Cosmetic.

It is asserted that her complexion, while naturally pale, has the soft velvety bloom of youth, and no one can detect off the stage a single wrinkle, nor a reminder of the art of "making-up." Wrinkles may come, Mrs. Campbell declared the other day to a woman reporter, as the result of three months alternate steam heat and cold outdoor dry air during her American tour, but the soft sooty fogs of old London will smooth them away on her return.

Whatever "make-up" may be necessary to meet the harshness of stage lights is used by Mrs. Campbell so sparingly and so deftly that it is hard to realize the least artifice comes from her theater dressing table. Off the stage, Mrs. Campbell scorns all of the thousand and one things supposed by the fashionable women to today to preserve youth, or the appearance of it.

It is true that Mrs. Campbell still belongs to the age when wrinkles are not seriously to be feared. On the other hand, her life has been far from carefree. Death and poverty have both met her face to face. Nineteen years of her life, many of them hard ones, have been given to the stage, but today Mrs. Campbell is as youthful in many external ways as her 19-year-old daughter Stella, who accompanies her on her present trip.

In other directions, too, Mrs. Campbell has defied the law of complexion experts. She cares neither for outdoor exercise, nor regular hours for sleep. A new poem of Maeterlinck or a play just brought out by Antoine in Paris will hold the actress in her easy chair until dawn shames electricity. She never spares nor rests her mental forces.

JUDGE DIBELL HOLDS

by a majority vote of the electors that voted at the election last November.

The Court's Memorandum.

The memorandum follows:

By one of these two contests it is sought to have determined, contrary to the finding of the state canvassing board, that the tax amendment, submitted to popular vote at the November 5, 1907, election, was not ratified; and by the other it is sought to have determined, contrary to the finding of the state canvassing board, that the good roads amendment, submitted to popular vote at the same election, was ratified.

The claims made, stating them for convenience to consideration from a standpoint adverse to the contestants, are these:

1. That the evidence does not justify a finding that the tax amendment was not ratified, nor a finding that the good roads amendment was ratified.

2. That if the tax amendment was not in fact ratified, and if the good roads amendment was in fact ratified, the court can make no determination relative thereto, because the ratification of a constitutional amendment is a political fact without the power of the judiciary to determine; and that jurisdiction to make such a determination cannot be conferred upon the courts by the legislature.

3. That even if jurisdiction can be conferred upon the judiciary it cannot be exercised as to the tax amendment now because legislative and executive action has been taken under it.

4. That even if the court has jurisdiction the statute authorizing a contest is so defective and incomplete that it affords no available remedy.

5. That a proper construction of the statutes does not permit a contest of the two amendments here involved.

1. The claim is that the evidence does not justify the court in finding that the tax amendment was not ratified but that the good roads amendment was ratified.

The Actual Vote.

If the actual vote in the precincts of which the ballots are in evidence be substituted for the official precinct returns the majority for the good roads amendment is 16,193, and the tax amendment fails of ratification by 1,470. There is a gain of substantially 16,500 for the good roads amendment and a loss nearly as great on the tax amendment.

This result should be accepted unless an inference can be drawn that a further examination of the ballots might lead to a contrary result. The evidence suggests no such inference.

The use of a ballot and tally sheet with the order of the two amendments reversed invited error. If there was error because of the improper order of the amendments it resulted in a transportation of votes, those cast for one amendment being counted for the other. If errors resulted from a transposition of votes one amendment gained a number of votes equal to the difference between the affirmative votes on the two amendments, and the other amendment lost the same number. If one amendment received a larger vote in the state than the other, and the vote for it was uniformly larger throughout the election districts, it would lose, on the face of the returns, through errors of transportation, and the other amendment would make an equivalent gain.

It is therefore important to know whether errors naturally to be expected were made, and whether one amendment was receiving somewhat uniformly larger vote, with a resultant loss to it and a gain to the other on the face of the returns.

In 421 of the 589 precincts, at the least, there were no clearly transpositions. The good roads amendment lost therefore, on the face of the returns, and the tax amendment gained.

The tax amendment gained, on the recount, 283 votes in thirty-five precincts. The goods roads amendment lost 104 votes in thirty-four precincts. No votes gained on the tax amendment by the recount, and no vote lost on the good roads amendment, can be traced to a transposition of votes. They are to be ascribed to the usual errors in making or recording a count, save forty-four on the tax which are accounted for by the absence of an official return. The rest of the precincts, exclusive of the 421 common to both the tax and good roads amendments and the thirty-five showing a gain on the tax and the thirty-four showing a loss on the good roads, either agree with the official returns or show slight gains for the good roads or losses for the tax on the recount.

The official count shows 14,181 more votes for the tax amendment than for the good roads. Substituting the actual vote in the 589 precincts for the official returns there is shown over 16,000 more votes for the good roads than for the tax.

The 589 precincts are in seventy-three counties. The recount, in every county except one, where there was a tie, shows a loss of affirmative votes on the tax, and in every county a gain of affirmative votes on the good roads.

In every one of the seventy-three counties, except five, the official returns of the precincts in evidence show a larger vote on the tax amendment than the official vote on the good roads. In every one of these counties the actual vote of the precincts in evidence is less on the tax amendment than on the good roads.

Upon the official returns 51 per cent of the ballots cast in the 589 precincts contained affirmative votes or the tax amendment and 44 per cent affirmative votes or the good roads. By the actual vote, 41 per cent of the ballots in these precincts contained affirmative votes for the tax and 55 per cent affirmative votes or the good roads.

On the official count, 450 precincts of the 589 show a larger vote on the tax amendment than on the good roads. By the actual vote fewer than ten precincts of the 589 show a larger vote on the tax than on the good roads. Other comparisons might be made but these are enough. It unmistakably appears that the transposition of the amendments on the ballots and tally sheets resulted in a transposition of votes, and that the good roads amendment was receiving practically the nearly for it greater vote over the state than the tax amendment. There could be but one result of a recount, a constant loss on the tax and a constant gain on the good roads. This is just what resulted. There is not a well grounded suspicion that a complete recount of the state would result in anything but an increase of the affirmative vote on the good roads and a decrease on the tax, by many thousands.

The Political Aspect.

2. The claim is that the question whether an amendment has been ratified by popular vote is a political one about which the judiciary has no jurisdiction to inquire and that such jurisdiction can not be conferred upon it.

The constitution provides for its own amendment, so far as here material, in the following language:

"Whenever two-thirds of both houses of the legislature shall deem it necessary to alter or amend this constitution they may propose such alteration or amendments, which proposed amendments shall be published with the laws which have been passed at the same session, and said amendments shall be submittd to the people for their approval or rejection at any general election, and if it shall appear in a manner to be provided by law that a majority of all of the electors voting at said election shall have voted for and ratified such alterations or amendments, the same shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of this constitution."

Courts do not decide political questions. They accept the determination of the political department of the government as authoritative.

The question of which of two opposing governments is the rightful one is an illustration. The case of Luaher vs. Borden, 7 How. 1, involved just such a question; and this case is relied on in support of the constitution that the question now presented to the court is not a judicial one. The action was trespass quare clausum brought in the United States circuit court for Rhode Island. It involved the question which of two opposing governments in Rhode Island was the rightful one. When the separation from England came Rhode Island did not frame a constitution but continued under the colonial charter granted by Charles II in 1663, with such legislative changes as were thought shulted to las condition as an independent state. The charter government was the actual government and contained unchallenged as such until Dorr's rebellion in 1842. Shortly prior to this time a number of meeting were held ahroughout the state, a convention was called, a constitution was framed, it was submitted and declared adopted, and Dorr was elected governor. Upon his attempt to assume control by force the charter government proclaimed martial law and in defense of the charter government the act claimed to be a trespass was committed. The defendant proposed to prove by the ballots and by other evidence that the Dorr canstitution had in fact been raaified by a lare majority of the people. The court rejected the evidence, holding that the question of what government was the rightful government was a political one, and the political department of ahe government having decided it the court would follow its decision.

The correctness of this decision is not questioned. The wonder is that it should be so much cited in support of the proposition that the legality and fact of an amendment to a constitution, made in attempted compliance with the requirements of the Constitution, is beyond judicial inquiry, and cannot be brought within its scope, even if the people themselves will it.

That the courts exercise extensive powers relative to the validity of the proposal, submission and ratification of constitutional amendments is clear. Such powers as they do exercise are necessarily judicial.

Cites Authorities.

To illustrate: The courts judicially determine from the election returns whether an amendment has received the constitutional majority. Rice vs. Palmer, 78 Ark. 432; State vs. Wurts (N. J.), 43 Atl. 744; State vs. Foraker, 46 Ohio State, 677; in re Denny, 156 Ind. 104; Green vs. State Board, 5 Idaho, 130; Knight vs. Shelton, 134 Fed 423; Dayton vs. City of St. Paul, 22 Minn. 400; Tecumseh National Bank vs. Saunders, 51 Neb. 801; or whether a proposed amendment is a single amendment within the Constitutional requirement that every amendment must be separately submitted: State vs. Powell, 77 Miss. 643; Gabbert vs. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 171 Mo. 54; State vs. Timmo, 54 Wis. 36; in re Denny, 156 Ind. 104; Labough vs. Clark, 127 Iowa, 181; People vs. Sours, 31 Colo. 369; State vs. Board, 34 Mont. 426; State vs. Winnett (Neb.), 110 N. W. R. 1113; or whether the failure to enter the resolution of submission upon the legislative journals invalidates the amendment: Koehler vs. Hill, 60 Iowa, 543; Oakland Paving Co. vs. Hilton, 69 Cal. 479; West vs. State, 59 Fla. 154; Durfee vs. Harper, 22 Mont 354; State vs. Tufly, 19 Nev. 391; or whether the description of the amendment and the form of the ballot are sufficient: Russell vs. Cory, 164 Mo. 89; State vs. Winnett (Neb.), 110 N. W. R. 1113; Murphy Chair Co. vs. Attorney General (Mich.), 112 N. W. R. 127; or whether the method of submission is sufficient: Lovett vs. Ferguson, 10 S. D. 44; Russell vs. Cory, 164 Mo. 89; or whether the publication of the amendment or of a notice relative to it is sufficient: Com. vs. Griest, 196 Pa. St. 396; Russell vs. Cory, 164 Mo. 89; or whether the submission may be as well by resolution as by a legislative act approved by the executive: Com. vs. Griest, 196 Pa. St. 396; Warfield vs. Vandiver, 101 Md. 78; Edward vs. Lesuer, 132 Mo. 410; Hays vs. Hays, 5 Idaho, 154; State vs. Dahl, 6 N. D. 81; or at what election the amendment must be submitted. People vs. Curry, 130 Cal. 82.

In some of these cases the inquiry was whether the conditions precedent to a valid submission had been complied with and in others it went to the legality and the fact of a ratification. Either inquiry is judicial. The question was met in Rice vs. Board of Canvassers, 190 Mich. 453, a proceeding by mandamus, where the court said: "It is contended that the determination of the question whether an amendment to the Constitution has been carried involves the exercise of political and not judicial power. If this be so, it follows that the promulgation of any purported amendment by the executive or any executive department is final, and that the action cannot be questioned by the judiciary. But, with reference to the conditions precedent to submitting a proposed amendment to a vote of the people, it has been repeatedly held, by courts of the highest respectability, that it is quite and that such jurisdiction can not be conferred upon it.

The constitution provides for its own amendment, so far as here material, in the following language:

"Whenever two-thirds of both houses of the legislature shall deem it necessary to alter or amend this constitution they may propose such alteration or amendments, which proposed amendments shall be published with the laws which have been passed at the same session, and said amendments shall be submittd to the people for their approval or rejection at any general election, and if it shall appear in a manner to be provided by law that a majority of all of the electors voting at said election shall have voted for and ratified such alterations or amendments, the same shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of this constitution."

The cases of Rice vs. Palmer, 78 Ark. 432; State vs. Wurts (N. J.), 43 Atl. R. 744; State vs. Powell, 77 Miss. 543, and Koehler vs. Hill, 60 Ia. 543, exhaustively review the cases, including Miller vs. Johnson, 92 Ky. 589, and Worman vs. Hagan, 78 Md. 152, and other cases cited in opposition to the contestants; and these four cases are the ones which most thoroughly consider the question now under consideration.

The Rice-Palmer Case.

In Rice vs. Palmer the court referred to the claim that the question of ratification was a political one in this language:

"The authorities are practically unfounded in holding that whether a constitutional amendment has been properly adopted acording to the requirement of the existing constitution is a judicial question and it is a paramount duty of the court to pass upon it."

In State vs. Wurts, the court held that it could review by certiorari the determination of a commission appointed by the governor under statutory authority to find the result of a vote on a constitutional amendment, and in referring to Luther vs. Berden, supra, said:

"But the difference betwen the court's investigation into the legality of the government of which the court is a branch, and its investigation into the legality of a proceeding which in no way involves the legality of the government or of itself, is too plain to require elucidation."

So far as anything important in this case at bar is concerned it might be admitted that the constitution, or the legislature, if authorized by it, might create a tribunal to count the votes and declare the result from the finding of which there could be no appeal. If this is so it is so, as suggested in State vs. Powell, supra, because it is competent for the sovereign people, speaking through their constitution, so to provide. The language creating such a tribunal would need to be positive and imperative before the court would allow an amendment to be declared adopted or lost upon a palpable mistake in making a mathematical computation of official returns; but the right to reach back of the returns to the ballots and to recount them might easily be denied. For the purposes of the present contention the claim is not that the constitution or the statute has constituted such a tribunal. The concession is that an attempt has been made to give the court final jurisdiction to determine an appeal the fact of ratification; and the claim is that the question of ratification is so much a political fact that its finding can not be left to the judiciary on appeal from the finding of a statutory tribunal. In another form the argument is that in finding the fact, in counting and construing the votes, the court is making the law, and construing it. Election contests are frequent. The court determines from the evidence, in the safest way yet found, whether one or another was elected to office, whether a proposed bond issue was authorized, whether a new county-seat was selected, or whether a proposed home rule charter was ratified. In none of these cases is the court electing an officer, or authorizing a bond issue, or changing a county-seat, or making a local charter. Its act is purely judicial.

The Court's Duty.

In determining the result of the vote upon an amendment by a recount of the ballots the court does not assume the right to do so because of its general common law or equity jurisdiction, but because the duty to do so is imposed by statute; but in performing such duty it exercises such needful and proper powers as it has by virtue of its existence as a common law and equity court. It is hardly to be thought that the courts may in the exercise of their ordinary jurisdiction, and in any controversy from the proceeding, and even in a collateral action, declare that a constitutional amendment was not ratified because of defects in the proceedure leading up to its adoption, and yet for conditions precedent to submitting a proposed amendment to a vote of the people, the highest respectability, that it is within the power of the judiciary to inquire into the question, even in a collateral proceeding. • • • It is to be noted that under section 1 of article 20 of the Constitution of the state, no amendment can become a part of the Constitution until ratified by a vote of the people. One prerequisite is equally as essential as the other. The amendment must first receive the requisite majority in the legislature, and afterwards be adopted by the requisite vote. • • • We are not able to find sufficient evidence of the legislative intention that the first determination of the board, induced by fraud or reached by disregarding the mandates of the law that a majority of all of the electors voting at said election shall have voted for and ratified such alterations or amendments, the same shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of this constitution."

April 13, 1905, and was approved April 18, 1905.

The act proposing the tax amendment was approved April 13, 1905.

The act proposing the good roads amendment was approved April 17, 1905.

Section 2 of the act proposing the tax amendment provides for the canvassing of the election returns, and the declaring of the result in the manner provided by law, with reference to the election of state officers. Section 3 gives the form of the ballot and provides that each ballot shall be counted in accordance with the will of such elector as provided by the general election laws.

The constitution provides that a proposed amendment shall be a part of the Constitution "if it shall appear in a manner to be provided by law that a majority of all the electors voting at said election shall have voted for and ratified such alterations or amendments."

The argument is, that since Rev. laws, 1905, were passed after the two acts submitting the amendments, and were not in force until March 1, 1906, they do not apply to these two amendments. The question is one of construction. It was not much argued.

The amendments were proposed in substantially the form used for many years. There seems to be no particular doubt but that the acts submitting the amendment and the general election law should be construed together, one supplementing the other. It is not a circumstance of significance that the revised laws did not become in force until March 1, 1906. They were in force before the election at which the amendments were submitted. Neither is it important that the acts proposing the amendments were approved one or a few days before the approval of the revised laws. The acts of submission and the provisions as to an appeal should be construed together. This is substantially the thought of Rev. laws, Sec. 3504.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

CONFESSES HIS GUILT

Former Soldier Admits He is Not Entitled to Pension.

Wounds Himself to Secure Discharge From Army Service.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Harassed by a guilty conscience, Emil E. Mittag, whose home is about six miles north of here, now has a desire to acknowledge that he has done wrong by drawing a pension from the government to which he was not entitled. Mittag was formerly a soldier and was given a disability discharge and a pension of $8 a month for the loss of two fingers by a gunshot wound. He recently came under religious influence and now wants the world to know that he wounded himself to escape from irksome military service. He proposes to surrender himself to the commanding officer of Fort Vancouver and accept whatever punishment may be in store for him.

Mittag enlisted in the regular army about four years ago. He was sent to the coast artillery at Fort Washington, Md. Dissatisfied with the life led by the country's defenders, Mittag began plans for getting out of the service. He decided to shoot himself and carried out the plan by placing two of his fingers over the muzzle of his gun and discharging it. He was taken to the hospital and later discharged, the army surgeons thinking that the wound was made in an accidental manner.

Mittag soon afterwards applied for a pension and was given $8 a month. He drew this from January, 1906, to October, 1907, when he fell under the influence of the Salvation Army and was persuaded to do what he could to right the wrong.

TO REVISE WAY OF ASSESSING

County Commissioners of North Dakota to Hold State Meet.

Minot, N. D., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Next Saturday there will be a meeting here of the county commissioners of Ward and adjoining counties to discuss matters of interest to the officers of the respective counties and take steps to secure a convention of all county commissioners in the state to be held in this city some time before the meeting of the assessors next spring, in order that the method of taking the assessment may be revised. In the past there has been a great deal of trouble in adjusting the taxes for the reason that the assessors all seem to have a different idea of placing the valuations. It is thought that if a meeting of the commissioners is held prior to the meeting of the assessors they will be able to give valuable suggestions that will prevent the unequal placing of values that has prevailed in the past to a very large extent.

Other matters pertaining to the business of the counties will be discussed at the convention Saturday and it is expected that the meeting will be a very helpful one.

STRANGE BEING NEAR BIG FALLS

Living Wild Man Broke His Vow Not to Talk.

Big Falls, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—A St. Cloud man, with his hair a foot in length, with a beard reaching down seven or eight inches and with every appearance of a modern Rip Van Winkle, was discovered living in a hut about fifteen miles from Big Lake by two homesteaders.

He was located by John Holmquist and George McFadden, who are living on a homestead in the vicinity of Big Falls. On the morning of Jan. 12, they went out to hunt some game; returning in the afternoon, they ran across a kind of a shanty made out of leaves.

Upon entering they saw what they at first thought a wild man. A fellow with brown hair dropping below his shoulders and with a beard seven or eight inches in length, which was probably a seven or eight months' growth, was lying there asleep.

There was nothing in the place except a moose hide, which the man used as a blanket, and a Winchester rifle.

The stranger jumped when he saw them and grabbed his gun. He turned white with fear and yelled: "Don't take me! Don't take me! I would rather die than go back!"

McFadden assured the man that they had no intention of placing him under arrest and got the fellow to talk. He asked him what he had reference to when he said he would not return.

"Well I might as well tell you that it is at St. Cloud." The fellow then made a break to go. He stated that he was not fond of company and had already broken his vow never to communicate with white persons again. They finally persuaded him to go to their home to spend the night. He acted queerly all night. The next morning when the two men attempted to get at him and tie him up, he gave a jump, and knocked the hosts down with his fist and made for the door. McFadden and Holmquist hunted for two hours for the strange fellow, but were unable to secure even the slightest trace of him.

MISSED HIS HEART.

Munising Saloonkeeper, Who Tried to Kill Self, May Live.

Munising, Mich., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Aho, former saloon man, who attempted to commit suicide Monday afternoon in his saloon here by plunging a knife into his breast, probably will recover from the injury. After he was carried to the rooms above the saloon, it was thought from a hasty examination that he hadn't the slightest chance to recover from the wound.

Aho had tried to force the knife blade into his heart, and it was merely by a strange freak of chance that the weapon did not penetrate any vital organ. It is stated that he had been drinking, and had become despondent over domestic troubles.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Duluth People Know How to Save It.

Many Duluth people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Duluth citizen's recommendation.

J. H. Tomlin, lather and contractor, of 112 West Palmetto street, Duluth Heights, Duluth, Minn., says: "What I said in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills six years ago, was not only true, but the cure I described at that time has been permanent, and I am pleased to inform other sufferers of this fact. My case was a severe one, and it clung to me persistently for two years. The backache finally got so bad that I was obliged to lay off from work for days at a time, and I suffered such pains that it hurt to bring the slightest strain on the muscles of the back and loins. The kidney secretions were irregular, and I was unable to rest well at night. All these irregularities yielded promptly to Doan's Kidney Pills, and the result was a permanent cure."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's — and take no other.

In the past few years Mrs. Cora B. Miller has spent $125,000.00 in giving medical treatment to afflicted women.

Some time ago we announced in the columns of this paper that she would send free treatment to every woman who suffered from female diseases or piles.

More than a million women have accepted this generous offer, and as Mrs. Miller is still receiving requests from thousands of women from all parts of the world, who have not yet used the remedy, she has decided to continue the offer for a while longer, at least.

This is the simple, mild and harmless preparation that has cured so many women in the privacy of their own homes after doctors and other remedies failed.

It is especially prepared for the speedy and permanent cure of leucorrhoea or whitish discharges, ulceration, displacements or falling of the womb, profuse, scanty or painful periods, uterine or ovarian tumors or growths; also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness and piles from any cause, or no matter of how long standing.

Every woman sufferer unable to find relief, who will write Mrs. Miller now, without delay, will receive by mail free of charge, a 50-cent box of this simple home remedy, also a book with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer and how they can easily cure themselves at home without the aid of a physician.

Don't suffer another day, but write at once to Mrs. Cora B. Miller, Box 9681, Kokomo, Indiana.

MR. HAVEN'S "BUSINESS RECORD."

The "business record" of Mr. Haven, who says he will give Duluth a "thorough-going business administration" if elected, and that he will devote all his time to the job, should be subjected to thoughtful and kindly analysis. Thoughtful, because it is thought-compelling; kindly, because there is no occasion for unkindliness.

That record supports the promise that he will "devote all of his time to the place" much better than it does the promise that he will provide a business-like administration. Indeed, Mr. Haven's main idea in life in recent years appears to have been to nail down some nice, pleasant political job to which he could devote all of his time.

Ambition, even political ambition, people could understand. But it must be said, in all fairness, that it does no: appear to be ambition that has actuated Mr. Haven. It seems rather to have been a keen covetousness of some soft snap in the way of public office.

The voters should ask themselves, in all fairness and candor, and without permitting partisanship or prejudice of any sort to enter into the inquiry, whether this city is in a position, just at this particular time, to let out its mayorship merely to satisfy such a longing.

Does not Duluth want as mayor a man of a different sort from one who is merely seeking a political job? Would it not do better to call from his business a man who has a regular and permanent and visible means of support?

Mr. Haven has been an alderman from the Seventh ward; bookkeeper for limited periods in two offices; a small partner for another limited period in a business connected with building, during which he acted, also for a short time, as president of the Builders' exchange; secretary and chairman of political campaign committees—under pay—during the open season for such industries; holder of half a dozen small political jobs, and seeker after several larger and better paid political jobs which have always eluded his grasp.

Mr. Haven has always been a good party worker. The leaders of his party have, apparently, always felt that he had something good coming, yet when anything good was on tap they always gave it to somebody else. Even when the mayoralty nomination was at stake they searched anxiously for a business man who was widely known and highly respected, and did not consider Mr. Haven until all other possibilities were exhausted.

Even then, sad to say, his nomination did not come from those earnest leaders who had sought in vain for a candidate whom the rank and file of the party could hopefully and proudly support; it came through a secret, closed-door caucus of a "committee of forty."

Even the leaders who felt that Mr. Haven had earned a good political place as recompense for his party work shrank from making the city of Duluth, at a time when it distinctly needs a business man as mayor, provide him with a place so important.

Should the voters, regardless of party, hold their city's interests so lightly that they would cast them away to satisfy an office-seeker's hunger for political preferment?

KISSES AND MICE.

A New York dispatch in The Herald last night reported some scientific news that will be of deep interest to many. Dr. E. Palier, who appears to be a student of profound ability, was quoted as saying that "kisses are harmless, but beware of mice."

Kisses may or may not be harmless—history records many cases where they were very harmful indeed—but what the learned doctor means is that microbes are not exchanged in the process of osculation. Other scientists, whom it is difficult to picture otherwise than as frowsy, grumpy and ill-looking, have told us that danger lurks in the kiss, and that this interesting and diverting caress is a prolific agent of germ-distribution. This scientist—may his tribe increase—assures us that there is nothing to it, and that kissing is as safe—in that respect—as it is pleasant.

But mice—mice have no friends anyway, and kissing has. Mice, he says, not only carry germs about and leave them where they will do harm, but they will receive germs that might be safely passed from lip to lip, and turn them from harmless bugs into desperately dangerous beings.

This bit of scientific news is vastly interesting. It furnishes conclusive evidence of the value of the intuition of women. For is it not a fact that women have always been instinctively fearful of mice, while as to kisses—well, anyway, doesn't this new theory square beautifully with a belief in the correctness of feminine intuition?

INSURING BANK DEPOSITS.

The Chicago Tribune, discussing the national and state insurance of bank deposits, thinks enough of the argument that it would make bankers careless to say that the adoption of the plan should be accompanied by more rigid supervision of banks.

It should, by all means, yet the most rigid inspection of banks that is possible ought to be provided whether or not there is insurance of deposits. Depositors in both state and national banks depend upon the government of state and nation to protect them against slipshod and corrupt banking methods. They are entitled to the best possible protection. The question of expense should be a minor one, and the first question should be effectiveness.

In Oklahoma, the only state thus far to adopt state insurance of bank deposits, more rigid regulations have been thrown about the banking business than in any other state. They came, however, not as an acompaniment of the insurance plan, but as the fruit of lessons learned in the recent panic. Weak spots in banking methods were then detected, notably the practice of hypothecating the stock of one bank to borrow money to control another, and the use of bank deposits by bankers for their own purposes and to help in dangerous speculations. The Oklahoma laws guard against these errors, and provide heavy penalties.

W. I. Prince, cashier of the City National bank of Duluth, recently outlined the arguments for government insurance of bank deposits clearly, ably and uncontrovertibly in a paper read before the Unity club. The chief object is to avert runs and to prevent hoarding of money. In order to effect that end, security is provided for the depositors. Now the depositor has no security except his faith in financial conditions and in his banker. Recent events have shown how easily faith in the most flourishing conditions is disturbed; and when that happens faith in bankers, no matter how sound their methods and how solvent their banks may be, flies quickly. Then bank runs result in many places, spreading alarms that produce runs in other localities, and in the twinkling of an eye a panic is here, to be followed by slow recovery that involves disturbance to business, loss of employment to thousands, and reduced profits and pay to thousands more.

If depositors had no fear of their money, how easily all that could be averted! Why should there be any panics at all? There may be money shortages; business may limp at times because there isn't money enough to go around; but it takes a widespread bank scare to make a real panic. When banks fear runs, they close their fists upon their cash holdings and refuse to lend money needed to keep business going, thus intensifying the evils in the situation a thousandfold. If the national and state governments stand back of the banks with ample insurance funds acquired by taxing the banks for that purpose, depositors may rest easily, bankers may continue to loan their money to keep business going, and the crisis may be passed safely.

Government and state insurance of bank deposits is so clearly a necessary and wholesome thing that it is hard to see how it can be long delayed.

LAWSON AND THE PEOPLE.

Tom Lawson is thoroughly disgusted with the people. "You talk of what I owe the people," he exclaims sulphurously in Everybody's Magazine. "What do I owe the gelatine-spined shrimps?"

There. That ought to hold the people awhile. "Gelatine-spined shrimps!" That isn't all the people are, either. "What have the saffron-blooded apes done for me or mine that I should halt any decisions to match their lightning-change, ten-above-ten-below-zero, chameleon-hued loyalty?" This latter phrase is a bit obscure, but it is picturesque, and it is illuminative of the present state of mind of this would-be savior of the people.

"The people!" he exclaims in a convulsion of disgust. "The very name has so sealed itself into my being that, feeling its every appearance of late, are myriads of fantastically apparalled marionettes whose solemn graphophoning of 'our rights, our privileges,' whose bold fronting of mirror shields and savage circling of candy swords, make me almost die a-laughing. * * * Today the people are preparing to hustle to the town pump the man who has done more for them and more to their enemies than any other since Lincoln paid for his efforts for the people with his life; and all because the System's slime-brained press has told the yellow-flushed spaniels that the temporary absence of pie and sherbet from the people's dinner pail is due to Roosevelt's pursuit of the scabbiest pack of he-wolves that ever harried a civilized people. The people!"

Gelatine-spined shrimps, saffron-blooded apes, yellow-flushed spaniels! Oh, Thomas, Thomas! Fortunately these shrimps, apes and spaniels retain the sense of honor that enables them to appreciate you still.

THE AMERICANIZING PROCESS.

Though the coming of alien colors and Asiatic races to this country may create disturbing doubts and alarms, there is no great danger in the rush of European immigrants to this country. There are many, no doubt, who observe the vast difference between native-born Americans and some of the more backward European peoples with a fear that it will be impossible to assimilate these new strains, but the nation will accomplish it readily enough.

Alien though the first generation of immigrants may be, the second generation quickly becomes American. Even the children born abroad show an anxiety to Americanize themselves that cannot be gainsaid, and in many cases it is difficult to distinguish them, except by their names and facial characteristics, from the native-born.

An English investigator who is writing to the London Times on American immigration takes a cheerful view of it. Says he in one of his recent articles:

> I, for my part, although by no means insensible to the deep and universal upheaval that has been involved in the incoming of these millions of immigrants, am still convinced, from my observation of natives and aliens during the months that I have been in close contact with them in all parts of this country, that the foundations of American thought, religion, character and type remain unimpaired. To my mind the effect of American life and American institutions is one of the most extraordinary phenomena of all history, and I find myself less skeptical than many Americans in regard to the power of American democracy to persist and prevail by transforming its aliens into natives, in fact as well as in name, by the new social and political responsibilities which are immediately laid upon them and by which, almost from the day of their arrival, they are involved in a new scheme of ethical incentive and restraint.

This is, indeed, a more hopeful view of it than many Americans take, yet it is wholly warranted by present conditions. Though immigrants are coming at the rate of a million or more a year, many of these are former immigrants who have been home and are returning; and at most this annual volume is less than one-eightieth of the mass of the population. One-eightieth cannot swing seventy-nine-eightieths to its ways; it must come to the ways of the mass. Some slight change, no doubt, this enormous influx of new blood will ultimately bring.

First English, Scotch, Welsh and Irish in the main, the current of immigration later became largely Teutonic, with the bulk of it, outside that from the British isles, coming from Germany and the Scandinavian peninsula. This was all splendid blood, and the nation has become mighty with its aid. Of late these elements have grown smaller, and Slavs, Latins, Hebrews and other strains from Russia, Italy, and Austro-Hungary have become predominant. That these will be more difficult of assimilation is undoubted; that the task is possible and even certain of accomplishment is equally true.

In order to get the canal dug Uncle Sam will have to dig up $300,000,000; but it will be worth it.

And still the News Tribune fails to apologize to the West end churches for falsely representing their Sunday night temperance meetings to have been political rallies.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Have you ever seen a ghost?

Mr. William E. Cartel, at the Lenox, says that one of these weird and uncanny creatures dogged his footsteps for nearly a mile. His glims were either playing him false, he says, for he surely saw something that looked like a ghost, or else the apparition that played tag with his fleeting shadow was some foolish citizen turned loose upon an unsuspecting world, in a night gown.

Once upon a time—that's the way most of these stories begin—Voorhies, Ill., was the scene of a monster revival meeting. The farmers came in from miles around. Some came because they thought they needed salvation; others came because they thought they needed recreation. The call for the righteous was held under a large tent, where flickering gasoline lamps added their uncertain rays to the mystic spell that the visiting laborer in the vineyard strove to cast over his audience.

Miracles were told of. Excitement reached a high pitch. Even those who came to enjoy the separating of the sheep and the goats remained to catch the infection of the visiting brother's enthusiasm. His imagination was vivid; his vocabulary large and expressive. He conjured visions of grim retribution stalking in the form of pursuing vengeance. Cloven hoofs and brittle horns appeared in the sketches he drew for the benefit of the procrastinators. Five or six of the gasoline lamps went out during the heated peroration and the dread and nervous apprehension of the younger members of the audience and some of the more superstitious ones, was complete.

Now for the ghost.

All the rigs had gone when Bill Cartel—that's Mr. Cartel, twenty years being supposed to have elapsed between this occurrence and the present time—turned away from the village square and pointed his face toward the farm. It was a lonely walk. The night was black with the gathering ingredients of a storm mixture; fitful gusts of wind blew up the street, startling one with their near-human sighs and moans. The swaying trees cast lurking and dancing shadows across the road and through the sycamores no candle lights were gleaming.

So with his imagination casting uncanny objects in every nook and corner and turn of the road, with the regular frequency of a moving picture machine, the boy sidestepped shadows with blanched face and drawn lips.

The wandering boy had just passed the right-angled sign-post that told strangers in those parts that Voorhies was just two miles away, when the ghost made its appearance. Out from behind the hedges it arose, garbed in purest white, as if fresh from the laundry. It paused, as if to get a line on the geographical lay of the land. The pause was ominious. Ascertaining the whereabouts of its road companion, the ghost began a pace toward the old farm, keeping a respectable distance on the nigh side of the hedge.

Only Mr. Cartel knows how far and how fast he ran. He won't tell, because he is well aware that in these times statements are often open to suspicion. President Roosevelt—but than that's another story. Anyway, no matter how fast he navigated, the ghost was right there at the other side of the hedge. It must have been heavy going on the corn stubble inside of the hedge, for suddenly the ghost gave a theatrical jump and cleared the hedge and began to beat time on the hard road, in unison with the fleeing boy.

The admonition of the revival leader—stop lest you are pursued by evils of unspeakable nature—came to the winded runner. He stopped and turned to meet the pursuer of gossamer-like substance. By him it rushed, with the speed of the wind. He trembled. His escape was narrow and timely. With fear he waited for the return of the white-robed spectre, and finally he continued on his way to home and safety. Every lurking shadow had some visionized form of forbidden sin. The road was people by a multitude of imagined shapes, inspired by the mental sketches drawn by the revival leader. The scene where Faust is shown the folly of not being nice, was overshadowed by the Demons that danced along the country road.

Then, like the light to the despairing mariner, the candle that shone from the window of the farmhouse hove into the perspective of the picture, and with its feeble light of realty dispelled the ghost-like shapes that danced attendance on the fears of the over-revivaled boy.

The inquiring bark of the faithful dog charmed away any lurking fears, and when his head was tucked away under the covers and he had time to take a post mortem view and perform an autopsy on the dead vision of his fears, the young man decided that an overheated imagination, aided by the atmosphere of the revival tent and the graphic pictures of the sorrows of Satan, that were thrown out by the laborer among the unrighteou of Voorhies, really caused the phanton chase.

Mr. Cartel failed to state whether he was converted or not. He admits, however, that he didn't steal apples from the neighboring orchard, nor do anything that would jeopardize his chances of heaven, until the impression of the ghostly vision had disappeared.

Some one threw a pinch of Japanese snuff around the lobby of the Lenox the other night and for a while the air was filled with the sound of sneezes produced by the Oriental nose tickler.

Mere man is an insignificant minority at the McKay since the Modern Samaritans have made the register look like a Chinese laundry slip with their truly feminine way of writing their signatures. With the assistance of the clerk most of the names have been deciphered. Yet, at that, the visiting young ladies are no worse offenders against the Spencerian rules than most of the traveling gentlemen.

THE WEATHER.

It was different this morning. It was 12 degs. below zero in Duluth, and below-zero temperatures dotted the Northwest. It was clear, but a brisk wind accented the chilliness. The weather man says it will be fair tonight and tomorrow, that tonight's lowest temperature will range from zero to 10 degs. below, and that it will be warmer again tomorrow.

A year ago today it was cold, the thermometer having been down to 14 degs. below the night before, but it was moderating rapidly after a cold snap nearly a week long.

The sun rose this morning at 7:44 and set tonight at 4:57, making 9 hours and 13 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "It is much colder this morning in all districts east of the Rocky mountains, due to the movement of a strong high pressure area from Saskatchewan to the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri valleys. Zero weather prevails in Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, Northern Montana, the Dakotas, Minnesota and Western Wisconsin, and freezing temperatures extend southward to and including the Ohio valley and Northern Texas. Light snow fell throughout the lake region during Wednesday or last night. The barometer is falling and the temperature is rising west of the 110th meridian, as a result of a disturbance developing off the Pacific coast. This latter condition will cause moderating temperatures in this locality during Friday."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures:

Too Much Johnson.

Philadelphia Telegraph: The suggestion that the two Johnsons, he of Minnesota and he of Cleveland, be nominated on the same presidential ticket, is perhaps not so absurd as might be supposed. It is, at all events, more sensible than the co-related notion of giving the same nominations to the two Bryans, he of Nebraska, and the new W. J. B. of Florida. The Minnesota governor seems to be a man capable of commanding respect and fealty of intelligent Democrats, and the gentleman from Cleveland has earned a good name and a fair record at home. In default of any other recommendation to put two men of the same name on the presidential ticket would give it a certain vogue and make it available for advertising purposes. It is more than likely, however, that the Bryans, as candidates respectively for the presidency and the vice presidency, would find, in the campaign as the "Two Dromtos," while the other suggestion that of coupling the governor of Minnesota and the mayor of Cleveland, is open to the objection that it would unquestionably be referred to as offering "Too much Johnson."

The Shooting of the Young Idea.

Harper's Weekly: That the royal road to learning is full of strange pitfalls is shown by some of the definitions and statements given by school children—some of whom are well along the way. The following are bona fide samples coming under the knowledge of one teacher:

About this time Columbus was cursing around among the West Indies.

The Valkyrie were the choosers of the slain, and the Valhalla the haulers of the slain.

The eldest son of the king of France is called the Dolphin.

The duke of Clarence, according to his usual custom, was killed in battle.

The Indians call their women squabs.

A Tip to Labor.

New York World: Mr. Cortelyou is invited to follow the line of his distinguished predecessors who have been promoted out of the secretaryship of the treasury at $8,000 a year into bank presidencies at $25,000 a year.

Is it not high time that labor lurched from its lethargy and kept pace with capital in this public-spirited policy? Why should not labor create a few choice offices, lofty in title, lucrative in emolument, to which should be elevated all such secretaries of commerce and labor as had shown a due deference to the dignity of toil?

Labor should not leave it to plutocratic patriotism alone to pay off the debts of a thankless proletariat to servants who have been useful in their day.

The Late Panic.

Chicago Record-Herald: It is certainly in order to congratulate the banking and business community on the disappearance of the last signs of the recent stringency. The New York banks have resumed full cash payments and reported a substantial surplus over their legal reserves. In Chicago and other Western centers where conditions were at no time nearly so bad as in the East, clearing house certificates have not been used for some time, and the extra-legal emergency "currency" is rapidly being retired. The premium on currency is a thing of the past even in Wall street, and country banks are again sending their surplus cash to the money markets.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Warren Register: Several members of Minnesota's congressional delegation made their primary campaigns a few years ago on the tariff question, talking radical revision quite as loudly as the Democrats did. They were going to beard the lion in his den, Joe Cannon in his hall, and bring the robber barons of the East to their knees. The people ought to prosecute them for obtaining goods under false pretenses—that is, if their tariff reform talk had any part in bringing about their nomination and election.

Moorhead Independent: The papers in the vicinity of J. F. Jacobson's home are booming him for governor of Minnesota. Mr. Jacobson has not signified his intention of being a candidate for the nomination, but in all probability he would run if sufficiently urged. Jacobson was the choice of the people of the state in 1906.

Hallock Enterprise: Governor Johnson has challenged the Republican congress to revise the tariff or make way for another congress that can and will do so. All true Republicans and all persons except the beneficiaries of robber schedules, or those who believe they are such, will agree with the governor that the tariff ought to be revised, and the sooner the better.

New Ulm Review: If the Nelson bank protection scheme savors of anything like his bankruptcy cure, the country wants but precious little of it.

St. Peter Free Press: Senator Aldrich's emergency currency bill should be voted down at first opportunity. It is nothing but a measure to turn the financial affairs of the country into the hands of a few big Eastern banks, giving them the power to expand and contract currency at will whenever it suits their purpose, without any relief and benefit to the country at large. It is one of the most vicious bills presented by either house for years.

Elk River Star-News: There is a loud noise like opposition to Governor Johnson having the delegation from his own state to the national convention. That would be mean sure enough, but the fact that Jim Manahan is making the noise is a pretty sure indication that the noise is about all there is to it.

St. Hilaire Spectator: If the government or state will guarantee the bank deposits, money will come out of its hiding places and into the banks and we will leave plenty for business uses.

Hinckley Enterprise: It is reported that C. B. Miller of Duluth, will file for the Republican nomination for congressman against J. Adam Bede. Mr. Miller is a bright lawyer, a brilliant speaker and won an enviable reputation in the house last winter. Should he win out, this district would not have a congressman who would always have to apologize for the things he had not done and depend on promises as a ground for re-election. Possibly we might have a representative who would not always be absent when an anti-trust measure came up.

Carlton Vidette: Great weather for the lumberjack. Wages are small, but he needs few clothes.

The Prison Philosopher.

Landlordism in America Growing.

New York Tribune: Americans have long been flattering themselves on having escaped the evil of old world landlordism. When the flat and the apartment house began to crowd out old homesteads in the cities and to suggest that tenancy was inevitably the coming mode of existence the saying was that, however secure a foothold the European system might gain in centers of population, the American farmer would eternally be lord of his own domain. But, alas for this short-sighted optimism! Even while the men are exulting over the record-breaking crops and incredible wealth of our farmers, landlords and tenants are multiplying rapidly in agricultural regions. A significant summary of facts has just been given in the Popular Science Monthly by Prof. Homer C. Price of Ohio State university. Eight years ago more than thirty-five farms out of every 100 were operated by tenants, while 23.3 per cent of all farm lands (i. e., both developed and undeveloped acreage) was rented to transient occupants. Rural landlordism is thrice as prevalent in this "land of economic freedom" as in over-populated Germany, and statistics taken today would probably show that the high tenancy rate of France (47.2 per cent) is almost, if not quite, equaled. When it is considered that the relative number of tenants has been increasing in spite of the millions of acres taken up annually for forty years in homestead grants, the magnitude of this economic transformation becomes still more impressive.

PLEASANTLY PUT.

Chicago Tribune: "I received your majesty's message," said the new missionary. "Did I understand you would do me the honor to call upon me and dine tomorrow?"

"Almost correct," replied the cannibal chief, "I said I would call and dine upon you tomorrow."

"No," answered Senator Sorghum. "It is better to have some one else do your talking for you. Then if something is said which displeases, you can join the popular disapproval."

Houston Post: "You look unhappy?"

"I am unhappy."

"But you once said that if your husband ever accumulated a million you would be perfectly happy?"

Chicago Tribune: "In your opinion," asked the member of the investigating committee, "what is the cause of the evident unrest among the Indians?"

"Fleas," he answered.

Philadelphia Ledger: "Conductor," she shrilled indignantly, "why didn't you shout that I was on the wrong car? I want my nickel back."

"Us conductors, ma'am," was his response, "has to learn a variety of stunts, and if the barn boss ever starts a class in mind readin' I promise to attend, ma'am. That's the best I can do. Your nickel? Why, how could I ever identify it among so many?"

After the Initiation.

The house is full of medicine
And mystery profound;
We can not even run about
Or speak the slightest sound;
They keep the big piano shut,
We can not strike a note:
The doctor's been here twenty times
Since father rode the goat.

He joined the lodge a week ago—
Got in at 4 a. m.,
And sixteen members brought him home,
Though he says he brought them.
His leg was sprained, and one big rip
Had rent his Sunday coat—
The members had a jolly time
When father rode the goat.

He's resting on the couch today
And practicing the signs—
The hailing, signal call and grip
And other monkey shines;
He utters cuss words 'neath his breath
And other things he'll quote—
The members had an evening's work
When father rode the goat.

He has a brilliant uniform,
All red and white and blue,
A hat with plumes, and scarlet braid
And golden badges, too.
But, somehow, when we mention it,
His visage waxes grim—
We wonder if he rode the goat
Or if the goat rode him.

Mud Slinging Reports Regarding Record of Mr. Tessman.

Some Facts Regarding His Business Career in Duluth.

The publication of the "business record" of Alderman Haven in The Herald, Tuesday evening, has created so much comment that supporters of Mr. Haven have been desperately trying to offset its effect by spreading reports and innuendoes regarding the record of Emil Tessman, the Democratic candidate.

Wild rumors, which could not be traced down to their source, have been started regarding the business record of Mr. Tessman.

This mud slinging has had no effect with those who know Mr. Tessman personally, but there are many who might be tempted to place some reliance in the stories. For this reason, some of the facts regarding Mr. Tessman's business record in Duluth were secured today.

Mr. Tessman came to Duluth in 1890 and worked for the wholesale commission house of W. H. Carpenter & Co. In 1894 he went into the business for himself with a partner under the firm name of Tessman & Belliveau. In January of 1897 the hard times caught the firm and it was compelled to make an assignment. Mr. Tessman went West, going to Portland, Or., where he was employed as local manager for the Omaha Packing company. While in this company's employ he paid up $900 of the debts of the old firm out of his salary.

After spending three years on the coast, he returned to Duluth and became manger of the Hudson Produce company. This firm later sold out to H. J. Kolling & Co., and Mr. Tessman continued as manager. In the fall of 1906 he again went into business for himself under the firm name of E. A. Tessman & Co.

While he has been in the produce and commission business almost all of the time he has been in Duluth, Mr. Tessman has other interests, having stock in the Duluth Cigar company and the Gibson Wholesale Supply company.

The best evidence of Mr. Tessman's business probity is the esteem in which he is held by his business associates. The district in which he has always had the greatest strength politically is in the Third ward, among the men with whom he is associated daily in his business affairs.

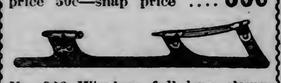

Mr. Tessman has never been a candidate for any office with the exception of that of alderman from the Third ward.

PRICES OF FURS FALL

Minnesota Trappers Feel the Effect of Financial Stringency.

Falling Off in Demand Means General Cut in Prices.

During the recent financial stringency several wholesale fur firms failed, and many more were almost forced to the wall. There was a big falling off in the demand for furs, and a consequent falling off in prices paid for the raw material. Hundreds of trappers, professional and otherwise, who are conducting operations in Northern Minnesota, have felt the effects of this falling off, and are unable to get as high prices for the pelts as they expected. Many are holding on to their catch, hoping for a raise later in the season.

Prices of raw furs are constantly changing, the demand for any particular line setting the price. Thus the trappers in the wilds of the forests are even more dependent upon the whims of fashion than most of the people who live in the city, although personally the man who traps knows no more about the styles than the average woman does about the running of a steam engine. If mink is fashionable, a high price for the raw product results. It may be all the rage one winter, and the slight demand for it the following year may reduce prices by one-half. Mink is hardly a fair example, however, for it always is in fair demand. Weasel pelts are used in the making of certain kinds of furs. The price for a raw weasel skin has never gone above a dollar. Many years it is as low as 10 cents. Last winter such a skin was worth $1, if in prime condition, and now 50 cents is the highest price offered.

While the whole scale of prices is lower than was expected would be the case, they are still at a level that would have seemed remarkably high six or eight years ago. Even when the demand is slight the scale is kept way above the old average, on account of the growing scarcity of fur-bearing animals. Of the Minnesota fur bearers, marten is the favorite this year, and even now prices for the raw pelts are quoted as high as $27, where the pelt is prime and of the right color. A pelt of poor color and quality may bring no more than $2 or $3.

A good many wolves are being shot in Northern Minnesota this winter. Many men who are doing the shooting have no conception of the value of furs of any kind, and seem to be of the impression that, aside from the bounty, they should be able to get $10 or $12, or even more, for the hides. They try to sell them along the street for these fancy figures, and get the impression that someone is trying to beat them if a lower price is offered. The very finest wolf skin, prime and in every way in the best of condition, commands a price of only $4 at a fur house, and it has to be extra fine to be worth even that. The average price is $2 or $3.

Wireless Telegraphy Record.

While testing new receiving cones at one of the stations in Nova Scotia recently, the operator picked up a message from the Philippine Islands, a distance of nearly 12,000 miles. The message put all previous records far in the rear. Among medicines, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters occupies a similar position. During the past 54 years it has made so many cures of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel complaints that it has put all former records far in the rear. If you have been experimenting with other remedies, stop it at once and get a bottle of this celebrated medicine from any druggist, grocer or general dealer. It will tone the digestive system, regulate the bowels, and thus cure and prevent poor appetite, heartburn sour risings, sick headache, billiousness, dyspepsia, indigestion, female ills, colds, grippe and malaria, fever and ague.

HANSBROUGH AFTER TRUST

Says That Harvester Octopus is Trying to Defeat Him.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota yesterday endeavored to have nullified the effect of a resolution offered by him and adopted by the senate on Dec. 17, 1906, directing the department of commerce and labor to investigate the affairs of the International Harvester company, in order, he stated, that the department of justice might proceed to prosecute the company. He explained that there exists between the several departments a certain courtesy or comity which makes them desire to act in harmony, and for that reason the department of justice is holding back its proceedings while another department is under direction of the senate to make an investigation of the "trust" it contemplates to prosecute.

The resolution called forth a storm of protest during which Mr. Hansbrough declared that the International Harvester company is taking a hand in politics in North Dakota and is trying to capture delegates who are to represent that state in the Republican national convention.

"Not alone that," said Mr. Hansbrough, "the edict has gone forth from this monopoly that I am to be defeated for the senate of the United States because I had the temerity to offer a resolution to investigate it.

"The political fortune of a man is a grain of sand compared with the injustice that may be wrought by an institution of this kind. I accept this challenge and am ready to meet it. If the people of my state desire to have this monopoly control their state they do not want me as their representative."

Senator Beveridge declared that this statement of the activity of the "harvester trust" was much more important than the resolution to stop the investigation of the trust.

After more than an hour spent in debating the resolution. It was referred to the committee on agriculture on motion of Senator Fulton of Oregon.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

In joint session Wednesday, the Mississippi legislature ratified the election of Hon. John Sharp Williams as United States senator to succeed Senator H. D. Money.

The dining car of the Burlington westbound flyer took re shortly after leaving Dorchester, Neb., Wednesday evening, and by the time the train reached Friend, where the car was uncoupled, it was practically consumed. The cooks and waiters escaped without injury. Little damage was done to the other cars.

The Ohio supreme court Wednesday granted an immediate hearing in the case testing the validity of the Bronson election law which Senator Foraker is fighting.

John D. Rockefeller and family arrived at Augusta, Ga., Wednesday, to remain throughout the winter season. Mr. Rockefeller expects to devote much of his time to golf.

The senatorial deadlock in Kentucky was not broken Wednesday and there seems to be no immediate prospect of a shift in votes. The rumor that more men will desert Beckham is still persistently circulated and also the rumor that William O. Bradley will withdraw and help elect McCreary.

Judge Phillips, in deciding the case against the Amalgamated Glass Workers' union at Cleveland, Ohio, Wednesday, held that the organization was in restraint of trade and ordered its dissolution on the ground of public policy.

COMMITTEE.

DEMOCRATS ARE UNITED

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 23.—W. J. Bryan rounded out a day in Nashville with an address before a big audience at the Ryman auditorium last night. Hon. Judson Harmon of Ohio also spoke briefly.

Mr. Bryan in his speech took occasion to say that the idea that prosperity was an inevitable result of Republican ascendancy has been rudely exploded in the last few months, and contrasted the ridicule heaped upon his advocacy of the silver dollar with the prayerful anxiety with which capitalists had so recently grabbed for clearing house certificates. He scored imperialism. The main idea of his speech was that the Democrats everywhere are united, while the Republicans are divided. So that the railroad regulators, the tariff reformers, the advocators of arbitration between capital and labor and the "trust busters" are, he said, in an overwhelming majority. He praised the new constitution of Oklahoma, particularly the safeguarding of bank depositors. He predicted that this feature is going to be imitated by Kansas, Illinois and other states as soon as action may be had. He says this is the only redeeming feature of the Fowler currency bill before congress.

FIX DIVIDING LINE

Between Two States in Middle of Lake Pepin.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Minnesota and Wisconsin authorities have agreed that the center of Lake Pepin is the dividing line between the two states. Thus ends a controversy that came up with some fishermen on the Wisconsin side, who claimed that the line was near the Minnesota side of the lake, because the river current at the head of the lake empties in near the Minnesota shore. They persisted in fishing with Wisconsin licenses in Minnesota territory. Both departments have agreed that there is no current in Lake Pepin, and the dividing line must be drawn half way across. As far as law violations go, the jurisdiction of both states extends from shore to shore.

LIQUOR TRADE AROUSED.

State Campaign Against Prohibition Progress is Planned.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Persons interested in the liquor trade met at the West hotel yesterday and formulated plans for a state campaign to stem the tide of anti-saloon legislation. William B. Stewart, manager of the Bishop & Babcock company, was authorized to appoint a committee of seven to inaugurate the campaign.

Attention was called to the fact that Minnesota produces one-fourth of the barley used for malting purposes in America, and it was asserted that "the Minnesota farmer will be the sufferer from any legislation that will curtail the market for this commodity."

ARKO AWARDED BIG DAMAGES

Jury Renders Verdict of $6,000 Against Mining Company.

A verdict awarding damages in the amount of $6,000 to Frank Arko, against the Shenango Furnace company, was returned in Judge Dibell's room yesterday afternoon. Arko sued for $25,000. According to the complaint Arko was employed at the Shenango mine near Chisholm and had his foot crushed under a car of ore. He claimed that he attempted to stop the car on which the brake was defective, by putting a pinch-bar under the wheels but the contact threw him across the track and his foot was caught and crushed so that amputation was necessary. The defense denied responsibility for the accident on the ground that Arko was following the instruction of a fellow employe not a representative of the furnace company.

FAMILY HAD A BURGLAR SCARE

Falling Book and Burning Log Made Queer Noises.

The members of a well known East end family had a bad burglar scare Tuesday night. The scare took place just as some friends were leaving about 10:30 o'clock. They had all been playing bridge upstairs, leaving all the downstairs rooms unoccupied during the evening. As they stood at the door saying good night, a loud bang came resounding from the rear of the house. It sounded as if some one in the hurry of making his escape had so far forgotten caution as to allow the window, through which he had just hastily crawled, to drop. All the back part of the house was in darkness.

The head of the house being assured by his wife that there were thieves in their home, crept quietly upstairs and got his revolver, while his family crouched in the vestibule expecting to be murdered any minute.

While passing through the large downstairs hall preparatory to entering the dining room the brave young husband, with his wife clinging to his coat tails, heard a noise in the dining room. It sounded as if someone were carefully putting the family silver into a bag. The couple stood rigid. He poked his gun around the corner and switched on the lights, but no masked criminal was revealed.

They searched the house high and low, but no thief was found. At the cook's door they knocked and her sleepy answer to their question nearly solved the mystery.

The cook had been reading, fell asleep, and while asleep her book, which was a large one, slipped from her lap and fell to the floor with a crash. That accounted for the noise.

Later, after a long council, it was unanimously decided by the family, that the clatter had been well caused by the turning over of a half-burned log on its poorly balanced irons, one leg of the irons coming sharply in contact with the tiled hearth of the dining room fireplace.

There was little rest in that well-regulated family Tuesday night, however.

GRAFTING GAME

Said to Have Been Worked by Stoessel at Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 23.—Testimony showing the straits of the civil population at Port Arthur during the siege was given at the court-martial of Lieut. Gen. Stoessel yesterday by Col. Varshinin, who was civil commissioner of that place and who fathered the charges made against Gen. Stossel, that he reaped a rich harvest by selling eggs and milk and other luxuries to the sick during the siege.

According to Col. Vershinin, mere existence was a luxury for civilians. Provisions were enormously expensive. A cow cost $80, a pig $50, eggs $1 each and other things correspondingly.

He testified that Mme. Stoessel had a large herd of cattle and a flock of chickens and charged exorbitant prices. Shortly before the surrender, he said, she summoned a merchant and attempted to dispose of these, the supposition being that she had an inkling of the coming surrender.

LID IS OBJECTIONABLE.

German-American Alliance Seeking Modification of Liquor Laws.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The German-American alliance of St. Paul has started a campaign for a modification of the liquor laws of Minnesota, and will endeavor to make the matter an issue at the fall election. Circular letters have been sent to German societies throughout the state urging them to join in the movement. It is the desire of the alliance to secure to the various cities and towns a larger measure of control over the liquor traffic than they are now allowed by the state laws.

CURZON'S ELECTION MAY BE CONTESTED.

Dublin, Jan. 23.—The Dublin Gazette, an official paper, in announcing last night the fact that Lord Curzon of Kedleston received a majority of the votes at the recent election for a representative peer of Ireland, studiously refuses to commit itself to the statement that he has been elected and apparently recognizes the possibility of a contest by placing on record the fact that Lord Ashtown was second in the race.

The Gazette goes so far as to point out that Lord Curzon's name does not appear to lie with those qualified to vote on such occasions.

Following precedent, no figures are given, but it is asserted that the former viceroy of India won by only a narrow majority over Lord Ashtown.

It has been suggested that the eligibility of Lord Curzon to this office possibly would be questioned, but at the time his candidacy was first launched he announced that he had taken a high legal opinion on this point. He asserted tonight that his failure to qualify for admission to the roll of Irish peers was due to a technical omission, to which his attention had not been called and which in no way debars him from election as a representative peer.

JIM ROSS IS ACQUITTED

Jury Decides That He Did Not Steal $70.

Jim Ross, whose two days' trial on the charge of grand larceny came to a close late yesterday afternoon, was acquitted, the verdict being returned last evening.

Ross was alleged to have stolen $70 from Moise Trouche, his roommate while they were stopping in a Bowery hotel Dec. 4 last.

Ross was born in France of Italian parentage. He is something over six feet tall and of athletic build. Among the tie camps of Northern Minnesota he is a well known figure, having the reputation of being one of the best cutters in this part of the state. He declares that after this experience he will steer clear of boon companions in the future.

Ross was defended by W. E. Greene.

DULLNESS IN IRON MARKET

After Fair Amount of Buying in Various Sections.

Cleveland, Jan. 23.—The Iron Trade Review says: Following the increased activity in pig iron last week, due to purchases by cast iron pipe makers, the market has lapsed into a condition of extreme quiet in nearly every center, although there has been a fair amount of buying of small quantities in some sections of the country. Representative of furnace interests in the Mahoning and Shenango valleys have discussed wages, prices and market conditions, but some differences of opinion developed, and no action was taken. Efforts of other interests to check the present tendency toward declining prices have been postponed until after the next general meeting of manufacturers to be held in New York at which it is hoped a sentiment strong enough to have an extremely beneficial effect upon the market, will be developed. The United States Steel corporation has blown in two furnaces at the Ohio works and has blown out one at South Chicago, thereby slightly increasing its active furnace capacity. It is significant that since December 1, despite the remarkable decrease in demand, the corporation has reduced its stocks of pig iron and semifinished materials about 130,000 tons, indicating that this interest, at least, has a little more than discounted the business recession.

One of the smaller furnace interests in the South has recently sold some 20,000 tons at from $12 to $12.50. Birmingham for No. 2 foundry and other minor interests have sold at $12.50, but at present $13 seems to be more nearly representing the market. The larger interests in the South are asking $13.50. In the valleys $17 for Bessemer, $16 for basic, $15 for forge and $16 for foundry iron can be obtained.

No action has been taken concedning ore prices. Light rails have declined $2 per ton and cast iron pipe $1.

PARKER'S VIEWS OF W. J. BRYAN

New Yorker's Comment on Nebraskan Rather Caustic.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 23.—Former Chief Justice Alton B. Parker of the court of appeals, who was the Democratic candidate in 1904 for the presidency of the United States, was in Albany yesterday in attendance upon the court. His attention was called to an extract from the speech of William J. Bryan before the Democratic members of the Kentucky legislature, in which Mr. Bryan was quoted as saying that in 1904 he "took his medicine in Parker. Parker was the man above all others I did not want."

"What a pity," said Judge Parker, "that Bryan failed to be equally frank in 1903. Had he done so the situation of the party would be vastly better than it is. There were but few Democrats in that year who thought it was wise to have a third-time candidate. But every man knows that unless a man could be found who would receive Mr. Bryan's support his warm personal following would seek revenge for the defeats of 1896 and 1900."

"So statesmen, politicians and interested citizens sought diligently to find some one that he would support. To some, at least, he said he would bolt Former President Cleveland, Governor Hill, Senator Gorman and Judge Gray, but that it would be hard to oppose Parker, as Parker had supported him.

"This attitude induced the impression among many that my nomination would be as acceptable to Mr. Bryan as any except his own. That impression led to pressure upon me from many quarters to change my plans for life. And it contributed in no small measure to the movement which led to the control of the convention.

"Subsequent events showed that Mr. Bryan had not been entirely open with those who had consulted him. For when, to his surprise, delegates began to be elected favorable to my nomination, when, indeed, the tide had grown too strong to be breasted, he started out on his famous tour of denunciation. The dragon's teeth which he then sowed yielded an abundant harvest—aye, all that he could wish.

"But it would have been much better for the party had he said, in 1903, before sentiment had crystallized, as he now says: 'Parker is the man above all others that I do not want.'"

EDMUND DIBBLE DEAD.

Former Duluth Newspaper Writer Dies in the East.

News has been received here of the death at Amherst, Mass., yesterday afternoon of Edmund Dibble of St. Paul, who was formerly engaged in newspaper work in Duluth. Death was due to lung trouble and came after a short illness.

For a year, Mr. Dibble was sporting editor of the News Tribune, writing under the name of "Sport Hicks." He left here last spring, returning to the Twin Cities. This year, he had been taking a special literary course at Amherst college. Prior to entering newspaper work, Mr. Dibble was a student at the University of Minnesota.

The news of Mr. Dibble's death is a shock to his friends here, as they had no intimation that his health was poor. He was robust and hearty when in Duluth. During his stay in this city he made many friends.

SIXTY GAMES PLAYED IN CURLING BONSPIEL

First Day Sees Great Activity in Big Spiel.

Standings in the Three Events Now Under Way.

The cold snap, which arrived last night, made the completion of the big bonspiel of the Northwestern Curling association more than a probability, and the curlers rejoice in the belief that all events will be cleared away by Saturday night. All day yesterday the rink was crowded and last night the curlers were the center of attraction in the city.

The seven draws, which the curlers expected to complete yesterday, were not completed on account of the ice being so dirty and sticky after the 3:30 thaw that a cleaning and flooding was necessary. The draw made for 6 o'clock did not go on the ice until after 8 o'clock, and the 8:30 draw went on about 11 o'clock, being completed before midnight. On account of the delay, the 11 o'clock draw did not go on last night, but was begun this morning at 8 o'clock, the other draws for today being moved along to conform. It is expected the full seven draws will be played today and tomorrow, and no trouble is anticipated in completing the bonspiel by tomorrow night.

The weather man was only kidding after all. He knew that if he didn't blow a few icy blasts on the fair surface of the earth in the vicinity of Duluth this week, an irate army of Scots and others of the curling clan would seek him out, be where he may, and give vent to their wrath without quarter.

For two days balmy sunshine and gentle winds sent rivulets chasing down the hillside, and transformed the curling rink into what was to all appearance a swimming pond. The curlers ground their teeth and raised supplicating eyes toward the sky. To think that after traveling hundreds of miles to send the stones crashing down the ice, they must be content to journey homeward again and give uncomplimentary testimony to the fact that Duluth is a summer resort and not a seat for winter sports.

Duluth is jealous of its reputation for winter sporting events. It has the best ski riders, the best hockey players, the best ice boats and the best skaters in the Northwest. It wouldnt be quite fair to the visiting curlers to say that Duluth has the best curlers, and the prediction might fall shy. If the weather man had attacked Duluth's reputation, when the city was bent upon impressing it on their visitors, every citizen would have joined the curlers in their assault on the weather distributer, wherever he may be.

But that's all over now. The big bonspiel, with its many rinks, its magnificent trophies, its rivalries and friendships, its noise, clatter and good fellowship, is on in full swing, and everything concerning Duluth is secondary to the events transpiring at the rink at Third avenue east. The curlers have laid aside their business cares and their hearts are in the play, not because of the material value of the trophies, but because they love the good old Scotch game, and a week of sliding the stones is more of a vacation to them than a month's trip through balmy climes.

He who hasn't watched the play at the bonspiel is missing something. Mailgners of curling say the game interests only the players. The visitor to the rink can't help but catch the spirit of the thing. As the stones come crashing down the ice, they watch the number of the stones already set to see if any of the opposite side are knocked outside the dead line and put beyond the count. The antics of the men with the brooms are picturesque, if nothing more, and one certainly is impressed with the fact that there is something to curling, if men can give it such enthusiasm and play with such spirit.

The first question of the visitor to the bonspiel is, "Where is Bob Dunbar?" The fame of the St. Paul man has spread until it includes everybody who has ever heard of the Duluth bonspiel. He is the center of attraction, and the window opposite the sheet on which he directs his men is always a vantage point for the spectators. His lusty shouts are those of the leader, his shots are well directed and true, his directions are infallible, and he is one of the great exponents of curling. Other rinks, too, attract attention on account of the personality of their leaders, but none have the fame and the general popularity of "Bob" Dunbar, who carried off some of the big prizes last year, and will not be left in the lurch at the distribution this season.

There appears to be something more than a press-agent foundation for that story of Frank Gotch being engaged to an actress, than most people imagined when it was first published. May Rose, a soubrette in a burlesque company which is appearing in Milwaukee this week, is supposed to be the lady who has downed the grappler and wrenched his heart away. May is the object of the enterprising interviewer wherever she goes, and her engagement to the wrestling champion is bringing her more fame than could ten years on the burlesque stage, without a sensation to enliven it.

May modestly admits that she and Frank are going to do a double turn on life's stage after a date to be selected soon. She says the wedding is to take place at a home Gotch has prepared in Iowa, and they will settle down to be just extraordinary farmers.

The announcement of the engagement, coming with Gotch's statement that he will retire from the game after this year, makes it appear that the little girl of the footlights has secured a staying hold.

The row between Harry Pulliam and other big guns of baseball, including Garry Hermann, promises to either chase Pulliam out of baseball or precipitate the war which the American association has been talking, and which may see the minors and majors lined up against each other in a fight to the finish.

Pulliam and Pat Powers are the principal figures in the controversy, and Powers' resolution blacklisting contract-jumpers is the cause. Pulliam objects to the blacklisting of contract-jumpers, on the grounds that men who do not deserve the fate will be forced out of baseball for life. It is said Hermann backs Powers up, and Pulliam says he will resign. Now, if Harry and Garry will only get to slapping each others wrists, and the other big boys of the baseball circle will gather around to watch the melee, the American association might slip into Chicago while nobody is looking.

HORAK TEAM IS IN LEAD

Good Games in the Y. M. C. A. Basketball League.

First Team Will Meet Bemidji Five Friday Night.

STANDING OF THE TEAMS.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Horak's	3	0	1000
Mapp's	2	1	.666
Critchfield's	1	2	.333
Deighton's ..	0	3	.000

Each team having played three games.

Joe Horak's 5:15 class team of the Y. M. C. A. Basketball league stands at the head with three victories and no defeats. Each of the other members of the league has been met and defeated and Horak's team comes out of the series with flying colors and a perfect percentage.

In the games played thus far, good form has been shown by all of the teams. Deighton's 5:15 class team has been unfortunate in its three games and the opponents have proved stronger, but there is undoubtedly improvement coming and the team will be heard from before the season ends. Mapp's night class team has been something of a surprise, the noon class team is holding its own and indications are that the present leaders will not have a walkaway in the final stretch of the league race, if they win at all.

Tuesday night's game between Mapp's and Critchfield's teams was the most exciting of the series. It opened rather slowly and dragged during the early part, but as the time slipped away and the score remained close, the players warmed up to their work and kept things on the move. The last few minutes were played at a lightning pace and the narrow margin of one point gave the night class the victory by a score of 21 to 20. The close score indicates how well matched the teams were and the style of their play is proof that both teams will make it interesting for the evening class teams when they meet again.

The schedule of the league is being arranged piecemeal, about six games being scheduled at a time, others to follow, when they are played out. The schedule for the six games to come is as follows:

Tuesday, Jan. 28, 8:45 p. m., Mapp's vs. Deighton's.

Tuesday, Feb. 4, 8:45 p. m., Horak's vs. Mapp's.

Friday, Feb. 7, 6 p. m., Horak's vs. Deighton's.

Tuesday, Feb. 11, 8:45 p. m., Critchfield's vs. Mapp's.

The Y. M. C. A. team will leave tomorrow morning for Bemidji, where it will meet the Bemidji team Friday night in one of the most important games of the year. Goaded by their two defeats, sustained at the hands of the high school teams of Superior, the boys are anxious to win from Bemidji, which has one of the strongest teams in the Northwest. The lineup will be practically the same used in the Superior games and the boys are prepared to put forth their best on a strange floor. They have profited considerably by their experience at Superior and believe they will play better basketball against Bemidji than they did in either the Blaine or Nelson-Dewey games.

The lineup of the team for the Bemidji game is as follows: Center, Dinham; forwards, Ballou, Fenton, McLean; guards, Skelton, Smith. Physical Director A. J. Frey will accompany the team.

DISBAND THE OLD N. C. C. LEAGUE

Two Circuits Will Spring From the "Grasshopper" Organization.

Reports from the Copper country are that the meeting of the Northern-Copper Country league at Houghton yesterday was a veritable love feast and the "near-sensational" developments, predicted by the Copper country press before the meeting, falled to materialize.

It appears that the split between the two divisions of the circuit was an amiable one. The Copper country people decided to go their way and Duluth and Winnipeg will go theirs, two new leagues will be formed and everything will be lovely in Northern baseball circles. The Duluth-Winnipeg league venture will carry the name, the Northern league.

The Copper country magnates were evidently under the impression that Duluth and Winnipeg intended to take Fargo back into the fold without securing the $200, failure to pay which has suspended the North Dakota town from organized baseball. The Duluth and Winnipeg men assured the Houghton and Calumet people that they didn't intend to raise the suspension on Fargo just yet, so one point was cleared away. The meeting yesterday was the annual meeting of the league, Dr. Glass holding that the gathering in Duluth in December was only the meeting of the circuit committee.

Out of courtesy to the Copper country members, the league meeting took a few slaps at the attitude of the Duluth newspapers, after which they sat around John Mann's festive board at the Douglas House and pledged the success of the two leagues, which grow from one.

The Six Day Grind.

Kansas City, Jan. 23.—A terrific sprint, started by Holbrook, taken up first by Root, and then by Moran, resulted in the loss of a lap by Monroe yesterday, placing Monroe and Morgan four laps behind the other five teams in the six-day bicycle race in Convention hall. At 6:30 o'clock the end of the twentieth hour, the five leading teams had covered 411 miles, 6 laps. Monroe and Morgan had ridden 411 miles, 2 laps.

At 10:30 p. m., when the race closed for the day, Root-Fogler, Lawson-Morgan, Bardgett-Mitten, Hopper-Holbrook and Sherwood-Wiley had completed 493 miles and 10 laps. Morgan-Monroe were two laps behind.

KIMBALL PREDICTS

That Bryan Will be President and Clark Speaker of House.

Washington, Jan. 23.—In his maiden speech in the house yesterday, Mr. Kimball of Kentucky, with Henry Watterson seated by his side, predicted Democratic success all along the line at the next election. Mr. Bryan, he said, would be president, Champ Clark of Missouri, speaker of the house, Henry Watterson, secretary of the treasury, and Mr. DeArmond, Missouri, the floor leader.

Mr. Kimbull's remarks were at times in a humorous vein. He referred to the president as the "young fellow at the other end of the avenue," who had got control of his party and would nominate Taft, and he added, "It will be the biggest race ever seen between Bryan and Taft."

BUILDING WAS NOT A THEATER

Why So Many Died in the Fire at Boyertown, Pa.

New York, Jan. 23.—Charles Burnham, president of the Association of Theater Managers of New York, who went to Boyerstown, Pa., on Monday, to study the causes of the fatal fire there, in the interest of the local theater manager's organization, has returned to New York.

The following is a copy of the report turned in by Mr. Burnham to the association:

"The building in which the fire occurred could by no interpretation be considered a theater. The fire broke out in a hall on the second floor of this building, the seating plan of which comprised about thirty rows of wooden, combustible chairs, twenty rows of which were fastened to the floor and the remaining rows loose.

"It was the loose chairs, following the panic precipitated by the explosion of one of the oil lamps that passed for footlights that primarily caused the great loss of life.

"When the people fled from their seats, those in the lead heading for the only stairway—one leading to the street—became tangled up in these chairs, fell and were trampled on, while the men, women and children who were blocked in their flight fell on top of the first victims and formed a human wall.

"The entrance to the hall was between two stores at the foot of the stairway. This stairway was but seven feet wide. The hall, before the explosion, contained about 400 people. In their frenzy those who reached the stairway were so excited that they stumbled and fell and in falling choked further egress.

"Presence of mind on the part of the audience would have averted fatalities, a truth pertaining to all audience panics. In no sense should this building come under the head of those classed or known as theaters. The arrangements of the hall in seating plans and footlights were of the primitive sort that might have existed 100 years ago.

"Present-day managers, guided by today's provisions, running theaters constructed as theaters are constructed today, even in small cities, can find no lessons in the fire.

"The tragedy, however, is a terrible warning against the careless management of small halls, accommodating 500 or more people, whose structure is combustible, exits limited and lighting facilities old-fashioned."

ONCE FAMOUS NORTH DAKOTAN

Woman Who Was Once a Cow "Boy" is Dead.

Conconully, Wash., Jan. 23.—Mrs. M. De Coign, formerly Mrs. P. S. Harris, died of dropsy in this city Monday afternoon, aged 58 years. She was in many respects one of the most remarkable characters of the Okanogan country. She was a woman of great mental and physical prowess, and was famous for her industrious habits. She had been a resident of Okanogan county about fourteen years, having come to this region from Spokane, where for a time she was engaged in the hotel business. Formerly she lived in North Dakota, where, as Mrs. A. P. Priest, she was engaged in stock raising.

At that time she was in her prime, and rode the ranges with her husband, rounding up cattle and engaging in frequent scrimmages with the Indians. She was famous as a dead shot with both the rifle and revolver.

On arriving in Okanogon county she took up a ranch three miles east of Loomis, which was known as "Sheep-Shoot" ranch. She resided in that locality about seven years. In September, 1903, she was married to Alexander De Coign of Concully and with him resided on a ranch on Happy Hill. In June, 1907, the couple came to Conconully town to reside. Mrs. De Coign had been a patient sufferer for several months with a dropsical affection which finally resulted in her death, though her excessive weight was not due to this cause. When in prime health she weighed 355 pounds.

On account of her fearlessness and extraordinary mentality she was famous among the characters of Conconully and vicinity, where she was humorously referred to as "Big Madge." Of late her spirit has been greatly subdued, and last summer she professed conversion during a series of grove meetings conducted by the Methodist church. She was baptized at that time. The day prior to her death she gave her name for membership in the church and received the sacrament. Her last days were occupied in efforts to do good. Always an industrious woman she cut out little pieces of cloth for sofa covers just a few hours before she passed away.

Mrs. De Coign was born of Spanish parents, on shipboard, off the coast of Spain. She was raised in Madrid, and came from that city when 12 years of age to America. Her father and five brothers were seafaring men. Her maiden name is unknown to any one here, though it is known that she was raised in the Catholic faith, and for many years had a strong prejudice against Prostestanism.

Married Women

Every woman covets a shapely, pretty figure, and many of them deplore the loss of their girlish forms after marriage. The bearing of children is often destructive to the mother's shapeliness. All of this can be avoided, however, by the use of Mother's Friend before the baby comes, as this great liniment always prepares the body for the strain upon it, and preserves the symmetry of her form. Mother's Friend overcomes all the danger of child-birth, and carries the expectant mother safely through this critical period without pain. It is women's greatest blessing. Thousands gratefully tell of the benefit and relief derived from the use of this wonderful remedy. Soid by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Our little book, telling all about this liniment, will be sent free.

LEADERS' PATIENCE

They Finally Decide to Apply the "Acid Test."

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 23.—A new York special to the Enquirer says: Is Governor Hughes willing to place his political future in the keeping of the leaders of the Republican party, and is he willing and ready to stand by the organization—the machine, as it is so often called—in return for what its captains say, there is no reason why he should not be the Republican nominee for the presidency. But, they insist, he cannot afford to waste any time. Time is flying. And he must be up and doing in the way of making known to the "right" people his true position. Or is Governor Hughes content to abide his faith in God Almighty, trusting to being a man of destiny, and that a loud cry from the nation will not only bring to him the nomination, but also land him in the presidential chair in an overwhelming sort of way? That Governor Hughes has both his sharp, piercing eyes bent on the White House is a fact known not only to his intimates, but also it is equally well known to those who do not share his fullest confidence. Up to close to the present time he was content to float along with the tide, trusting to "luck," which has been with him pretty much, ignoring the politician, and, what was worse, from a political point of view, putting the bars upon him.

He Knows the Game.

Regarding this latter course, it may have been an honest desire upon the part of the governor to eliminate the politicians. He certainly cut out the politician so far as the statehouse at Albany enters into his daily life, even going so far as to tear out a private telephone in his private office in the governor's quarters. That telephone had done duty with many another chief executive of the state as a means for him getting the ear of a henchman or as a ready means of a state leader getting in contact with the statehouse. Or Governor Hughes, in shunning the politician, may have been playing to the galleries. He is no spring chicken in politics. He has long known the game, and he is considered a far-seeing and good politician. For that reason it is the opinion of those who know him well that he is trying tactics that, while they are not new, are not indulged in these days, when results alone counts in politics.

During the past several weeks leading Republicans from all parts of the country have been dropping into Gotham. They did not blaze their mission on the outer walls. In fact, they have had but little to say of politics for public consumption. Yet their errand in almost every instance was to find out something about "this man Hughes." None of the New York State leaders have been in a position to speak for Hughes; that is, no one would take it upon himself to guarantee just what might be expected of the governor should he succeed in breaking into the White House. He had been sounded and "felt out," it was explained, but all to no avail. Not even by intimation would he drop a hint as to what might be expected of him in case he reached the presidential chair.

The Acid Test.

Finally it has been determined to apply to the governor the "acid test." This test is a most radical method of finding out just where a political aspirant stands. It was applied on one occasion to the late Gen. Benjamin Harrison. That was when he was flirting with the presidential nomination. Gen. Harrison was conducting himself about as Governor Hughes has been running the presidential campaign. The Indianian was dodging the politician, and although he was doing a "holier than thou" stunt. Attempts had been made by the score to ascertain what his true feelings toward the organization were, and how he would act if elected president, in case the organization backed him up, and landed the nomination for him.

They looked upon Harrison then just as they look upon Hughes today—as most available timber. But what they wanted to know was whether, if the organization gave him its support, he would recognize the fact that it was to the machine he owed his nomination, and would stand by it in the event of election, and not go straying off after strange gods. After all other schemes at sounding Harrison had failed, it was determined to apply the acid test to him. One day a man of national political reputation, who had been a life-long friend of Harrison, called upon the general at his home in Indianapolis. He was accompanied by a mutual friend, who had come on from Washington.

It was a Sunday afternoon, and Harrison was found surrounded by a party of local and state politicians of about the same caliber that Hughes has been permitting to cut out the running for him in this state. When the two friends were ushered into the library of the general, the one of national political fame whispered to him that they wanted to see him alone.

Gen. Harrison had a decided way of dismissing an audience. He soon had the men who had been with him by the arm, escorting them to the door. When they were out of the room he closed the door.

Came to the Point.

"Is there any chance of our being interrupted, general?" was asked.

"None whatever," replied Gen. Harrison.

"Well, I think we had better lock the door anyway and run no risk," was said. Suiting the action to his words, Harrison's visitor turned the key in the lock. They took chairs and then the chief visitor said:

"Gen. Harrison, I have been your friend all my life, and it has cost me money to be. Along with others I have been trying to find out where you want to stand. No one has succeeded so far in obtaining that information. You want the presidential nomination. I have brought our friend on from Washington, because we both know and can trust him. There is an exceedingly good chance of your getting that nomination, providing I am able to assure my friends throughout the country that you yourself are all right. In case the national organization gives you its support in the convention, and you are elected president, would you attribute your nomination to the organization, and stand by it, or would you give all the credit to God Almighty?"

Gen. Harrison studied but a moment oh so. Then he looked up and said:

"I would stand by the organization, certainly. You may depend upon that."

Soon the word "Harrison is all right" was flitting across country to all parts of the Union to men who then did the leading in national Republican affairs. And Harrison's nomination followed after those leaders had got through in the convention at Chicago, handing out a little salve to the late John Sherman and a few others.

Was Applied to Cleveland.

Such is the acid test. It is what is about to be applied to Governor Hughes. Others have undergone the test, notably Grover Cleveland, when governor of the Empire State, and when he went into training for the presidency under the tutelage of Daniel Manning, who became his secretary of the treasury. It was again applied to Cleveland when he sought a third nomination by William C. Whitney, afterward his secretary of the navy. And there have been others. Just what the outcome with Hughes will be remains to be seen. Already the first application has been made.

Singularly enough, too, that was by the Washingtonian who accompanied the Indianian to see Harrison. This gentleman enjoyed the closest relations with the late Senator Hanna and with President McKinley. He well knows his little book so far as politics of a national character is concerned. Hughes knows this and there is every indication that he needed the advice given him, at least to the extent of partly shifting from the "high horse" he had been riding. The governor was told that the presidential nomination might be his, but that he would have to throw down the bars he had piled up; that he ought to come out from behind his breastworks, meet the public, get acquainted with and mix with it, also with the leaders of his party.

The governor's first move after that talk was a public reception at Albany. The next was a speech-making tour. In his talks he has been intimating that organization is necessary in all things. That is not satisfactory to the organization leaders, however. They are like what like Harrison had to show them. If Hughes does show them there is no question as to what will occur in this state. The New York organization is simply marking time. One of the most important leaders in the state said the other day in a group when it was remarked that there appeared to be considerable Taft sentiment hereabouts:

The Case of Gen. Bragg.

"You remember Gen. Bragg, don't you? He, who in placing Cleveland in nomination, and referring to his opponents in Tammany, said: 'We love him for the enemies he has made,' and some one in the gallery—an old soldier—remarked, 'A little more grape, Capt. Bragg.' Well, every one supposed Bragg was moved by purely disinterested motives, and the welfare of his party. That's what he got credit for. But it so happens that Bragg could see beyond his nose—could see the big thing as well as the little thing. Some time before a friend was praising another candidate and wondered why the general was not for the man of his choice. Bragg said to him, 'You are like many others. You can see the fly on the barn, but you can not see the barn itself.' Bragg could, and he knew that the Democratic organization was going into the convention to nominate the man of its choice, Cleveland. He got aboard."

There will be a little flub-dubbing during the coming week by what is known as the Hughes league. They are, with perhaps less than a half dozen exceptions, school girl politicians. Scarcely any of them have ever yet risen to the dignity of having been a delegate to even a ward convention, much less a city, county, state or national convention.

If Hughes hastens to satisfy the national leaders that he will recognize the machine and stand by it, there is bound to be something doing. Not that they are so much in love with him. They are opposed to Roosevelt and his machine-made candidate. They simply see in Governor Hughes the pole long enough to pull down the persimmons. Roosevelt, by rough-riding tactics all over the country and particularly in New York state, and flagrant use of federal patronage, is playing into their hands like the merest tyro in politics. His has not been the course of the "born politician" he has always been credited with being.

LA GRIPPE

SOME INTERESTING INFORMATION REGARDING THE DISEASE

WHAT IS THE GRIP? WHAT IS ITS EFFECT?

These questions are best answered by several eminent medical men in published interviews. The most important points emphasized by the famous doctors are these:

Grip is highly infectious.

Grip stimulates other diseases.

Grip has an extraordinary effect on the mental functions.

Grip picks out the weak points in a person's constitution.

The victims of the grip are adults who perish from pneumonia or bronchitis and the aged who sink from heart exhaustion.

Children while prone to the disease, enjoy comparative immunity from its complications and dangers.

Grip shows a decided tendency to relapses, a feature to which the indirect faculty of the disease is in a great measure due.

An attack of the grip seems to render the individual more liable to contract the disease from future exposure.

The attack comes on with lightninglike speed. A person in apparently perfect health is suddenly overcome by a feeling of discomfort. He feels chilly or shakes with the rigor worthy of an ague. His head aches. There are pains in his eyeballs and other symptoms characteristic of the disease soon follow.

CAN GRIP BE PREVENTED?

Sir William Broadbent, an eminent English physician, relates his experience in preventing the disease as follows: "From the first invasion of influenza (grip) I have found that the best remedy was quinine. I have had opportunities of obtaining extraordinary evidence of its protective power. In a large public school near London, the girls and the mistresses took their morning dose of quinine, but the servants were forgotten. The result was that scarcely a girl or mistress suffered, while the servants were all down with influenza (grip)". As a preventive, take two grains of the bi-sulphate of quinine after breakfast each day.

GREAT PHYSICAL AND MENTAL AGONY

"Before we can sympathize with others, we must have suffered ourselves." No one can realize the suffering attendant upon an attack of the grip, unless he has had the actual experience. There is probably no disease that causes so much physical and mental agony, or which so successfully defies medical aid. All danger from the grip, however, may be avoided by the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy, not one case has ever been reported that has resulted in pneumonia or that has not recovered.

THREAT OF GRIP AND ITS DANGERS

"The increased mortality of the last three weeks from lung affections following attacks of grip, emphasizes more than ever the necessity for nursing an initiatory cold.

The Herald, always anxious concerning the public health, has repeatedly called attention to the dangers of undue exposure during inclement weather, and now reiterates the injunction with still more earnestness in view of present conditions.

Most of the fatal cases of pneumonia at this time of the year are due to the lack of timely treatment of what appears to be a simple attack of bronchial catarrh. The taking of the stitch in time is at the bottom of all questions of prevention of other more serious ones lying in wait for solution.

It is well to take into account in such connection that February and March are generally considered the most fatal months for pneumonia, especially when influenza is prevailing even in mild epidemic form.

Thus far we have escaped a visitation of a virulent form of the latter malady, but there is abundance of time and opportunity for the development of a severe epidemic, with the usual aftermath of alarming mortality.

The effective treatment of an ordinary 'cold is a matter of a day or two against a possible subsequent sickness for weeks.

The indications of a severe attack of influenza are headache, chilliness, general muscular pains, fever, sore throat, cough and systematic lassitude. When these show themselves no time is to be lost and the patient should give up work at once and promptly place himself under proper medical care."—New York Herald.

Bad Attack of the Grip

COMPLETELY KNOCKED OUT

"Some weeks ago during the severe winter weather both my wife and myself contracted severe colds which speedily developed into the worst kind of the grip with all its miserable symptoms," says Mr. J. S. Egleston of Maple Landing, Iowa. "Knees and joints aching, muscles sore, head stopped up, eyes and nose running, with alternate spells of chills and fever. We began using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, aiding the same with a double dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, and by its liberal use soon completely knocked out the grip."

DON'TS

WHEN YOU HAVE THE GRIP

Don't kiss the children.

Don't delay going to bed.

Don't attempt to walk the attack down.

Don't take a cold or even a hot bath.

Don't use any alcoholic stimulants.

Don't eat a heavy meal.

Don't associate with the family.

Don't forget to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Don't let your bowels become constipated.

Do this and the grip is shorn of nearly all of its terrors.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

This well known remedy has been on the market for one-third of a century. Starting from a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until the demand for it often requires shipments in carload lots. It is now on sale at almost every drug store and most country cross road stores in the United States. There is no question as to its merits; in fact, the enormous sale on it has been brought about to a large extent by the personal recommendations of people who have been cured by it. When you use a remedy for a cough or cold and find it far superior to any other that you have ever tried, it is natural that you should tell your friends of your good fortune. It has become the mothers' favorite for coughs, colds and croup, as they found that it can always be depended upon and that it contains no opium or other harmful drugs. During these years in which we have been making, selling and using this preparation we have never known of a single case of a cold resulting in pneumonia when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was used, which leads us to believe that it is a certain preventive of that disease. The fact that it can be depended upon in every case has crowned it with the success it enjoys.

DANGERS FROM GRIP

An attack of grip seldom results fatally, but it is the indirect cause of many deaths. If it does not result in pneumonia, which is frequently the case, it leaves its victim with a cough which lingers on long after every other symptom of the disease has vanished. The system is thus left in a weakened condition and is susceptible to almost every other disease. The grip can be greatly lessened in its severity if Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used, and any tendency toward pneumonia is promptly checked. There is no medicine which has met with greater success in the treatment of this disease. It cures the cough and leaves the system in a natural and healthy condition.

Stubborn Attack of Grip

Cured By Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Colonel Cornelius P. Cole, a well known and much respected citizen of Appanoose county, Iowa, now past seventy years of age, who came to Iowa with his wife over fifty years ago, says, "Myself and wife were both soundly cured of severe and stubborn attacks of grip last winter by using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is a wonderful remedy and we never wish to be without it." The greatest danger of the grip is of it resulting in pneumonia. We have never known this to occur in any case when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was used, and this is certainly a remarkable record, as many millions of bottles have been sold and used since the first epidemic of grip occurred.

HOW TO CURE THE GRIP

Rest, warmth and quiet are the three sovereign remedies for this disease, and the best preventives of its secondary complications. Go to bed and remain in bed until well on the way toward recovery. Two or three days in bed when you first contract the disease is better than two or three weeks later on. Also take a double dose of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to begin with and then the regular dose every hour. If it should nauseate, discontinue it until the nausea subsides and then take it in smaller doses or less frequently. Before going to bed take two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and bathe the feet in water as warm as can be comfortably borne. If the attack is a severe one take suphate of quinine in doses of two grains each, every four hours, for a few days. It will help up the vitality and enable the system to withstand the attack.

Severe Attack of Grip

Cured By One Bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W. Perry, Editor of the Enterprise, Shortsville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. I at times kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say that the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it would or could knock out the grip, simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be of less duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu."

GRIP CURED AS IF BY MAGIC

"In the winter of 1898 and 1899 I was taken down with a severe attack of what is called the grip," says F. L. Hewett, a prominent druggist of Winfield, Ill. "The only medicine I used was two bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It broke up the cold and stopped the coughing like magic, and I have never since been troubled with grip." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy can always be depended upon to break up a severe cold and ward off any threatened attack of pneumonia. It is pleasant to take, too, which makes it the most desirable and one of the most popular preparations in use for these ailments.

A WELL FOUNDED RUMOR

Have you heard the rumor current,
That there is a cure for grip?
One that's harmless, sure and pleasant
Why then suffer from the grip?
Chamberlain's! yes, that's the name,
A remedy of world-wide fame;
Druggists all will say the same,
That 'twill surely cure the grip.

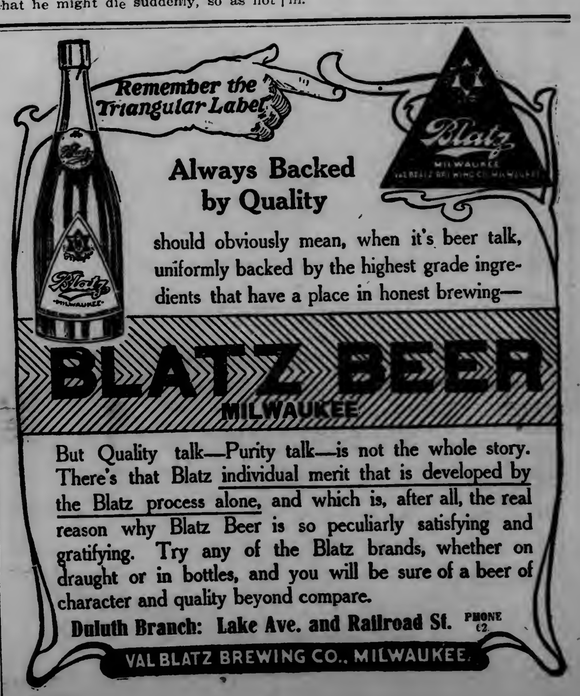

WISH OF PASTOR,

Who Prayed He Might Die Suddenly, Was Fulfilled.

Waterloo, Iowa, Jan. 23.—Praying that he might die suddenly, so as not to be a care to his relatives, Rev. Isaac A. Stoddard, who established Methodism in Eastern Iowa and Southeastern Minnnesota in 1857, had his petition fulfilled last Monday night, at his home at Jessup.

He retired in his usual good health, but not feeling comfortable, arose at 10 o'clock to light the lamp. He dropped dead while returning to bed.

Rev. Mr. Stoddard organized the Greeley's Grove circuit in Eastern Iowa in 1857. The country was sparsely settled, and it required six weeks for him to visit all of the outposts of the circuit on horseback. He had a powerful physique, and was an eloquent speaker. He was 88 years old at the time of his death, and had never been ill.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 23. — (Special to The Herald.)—Niel McInnis, B. O. A forfeiture for the breaking of the compact will no doubt be agreed upon, and as the mining companies look very favorably upon such an agreement the probabilities are that the brewing companies which violate the compact will be prohibited from delivering goods on the property of the mining companies.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Quite a scare was caused Tuesday when thirteen sticks of dynamite were found near the old jail.

It is believed that the dynamite must have been left by some homesteader, as the sticks would have easily been seen by the passerby.

LOOKING FOR ARRESTS.

Detectives Hope to Have Dynamite Fiends Behind Bars.

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Hrald.)—The detectives working on the dynamite case of last Monday, when the explosive was set off under the house of Capt. Thomas J. Nicholas of the Aurora mine, and the captain and his family had a narrow escape from being blown into eternity as they slept, are hopeful of making arrests soon. They are obviously not talking for publication, but they seem to be on one or two clues that may develop something very tangible. The Italians in this section are very indignant over the outrage, for Capt. Nicholas has always been a popular official among them, and they are holding meetings in various range towns in the endeavor to ascertain whether members of their race had anything to do with the affair. The detectives look for some of the parties implicated to give the matter away some time while under the influence of liquor, and as a result the sleuths are keeping tab on all places where drinking is going on.

PREPARE AGAINST FIRE.

Hibbing City Council Has Fixed City Fire Zone.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Determined to spare nothing that will prevent the spread of future fires, the city council has laid out a fire zone as follows in the downtown district, and prescribed that buildings erected therein in the future must be protected by fire walls and fire-proofing: From First avenue and North street east to Fourth avenue, south to the railway tracks, west to First avenue and north to the place of beginning.

The council has just purchased, for $1,165, from the Northern Fire Apparatus company, a chemical engine equipped with two 48-gallon tanks, and considered up-to-date in every way. The council has called for bids for an air shaft around the city well, the first step in deepening the city well in order to increase the water supply.

TWO MEN HELD JOBS

Of Fire Chief and Warden Instead of One.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The offices of fire warden and chief of the fire department have been held by two men instead of one as erroneously stated. Some of the aldermen thought that the head of the fire department should also be fire warden, but this is contrary to the city charter and the matter stands as heretofore.

The Pure Food Law.

Secretary Wilson says: "One of the objects of the law is to inform the consumer of the presence of certain harmful drugs in medicines." The law requires that the amount of chloroform, opium, morphine, and other habit forming drugs be stated on the label of each bottle. The manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy have always claimed that their remedy did not contain any of these drugs, and the truth of this claim is now fully proven, as no mention of them is on the label. This remedy is not only one of the safest, but one of the best in use for coughs and colds. Its value has been proven beyond question during the many years it has been in general use. For sale by all druggists.

Budget Will Never Pass.

Their failure now insures the cabinet remaining in power and the probable passage of the budget.

The opposition speakers in the debate blamed the government for lack of foresight while the Constitutionalists held that the government was unable to predict any extraordinary conditions.

Marquis Saionji, the premier, repeated in the house the speech he had already made before the peers.

The motion of censure referred to in the dispatch from Tokio was prepared and presented by the Progressive and Yuko parties. It declares a lack of confidence in the cabinet, based on the alleged faulty financial measures. When it became known that the motion was to be debated today the Constitutionalists began efforts to hasten the arrival at Tokio of many of their adherents who had been delayed. It was hardly expected that the motion would be carried.

People Who Talk of High Prices

Are not the ones who have been picking the plums at the French & Bassett discount sale. We have seen cut prices, but none that equal the values you get at French & Bassett's.

They don't pick out a few old shop-worn pieces, either. They put the finest in nthe house an at big discounts. No wonder the sale is such a success. The best of it is you don't need to have spot ash to get the discounts. You can pay for the goods as you can afford.

HOTEL MANAGER SUED

By Former Guest Who Was Robbed of Jewelry.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—William D. Boyce filed suit in the municipal court yesterday against George W. Reynolds, proprietor and manager of the Virginia hotel, for $5,500. The claim is based on alleged neglect of Reynolds to give his guest proper protection from loss by theft, in that he had in his employ a chambermaid who entered the rooms occupied by Mr. Boyce and his family and stole $5,000 worth of diamonds.

The robbery was committed Nov. 22, 1907.

GNAWS OFF FORE PAW

Wolf Adopts Desperate Measures to Free Itself From Trap.

Hind Feet Caught While It Was Gnawing Front Leg.

Andrew Nelson, a farmer residing in the town of White, St. Louis county, has had one of the most peculiar experiences of the winter in his efforts to kill wolves for the bounty of $15 paid by the state and county.

Mr. Nelson presented at the county auditor's office yesterday afternoon, the pelt of a big timber wolf, from which one of the fore legs was missing, and his story of the capture shows the desperate means that the wolves will take in the effort to release themselves from the traps of the hunters.

According to Mr. Nelson's account of the affair he put out a bait and placed about it four traps, at equal distances from each other.

When he visited the bait the following day he found a wolf caught by the hind foot in one of the traps. The animal had three good legs and the stub of a fourth, and Mr. Nelson was surprised to find the missing member in another of the traps.

The indications were that the wolf in prowling about the bait was caught by a fore-paw in one of the traps. While gnawing off that member to free himself from the clasp of the iron jaws, he threshed around against the second trap and was caught by the hind foot.

When Mr. Nelson found the animal it was snarling from rage and pain and showed signs of fight, but was very quickly put out of its misery with a few blows over the head.

Mr. Nelson is convinced that he has the right method of setting out his traps, although he hardly hopes to catch another under exactly the same circumstances.

ALIENISTS TESTIFYING

Drs. Wagner and Evans in the Tombs following the homicide. Mr. Jerome held that these statements came under the head of self-serving declarations. Justice Dowling finally held that the statements were admissible as the basis for the expert opinion formed by the alienist.

Dr. Wagner Testifies.

Dr. Wagner repeated at great length what Thaw had said. The prisoner told of his efforts to have Stanford White punished by appealing to Anthony Comstock and District Attorney Jerome. He said he had not intended attacking White; that Providence took the matter in hand and ended it in his own way. Thaw also said he had been followed by a gang of thugs whom White had employed to engage him in a street quarrel and kick him to death.

"Mr. Thaw gave me a history of his life," continued the witness. "He said he never got along very well at school and once thought of being a painter. In traveling abroad he had met some pretty fast people, but had never been a dissipated man or much in the company of women. He said he rarely or never drank whisky alone. He always wanted to talk of the wrongs he said Stanford White had done, and he referred to those whom he termed 'other rich criminals engaged in the same practices.' His manner of speech was very rapid and at times incoherent."

On one of his visits to Thaw, Dr. Warner said the defendant was very solicitous about draughts in the prison and had put a newspaper over the gratings in the cell door. Thaw said there were people who hoped he would catch cold and die so the case would never come to trial and Stanford White's acts never would be known.

Largely Repetition.

The physician-witness then went at length into the details of the physical examination of the defendant a to tests of the reflexes, cranial nerves, etc. The testimony was a repetition of that given at the first trial. Thaw's manner under examination was domineering, according to Dr. Wagner, who declared that the manner of a patient under examination had more to do with forming an opinion than the examination itself. Thaw passed a good physical test, his reflexes being normal. His pulse, however, varied in a remarkable way, running in the space of a minute from 78 to 102 beats and then back again.

"Thaw said it was the Monk East end gang that had been employed to follow him," the witness went on, "and he said the reason Mr. Jerome had not acted on his complaints about White was that the district attorney thought it the result of jealousy. Thaw said he met White in 1900, and had been invited to one of his parties in the Madison Square tower. He later saw White in a theater with a handsome girl and was told he was Miss Nesbit and 'belonged to Stanford White.' Thaw said he did not see how such a girl could care for White, who 'had reddish hair and looked like an ape.'"

The testimony as to Thaw's acquaintance with White was new to the case.

"Thaw also told me that Miss Nesbit, afterwards his wife, would be thrown into a high state of nervousness whenever she saw White. She would shrink and shrivel up, he declared, until he feared for her health."

Thaw's Mother Testifies.

Mrs. William Thaw, still unable to walk unassisted because of her recent illness, was on the stand for a short time yesterday afternoon. She told of Thaw's early life, of influences before his birth, and of the mental unsoundness of two of her brothers. She was not cross-examined. Mr. Jerome contented himself with reading to the jurors the affidavit made by the elder Mrs. Thaw last year when the question of her son's sanity was before a lunacy commission. In that affidavit she declared that in the direct line of descent there had been no insanity in Harry Thaw's family for four generations.

As to the collateral cases, Mrs. Thaw said in the affidavit there were but two and they were easily accounted for. In her statement to the commission, Mrs. Thaw also resented the insinuations which she said she had been compelled to suffer because of the newspaper reports of insanity in the family and she asserted that there were no family secrets to hide and there was no skeleton to be bared.

As Mrs. Thaw was leaving the criminal court building after finishing her testimony she was served with papers in the suit brought by Dr. Allan MacLane Hamilton for $9,000 for professional services. Dr. Hamilton received $1,000 after he had been employed and dismissed by the first firm of lawyers, employed in behalf of Thaw. Mrs. Thaw accepted the papers without a word.

LOYALTY OF THE ITALIANS

To Their Own People is Shown by Two Incidents.

During the last week two incidents have shown the generosity of the Italian residents of Duluth, and have proved that they will allow no member of their race to either go to the poorhouse or die a county charge.

Yesterday the members of the Italian colony in Duluth raised the money to give John Schinochi a fitting burial. Schinochi was known to many people in Duluth as "Johnny O." He was killed in the explosion of dynamite on London road last week. His funeral was held yesterday. A band, headed the funeral procession, and friends of the dead man will at least be able to feel that he did not die a county charge.

The other instance was the case of Mrs. Josephine Gallo, an aged Italian woman, who came here to live with her son-in-law. Her daughter died and the man married a second time. The woman was left without a home, and it seemed likely that she would be sent to the poorhouse, which she dreaded.

Friends among the Italian people came to her assistance, and steps are being taken to compel the son-in-law to support her, as it is claimed he declared he would be responsible for her support when she came to this country.

DEFENSE IS NOVEL ONE.

Startling Deposition in Breach of Promise Suit is Filed.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Adrian C. Honore, a brother of Mrs. Potter Palmer, and a member of Chicago's most exclusive clubs, has announced a novel defense to the breach of promise suit for $20,000 brought against him by Miss Virginia Rowden. Through depositions filed in his behalf in the superior court, Mr. Honore answers the allegations that he toyed with the affections of Miss Rowden and then refused to keep his promise to marry her by the proposition that a woman who is an ardent follower of a "free love" cult and who has a penchant for affinities, would not permit herself to be tied down by the bonds of a conventional married life.

EARTH TREMORS

In New Jersey Cause Damage to Mine Passages.

New York, Jan. 23.—Earthquake shocks which have caused the shutting down of the Glendon mines, owned by the Wharton Steel company, at Hibernia, N. J., are believed to indicate that the entire mountain range in which the mines are situated, extending through Morris county from northwest to southeast, is undergoing a settling process. The shocks have caused the cracking of rock formations in the mine and caused the blocking of the tunnel leading to the workings, forcing the stoppage of operations. The shocks, it is said, have been felt at intervals for almost twenty years, but it is only recently that they have caused damage.

THE OLD JAY GOULD RESIDENCE LEASED.

New York, Jan. 23.—The old Jay Gould residence, corner Forty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, has been leased and the four-story brown stone house will be altered to accommodate places of business. For years the building has stood vacant and Miss Helen Gould has finally been induced to lease for a long term of years the building which was for so long her father's home.

UNDERTONE IS WEAKER

Bearish News From Argentina Causes Uneasiness in Wheat.

Flax is Up at the Close in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 23.—Bearish news from Argentine caused considerable selling of wheat today and the closing prices were a little lower in all of the American markets, except Duluth and Winnipeg, which held firm.

Argentine shipments this week are estimated at 2,800,000 bus. Shipments of corn are estimated at 600,000 bus.

The trading was rather quiet during the session. In Duluth, the tone was firm during most of the day, striking a lower level only toward the close.

Liverpool cables were strong. Liverpool closed ¾d to ⅞d higher, Budapest ½c higher and Berlin ⅝c lower.

The May option closed unchanged in Duluth and Winnipeg, ⅛-¼c lower in Chicago and ⅛c lower in Minneapolis and New York. The July option closed ⅛c higher in Duluth, ⅜c lower in Chicago, ⅛c lower in Minneapolis and New York and ⅛c higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ⅜-½c higher in Chicago and ⅜d higher in Liverpool. May oats closed ⅝c lower in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"There was a quiet tone to the speculative wheat market at the start, and values were unchanged. At this time offerings were light and traders more inclined to hold, stimulated by the late steadiness in Amerlea yesterday. Following the opening and during the early morning easiness developed and prices sold off 3d to ½d on the good inquiry for La Plata wheat and the easiness in the spot markets. Toward midday, nowever, support developed on the further decrease of 1 per cent in the bank rate here, talk of small Argentine shipments this week, which caused less selling pressure, and prices recovered the decline. Values at this time were ½d to 8d higher than Wednesday.

"Corn was quiet and 3d higher at the start. There was fairly good support early, due to the better American cables and a better inquiry for parcels. During most of the trading, however, the market was extremely dull and held unchanged at the early advance."

Primary receipts of wheat were 556,000 bushels; last year, 234,000 bushels. Shipments, 241,000 bushles; last year, 172,000 bushels. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 257,000 bushels.

Primary receipts of corn were 956,000 bushels; last year, 453,000 bushels. Shipments, 665,000 bushels; last year, 335,000 bushels. Clearances of corn were 240,684 bushels.

Wheat was rather quiet during the session in Duluth. May wheat opened ⅛c higher at $1.10⅛, advanced to $1.11⅛, declined to $1.10⅝, rallied to $1.11, went off to $1.10⅜ and closed at $1.10⅝, unchanged from yesterday. July wheat was inactive and closed ⅛c higher than yesterday at $1.01⅛.

Durum wheat closed ¼c higher and cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was stronger, although trading was light. May flax opened unchanged at $1.30 bid, advanced to $1.30¾ and closed at $1.30⅝, a gain of ⅝c over yesterday. July flax closed at $1.28¾, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday.

Coarse grains were unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Strong With Fairly Active Trade by Cash Houses.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—The wheat market today opened strong, and with a fairly active trade. Cash houses were good buyers and cables were firm. May opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 102⅜ to 102⅝, and sold at 102⅝. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 340 cars, against 363 cars last week, and 176 cars one year ago.

Lack of offerings held the market steady for the greater part of the day. May selling up to $1.03⅝. Later realizing sales caused a reaction, and May dropped to $1.02¾. The close was weak, with May off a shade at $1.02⅛.

The corn market was inclined to weakness because of the cold wave throughout the northwest, which is considered favorable for the curing of the crop. The strength of the wheat market in a slight degree offset the effect of the cold weather. May opened ¼@⅜c to ½@⅝c lower at 60⅝c to 61¼@⅝c. Local receipts were 419 cars with none of contract grade.

The market held steady until just before the close, when prices broke in sympathy with wheat. The close was easy, with May ⅜@½c lower at 61c.

The oats market was exceedingly quiet, and prices were steady. May opened ⅛c lower at 54c and sold at 54⅛c, after touching 53⅞c. Local receipts were 206 cars.

The provisions market was easy because of lower prices for live hogs. May pork opened a shade higher to 5c@7½c lower, at $12.92½ to $13.00. Lard was 2½ to 5c lower at $7.82½ to $7.85. Ribs were 2½ to 5c lower, at $6.87½ to $6.90.

Close: Wheat, May, $1.02⅛; July, 93¼c; September, 85¼c. Corn, May, 61c; July, 59½c; September, 59¼c. Oats, May, old, 53¾c; May, 53¼c; July, old, 46⅝c; July, 45c; September, 30¼c. THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Minneapolis, Jan. 23.—Wheat was erratic in a range of about a cent, and seemed to have no definite trend. May sold up to $1.10½ on better cash demand, Hessian fly and cold weather in the winter wheat belt and the report of sales for export at Duluth. Later it was down to $1.09½@1.09⅝ and the close was at $1.09⅝ for May, July at $1.00⅞@1.10.

Cash wheat firm at May price for No. 1 northern and 2c under for No. 2. Millers bought. No. 1 northern closed at $1.09⅝@1.09⅞; No. 2 northern, $1.07⅝@1.07⅞; No. 3, $1.05⅜@1.04⅜. Wheat to arrive sold at the outside figures quoted above.

Flour was in better demand. More mills are now running and 18 are in operation out of 21 here. Shipments, 50,121 barrels. Some export business in patents. First patents, $4.50@5.60; second patents, $5.35@5.50; first clears, $4.30@4.40; second clears, $3.50@3.60.

Barley strong and average fully 2c higher. Good demand for malting barley. Range, 78½@96c. Flax closed $1.18. Bran in bulk, $20@20.25.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: A better feeling developed in the depressing influences of Amalgamated. Copper Range was strong and scarce. The buying of Isle Royale was aggressive, and it will sell higher. Atlantic is scarce and will cross 15 on any excuse. Old Dominion should be bought. I think it is getting ready to move up again.

Boston to Gay & Sturgis: With the exception of Isle Royale, which was remarkably strong and made a new high record, the markets were dull and sagging. The action of foreign banks in reducing discount rates was no stimulant. Easy money is no longer a novelty and has no effect on prices. People's minds are taken up with the bad business outlook and reduced earnings.

An unsatisfactory market for some little time seems likely. Within a few weeks, however, it seems more than probable that a change for the better will occur. In the meantime large credit facilities which will permit of carrying stocks at a profit will prevent any marked decline.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Opened With an Advance, But Soon Lapsed Into Dullness.

Toward Close Receded Sharply Under Selling by Professionals.

New York, Jan. 23.—Opening prices of stocks today showed the sympathetic effect of the strength in the London market caused by the reduction in the official discount rate of the Bank of England. The Harrlman and Hill stocks, St. Paul, Atchison, Reading, New York Central, Amalgamated Copper and American Smelting advanced from a large fraction to a point. The market showed some animation.

Higher opening prices were immediately taken advantage of for selling to realize. Advances were cancelled in short order, the heavy liquidation in American Smelting which sold 3 below yesterday's closing contributing largely to the fall of prices. Green Bay & Western "B" incomes advanced 1¾.

The selling was not pursued aggressively, and it only followed, Reading rising to 1⅜ over last night. Declines were established in New York, Chicago & St. Louis of 2½, Texas & Pacific Land Trust 2, American Sugars, American Steel Foundries preferred, Corn Products preferred and United States Rubber first preferred 1⅝ to 1½ and St. Paul preferred, Louisville & Nashville and Westinghouse Electric, 1. Bonds were steady.

The market became firmer but a great deal duller as prices advanced. The movement generally was unimportant outside of a few stocks, in which most of the business was transacted. Northern Pacific rose 1½.

The improvement went a little further before it ceased altogether and prices fell back slightly. The reaction extended to a point in Northern Pacific and Reading. At the highest Northern Pacific and United States Rubber second preferred were up 2¼ and Amalgamated Copper and American Linseed preferred 1. International Pump preferred closed 3.

The market closed weak. Prices sagged back again in the late dealings. American Smelting fell back to the early low level. Canadian Pacific had risen 1¼. There were declines in American Express of 10, New York Air Brake and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred 3¾, Northwestern and Tennessee Copper 2, Kansas City Southern preferred 1½ and Delaware & Hudson, North American, Railway Steel Spring and American Can preferred 1. Sloss, Sheffield Steel preferred rose 3¼. There was some heavy offering of United States Steel at the last.

Stock Gossip.

New York, Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The Bank of England having reduced its rate to 4 per cent, the market opened higher, but afterwards lapsed into dullness, and toward the close receded sharply under the selling by the professionals, it being rumored that official announcement of the Harriman suit by the government would be made tomorrow. The government's withdrawal of deposits and talk of gold exports in view of the easiness of money may hold the market in check for some time, but we are disposed to think that standard issues should be purchased on breaks.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Jan. 23.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 11@18 points in response to the bullish census report indicating that only 386,000 bales had been ginned for the last period against 435,000 last year. There was general realizing at the advance, however, and after selling at 11.68 for May the market reacted to a point or two under the closing figures of last night in the absence of important support from the bull clique. Later prices were steadied by coving, and fluctuations during the middle of the morning were irregular.

Spot closed quiet, 20 points lower; middling uplands, 11.90; middling gulf, 12.15. Sales, 1,200 bales. Futures closed steady. Closing bids: January, 11.09; February, 11.08; March, 11.20; April, 11.25; May, 11.29; June, 11.25; July, 11.15; August, 10.88; October, 10.30.

Court Denies Motion.

The Land company claims that the amount allowed was insufficient to cover the value of the land secured under the proceedings.

DEER RIVER HAS VERY BAD FIRE

Baker's Store, Postoffice and Other Concerns Heavily Damaged.

Deer River, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—A disastrous fire raged for about three hours here today and when the flames were finally subdued several establishments had suffered heavy loss, the total damage being estimated at $60,000.

The fire started about 8 o'clock in the department store of Baker & Co., presumably from an overheated stove pipe. The fire gained rapid headway regardless of the efforts of those working with the appliances at hand to fight fire. The heavy losers are: Baker & Co., the Itasca Clothing company, W. J. Phiper, millinery, the Itasca News, the post office and Eli Loiser's saloon, across the street from the Baker store. All were insured with the exception of the Itasca News owned by Postmaster M. J. Taylor.

NO ADVANCE IN COAL PRICES

Worrell Clarkson, president of the Clarkson coal and dock company of St. Paul, who is in Duluth on business today, says that the price of coal has reached the high price level and predicts that there will be no increase in the present price. Mr. Clarkson says that the present price of coal will obtain until the first of April.

Mr. Clarkson was asked if the present cold spell would have any effect on the price of coal.

"Not a bit," was his reply. "If they have told you up here that the price would increase with the coming of cold weather, they have been wrong in my opinion. They have plenty of coal in the West, as cars have been plenty; there is no coal famine anywhere and there will be no boost in the price."

Mr. Clarkson said that the protracted warm weather spell gave the people ample opportunity to lay in a supply of coal. He says that this year offers a striking contrast to last year, when some parts of the country were actually without fuel.

"Don't worry about the price advancing, for the top of the market has been reached," are the words in which Mr. Clarkson denies the rumor that the price of coal is going to advance in the near future.

SANDWICH CASE IS EXPENSIVE

Carl Carlson, No. 1 and No. 2, succeeded in convincing Judge Cutting in municipal court his morning that they got the worst of a row at a lunch wagon at the corner of Sutphin street and St. Croix avenue Tuesday night, and Thomas M. Madden and Roy Butcher, who damaged their hands pretty severely in thumping the heads of the Carlson duo, were found guilty of disorderly conduct and drew $15 and costs each, or thirty days. They each paid $21, and the attorneys' fees bring the bill for attempting to collect for a 15-cent sandwich up pretty high.

Carlson No. 1, for whom the police were on the point of ordering the "dead wagon" after Madden had finished with him, appeared in court with a bandage around his head and a scent of iodoform about his person. No. 2 wasn't so badly handled, but he admitted that a few unwelcome things came his way during the few minutes the row lasted. They told their story, Madden and Butcher told their version and the witnesses settled it by testimony that showed that Madden and Butcher had probably used more force than was necessary.

Carlson No. 1, he of the bandaged head, was also found guilty of disorderly conduct, but was let go on suspended sentence, the kick in the head being deemed punishment enough. No. 2 was adjudged blameless of everything and his case dismissed.

M. H. McMahon appeared for Madden and Butcher, and Assistant City Attorney Thomas McKeon conducted the prosecution.

WOODSMAN IS HURT.

Frank Schultz Badly Injured by a Falling Tree.

Deer River, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank Schultz, a woodchopper employed by Dempsey & Daugherty, at their lumber camp near here, sustained serious injury yesterday afternoon. He was felling a tree when it lodged part way down in another tree, and while he was trying to bring it to the ground it came down with a crash, catching the woodsman in such a manner that his thigh was broken in a serious manner. He was taken to a hospital in Grand Rapids today.

DENY THE REPORT.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Dear Sir: We beg leave to call your attention to the article published in the morning paper in regard to the carpenters' union and contractors agreeing upon a compromise, upon the "open shop" question.

We, the officers of Local No. 361 of the Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners of America, wish to emphatically deny the report, and respectfully ask that you deny it in the columns of your paper, as such a thing was never heard of by the Carpenters' union until it appeared in the morning paper.

We respectfully ask that you set our union right in this matter by inserting this communication in your paper. Respectfully yours,

G. W. BURGHE, President.

Ringdal and State Architect Johnson, members of the Minnesota board of control, who have been visiting various eastern cities, looking over jails and penitentiaries, with a view of incorporating any good idea they may find in the proposed new penitentiary at Stillwater, visited the Washington jail yesterday, and left night left for Pittsburg.

FOUR TOWNSHIPS

In Koochiching County to be Opened for Entry This Winter.

Washington, Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Bede was today advised by the general land office that some four townships in Koochiching county will be opened to homestead entry this winter. It appears that original surveys were defective and resurveys have been made and upon the corrected lines which have been run many valuable lands in this country will be thrown open.

Mrs. Bede, wife of Representative Bede, has arrived in Washington to spend the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Bede have an apartment in the Sherman, located at 158 and L streets, northwest.

MARINE CORPS FILLED.

Washington Order May Result in Closing Duluth Office.

In a letter received from Brig.-Gen. G. F. Elliott of the United States marine corps, Washington, D. C., the Duluth marine recruiting office is informed that the complement of the marine corps is reached and that for the time being no more marine recruits will be taken from the local district.

The order may mean that the local office will be closed permanetly. The district controlled by the St. Paul office, which includes Duluth, Fargo and other sub-offices in Minnesota and Wisconsin will most probably be affected by the order.

Very few districts in the country have exceeded this district in the number of men recruited. The activity in securing men has been one of the reasons for the order reecived this morning. Accompanying the order is a recommendation for the work of the local recruiting officials and their zeal in performing the work.

TIRED OF LIVING.

Wisconsin Woman Kills Herself Without Apparent Reason.

Readstown, Wis., Jan. 23.—Without any apparent motive, Mrs. Cassie Bosworth, about 45 years of age, shot and killed herself at her home here. Her son, who is the only other occupant of the house, was away hunting at the time. The hired man was on the front porch and heard the report. He found the woman dead, with a 32-caliber revolver in her hand.

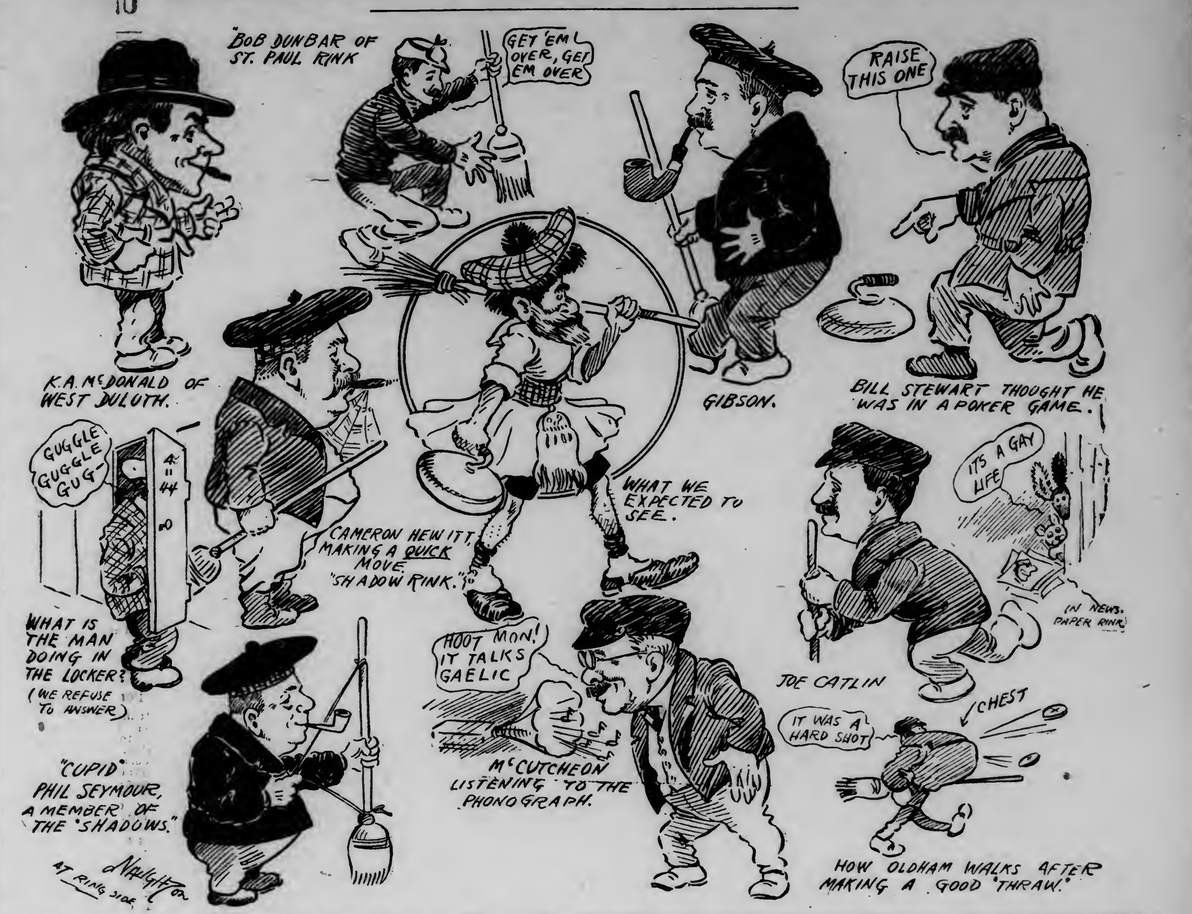

She had gottten restless the night before, and had gotten out of bed and written several letters. She had seemed despondent during the day, and had said to the hired man:

"I wish you would take a shot gun and kill me; I am tired of living."

Mrs. Bosworth's husband has not been living with her for some time, and his present whereabout are unknown. She was a prominent resident.

ZERO WEATHER AND KEEN ICE MAKE IDEAL CONDITIONS FOR BONSPIEL---MORNING GAMES

It was cold enough this morning to suit the most enthusiastic curler that ever donned a Tam O'Shanter, and the ice was in excellent condition.

Some close contests were pulled off during the morning's play, and they were watched with interest by large crowds, which filled the observation rooms.

Interest in the 8 o'clock draw naturally centered in the game between Dunbar and Lemon, and resulted in a victory for Dunbar by the close score of 11 to 10. The prominence of both rinks made the play exciting at all times. Lemon's rink got considerable consolation from the fact that the great Bob's aggregation was only able to worst them by one tally.

Another interesting contest of the morning was that of Frick versus McKenzie. The result was: McKenzie 11, and Frick 9.

Rochon defeated Oldham rather handily, the score being 15 to 4, and Rehlldaffer worsted Helmbaugh to the tune of 25 to 3.

The play in the 8 o'clock draw—originally last night's 11 o'clock draw, but postponed on account of the delay in getting the bonspell under way, resulted as follows:

Duluth event—
Lemon, 10. Dunbar, 11.
Holmbaugh, 8. Rehlldaffer, 26.
Cleveland, 5. Shaver, 9.
Rochon, 15. Oldham, 4.
Hurdon, 19. McGillivary, 2.
Frick, 9. McKenzie, 11.
Smith, Nell, 8. Braden, 13.
Bradley, 9. Reedal, 8.
Brewer, 11. McAuley, 6.
Minneapolis event—
Wall, 12. Duncan, 10.

The results of last evening's play, the game late yesterday afternoon, and the standings in the different events are given on another page of this evening's issue. The above results and the results of the 10:30 draw, should be added to the staindings to bring them up to the minute.

The 10:30 draw, still in progress, follows:
Duluth Curling competition—
Rees vs. McCutcheon.
St. Paul Jobbers' competition—
Stewart vs. Bault.
Minneapolis competition—
MacRae vs. Catterson.

Canadian Soo competition—

FLOURISHES BIG REVOLVER

Adolph Larson had a desire to clean out the U. & I. saloon on Michigan street last night, but was forced to bow to superior numbers for few minutes. A little later he cleared out the place in short order by flourishing a wicked looking gun, but a cop braved the tempest of Adalph's wrath, took the weapon away from him, and he drew $25 or thirty days in court this morning, for carrying it.

Larson blew into the saloon, took a dislike to something that happened and started to rough it, but there were too many against him, and he was forced out into the street. He went to a nearby junk shop, acquired a gun and some cartridges, and returned. As soon as he entered the place, it is said, he pulled the gun and flourished it around. Nobody lost any time about getting out of range. The bartenders quit shoving the suds and left money lying on the bar that they might drop down to get protection. Both doors were taxed for a few minutes by the rush toward the open air and it wasn't long before Larson had the place all to himself.

Officer Dickman finally arrested him and he pleaded guilty this morning to carrying concealed weapons.

Anderson was arrested at his room in the West hotel, and was arraigned in court this morning. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and will be given a hearing this afternoon. Mrs. Anderson and the chilren live at 2112 Piedmont avenue.

Erick Johnson had hatched out a nice little scheme to increase his capital last night, when the police took him and Fred Carlson in on a drunk charge. Johnson had found a pawn ticket, which had been owned by a friend of his. It called for a coat, on which $9 had been loaned. Johnson said that his friend had gone out to a camp, wouldn't redeem the coat, so he proposed to redeem it and sell it again to Carlson at an advance. While they were completing the arrangements for the deal they were arrested. Both pleaded guilty this morning and Johnson drew $10 or ten days. Carlson wanted to go to a camp and was released on suspended sentence.

Ole Lance is a very talkative boy when he gets in police court. He talks forever on the same theme and he's hard to head off when he gets going properly. He had a pretty good line to hand out this morning in explanation of a second offense drunk charge, but he was cut off by Judge Cutting, and given $10 or ten days.

James Dunphy came down from his homestead near Cloquet to appear in a land office case, rejoiced so over a victory that he landed in court and drew a suspended sentence that he might return to his homestead to brood over the sorrows of a trip to Duluth. Three other drunks also came in for leniency from the court and were released.

BACK FROM HOUGHTON

Baseball Magnates Return From Meeting in Copper Country.

Brandon and Fort William May be in New League.

Duluth, Winnipeg, Fargo, Brandon and Fort William, with another town to be selected later, will compose the new Northern league, according to the belief of A. H. Pulford and J. M. Lamb, who have returned from the meeting held in Houghton last night, when the Northern-Copper Country league was finally dissolved.

Both Mr. Lamb and Mr. Pulford say that there was no thought of blacklisting Fargo. The Fargo club owes the league about $200, said Mr. Lamb, over the matter of railroad fare that the Northern teams agreed to pay to the Copper country teams. It is a matter that can be readily adjusted, according to Mr. Lamb, who laughs at the suggestion of Fargo being put on the amen list by the officials of the new league.

Both of the Winnipeg men are disposed to say that Percy Glass, president of the old league, has been using circuitous methods in his dealings with the directors of the league. They say he lost the minutes of the Winnipeg meeting, in which the motion of Mr. Pulford, making the December meeting in this city a continued one, was recorded, and then claimed that the Duluth meeting was merely a circuit committee one. Both men say that Mr. Glass has caused a great deal of time and expense by his devious methods.

There was no misunderstanding over the dissolution of the league. When the Copper country magnates understood that they could have their old franchises, with the protection of their players, they readily consented to withdraw from the league, says Mr. Lamb. The Copper country towns will retire as the Copper league, while the towns of the Northern league will still be the Northern league, having the power to grant franchises to towns they decide to take into the new league.

Mr. Pulford ays that both Brandon and Fort William are baseball crazy, and that if the matter of the boat service to Fort William could be arranged, he would favor putting a team there. Port Arthur would also contribute to the support of the team.

Both men look for a prosperous season the coming year. They believe that the new towns to be decided upon in the near future will prove a much more paying proposition than the old Copper country towns. They are satisfied with the amicable settlement of the final rights of the old organization and believe that the move will prove beneficial to the territories involved in the dissolution of the league.

CONCERT HALL SINGER KILLED IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—Mrs. Catherine Cartwright, a concert hall dancer and singer, was found shot to death in her room at 92 Wells street early today. The police are searching for James McGee in connection with the murder. McGee had been attentive to the woman for some time. Only recently, it is said, he fired shots at another man whom he believed to be a rival for her affections. For this offense he was arrested, but was out on bonds, and the case was on the court calendar for today.

CANADA WAS PREPARED

A. D. McRae Says Dominion Saw Money Stringency Coming.

Commerce and Trade Has Undergone a Gradual Curtailment.

A. D. McRae, of the Davidson-McRae Land company, one of the largest land companies in the Dominion, who is at the Spalding today, says that the general business curtailment that has been going on in England for the past year was reflected in Western Canada, so that the recent money stringency felt with particular acuteness on this side of the line, was in a measure prepared for in Canada.

Business has been undergoing a general curtailment in England and the closeness of the relations of the two countries had led the business men of the Dominion to readjust their business, says Mr. McRae. Though, the tightening of money was felt in Canada more particularly in the western part, there was no sudden business shrinkage as trade and commerce had been undergoing a general and gradual readjustment.

"We needed money in Canada, allright," said Mr. McRae, "for the Canadian banks withdrew over $40,000,000 that was on deposit in New York. Yet business has not suffered greatly, although there has been a recession from the heavy volume of a year ago. We have not had to turn a sharp corner, like some of your big interests, for the gradual curtailment was heralded from England and we could forsee a tightening of money. Money is beginning to get easier across the line and business and trade is showing a corresponding pickup."

The wheat crop was not up to expectations, according to Mr. McRae. About 60,000,000 bushels was produced in the Dominion. An unusual amount of other grains was grown, though, so that the farmers of the Western wheat growing country are not pinched by poverty as yet. Immigration continues unabated and the coming year promises to be a record breaker in the number of settlers received. Land is advancing in value rapidly, because it is being taken up by the great horde of home seekers who are pouring into Canada.

NEW IDEA ADVANCED BY PRESIDENT ELIOT

PRESIDENT ELIOT
Of Harvard University, Who Believes Children Should Be "Sorted Out" and Forced to Learn Trades for Which They Are Fitted.

ELIOT HAS NOVEL IDEA

President of Harvard Would Have Children "Sorted Out"

And Compelled to Learn Trade to Which Best Adapted.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard university, advocated last night in a public address that American boys and girls be "sorted out" by agents of authority, teachers perhaps and forced by law to study trades assigned to them. Dr. Eliot's idea caused a sensation at the banquet of the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education held at the auditorium. Here is what Dr. Eliot said:

"I assert that it is perfectly proper to enact laws which will give the teachers the authority to sort out the boys and girls, assign to each the trade at which he or she seems best adapted, and the law should then compel these children to be trained for these trades.

All Men Are Not Equal.

"This sentiment I see has already impressed some of you as being undemocratic. I think that it is not so. Democracy is based on a theory that all men are equal; all men are not equal and never can be; men of practical mind have long set aside that platitude for what it is worth.

"And as men are not equal so are children less equal. We see how in a single family, with the same heredity, the same environment, the same opportunities, brothers and sisters enter widely divergent strata of society by natural difference.

"Thus I find that nature often conflicts with what idealists regard as democracy's principles, and when nature and democracy clash democracy is the loser."

Dr. Eliot added that what industrial conditions require is more workmen skilled as journeymen, not more able foremen and superintendents.

FINALLY WON WIDOW.

South Dakota Rancher Was Not to be Denied.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 24.—Seventy hours of continuous courtship, combined with a Western spirit of unadulterated perseverance, finally won for Horace B. Duncan, a rich ranchman of Rapid City, S. D., his much-sought-for bride, Mrs. Laura Shaw, whose lament had been that she was "too much married."

The ceremony which united their fortunes was performed by Justice Naglestad, at the Vendome hotel, which had been the scene of most of the ranchman's persistent wooing.

Mrs. Shaw gave him the slip two or three times on the street and in the marriage license office, but she could not resist the steady imploring of her lover, and despite her objections to embarking again on the matrimonial sea, she finally gave in.

After a short wedding tour, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan will be "at home" on his ranch in South Dakota.

ALL ABOUT CACTI.

Government Report Raises Row With Burbank and Others.

San Francisco, Jan. 24.—The publication of a bulletin by the United States department of agriculture, on the subject of cacti, under the title of "The Tuna as Food For Man," has stirred up a hornet's nest for its authors and aroused Luther Burbank to reply.

The government "experts" declare that the spineless cactus cannot be grown on the desert, and is not fit food for man. Luther Burbank and hundreds of loyal supporters say they have eaten many delicious meals composed of the fruit.

MEASLES AT PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, Jan. 24.—Four public schools are about to be closed because of the epidemic of measles. Already this month 1,033 cases of measles have been reported from all parts of the consolidated city. Since the epidemic began, a few weeks ago, there have been 3,033 cases.

BLIZZARD RAGING THROUGHOUT EAST

NEW YORK SUFFERS

Heavy Snow Blocks Streets and Greatly Impedes Traffic.

One Man Frozen to Death and Others Frostbitten.

New York, Jan. 24.—The nowstorm which swept over the city late yesterday, developed into a blizzard during the night. Today the city streets were piled deep in places with drifts and street car traffic and the movement of ferryboats and other harbor and river craft was badly hampered. The steam roads were also seriously delayed. This forenoon more than nine inches of snow had fallen, and there appeared to be no immediate prospect of a cessation.

Coming suddenly on the heels of a long period of unusually warm weather, the storm caught the unemployed, the homeless and the poorer people of the East side totally unprepared. Many who have in the warm weather found shelter in wagons yarded for the night, were driven out, and there was a rush of the homeless to the city lodging houses and charitable institutions to beg shelter. For the first time this winter, the city lodging house was overcrowded and the covered pier of the charities department at the foot of East Twenty-sixth street was turned into an emergency lodging house. Many applications for shelter were received at the various police stations.

Woman Badly Frozen.

While the storm was at its worst, Mrs. Clara Vorveck was found wandering in the streets of Brooklyn clad only in her night clothing. Her feet were frozen when the police found her and gave her shelter. She had been ill with pneumonia.

The work of removing the snow was begun early and many hundreds of men who were in sad need of employment were given work clearing the streets.

The body of a man, about whom nothing is known, except that his name was James Smith, was found under a stoop in East Twenty-third street. He had crept under the stoop to seek protection from the storm and had frozen to death.

Traffic conditions improved very slowly if at all in the city and its suburbs during the forenoon. In Brooklyn nearly every line of travel was badly blocked and in some cases no attempt whatever was made to move the cars. The long cut on the Brighton Beach line extending the whole length of Prospect Park was completely filled with snow and no trains were running. Traffic also was suspended on the Culver line and the West end line to Coney Island, and the surface cars to that district were moving only about half headway. The Thirty-ninth street ferry line made no attempt to operate today. A forty minute blockade on Brooklyn bridge added much to the discomfort and delay of passengers bound for New York.

Steam Railroads Suffer.

All the steam railroads suffered delays of from ten minutes to an hour or more in the movement of their local trains. On the Long Island railroad is was found impossible to run any electri ctrains on the line from Brooklyn to Jamaica after 6 o'clock.

Marine observers report the storm to be particularly severe off the coast. At Sandy Hook this forenoon a northwest gale was blowing and the swirling snow restricted observation and made navigation extremely hazardous. The big steamer Graf Waldersee, which reached the Hook last night was still at anchor this forenoon, fearing to risk the attempt to enter the harbor under the prevailing weather conditions. During

NORTHEAST SNOW STORM

Wind Blowing 70 Miles an Hour at Brenton's Reef.

Boston, Jan. 24.—Southeastern New England is today experiencing a northeast snowstorm, which began last night. It was the first snow of any amount that has fallen in this section since Dec. 14.

The storm delayed railroad and street car traffic.

New Haven reports a fall of seven inches of snow, and a high northeasterly wind, but no serious interference with traffic. At Newport, R. I., a foot of snow had fallen by 10 o'clock, and no sign of cessation. The wind at Brenton's Reef blow 60 to 70 miles an hour.

The Fall River line steamer Providence, which left New York last night for Newport, arrived at New London at 8 a. m. today; here passengers were landed there and proceeded to their destinations by train.

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—In Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware snow, which began falling yesterday afternoon, has reached a depth of six inches, and the prospects are that the storm will continue through the day. A high wind prevails, and the snow is badly drifted. The storm is worst in New Jersey, where railroad traffic is badly crippled.

GIRL MAY GET HOMESTEAD.

Favorable Report Made in Senate on North Dakota Entry.

Washington, Jan. 24.—A favorable report has been made in the senate on the bill to conform a homestead entry for a tract of land near Buford, N. D., made in behalf of Dorothea Clendening, Miss Clendening is a daughter of the late Maj. Clendening, who was a surgeon in the regular army, and a granddaughter of Col. Lounsberry of Fargo. The latter made the entry as her guardian, but it was rejected by the general land office and the only way she can get the land is by congressional action.

TELEPHONE SAVES LIFE.

Mazeppa, Minn., Jan. 24.—Mrs. William Befort, Sr., of this place, took a dose of liniment containing aconite and belladonna, instead of cough medicine, as she supposed. The prompt use of the telephone brought aid and her life was saved.

MAN STEALS A KISS AND ALSO A GIRL'S WATCH

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attempting to kiss and then rob the girl whom he had volunteered to escort home from a dance is the charge on which Charles Smith was placed under arrest yesterday. The girl who makes the complaint is Miss Barbara Thomas, who is employed at the home T. R. Kane.

According to the story told by Miss Thomas, she was at a dance given by the Catholic Order of Foresters on the night of Jan. 4 at Central hall. During the evening one of her dancing partners was Mr. Smith, and she was so much pleased with him that when he offered to escort her home she promptly accepted. They had just reached Mr. Kane's door, when the man caught hold of her and tried to kiss her. She struggled to free herself. Taking advantage of her confusion, he seized the watch with the chain and charm attached. He then darted away.

When Smith was placed under arrest last night Miss Thomas declared at once that she recognized him by his partially bald head. She was taken to the home of Mr. Smith, where Mrs. Smith, his wife, produced a gold watch, which the girl said was the one Smith took. Miss Thomas inquired about the chain and locket, but Mrs. Smith said she knew nothing of them.

BAD CLOQUET FIRE.

Dwelling House and Bakery Destroyed by Early Morning Blaze.

Cloquet, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—By a disastrous fire on Tenth street at 5 o'clock this morning the residence owned by John Olson and occupied by Eric Erickson, and the bakery run by Pete Dubey, were destroyed. Both buildings are a total loss. They were partially insured. The origin of the fire is unknown.

"NOT GUILTY," SAYS DAHL.

Suit for $25,000 Against Doctor is Feature of Iowa Case.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Jan. 24.—Dr. R. K. Dahl, indicted by the grand jury for manslaughter in causing the death of Mrs. Dora Bowen, a popular musician of this city, appeared before Judge Wright in the district court yesterday and entered a plea of not guilty. Now the feature of the case is a suit against Dahl for $25,000 by Dr. Bowen, administrator of the estate of the deceased. The petition alleges that her death was due to malpractice. The case will not be tried at the present term of court.

DISASTROUS WORK OF THE FIRE FIEND

BIG FIRE AT BALTIMORE

Three Men Killed and Sixteen Seriously Injured.

Blaze Worst in History of City Since 1904 Calamity.

Baltimore, Jan. 24.—Fire at an early hour this morning took heavy toll of the members of the fire department of this city, three being dead and sixteen others more or less seriously injured. The list of the latter includes the name of George Horton, chief of the fire department, who is in a serious condition. He has a badly lacerated scalp and internal injuries. The first hasty examination indicated that his skull was fractured, but a more careful investigation showed this not to be the case. The dead:

LIEUT. FREDERICK HARMAN.

WILLIAM B. PUGH.

Unidentified man, thought to be Emil Morris.

The financial damage is estimated by Mayor J. Barry Mahool, who was early on the scene, at $400,000.

Worst Since 1904 Fire.

The blaze, which is the worst that has occurred in this city since the calamity of 1904, started on the third floor of the building, on the southeast corner of Holliday and Saratoga streets, occupied by the J. Regester Sons company, plumbers' supplies. Other occupants of the building were the Baltimore Bell & Brass company and the William L. Hollingsworth company, machinists. Upon these three the heaviest losses fall. The fire had apparently been burning some time before it was discovered. The first alarm was quickly followed by a general alarm, which brought most of the fire apparatus in the city to the scene. A strong wind from the northwest, and a very low temperature, made the work of fighting the fire more than ordinarily difficult, and the flames spread very rapidly. In an incredibly short time the blaze broke out of the windows on the Saratoga street side of the Regester building, and without the slightest warning a large section of the north wall of the building fell. It was this that scattered death and injuries among the firemen, who were working close to the building. The rain of bricks also put out of commission an extension ladder truck, upon which some of the men had been working. Saratoga street at this point narrows sharply. A fraction of a minute before the wall fell a hose burst, sending a number of policemen and reporters scurrying east on Saratoga street. But

CITY HALL DESTROYED

Seven Hundred People Make Their Escape Without Panic.

Portland, Me., Jan. 24.—A fire which caused a property damage of $1,000,000 early today, destroyed the city hall and police building, and endangered the lives of more than 700 persons. Although known as the city hall, the building was divided between city and county offices, while the police building sheltered the supreme, judicial and municipal courts, in addition to the police department.

The fire was the worst in the state since the great Portland conflagration of 1866, when the city's business and residential sections were almost completely wiped out.

That there were no fatalities is remarkable, as there were more than 700 persons attending the Western Maine Knights of Pythias' jubilee, gathered in the auditorium of the city hall when the flames were discovered. Only a few persons were hurt, Chief Engineer Eldridge being the only one known to be seriously injured, and he was able to direct the fight against the flames throughout, being supported by two assistants.

Financial Loss, $1,000,000.

The financial loss is estimated at $1,000,000, but this sum will not cover the loss of the papers and documents in the registry of deeds, where everything was destroyed. Other city departments were swept clear of everything by the flames, with the exception of the city clerk's and the city treasurer's offices. The money and securities in the latter are believed to be intact, although it will be almost impossible to ascertain definitely until the vaults have cooled sufficiently for an examination to be made. One of the most valuable libraries in the state, the Greenleaf law collection, was completely destroyed, with a loss estimated at $10,000.

The blaze originated in the city electrician's office and was caused by crossed wires, and this made it impossible to ring a call for the fire department in any of the boxes.

The fire was discovered by a newspaperman on his way home, who noticed a red glare as of missing wires, in the city electrician's office. He tried to pull an alarm from a nearby box, stationed outside a fire station. The

RUMORS ARE DISTURBING

But There Have Been No New Developments at Portugal.

Lisbon, Jan. 24.—The transmission of the following dispatch wa permitted by the authorities after due censorship:

Lisbon is filled with disturbing rumors today, but there have been no new developments in the abortive attempt of two nights ago to overthrow the monarchy and proclaim Portugal a republic.

The police have visited all the newspaper offices in Lisbon and forbidden the publication of anything concerning the men arrested yesterday and the day before. The prisoners are incarcerated in the fortress of San Julia and are not permitted to communicate with their friends. Senor Machado, Senor Costa, and Antonio Almeido, Republican leaders have not been taken into custody.

ATTORNEY'S COAT BURNS.

Amusing, Yet Expensive Spectacle in Fargo Courtroom.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attorney Edward H. Wright caused quite a commotion in the district court yesterday morning when he thrust a heated pipe into his overcoat pocket and started a fire that ruined the coat and made the court room smell of burned cloth.

Mr. Wright was smoking a pipe when he thrust it in his pocket just as he entered the district court. He hung his coat on the wall and commenced talking to Judge Pollock.

Soon a thick cloud of smoke commenced pouring from his overcoat. Deputy Sheriff Bingham noticed it and extinguished the flames, but too late to save the coat. Hereafter Mr. Wright will be sure his pipe is out before he places it in his pocket.

STARVES FOR 34 DAYS.

Man, Found in Strawstack, Had Stayed There Three Weeks.

Le Mars, Iowa, Jan. 24.—A man who gave his name as Tibert Allen was found in a strawstack on a farm six miles east of town. He was badly frostbitten, and asserted that he had been living there three weeks and had been thirty-four days without food. He was taken to the county poor farm.

MRS. DORA McDONALD, AS SHE NOW LOOKS

MRS. DORA McDONALD,
Who Is on Trial for the Murder of Webster S. Guerin.

THAW CASE ADJOURNED

Until Monday Owing to the Non-Arrival of Witnesses.

Sharp Tilt Occurs Between Attorneys Jerome and Littleton.

New York, Jan. 24.—Today's session of the Thaw trial was abandoned at the request of the defense, and an adjournment was taken until Monday morning. A heavy snowstorm tied up shipping in the bay and prevented the docking of the steamer Adriatic, on which three physicians and a trained nurse are coming from Europe to testify as to irrational outbreaks by Harry Thaw at Monte Carlo, Paris and London. Another witness, Dr. Bingaman, of Pittsburg, who is recovering from an attack of pneumonia, will not be in the city until tomorrow morning.

Mr. Littleton, in his request for adjournment, said he believed the delay would really result in expediting the case, as he would employ the intervening time in preparing the hypothetical question for the experts, and submitting a draft of it to District Attorney Jerome for any suggestions or objections he may have to offer.

Tilt Between Counsel.

There was a lively tilt between counsel just before the adjournment was announced. District Attorney Jerome said he would not oppose the motion for adjournment, provided Mr. Littleton would furnish the names of the witnesses who are arriving on the Adriatic.

Mr. Littleton objected, but Justice Dowling said the district attorney's request was a reasonable one. Mr. Littleton said it had been his experience

PASSENGERS WERE SAVED

Boat From Steamer Amsterdam Picked Up by Songa.

Hook of Holland, Jan. 24.—All the missing passengers and crew from the steamer Amsterdam were brought in here safely at noon today.

The steamer Amsterdam belongs to the Great Eastern Railway company. She sailed from Harwich for Rotterdam, Jan. 21, with fifty-six passengers on board. That same night she collided with the British steamer Axminister, near Nieue Waterweg, and sustained serious damage. Her crew and passengers left her in small boats, and all the boats, excepting one, were speedily picked up.

The passengers on the missing boat numbered twenty-one, and the crew, seven. They were picked up by the Norwegian steamer Songa, one hour after they left the Amsterdam in a small boat. Consequently, they suffered no hardship. The Songa was bound for Norwich for Rotterdam. The heavy fog which has prevailed prevented the Songa from landing, and made impossible an effective search for the missing people. They were on board the Songa for two days and a half. When the fog partly cleared up this morning, a lifeboat from Hook of Holland, found the Songa, took the party on board and brought them in here.

HOT SHOT AT PROFESSORS

Harvard Man Says Majority Are Second Class Men.

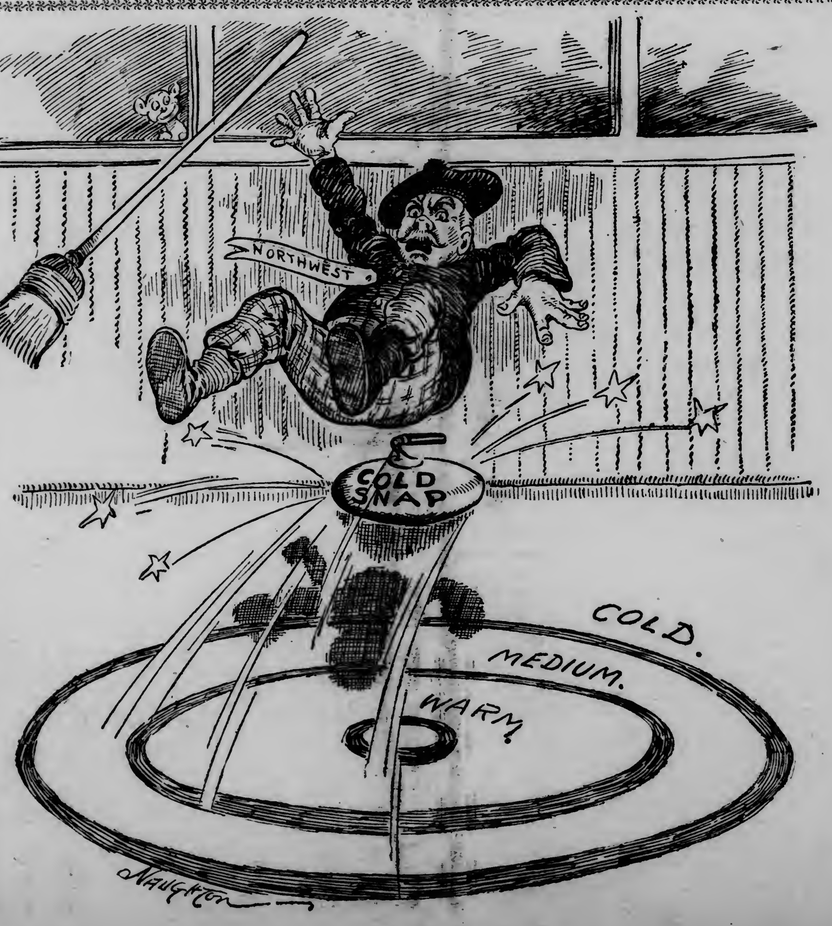

Chicago, Jan 24.—In an address to the Germanistic society of Chicago last night Prof. Hugo Muensterberg of Harvard university declared that American universities would be better off if two-thirds of the professors were killed. He said:

"There seems to be something weak and mollycoddling about our whole academic system. In our highest institutions of learning we find, with a few notable exceptions, only second class men. And we may be sure that second class school masters never will build up first class scholarship. An increase in the salaries of the assistant professors and instructors in our colleges and universities by a few hundred dollars a year will never accomplish anything. What is needed is great premiums at the top.

"One of the greatest evils from which our American universities suffer is too great an abundance of men. As soon as an institution gets some money the first thought is to add more men to the faculty, to outdo some neighbor institution. Everyone of our American universities would be nearer to the ideal if it would kill two-thrids of its instructors and professors."

Watered Stock-

But Not the Good-for-Nothing Kind You've Been Reading Of.

PIPE BURSTS; STORE FLOODED.

J. M. Gidding & Company's Annex Gets a Soaking.

The bursting of a water pipe over the children's and misses' annex at the J. M. Gidding & Co.'s establishment yesterday morning caused considerable damage in that section of the store.

The pipe which broke and caused all the trouble was located directly over the stock of young people's clothes. Water came down like rain, soaking the stock and making the floor look like a duck pond.

Clerks were rushing about in the wet, toting damp garments, in an effort to get them out of the way of the drops. Members of the firm were unable to give an adequate estimate of the loss caused by the miniature flood.

Will Be on Sale Tomorrow Morning at 8:30.

The clipping from last week's Herald, herein inserted, tells the story. The water pipes on the floor above us, bursted, letting the water down in torrents. Much of our Annex stock, consisting of Misses', Girls' and Children's Wearables, was damaged. Some of it was drenched, while other pieces were only touched with a drop here or there. The water was perfectly clean, and a good percentage of the articles are unharmed for practical wear. But they're no good to us, and we don't want a vestige of them left. Therefore, they go at the most insignificant prices.

TURN VAGS OUT INTO THE COLD

Bowery Loafers Ordered to Put Duluth Behind Them.

Providing the judges of the municipal court continue the pace they have set the past few days and succeed in convincing the worthless specimens of humanity brought before them that it is better to leave the city than to spend a term in jail, the rattle of hammers on the rock pile on the hill will soon be strangely silent and the Bowery will be a district of idle barkeeps and still more idle cops. Of the grist this morning, only three small fines stuck and they were paid. Everybody else was turned out into the bleak, cold world, to shake the snow of Duluth from their shabby shoes and hit it for some more congenial clime.

Fred Olson's home is on the Bowery. Ever broke, he manages some way to scare up a bed each night and spear enough grub from the free lunch counters durings the day to keep him alive. Time and again, the police have shooed him away from his favorite haunts, but the lure of the Bowery life ever draws him back and at last, he was haled into court on a vagrancy charge. He pleaded guilty, with visions of many peaceful days within the sheltering walls of the county jail, but Judge Windom turned him loose with a ten day sentence hanging over him and an injunction to get out of town immediately.

Billy Higgs was also back. He just hates to get away from Duluth, though the police are none too anxius to have him stay. He has a reputation as a prowler and thief and every minute he is in the city, an officer must keep in touch with him to see that he doesn't roll some unfortunate, who has too much booze and money. He pleaded guilty to a vagrancy charge and was given $10 or ten days. He was given until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning to do the disappearance act and promised to do so.

Frank Windreau was a fierce looking specimen. The prematurely gray hair told of much carousing and many nights in the gutter. The torn, shabby clothes and shifty eyes were indications of a disinclination to do hard work and his growth of gray beard and entire appearance weren't such as to impress one. He pleaded guilty to a vagrancy charge, thought the county jail might be a pretty good place to spend a few days, said he worked once in a while, and was told to get out of town in three days.

Axel Milgreen and John Conley were just drunk and both wanted to get away as soon as they could. They were told to get away today. Three other fines of $1 and costs stuck and were paid.

"They don't give a fellow a chance to get away," said James Kelly as he entered the police station with Officer Mason about 11 o'clock. Kelly had been turned loose at the morning court session, with the understanding that he was to put the limits of the city behind him in short order. When arrested, he was without a hat, and he succeeded in raising one somewhere after leaving the police station. While wandering down the street, Officer Mason came upon him, and it is said he was trying to make a touch. He was taken in again and reviled the fate that brought him back so soon.

TICKETS GOING FOR POLICE BALL

Tickets are going rapidly for the big ball of the Duluth Police Relief association at the Armory Monday evening, Feb. 3, and from the present indications the big dance floor will be crowded with merrymakers on the night of the event, and the treasury of the association will receive a substantial sum.

The annual ball is the principal means of revenue for the fund and the officers make special efforts to make the affair a success in every way. Every officer on the force is busy disposing of tickets and the public is responding generously for the cause.

The committees in charge of the arrangements are looking to the social side of the big affair and they are to spare nothing. The hall will be tastefully decorated, the music will be good and everybody will be encouraged to enjoy himself to the utmost. Following are the committees:

Arrangements—Sergt. E. Wilcox, Officer Robert Smollett, Officer Michael Mason.

Decorations—Officers F. E. Rothie, R. F. Bartlett, P. J. Dickman, Louis Johnson, J. O. Westerlund, Adolph Peters.

Plan Big Social Affair at the Armory February 3.

Tickets are going rapidly for the big ball of the Duluth Police Relief association at the Armory Monday evening, Feb. 3, and from the present indications the big dance floor will be crowded with merrymakers on the night of the event, and the treasury of the association will receive a substantial sum.

The annual ball is the principal means of revenue for the fund and the officers make special efforts to make the affair a success in every way. Every officer on the force is busy disposing of tickets and the public is responding generously for the cause.

The committees in charge of the arrangements are looking to the social side of the big affair and they are to spare nothing. The hall will be tastefully decorated, the music will be good and everybody will be encouraged to enjoy himself to the utmost. Following are the committees:

HAS TWO TRIALS IN TWO DAYS

First Jury Disagreed and "Doc" Bradford is Immediately Retried.

"Doc" Bradford, indicted for grand larceny in the second degree, is undergoing the somewhat unusual experience of facing two different juries in as many days.

The jury that tried Bradford yesterday afternoon were out all night, but could reach no agreement. It is understood that the jurymen were about evenly divided on the proposition of petit larceny and grand larceny, and as neither side would give in, no verdict resulted.

As soon as the first jury was discharged by the court, a second jury was secured, and the state's evidence was pretty well introduced by the noon recess of the court.

Bradford is accused of stealing two coats from a West end clothing store.

STAGE HITS.

Chicago News: "Was the show any good, Pete?" inquired the young man in the pearl-buttoned, blue-striped cardigan jacket of his friend who was finishing his roast beef sandwich. "I was over there last week an' the bill they had was bum. One or two of the stunts wasn't so worse, but they'd got a piece on that was fierce.

"It was one o' these here cowboy pieces. There was a girl that was going to get married to the sheriff and she's waitin' for him to blow in with the license while she figgers what she's a-goin' to wear. She keeps chewin' the rag there until I thought she was goin' to lose her voice, but there wasn't no such luck. And then every once in a while she'd grab at the waist of her skirt and make you think she was going to make a lightning change and do a little song an' dance. But there wasn't no song and dance.

"Instead of that her old man comes in with a gun and makes a few plays like he's going to do some shooting, but that's a bluff. All he wants is to hide from the sheriff and' he fin'ly crawls under the rags the girl had scattered around the floor to make you think she was a-goin' to put some of them on.

"Then Mr. Sheriff comes in and he's a hot pup, too. He acts like a wooden man. But he's got a gun strapped on him as long as your arm an' you think that maybe there will be suthin' doin' after a while. Is there? Not on your life. He's the human phonograph with self-feedin' automatic records an' wound up for a month's run. Even when he finds the old man under the rags there ain't no trouble. He jest holds him up an' goes on talkin'.

"Then the old man turns loose all the conversation that's been a-stickin' in his throat while he's been hid an' the girl's had a good rest an' she join in an' the end of it is that the old man marries the sheriff an' the girl slips the handcuffs on the sheriff for a weddin' ring an' swipes his gun to let the old man make his getaway. There ain't a shot fired nor a high kick, nor nothin'. Fizzles right out. Two guns an' a girl an' nothin' but talk out of it. I called for the hook two or three times an' they com near to throwin' me out."

"The one I seen was pretty good," said Pete. "Three guys in it, there was. Two of them comes into a restaurant and one of 'em falls down a flight o' steps the first thing. Then the other goes to hang up his hat and the hat rack whirls around and fetches him a biff on the side of the head that knocks him endways. Then he gets up an' tries it again an' there's a bomb in the hat rack or suthin' an' it goes off like a giant cracker an' lands the guy on his head.

"But they get set down to a table fin'ly an' the waiter comes in an' takes the hat off the other guy that had fallen down the steps an' pitches it over in a corner an' when it lands it goes off like it was another bomb. An' the first guy pulls the tablecloth off an' tucks it under his chin for a napkin, an' the waiter jerks it out again an' spreads it an' kicks the chair over with the guy in it like it was what he drew wages for an' went on settin' the table.

"Then he hands 'em a bill o' fare upside down an' the first guy stands on his head on the table to read it, stead o' turnin' the bill right side up. Say! he was a funny guy!

"The waiter brings in a bottle o' wine an' the corks flies out, ker-bang! An' the wine comes out like it was the nozzle of a fire hose an' jest about soaks the two guys at the table. It was a peach of a stunt! I don't know how they done that unless there was a hose coupled on to the bottle some way you couldn't see it. Anyway, the two guys fell over an' down comes the table and breaks all the dishes.

"When they get up one of the guys takes the waiter by the legs an' throws him up in the air an' he turns twice and lights on his feet. And them they all three go to turnin' handsprings so fast you can't tell which is which. Gee! that was fine work. It was the best thing I've seen in a year. You want to go an' see it."

"I sure will," said the young man in the cardigan jacket.

LUXURIES ARE OPEN TO ALL.

By grouping together, residents in New York get the comforts and the luxuries that only a millionaire could afford individually, says the Delineator.

In the higher priced apartment district that fronts New York's Central park, the mechanism of the house is adjusted to a nicety to register a resident's slightest wish, and perform it. A superintendent in a velvet carpeted office sits with the attentive telephone at his elbow, fairly listening to your only sigh. His hand on the throttle of all the activities that serve you, keeps them regulated to your finest shade of comfort.

Heat, ventilation, refrigeration and electric light are distributed to each apartment through the walls of the building, that is literally piped for the delivery of commodities. Radiators in colorings to match the wall tints, dispense decoratively the soft warmth from steam pipes that obviate all the hygienic objections to dust-laden furnace heat. Ventilators in the side wall admit fresh air warmed by passing over a radiator surface. The ice-box is filled, not with ice, but with coils of pipe carrying ice cold brine, pumped from the basement refrigerating machine that cools it by the chemical action of ammonia.

BRADEN DEFEATS "BOB" DUNBAR'S RINK IN A GREAT CURLING BATTLE

"Drawing the Lemon" a Common Occurrence With Curlers.

Annual Banquet Will Not be Held This Year.

Three was a battle royal at the curling rink this morning when the Dunbar and Braden rinks came together in the first round of the Canadian Soo competition.

Each rink had one defeat in the games counting for the grand average and there was a big "gallery" of interested spectators on hand to witness the struggle for supremacy between these two famous rinks.

For the first ten ends it was neck and neck, neither rink laying more than one stone on any head. At the tenth end the score stood 5 to 5.

At this juncture the ice became very sticky, and Braden's men adapted themselves better to the new condition than did the Dunbar rink. They ran off three points in the last two ends, winning by a score of 8 to 5.

Drawing the Lemon.

"Getting the Lemon," is quite a popular amusement among the curlers this year. The Lemon rink of Winnipeg is proving one of the hardest propositions in the bonspiel, and is regularly handing defeats to all the crack rinks. Both the Braden and Dunbar rinks have met defeat at the hands of the Lemon quartet, and the curlers are beginning to think there is something in a name after all. The Wall rink was the victim this morning, losing by the score of 8 to 11 in the Canadian Soo event. The rink has lost but one game so far, having been put out of the Duluth event by Bob Dunbar. It is therefore well in the running for the grand average along with Braden and Dunbar, and one or two others.

No Banquet This Year.

The banquet will not be held this year. The two days lost by warm weather has left a very limited amount of time to finish the bonspiel, and if the banquet were held several events would be unfinished b ytomorrow night. The trip to Virginia was considered sufficien: by the curlers, and they agreed to call the banquet off.

The games are increasing in interest with every draw that is played, as all the competitions are well under way and several of them are approaching the final rounds. A glance at the tables on the sporting page of The Herald this evening, will show the progress that has been made. The tables were complete up to the beginning of this morning's play. The games played in the morning draw are not shown in the tables.

The drawings for the Duluth Merchants' and International events were made this morning. They are the last two events on the list, and are not open events like the others. Only the American rinks can tenter in the International event, owing to the victory of the American rinks last evening, and the Duluth Merchants' event is a consolation, only those rinks being eligible which have lost in the first or preliminary rounds of at least two of the three open events.

Following are the results of the morning draw:

GAVE HIS OPINION.

Cassell's Journal: Actions, it is said, speak louder than words. One is reminded of the old say by the story of a French dramatist who, while reading a play to the members of a theatrical company, observed that one of th actors had fallen asleep.

When, after the reading was finished, the company were expressing their opinions of the play, the dramatist insisted on hearing the views of the drowsy actor.

"I have given my opinion," said the player, suppressing a yawn.

"Why, you were asleep," said the indignant author.

"Sir," was the dignified reply "sleep is an opinion."

CASES OF TRACHOMA

Austrians, Applying at Labor Office, Thought to be Affected.

Dreaded Disease Believed to Have Been Brought to Duluth.

Two well developed cases of the dreaded trachoma, a disease of the eyes that has been the cause of the deportation of countless numbers of immigrants to this country, were discovered in two Austrians, who applied for work at a local employment office this morning.

Both men were suffering with disease of the eyes. The man in charge of the office, who says that he has turned laborers away before, whom, he believed, were suffering with the disease, says that to the best of his knowledge both of the applicants were affected with trachoma.

Immigrants have been refused admittance to the United States when affected with this disease. Immigrants coming over the lake routes have also been refused admittance at inland ports for the same cause. It is a disease peculiarly limited to a certain class of immigrants coming from the lower settlements of Europe. The disease is contagious and was discovered among the school children of San Francisco only recently, having been brought from Europe by immigrants.

The two men were Austrians, who were hardly able to speak the English language. Both of the men seemed to be affected with a disease of the eyes, one of them being much worse than the other. The man in charge of the office, who has recently come from the Pacific coast, says that he is certain that one of the men was affected with the disease. He has seen cases of trachoma on the coast and gave it as his certain belief that both of the men presented symptoms that would bear investigation.

The men applied for common work and would have been given employment were it not for the suspicions of the man in charge of the office. Trachoma is a disease that has been especially watched by the immigration officials of the United States ports, but despite the precautions adopted for the preventing of the entry of any immigrants affected with the disease, numerous cases are discovered in various cities.

WAS TOWER'S FIRST MAYOR

William Bassett of Berlin, Wis., Recalls Early Days on Range.

William H. Bassett of Berlin, Wis., the first mayor of Tower, Minn., and who conducted the first livery business on the range, was a business caller at the courthouse today.

Mr. Bassett has not visited Tower for over ten years, but he has been in Duluth occasionally on business within the past few years.

"We had a pretty hot village election at Tower away back in the eighties," said Mr. Bassett, this morning, recalling the instance of his election as mayor.

"At the first election there were three candidates, John Owens, Bill Shepard and myself. The campaign was a lively one, and I landed enough votes to secure the election of president of the village of Tower. Immediately after the village election, John Brown went down to St. Paul and got a city charter, the idea being to hold a city election and elect a mayor, leaving me out. I didn't care to fight the matter any further, but Neil McInnis and some of the boys that had been backing me up for the position of president declared that I must run for mayor; that it wouldn't do to lay down at that stage of the game.

"Well, we held another election, about a week after the first election, and Bill Shepard and myself were the candidates. Along in the afternoon of election day I got a telegram from the governor, stating that the first election was legal, and that the second election would not be legal. I hunted up Bill, and explained the matter to him, and suggested that we call the second election off. Bill refused to do it. He said he wanted to have the votes counted, and show me how many more votes he got than I. Finding that he was bound to go on, I bet him $50 that I would get ten votes to his one, as compared with the result at the first election. He took the wager, with the result that I got the $50.

"It was all spent that night, though," concluded Mr. Bassett, with a reminiscent smile.

FALSE HAIR FOR MEN.

Tit-Bits: There are more bald headed young men in the higher circles, said a supplier of hisute deficiencies the other day, than people would think. But that is because very little of it is revealed to the curious glance. Most young men grow bald immediately above the forehead, which leaves a triangular space, or on the center of the head. The first place is very easily concealed by a patch which looks as natural as the real thing.

These patches are readily adjusted and may be brushed in any style. They are rather expensive though—that is, if a man desires something which will completely baffle the attempts of tthe suspicious at detection—and they cost from £5 to£30, according to size and finish. I could name twenty young men who sport these patches and whose hair is universally admired by the fair sex.

Concerning that particular spot on the top of the head where the hair is especially fleeting, any number of men whose ages range between 25 and 40 are so decorated. They do not cost so much as the first named patches, but are just are easily adjusted and present the same impenetrable finish.

There are not so many complete wigs sold as there were twenty years ago; in fact, it is hard to get a wig which does not "give itself away," and this is worse than thin hair or baldness.

The color mostly in vogue concerning wigs is dark brown, for most men have that color of hair. Black haired and extremely light haired men seldom become bald at an early age. When they do it is generally on the center of the head.

ONE DAY TO REGISTER

Saturday Will be Last Chance to Get on the Lists

The Registration This Year Has Been Unusually Heavy.

If you don't register tomorrow, providing you didn't register Dec. 17 or last Tuesday, you can't vote on election day.

Boards of registration will be in session from tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock until tomorrow night at 9 o'clock and everybody will have time to visit his polling place and get his name down on the book.

The registration this year is unusually heavy. Every candidate and every worker for the candidates are mixing with the citizens and urging them to register. Each feels that the more people registered the better are his chances and all are determined to get every qualified voter to the polling place that the vote Feb. 4 may be a full one of the city.

After tomorrow it will be all up with the voter unless he has registered. Whether he is for Haven or Tessman, for one ward candidate or another, he will be unable to express his choice at the polls.

Every ingredient used in making Hunt's Perfect Baking Powder and extracts must pass the test of chemical purity and every finished batch is inspected and tested.

RARE BOOKS AT BROWN.

The John Carter Brown Library at Brown university has completed its set of thirteen original narratives, printed in the years from 1675 to 1677, of the Indian war which nearly destroyed the New Egland settlements, says the New York Sun.

A recent purchase in London at the sale of the earl of Sheffield's library of a tract printed in London in 1676, containing a description of the "Great Swamp Fight," which broke the power of the Narragansett Indians in Southern Rhode Island, completed the set.

The Brown library also has bought a Virginia tract which tells of a tempest which did great damage in 1667, and another which contains a report of Indian troubles in Virginia at about the same time that King Philip was making war in New England.

The library has added a volume which contains an account of an annual meeting of the stockholders of a company organized in 1772 to secure a monopoly of trade between Spain and Venezuela, and books which contain the regulation of the slave trade in the French West Indies in 1745, proceedings of the local government for the island of Martinique, and reports of the doings of the French fleet in the West Indies during the American revolution.

NOT ROOM FOR A THIRD.

Judge's Library: Secretary Taft was, on one occasion, in consultation with Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania. The secretary is gigantic and the senator is taller and weighs more than any member of the senate.

While these two statesmen were in earnest conversation an aggressive politician endeavored to enter the room, but an alert secretary politely interfered.

"What are they doing in there?" asked the politician inquisitively.

This impertinent question nettled the secretary, and he answered tersely:

"Holding a mass meeting, I presume."

DEFECTIVE PAGE

VICTORY IS COMPLETE

By Judge Dibell's Decision on the Constitutional Amendments.

No Question as to Remedy Provided Under the Statute.

The decision by Judge Dibell, in the constitutional amendment contest case, is a complete victory for the contestants on every point raised, as was stated by The Herald last evening. The tax amendment is held to have been defeated, and the good roads amendment to have been adopted by the vote of the people, and this decision, if sustained by the supreme court on the appeal to be taken by the state, will be final, as far as the two amendments are concerned.

The News Tribune this morning gave an entirely erroneous view of the judge's findings. It quotes as his decision two claims set up by the state, and says the judge held that the statute provides no available remedy, and, therefore, an "empty victory" has been won by the people.

The decision published in full by The Herald, yesterday, shows that the court first stated the claims made by the state in answer to the contestants and then proceeded to demolish these claims and uphold the position of the contestants on each and every point. What the News Tribune states as the judge's findings are merely quotations from the second and fourth of the state's claims.

What the court decided is that the tax amendment failed to receive a majority of affirmative votes and was, therefore, defeated; that the good roads amendment received a majority of affirmative votes and was, therefore, adopted; that the court has power to decide the result of the vote upon a constitutional amendment by a recount of the ballots, and to adjudge whether an amendment was or was not ratified by a vote of the people; that, in this case, the court adjudges the tax amendment was not ratified and the good roads amendment was ratified. He orders judgment entered accordingly.

BANK BUILDING WRECKED BY BOMB

Falling Front Exposes $40,000 in Gold to the Public.

New York, Jan. 24.—An exploding bomb last night wrecked the front of an Italian bank building on Elizabeth street, briefly exposing $40,000 in silver and gold, which the bankers, Pasquale A. Pati & Son, had piled in the windows as ocular proof of their ability to pay depositors on demand.

The junior partner, Salvatore Pati, who was on guard inside, was cut by the glass that crashed in upon him, but stuck by his charge and soon had the money stored away in the vaults. The score of clerks had left the place some hours before and the explosion injured none but the younger Pati.

The bomb throwers, who were not seen by the banker, were quickly lost in the crowd of several thousand excited Italians who gathered about the wreckage, and their motive is a mystery. It was at first believed that a robbery had been attempted and the known distress in certain sections of the city lent color to this theory.

If robbery was the object, the perpetrators, it is believed, were amateurs who lost courage at the critical moment, when the tempting treasure was within arm's reach from the street.

Pati, the elder, is one of the most prosperous of the Italian bankers of the city. His institution is capitalized at $500,000. During the bank troubles he conceived the idea of a window display to reassure doubting patrons and the advertisement has since been on display.

BOOTH'S FOLLOWERS

Have No Right to Exclusive Use of Name Salvation Army.

New York, Jan. 24.—The right of the Salvation Army of the United States, of which Gen. William Booth is the head, to the exclusive use of that or any similar name, was denied yesterday by Justice Newberger, in the supreme court. Justice Newberger's decision was on the application made by the Salvation Army of the United States for an injunction to restrain the American Salvation Army, headed by James W. Duffin, from using that name. Counsel for the applicant, in arguing the injunction, declared that the application was made on the ground that Duffin's organization had brought discredit on the Salvation Army of the United States.

SECRETARY TAFT TO VISIT ST. PAUL.

St. Paul, Jan. 24.—William H. Taft, secretary of war, and probable candidate for president, will come to St. Paul some time within the next two months as a guest of the Roosevelt club.

A meeting of the executive committee was held yesterday, at which Chairman Hugh T. Halbert announced the acceptance by Mr. Taft of the club's invitation, extended to him some time ago.

It is proposed by the club to arrange a complimentary banquet to the distinguished guest, which will be something of a state affair.

GERMANY'S WAR ON RODENTS

Vessels Arriving in Hamburg Disinfected to Exterminate Rats.

Hamburg, Jan. 24. — In view of the movement in England for the extermination of rats, it is of interest to know that the Hamburg harbor authorities have a veritable "battleship" engaged in the campaign.

The specially built steamer Disinfector is employed here primarily for the destruction of rats on ships that have arrived from plague-suspected ports. The system used—poisonous gases, which do not damage property — was devised by Prof. Nocht. A mixture of 5 per cent carbonic-oxide gas, 18 per cent carbonic acid and 77 per cent nitrogen is conveyed from the Disinfector by pipes into the holes of the ships being treated. After thorough fumigation currents of fresh air are blown through.

Many vessels have been successfully cleaned and thousands of rats destroyed. As many as 900 dead rats have been counted after one disinfection.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE TO STAY.

Age Limit of 70 Years Not Invoked in His Case.

London, Jan. 24.—The recent report that Mr. Bryce would shortly retire from the post of ambassador at Washington probably had its origin in the fact that next year he will complete his 70th year, which is the age fixed by the foreign office for the superannuation of members of the diplomatic service.

The rule has, however, been suspended before now. Mr. Bryce's predecessor, Lord Pauncefote, is the most recent case in point, and it is more than likely that the same will be done in the case of Mr. Bryce himself.

It will be necessary for Mr. Bryce to serve three years before he becomes entitled to a first-class foreign office pension of $8,500 a year. As an ex-cabinet minister, he is, of course, eligible for one of the political pensions of either $10,000 or $5,000 a year, but these are limited in number, and there is no certainty when any of them would become available.

Mr. Bryce will certainly remain at Washington so long as the present government is in power, providing his health continues satisfactory.

UNDERGOES OPERATION.

Mrs. Charles Albert, Formerly Sarah Truax, is Doing Well.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Mrs. Charles Stanley Albert, formerly Miss Sarah Truax, underwent a successful operation for appendicitis at the Woman's hospital here yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Albert were married in the hospital Wednesday after the ceremony had been postponed from Jan. 18, because of the bride's illness. Physicians at the hospital assert that Mrs. Albert's condition is satisfactory and predicted a speedy recovery for her.

BOOST FOR JOHNSON.

Pine County Democrats Favor the Governor for President.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Who should be the Democratic nominee for president? With all due respect for the ability, statesmanship and Democracy of William Jennings Bryan, Pine county Democrats declare that if our own peerless governor, John A. Johnson, ever makes a "noise like a candidate," he will have our undivided support, and we believe that he should not only have the undivided support of every Democrat in the state, but of every citizen in the state, for is it not reasonable to presume that, with John A. Johnson in the president's chair, the wants and needs of this great state (his state) would be more closely looked after than they would if either a Taft, Cannon, Hughes, Fairbanks, Foraker, Shaw, LaFollette, or even a Bryan, occupied the same position? John A. Johnson is a conservative, safe and sane, self-made man, possessing all of the qualities necessary to become one of the rulers of the world in this twentieth century, namely, The President of the United States of America. Let us all boost for John A. Johnson.

DAUGHTERS WERE SOLD

To the Gypsy King by Melan Yauna for $1,500.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 24.—In police court Melan Yauna handed $1,500 in gold to Judge Crawford and demanded that he order John Mitchell on trial for assaulting him with a deadly weapon Sunday night, to return to him his two young daughters who, he declared, were kidnaped by Mitchell in St. Louis last June. Mitchell is king of a big band of gypsies in camp near here and when Yauna went to the camp Sunday night to find his daughters, Mitchell stabbed him.

Yauna testified that last spring he had sold his daughters to Mitchell for $1,500 with the understanding that the gypsy king, who desired them for wives, was not to take possession of them until they were several years older. Mitchell kidnaped them a few days later, Yauna said, and for months he had been trying to regain possession of his children.

Judge Crawford fined Mitchell for assault with a deadly weapon but declined to settle the controversy over the possession of the girls. Out of court, however, it was settled and Yauna paid back to Mitchell the $1,500 and the latter returned the girls. Yauna charges that Mitchell had tortured them by throwing them, stripped of their clothing, into camp fires, burning their bodies severely. The girls showed signs of having been maltreated but they were still willing to stay with Mitchell if their father desired them to do so.

THE CAT CAME BACK

After Having Been Taken in Barge 120 Miles Distant.

Catskill, N. Y., Jan. 24.—The Reed & Powell Transportation company of Coxsackie, N. Y., keeps cats in its storehouse as a protection against rats and mice.

On Dec. 7 a barge loaded with hay left the pier for Jersey City. When the barge reached there it was found that Nick, one of the storehouse cats, was on the barge, which was to be laid up for the winter when unloaded.

Rather than leave Nick on the boat the cat was given to a truckman, who carried it in a bag two miles back in Jersey.

Last Saturday morning, when the dockmaster at Coxsackie opened the storehouse and called the cats for their morning meal, Nick appeared with the others. The cat had made its way from Jersey City to Coxsackie, 120 miles, on foot. Except being somewhat thin, Nick is as good as ever.

BIG FIRE IN BALTIMORE

for this a number of them would almost certainly have been injured by the falling bricks.

Change of Wind Stays Flames.

For a time it seemed that the fire would sweep diagonally through the block to Gay street and a number of people living on that thoroughfare moved their effects. Changes in the wind, however, helped the firemen and enabled them to confine the damage, in addition to that already mentioned, to the plants of the E. B. Read & Sons company, printers, and the Flynn & Emrich company, machinists, located in a five-story building on Saratoga street in the rear of the Regester building, the Leonhardt wagon company, Saratoga street, opposite the building in which the fire originated, the old city hall building and the Zion school building. In the old city hall building were valuable maps and records of the water, topographical and other city departments. These were removed to a place of safety under the direction of Mayor Mahool.

When the wall of the Regester building fell members of the fire department and policemen utterly disregarded the fact that another section of the building seemed about to topple into Saratoga street and worked frantically to rescue their injured comrades and recover the bodies of the dead. The latter were badly mutilated and the former, were in some instances, almost stripped of their clothing.

While responding to the alarm a hose carriage and fire engine collided and five of the men on the engine were injured, one of them seriously.

Kodol is the best remedy known today for dyspepsia, indigestion and all troubles arising from a disordered stomach. It is pleasant, prompt and thorough. Sold by all druggists.

ON THE IRON RANGES

AURORA CLUB IS AGAINST SCHEME

Of Evelethans to Suppress Blind Pigs by Moral Suasion.

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Aurora club held its first meeting in its new rooms Wednesday night. The first business taken up was a request from the Eveleth Business Men's association to adopt a resolution against blind pigs which they had adopted. After a spirited discussion the club voted not to indorse the resolution, as to do so would virtually bind themselves not to convict a "pigger" if caught.

The resolution seems to carry the fact that blind pigs should be obliterated by moral persuasion, but Auroraites consider that when the law is broken it is time the county attorney should get busy, and a resolution is being drafted to that effect.

Again, the Eveleth resolution has a clause begging the brewers not to sell beer to blind piggers, to which exception is taken.

HEALTH STATISTICS

Show Eveleth to be Healthy---Other Current Events.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The report of the health commission shows the health of the city in general to be good. The number of reported births last year was 130; 66 male and 64 female, and deaths 58.

A number of Eveleth Elks with a party of candidates went over Wednesday to Virginia to attend the meeting of the lodge. In the party were J. J. Gleason, J. D. McCarter, W. T. Irwin, H. E. Barton, H. A. Griswold, Dr. E. M. Gans, J. P. Tredinick, Judge Vivian Prince, James Robb, Walter J. Smith. Seven candidates were initiated, four of them being from Eveleth, Walter J. Smith, James A. Robb, J. J. Gleason and J. D. McCarter. The candidates were received with all honors.

The death of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Winchester's 4-months-old daughter was one of the saddest bereavements in the city for some time. The little one was sick, but a few hours. The parents are almost heart broken over the loss of their only child.

The funeral of Miss Lyyne Selkkula, who died so suddenly of erysipelas, was held from the Finnish church, Thursday afternoon.

G. A. Whitman and C. E. Bailey were in Duluth, Wednesday.

EVELETH AGAINST RAPIDS.

Basketball Game to be Played in Range Town Next Friday.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 24. — A game has been arranged with the Grand Rapids Basketball team and will be played here on Friday, Jan. 31. Something that will keep the members of the Young Men's club busy is the contest on between the two teams the All Stars and the Cyclones for the purpose of procuring the largest number of members. Henry Levant was chosen captain of the Cyclones and Mr. May of the All Stars. The team which succeeds in getting the largest number of members will be guests of the losing team at a banquet.

SUSPECTS ARRESTED

In Connection With the Aurora Dynamite Explosion.

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the exception of three men being arrested on suspicion, nothing new has developed in the Mohawk mine dynamite case. John A. Jones of Bovey has been arrested, also two Austrians, John Odlin and Anton Martogic, and their hearing will take place next Wednesday before Justice Christianson. Jones is the man who, during the strike last summer at Bovey, was escorted home by 200 men and warned to leave town, and later was given sixty days for carrying concealed weapons. This winter he has been touring the range with Miss Flynn, the Socialist speaker. It is not thought here, however, that he knows anything about this case. Marshal Knuti has offered a reward of $100. The Mohawk is not closed down, as reported.

DEATH ENDS JOURNEY

Of Woodsman William N. Farrell on His Way to Duluth.

Two Harbors, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Overtaken with heart trouble while walking from Jeff Moore's lumber camp on the Little Marais to Camp No. 5 on the Duluth & Northern Minnesota railroad, William N. Farrell, aged about 45 years, a lumberjack, fell to the ground and died in a few minutes. Two other woodsmen were in the party. All had received their pay and were heading for Duluth when death stopped the journey. Coroner Christensen, who was notified of the death, went to Camp 5 and bringing the body here found that death resulted from natural causes. There was a time check for $42.80 on the dead man's person and $2 in cash. Little is known of his relatives.

TOO MUCH LIQUOR

Causes Finlander to Stab His Fellow Countryman.

McKinley, Minn., Jan. 24. — (Special to The Herald.) — Protesting that he was drunk and did not know what he was doing, John Johnson, a Finn, is in the local jail charged with stabbing a fellow countryman, by the name of Samuel Mattson, at the home of the last named, on White lake, near here.

The couple are said to have returned to the Mattson home late at night, after a carousal at McKinley, the journey from town being marked by frequent quarrels. While Mattson was putting wood into the stove, bending over for that purpose, it is alleged, Johnson drove a knife into his victim's left lung, pulled it out and then left. Mattson's wife, who was asleep in the house was aroused by her husband's cries and gave the alarm. The wounded man was brought here to the hospital and little hope of his recovery is held out. Johnson was subsequently arrested, but, he claimed, he had been drinking and knew nothing of the affair. Assistant County Attorney Poirer came to take the dying declaration of the injured Finn, but Mattson refused to make any statement and unless he changes his mind the state will be without a strong case against Johnson in the event of his victim's death.

TO EVELETH HOSPITAL.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. A. R. Noyes of this city, who has been very sick, has been taken to the Fayal hospital at Eveleth for an operation.

ST. JAMES RESUMPTION IS NEWS TO SUPT. RASHLEIGH.

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The report that the St. James mine will reopen soon cannot be verified. Supt. Rashleigh says: "I know nothing whatever about it, but hope it is so. I have received no orders to resume operations from headquarters, but of course you cannot tell what might happen."

POLICE DRAGNET GATHERS FEW IN Virginia Idlers Run Out of Town—No Slot Machine Order.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—As has been intimated in the past, Chief of Police Walsh put out his dragnet Wednesday night and raked in a number of idlers about town, who were charged with having no visible means of support. Five of them spent the night in jail and had a hearing before Municipal Judge Carey yesterday. All were found guilty of the charge and each sentenced to thirty days in jail, but the judge suspended sentence in all the cases on condition that the men leave town, which they promised to do. One of them, however, became obstreperous before he left the court, and he was again placed in jail and will be sent to Duluth to serve out his sentence.

Two of the newly appointed policemen have been relieved from duty already, George Harding and George Potosnak. Axel Lund has received a permanent appointment in place of Potosnak, while Wm. McLean, former policeman, is serving temporarily in place of Harding. The latter was let out because the chief found him asleep in one of the jail cells last Saturday night when he was supposed to be on duty; while Potosnak was let out Wednesday for refusing to obey orders of the chief when instructed to patrol the alleys in the business section during the night.

Owing to the fact that no orders have yet been issued to the saloonkeepers by Mayor Hawkinson to put their slot machines out of business, some of them are beginning to have hopes that he does not intend to carry out his expressed purpose. But men in a position to know the executive's purposes say that, while he is not a man to be in a hurry over such matters, in due time he will issue orders to clean up all forms of public gambling, including the slot machines, and when the order is issued it will be done.

McMurchy of Duluth, will be the installing officer, assisted by High Treasurer W. D. Keif also of Duluth. The newly elected officers are as follows: Chief ranger, J. W. MAY LOSE BOTH FEET.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Exposure to the cold while wandering about in a mentally unbalanced condition may cost William Roy, a woodsman, who has been arrested in Stewart in a pitiable condition, the loss of both feet. He left the camp on the eve of the cold spell and slept out two nights, freezing his feet in a horrible manner.

Grain foods contain the vital principle in greater proportion than other foods. If you eat right, your vitality will remain at its height for years.

Grape-Nuts food is made from wheat and barley. It contains the "vital phosphates" that nature places in certain parts of the grains, and is so prepared as to be quickly absorbed and converted into vital energy.

If you want to store up vital energy for the accomplishment of the greatest success, make Grape-Nuts a part of your regular diet.

DULUTH MEN ARE NAMED

To Fill Important Positions in Masonic Grand Lodge.

Importance of Local Organization in State is Recognized.

Duluth men were elected to three important offices in the Masonic grand lodge of Minnesota, which held its annual session in St. Paul yesterday.

W. B. Patton was named senior grand warden; R. E. Denfeld, grand marshal, and John Cox, custodian of work.

All three positions are important ones in the organization of the grand lodge and the election of members of the Duluth Masonic body to fill them is an indication of the importance of the local lodges.

W. P. Roberts of Minneapolis was elected grand master, succeeding Gustav Widell of Mankato. Mr. Widell's term as grand master was a remarkable year in the history of the fraternity in the state.

The ten Duluth delegates at the grand lodge session, were: W. B. Patton, W. A. McGonagle, L. A. Barnes, A. G. McKnight, E. K. Coe, Carl F. Wyberg, E. G. Wallinder, Charles A. Bronson, C. Miller, G. A. Taylor, and R. E. Denfeld.

Most of the delegates returned to the city this morning.

the early forenoon she was joined by the Adriatic from Southampton and the President Lincoln from Hamburg, both with a large number of passengers on board. CITY HALL DESTROYED signal rang the station alarm and brought the firemen from that house to the scene, but they and a few others who were summoned by telephone constituted the whole fire fighting force for half an hour, during which time the flames gained such headway as to become uncontrollable.

When Chief Engineer Eldridge arrived on the scene he gave up all hopes of saving the building and confined the efforts of the department to protecting surrounding property.

Panic Averted.

When the flames were discovered, William A. Turner, chairman of the meeting of the Pythian body, was met in the hallway by three men who acquainted him with the condition of affairs. Coolly he entered the auditorium and ascended the stage, interrupting the rites of investiture, which were going on at the time. He calmly told the assembled members of the existing conditions, and thus averted a panic, bringing out more than 700 persons uninjured. Earlier in the evening there had been more than 1,500 persons in the auditorium for the jubilee exercises, and had the fire occurred then, packed as the hall was, many lives might have been lost.

Prisoners Set Free.

When the flames communicated to the police building, where the city jail is located, the prisoners were set free. These prisoners had been arrested for only minor offenses. The building, which was a five-story structure of brick, burned up and down from the third floor, as did the fire in the city hall.

Aid was summoned from Bath, Biddeford, Saco and Lewiston, but the latter was the only city to get its apparatus in the city before daybreak. When it arrived it was too late to take any active part in the fight against the flames.

The city hall survived the great fire of 1866, although it was badly gutted at that time. It was first opened in 1859. The building had a frontage of 150 feet, and was 250 feet long. Its central dome rose 150 feet above the roof. The building was constructed of colored Nova Scotia Albert stone, and contained eighty rooms.

THIS GIRL NOT SLOW.

Becomes Citizen, Proves Up on Land and Marries Same Day.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Charlie Kelley, who was Miss Sophie Molin, has made a record for wedding day establishments that will probably be unchallenged in this section for months. Not content with becoming a bride she Tuesday completed her naturalization as a full citizen of the United States and finished proving up on her homestead. This was all done in the afternoon. At 2 o'clock she became a citizen, at 4 o'clock she had proved up on her land, and at 6 o'clock she became a bride.

Miss Molin came to North Dakota a few years ago from Sweden and took up a homestead as soon as the legal requirements were complied with. While she was living on her claim she met Charlie Kelley of Driscoll and the two fell in love. The marriage was postponed until she could bring her dower 160 acres of fertile land and it is doubtful if there ever was a happier bride than the one who went through the ceremony at a hotel in this city at the close of a strenuous day.

Westhope, N. The business of the closed bank was satisfactory to all concerned, but for some time it has been apparent that four financial institutions were too many for the business transacted here.

Sheriff Bates on Way Home With Alleged Repeater.

Assistant County Attorney Stevenson May Have Clue About Others.

Word received at the sheriff's office this morning indicated that Sheriff W. J. Bates will arrive from California tomorrow with M. H. Kane, one of the naval recruits indicted for an alleged election fraud and who was arrested at the Mare Island navy yard last Saturday.

Assistant County Attorney W. J. Stevenson, who went to California about ten days ago to take the necessary legal steps to secure the five men indicted for the alleged "repeating" done at the last primary election, was expected to return with Kane, who was the only recruit that the authorities found, but it was understood, yesterday, that the assistant county attorney might not be back at this time. In view of the fact that four of the men wanted deserted shortly after reaching Mare Island yards, and before the authorities here could take steps for their detention, has given rise to some suspicion that they were warned. It is thought possible that Mr. Stevenson may have remained in the West for a short time to follow up some clue as to the whereabouts of the other men wanted under the indictments.

County Attorney Norton says that the recent report which was circulated among a few people to the effect that he had received a telegram from Mr. Stevenson stating that Kane had turned state's evidence on promise of immunity from prosecution, is absolutely untrue. Mr. Norton says he does not know what Kane has told the assistant county attorney and that nobody has been promised "immunity." Mr. Norton states that he would hardly have gone to the trouble and put the county to the expense of bringing back one or all of the alleged "repeaters" unless he intended to push the prosecution to the fullest extent of the law and see that an example is made of the men accused, if they are guilty of the crime charged.

that "whenever the district attorney knew of the arrival of any witnesses for the defense he has had people meet them with subpoenas and has subjected them to a long explanation. I do not intened," he added, "that he shall know my case before it is presented here in court."

"What I want is to find out whether these people you are bringing here are systers, charlatans or men of character and standing," shouted Mr. Jerome.

"I will give you their names after they have landed and their addresses as well," Mr. Littleton said. "Is the district attorney willing to give me the names of the witnesses he will call in rebuttal?"

"The district attorney is not required to do that," interposed Justice Dowling.

"Then I don't think I ought to be forced to tell him the names of my witnesses."

"Oh, very well, then," put in Mr. Jerome, "if you don't want to do it, all right."

Justice Dowling put an end to the controversy by granting the adjournment.

Mr. Littleton said the defense undoubtedly would conclude its case on Monday and District Attorney Jerome announced that the people were ready to proceed in rebuttal at any time.

Judge Places Limit.

Justice Dowling has decided to limit each side to three expert witnesses, and the defense's trio were heard yesterday as to the facts of the mental and physical examinations they made of Harry Thaw in the Tombs prison, following his arrest for the killing of Stanford White.

No experts for the state have yet appeared in the court room, and Mr. Jerome has not indicated the manner in which he will combat the testimony of the alienists in the employ of the defense. All of the doctors who served Mr. Jerome at the first hearing are under subpoena by the defense, not as paid experts, but as possible witnesses in rebuttal of any action the district attorney may take in rebuttal of the insanity plea that has been built up.

Justice Dowling held a conference with all of the attorneys interested in the case before announcing his decision to limit the amount of expert testimony to be placed before the jury. Last year the defense offered six experts to answer the hypothetical question, but these were overwhelmed, numerically at least, by the battery of nine brought forward by the district attorney. The effect of Justice Dowling's decision will be materially to shorten the case.

After the meeting a banquet was held in honor of the new officers.

LUMBER COMPANY BUSY.

Red River Company Increasing Its Force in Woods and at Mill.

Akeley, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Red River Lumber company is hauling over 1,000,000 feet of pine from the Wilkeman farm, south of Akeley, to the Eveleth lake for the saw mills. An ice road has been made ten miles long, and the hauling is being done early at morning and at evening. Randall & Minister have the contract for logging the timber on the Wilkeman farms.

The twin band saws in the new portion of the Red River saw mills was put into use yesterday and the whole new part is now working. A large number of men were added to the working force. This with the big mill, makes the output fairly large and the pay list will be greatly augmented this month. The lath mill has also been put into motion, and has both a night and day force. This logging train is at work on the spurs and logging road northwest and northeast of town and brings two loads of logs each day. The married men are being given the preference.

MUST OBSERVE U. S. LAW.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—A special inspector for the interior department at Washington has been in this vicinity lately and has addressed the register of the land office at Crookston, in this district, to the effect that he must send to headquarters the names of a dozen Crookston business men who have lately filed on homestead land near Roosevelt. It is supposed that this is a move along the newly adopted lines of the interior department, looking towards requiring all who file on government lands to strictly comply with both the letter and the spirit of the law.

SUICIDES PREVENTED

By Salvation Army Bureau in London During Past Year.

Submerged Tenth Supply Fewest to Those Seeking Self-Death.

London, Jan. 24.—When Gen. Booth opened his Anti-suicide bureau in London it aroused little enthusiasm. Many doubted its utility. The idea of a man or woman starting out to commit suicide, and calling on the way to get the opinion of the venerable leader of the Salvation Army, or one of his lieutenants, on the subject, seemed preposterous. But as has been the case with many of the general's novel schemes, the results have confounded the skeptics. The review of the first year's work of the unique life-saving institution, which has just been issued, more than justifies its existence.

With is general methods American readers are familiar, for since the London bureau was organized, similar institutions have been opened by the Salvation Army in New York and Chicago. It would be interesting, however, to compare the statistics of these branches and the deductions from them, with those of the parent organization. I don't know what the returns for the American cities show, but an analysis of the report of the London Anti-suicide bureau yields results that are surprising and interesting.

First is the fact that no less than 1,125 men did slop on their way to self-destruction to take counsel on the subject before carrying out their grewsome purpose. And no less than 75 per cent acted on the advice, "Don't." Equally surprising is the discovery that the large majority of those who had resolved to make an end of themselves belonged, not as most people would suppose, to the very poor and destitute classes, the "submerged tenth," but to the middle class.

Slum Dweller No Suicide.

The dweller in the slum, the casual laborer, who lives from hand to mouth, the toiler who, in his old age, has no other recourse than the poorhouse, the tramp and the loafer, are not the people who find life intolerable. They have become habituated to their misery. They endure the worst and cling tenaciously to life. It is those who have known better days—those who are making their first acquaintance with dire poverty or disgrace—who find the struggle too much for them. They have lost their foothold in that fierce contest for bread and respectability, and can not endure the gutter. Clergymen, military officers, doctors, solicitors, journalists, architects, company promoters, actors, bank clerks, schoolmasters, etc., make up the bulk of those who sought the aid of the Anti-suicide bureau.

Gen. Booth's own explanation of the reasons why the number of the very poor who contemplate suicide is so disproportionately small is worth quoting. It is, he shrewdly suggests, because, "either their bloodless condition deprives them of the courage necessary for self-destruction, or that they have for so long a period been near neighbors of misery that they are willing to continue the acquaintance to the end, or, what is more feasible, the social agencies provided specially for these classes meet the requirements of the despairing among them."

Fewer Women Victims.

Another striking feature of the report is the evidence it affords that women are far less prone to commit suicide than men. Among the applicants to the bureau for advice the men outnumber the women over ten to one. General statistics of suicide always reveal a great discrepancy between the sexes in this respect, but not in such a marked degree. It is probably true, as the general surmises, that "women are better able to bear up under their sorrows and trials than men." It may be also that many of them are saved from self-destruction by physical cowardice, for while suicide may be denounced as moral cowardice, it requires no little physical courage to take one's life. That suggests an interestin question for discussion: Which contributes most to saving women in trouble from committing suicide—their excess of moral courage or the lack of physical courage?

There were only ninety women who called at the bureau to discuss the question whether they should or should not commit suicide. Most of them had had a superior education, which unfitted rather than qualified them for such work as they could find. Two-thirds of them were suffering from melancholia and the rest had been brought low by drink or drugs.

Lumping men and women together, it was found that 54 per cent had been brought to the verge of suicide by financial worries or poverty, 11 per cent by drink, drugs or disease; 9 per cent by melancholia; 5 per cent by crime, and 21 per cent by general causes, such as accident, sickness and misfortune.

Due Largely to Chief.

That the Anti-suicide bureau here has been so successful in disuading many from self-destruction is largely due to the personality of its chief, Col. Unger. He is a man who understands human nature, and how to adapt himself to its various temperaments, moods and phases. He served many years in the British army and has traveled all over the world. He possesses a most persuasive Irish tongue, and a wonderful pair of eyes set under bushy eyebrows. They are big and brown and capable of all sorts of expression. As he talks they illustrate with dramatic aptness all that he says. Now they soften with tender feeling, now they flash with indignation, now they threaten, now they plead; one minute they are full of affection, the next sparkling with fun. They are eyes that make you feel the man is your friend—and a friend worth having—very quickly indeed.

"The first thing I try to do," he said, "is to awaken the real man concealed somewhere behind every one of the poor, despairing creatures who come to us for aid. That real man is always there, but he is no always easy to get at. And until I have got at him I can not hope for any success at all."

Different cases require different treatment. A professional man, who was a victim of the drink craving, called on Col. Unger. He had just emerged from a week's debauch. Filled with shame and loathing of himself, convinced that he could never overcome the demon that pursued him, he had resolved to end his life.

CHINA'S OWN NATIONAL AIR.

Music the Same as "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

London, Jan. 24.—Has China a national anthem?

"Yes," say some Chinese; "No," say others and also many Europeans.

The controversy on the point arose in the Far East over an incident at Hongkong, when W. H. Taft, the American secretary for war, was being entertained. The "Emperor of China" was toasted, followed by the air of "God Save the King." Mr. Taft asked why "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" (the American anthem to the same air) had been played, and the German guests asked the connection between China and "Heil Dir im Slegeskranz" (the German anthem to the same air). The explanation was that the tune was so well knoyn that it might be taken as the hymn of universal brotherhood, and Chinese words had therefore been set to it as the national anthem of that country.

Now the Pekin and Tien Tsin Times chaffs the "originator of the joke" that China has a national anthem. But the Chinese legation in London the other day stated that a Chinese national anthem, composed by the Marquis Tseng, the envoy and representative of his country since the establishment of a legation in London, has been in existence for the last twenty-one years. The words are written by the marquis to music composed by a European musician.

SLAVERY IN DARKEST AFRICA

Pope Approves Society's Efforts to Root Out the Evil.

Rome, Jan. 24.—The continued existence of slavery in Africa, throughout all parts of the vast continent, with the exception of Egypt, Tunis and Algiers, was the declaration made by Monsignor Coccolio in an address before the second Italian Anti-Slavery congress, which met recently in Rome.

The speaker described in vivid terms the character and nature of this trading in human flesh all over the Dark continent, from the North to the center—which is a real mine of slaves—and thence to the South; and after describing the sorrows and sufferings of these unhappy people, he quoted, amid applause, the words of Cardinal Lavigerie, that the whole world should work towards the abolition of slavery.

On the following day the pope gave private audience to the members of the Anti-Slavery congress. The pontiff, after he had received each member of the congress, addressed them in a few brief sentences.

A GAY MARRIED LIFE.

Fist Fight Daily for Twenty-Three Years.

Geneva, Jan. 24.—Jacob Maurer and his wife of Zurich were described by the judge as the "most curious couple in Switzerland" when he sentenced the husband to six months' imprisonment. They had married in 1880—both are of powerful physique—and had fist fights almost daily for twenty-three years.

In 1903 the wife got a divorce, but in eighteen months the two met by chance and married again. The wedding breakfast, however, ended in a fight, but the couple stayed together in the old way, sometimes the husband and sometimes the wife winning the day's fight.

Some months ago the wife took $1,600 and fled from the house. The husband pursued her, beat her, and flung her into a river, but she was rescued. At the trial she pleaded for leniency to her husband, and burst into tears when she heard the sentence.

FORMER JUSTICE SINKING.

Albert Lea, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The condition of Former Supreme Court Justice John A. Lovely, who was stricken with partial paralysis of his mental and physical faculties, and has been for months in an enfeebled condition, is becoming rapidly worse, and his friends are more than ever alarmed as to the outcome of his illness. Judge Lovely is 64 years of age.

Mother takes a Cascaret and baby gets the benefit. It is easy to supply, in this natural way, all the laxative a baby needs.

An exclusive milk diet tends to constipation with all of us. So does inactivity.

Without exercise, without coarse food and fruit and green vegetables, our bowels are never active.

Is it any wonder that a nursing baby, who cannot yet walk, needs the help of a laxative?

All babies do, as you know.

When baby grows older, his different foods will do what Cascarets do for the bowels.

When baby can walk and play and be active, exercise will take the place of a laxative.

But, until then, a gentle laxative is almost a constant necessity. All mothers know that.

It isn't necessary to give the laxative direct to the baby. It is better if the mother takes it.

Then the baby gets its laxative as part of its food. And the mother is helped at the same time.

But use nothing but Cascarets.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with C C C on every tablet. The price is 50 cents, 25 cents and

MARKET IS UNCHANGED

Commission Row Enjoys Steady Trade—Receipts the Same.

This week has been about as uneventful a period as the local commission market has seen in some time.

It is not exactly that business along commission row is at a standstill, but that the week has progressed along exactly the same lines as last week, with nothing to excite comment, boost prices or otherwise furnish variety to the market reporter's spice of life.

"Steady and firm" about expresses conditions that exist on "the row" today, yesterday, the day before that, and the other days of the week.

As a matter of fact, business is not very lively at present. It never is at this time in January. The demand remains steady, but not heavy and the receipts which Michigan street has been enjoying have been ample to supply the city's needs.

The past seven days have seen the elimination of none of the staples or specialties offered last week, although sweet potato stocks are rather low and receipts of Florida strawberries have been rather fitful. Inasmuch as the strawberry demand at this time of the year is fitful, the last mentioned circumstance does not cause any tearing of hair or boosts of price. And as for the sweet potato situation, the demand is not as strong as it was a while ago, so the slump in receipts makes not a great deal of difference. Prices for both the fruit and the vegetable are unchanged.

Many seasons have shown that the public taste for sweet potatoes is not the same steady love that binds the common Irish potato to the citizen's heart, so that even if the sweet potato season is comparatively short, it does not cause the weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth that would ensue if no ordinary potatoes were forthcoming at any price.

Illinois sweet potatoes are still quoted at $6.25 a barrel and $2.25 a bushel. Local commission merchants are no longer buying them in carload lots, however. If they did, they would be liable to suffer the experience of having them rot on their hands. The sweets which are coming now are those bought in small lots in the Twin Cities and Chicago.

The range on strawberries is 65 to 75 cents a quart As had been said, receipts are not steady, but are ample for present purposes.

Oranges continue to arrive in good quantities in good flavor. No changes in price are noted from last week. The apple market is about the same, too. Receipts are liberal and price easy, as they have been for the past month.

Bananas are a little weak, Jumbos being quoted this week at 4c to 4½ per pound. Receipts are not heavy; they never are here at this time of the year.

The demand for grape fruit is very steady, with prices at $5.50 per box for the Florida article.

The cabbage market evinces a strong undertone. Holland seed cabbage is quoted at $1.50 per 150-pound crate.

Butter and eggs are holding firm on about the same level. The range on the best creamery prints is from 29 to 30 cents, according to quality. This is about the same as a week ago. Other grades of butter are the same.

Eggs are 25 cents for fresh receipts and 19 cents for the storaged articles, candled.

Poultry and meats show no change.

A trade change of the week was the retirement of H. B. Knudsen from the Knudsen Fruit company and the purchase of his interests by F. D. Merrick of the Fruit Despatch company of Chicago. S. L. Sleeper, who a year ago bought out E. M. Ferguson's interest in the company and has been active in the management of the Knudsen Fruit company, will continue as the active head of the concern, and anounces that the present name will be retained, for a time at least. Mr. Knudsen will devote himself to his contracting and camp business.

TWO WIVES AT HIS FUNERAL.

One Produces Marriage Certificate and Takes the Body.

Millville, N. J., Jan. 24.—Two women, each calling herself the wife of the late Percy Ramsey, the young Millville man, who died suddenly at Baltimore, and both endavoring to get possession of the body and incidentally $500 life insurance, were the complications left for Undertaker Joseph Sypher to unravel.

Ramsey, a few yars ago, married Miss Nella S. Walker of 204 West Powell street, but left her shortly after the wedding and went to Baltimore. There he met Mrs. Lena Simpson, whom he employed as his housekeeper. Ramsey was taken suddenly ill and died last Monday.

Mrs. Simpson summoned Undertaker Sypher and told him that Ramsey was her husband.

Confronted by Mrs. Ramsey, who went to Baltimore, Mrs. Simpson still claimed tht the dead man was her husband. Mrs. Ramsey produced her marriage certificate and the undertaker brought the body to Millville, where both claimants attended the funeral from the home of Mrs. Ramsey s parents.

DIDN'T BATHE IN 30 YEARS.

A Wife Mentions This Neglect as Ground for Divorce.

Washington, Pa., Jan. 24.—Charging that her husband has not bathed since being married thirty years ago, that he has abused, humiliated and overworked her, Mrs. Irene A. Strain of near Washington is suing for a divorce from Thomas R. Strain.

Her husband's threats to kill her, Mrs. Strain says, were so forcible that she thinks her departure from his house two months ago alone saved her life. Neighbors corroborated Mrs. Strain's tale of abuse.

On the stand the husband said that a small fortune which he had accumulated had been dissipated by his wife's extravagance and her reckless expenditure. That when angry she burned his grain and hay, destroyed his farming implements and "made my life miserable."

AIMS BLOW AT THE CURIOUS.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Would Close Two Newport Streets.

Newport, Jan. 24.—Mrs. Vanderbilt, owner of The Breakers, hopes in the near future to obtain permission from the board of aldermen to close Shepard and Ruggles avenues, respectively. Both thoroughfares are short streets, but little used.

If they are closed, Mrs. Vanderbilt purposes to build a breakwater in front of the estate, lower the cliff walk, erect a high fence and shut off the lower view of The Breakers from the cliff walk, as the excursionists who visit Newport in the summer gather about the cliff walk close to the Vanderbilt place.

PLANS TO RAZE PARIS WALL ARE IN PROGRESS.

Paris, Jan. 24. — Several years ago it was decided to remove that portion of the great wall and moat extending from the Seine at the Point du Jour to St. Denis. The military authorities consider that the River Seine will constitute a better defense for the capital than the fortifications raised during the reign of Louis Phillippe. Moreover, their demolition will free the city from the girdle which confines it within too narrow limits for its ever-increasing population.

In France the adoption of the principle of an improvement does not imply its immediate realization. Long years often elapse before any practical measure is taken. In the present case of the fortifications, the delay has been due chiefly to the margining between the Paris municipality and the war minister, to which the fortifications belong. The government commenced by demanding $26,000,000 for the land. However, M. Caillaux, the minister of finance, some time ago offered to sell it for $18,000,000.

M. De Selves, explaining the proposal to the municipal council, expressed the opinion that even that reduced price was exorbitant. His estimate of the value of the land was about $12,500,000.

The committee nominated by the municipal council to study the question of the purchase of the fortifications by the municipality has just rejected the finance minister's proposal, and has demonstrated that, considering the cost of the pulling down of the great wall, the filling up of the moat, the construction of the roadway and other work, the price of $12,500,000 suggested by the prefect of the Seine is too high. The negotiations have not, however, been broken off, and it is expected that as M. Caillaux is always in want of money to balance the state budget he will accept a reduction even on M. De Selves' estimate.

Backache for Two Years

Caused by Diseased Kidneys and Completely Cured by Using

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

A TRIAL BOTTLE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY CURE SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE TO VERY READER OF THE DULUTH EVENING HERALD, WHO SUFFERS FROM KIDNEY, LIVER, BLADDER OR BLOOD DISEASE.

Mr. Joseph Laliberte, Quebec, P. Q., who suffered for years with backache, due to kidney disease, praises Warner's Safe Cure for curing him.

MR. JOSEPH LALIBERTE.

"I had suffered for over two years from liver and kidney trouble, and regular attacks of indigestion, and found only temporary relief in various remedies I used. I complained more or less of severe pains across the lower part of my back and under the shoulder blades, especially after a tedious day's work, and not infrequently had to lie off work for several days on account of a lame back. Added to this, my stomach bothered me somewhat, as the food did not digest, causing the greatest discomfort and pain until relieved. In a couple of hours after eating I seemed to bloat and had wind spasms. Very often I had smothering sensations in the chest, pains in the pit of the stomach and around the heart, and rising of sour taste in the mouth. Then again there would be headaches. Not being able to digest the food properly, I steadily lost in weight and was easily worried and irritable. As soon as I began taking Warner's Safe Cure my condition steadily improved, and in a very short space of time I was a well man. My liver and kidneys are once more in a healthy condition, and I am entirely cured of all those distressing symptoms. I have also regained my former health, weight and strength through using this grand remedy, and feel so grateful for the cure, I wish to let others know and benefit by my experience. You are therefore at liberty to publish the above statement and use my name and photograph at any time or place."—JOS. LALIBERTE, 34 Artillerir St., Quebec, Canada.

When the kidneys are diseased the uric acid is not carried off, and this causes Gout, Lumbago, Rheumatism of the Joints, Rheumatism of the Muscles, Rheumatism of the Heart, Rheumatism of everywhere. Warner's Safe Cure drives out the uric acid and purifies the kidneys and bladder.

In kidney disease the bowels are often constipated and the liver torpid. Warner's Safe Pills quickly relieve this condition, and no ill effects is experienced.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is put up in two sizes, and is sold by all druggists, or direct, at 50 CENTS and $1.00 A BOTTLE. Refuse substitutes containing harmful drugs which injure the system.

TRIAL BOTTLE FREE! To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will absolutely cure, a trial bottle will be sent FREE OF CHARGE, postpaid, to any one who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in the Duluth Evening Herald. The genuineness of this offer is fully guaranteed. OPEN SECRETS.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken the many users of his medicines into his full confidence. Thus too he has absolutely and completely removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits, and made them REMEDIES OF KNOWN COMPOSITION.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it, in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R.V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same. From this booklet it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, over-worked, "run-down," nervous and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their squaws. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was known to the Indians as "Squaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable native, medicinal plants was gained from the Indians.

As made up by improved and exact processes, and with the use of specially designed chemical apparatus, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, auteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health.

The exact proportion of the several ingredients used in these medicines, as well as the working formula and peculiar processes, apparatus and appliances employed in their manufacture, are withheld from publicity that Dr. Pierce's proprietary rights may not be infringed and trespassed upon by unprincipled limitators and those who may be piratically inclined.

Dr. John Fyfe, of Saugatuck, Conn., Editor of the Department of Therapeutics in THE ECLECTIC REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) one of the chief ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription: "A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator and always favors a condition which makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system, cannot fail to be of great usefulness and of the utmost importance to the general practitioner of medicine."

"Helonias more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent."

"The following are among the leading indications for Helonias: Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhea; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women, constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia, ("flooding") due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhea, arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and an anemic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensation in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is rich in all the medical properties of Unicorn root, or Helonias.

A Bee Line

Directness of the bee's flight is proverbial.

Ability to discern the letter B, ⅗ of an inch square, at 20 feet on a bee line, means normal vision.

Inability to see it correctly means defective vision.

A bee line to us means good glasses or good eyes.

Will you take "the bee line?"

Stevens Gets "Cold Feet."

George Stevens, who was accused of being an habitual criminal and who agreed to plead guilty to the charge, got "cold feet" when taken before the court yesterday and refused to plead. It is thought that he feared the prospect of a long term in the penitentiary. There was another charge of larceny hanging over Stevens and he agreed to plead guilty to that but wanted to make the condition that he was not to be sent to the penitentiary. The district attorney refused to make any conditions and Stevens became angry and declared the police would have a chance to prove him guilty. In case of his conviction on the charges against him Stevens is likely to get a heavy sentence.

Slept in Doorway of Saloon.

M. J. Dillon, a saloonkeeper at 424 Tower avenue was arrested at 4:30 o'clock in the morning when found sleeping in the doorway of his saloon. He is charged with violating the midnight closing order. The police claim several men were inside the saloon having a good time while the proprietor slept in the doorway. Dillon refuses to tell why he went to sleep in the doorway or how he came there. He furnished bail in the amount of $100.

Meets Death Under Train.

Charles Mairet, aged 30 years, was run over and killed by a Northern Pacific train, at the East end, in Superior, about 6 o'clock last evening. The young man, who is the sole support of a widowed mother, residing at 516 Hollingshead avenue, was employed by the Wisconsin Central Railway company, across the Nemadji river, and was on his way home from work when he met his death. The body was found beside the track by a switch engine crew. The boy's mother was not informed of his fate last evening, as it was feared that the shock would kill her. The decedent has a sister and a brother residing in the southern part of Wisconsin.

Crotty Gets a Verdict.

Simon L. Crotty won his suit against the Klinkert Brewing company so far as concerns the questions submitted to the jury, and Judge Smith will determine whether Crotty is entitled to the return of the license fee he paid the brewing company for a saloon he ran but two days. The license is valued at $400. The jurors found the saloon stock to be worth about $200 and that the brewing company undertook to see that the license was transferred to Crotty.

TO SHUT OUT BLIND PIGS

Eveleth Business Men's Association to Meet Brewers.

Will Request Brewing Companies to Sell to Saloons Only.

A committee, representing the Eveleth Business Men's association, and comprised of Neil McInnis, Solomon Sax and Supt. Benjamin Greening of the Eveleth schools, will come to Duluth tomorrow to hold a conference with the local brewing companies, with a view of presenting the request of the Eveleth business men that the brewing concerns refrain from doing a wholesale beer business with any but the regular licensed saloons at or near that village.

The business men of Eveleth have been active in the matter of checking the so-called blind pig evil, said to exist at the various mining locations, and they are of the opinion that if the breweries will confine their beer business to the saloons alone, that a big step will be taken in the right direction. The Eveleth business men claim that certain brewing concerns have not been confining their trade to the licensed places, but have been selling beer at wholesale, and delivering it at places where no licenses are held.

It is alleged that certain brewing companies have a trade on the range entirely outside the saloon trade.

WEST END

EPIDEMIC OF "TOUCHES."

Railroad Men Are Having Many Old Acquaintances Recalled.

"Talk about your epidemics of diphtheria and hives, they aren't in it with the epidemic of 'touch' that is prevailing," said a West ender yesterday, as he gazed ruefully down the street at the retreating figure of a man who had just button-holed him.

The speaker was a railroad man, in the employ of the Northern Pacific.

"It is getting so that a fellow doesn't dare carry more than a few cents with him, for fear that some old friend will halt him and borrow as large an amount as possible" he continued.

"To turn down some one you don't know is comparatively an easy proposition, but when some old hand you know stops you and gives you a long pipe dream and ends up with 'Say, for a little change, what are you going to do?' If you have some money with you, you are going to [illegible], unless you are mighty hard up yourself.

"Some of these fellows you don't know that stop you every little while and want the price of this or that are a lot of bums, I think. There have been a lot of them hanging around the West end for a week or so, claiming to be old railroad men and all this and that. I have turned a lot of them down and so have the other boys. We couldn't afford to 'dig' for all the tramps that want to trade flossy conversation for some coin."

Others in the West end, railroad men and others, declare that there are a large number of the 'Lemme take 10 cents, will you, pard?" class of undesirable citizens hanging around.

On their way up from work in the yards every night, the railroad men get invitations to make loans to old acquaintances and to a lot of them they never saw before.

DIGNITY OF OWNERSHIP.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "I saw a sign in a restaurant down at Galion the other day," said a Cleveland man, "that struck me as an effective means of upholding the dignity of the establishment. The proprietor of the restaurant is a big man weighing about 200 pounds and put up like a prize ox. His sign says:

"'If You Want to Know Who Runs This Place Just Start Something.'"

STUDYING THE DIVINING ROD.

Louis Probst, a French scientist, stationed at Oloron Ste. Marie, in the Pyrenees, thinks there is something in the divining rod. His theory is that it does not point to water or a precious metal, but that its action is controlled by any change in the density of the earth's crust over which the rod is carried, says the New York Sun.

Thus he believes it would make the usual response if it were carried across the line of a subterranean watercourse which had run dry just the same as if water were flowing in it, and it would respond to deposits of oil or natural gas just as readily as to water, ore of precious metal or coal. He thinks that an important change in the earth's density such as is caused by a subterranean river may be detected in passing over it in a carriage or even a railway train. If a subterranean watercourse crosses the line of a superficial one he thinks the line of the hidden one may be traced with the rod by a person operating it in a boat on the surface stream.

The fact that divining rod experts can operate successfully when the ground is covered with snow effectually disposes of the theory that they are guided by surface indications. It would be possible for them, he thinks, to find a package of bank bills buried in a plowed field just as easily as if their value in gold were there. For in reality it would be neither the paper bills nor the gold that would attract the rod, but the place where they were hidden, the place where the homogeneity of the soil was disturbed. He further holds that it is not during the time when it is over a spring or a vein of ore that the rod is disturbed, but at the moment when it passes from ordinary ground to the site of the hidden pocket or from that site back to ordinary ground.

He considers that the phenomenon is one of magnetism. The earth attracts the rod differently according to the hidden features of its structure. If the opeartor wears rubber shoes or if he grasps the rod with rubber or silk or other non-conducting gloves nothing will happen. A magnetized rod, on the other hand, will give far more positive results than a plain rod. He has, he says, authenticated this by giving the two alternately to a blindfolded operator. Though he never knew which rod he had, the magnetized one always showed far greater activity.

Really, however, it is different what material is used. Operators usually prefer a hazel twig, but M. Probst thinks whalebone or malacca better; but best of all is a thin rod of steel about an inch in thickness with the ends wrapped in fine copper wire.

PAT FINDS MONEY.

Judge's Library: Pat had heard of the fabulous wealth of America, and that one could find money lying around everywhere. Upon his arrival in New York he set about to see the town. He had gone but a block when he found a $10 gold piece lying on the sidewalk. He picked it up, put it in his pocket, and resumed his walk. Soon he met a beggar, on whom he bestowed it, saying that the beggar needed it worse than he did, and he could get more. By a singular coincidence he found another gold piece, and parted with it as in the former case. But he found no more, and soon became thirsty and looked around for some more money. Finally he espied a small circular piece of shining tin and picked it up thinking it was more money. So, with his new found wealth, he entered a barrel-house and called for a drink, which was forthwith given him, and in payment for the same he laid down the piece of tin. The bartender refused it, saying:

"That's tin."

"Tin?" queried Pat. "Oi thought it was foive. Have wan on me."

Youth's Companion: An American, who recently made a walking tour of Ireland, in company with his daughter, came upon a white-haired old woman sitting in front of a cabin, surrounded by some poor little sticks of furniture and a fowl or two.

"An eviction!" said the daughter.

The father said nothing, but being as rich in sympathy as he is in dollars, he made a five pound note into a wad and pressed it into the old woman's hand.

"Now," said he, "tell me what is the matter?"

"Sure, sir," said the old woman, pausing in her courtesying, "me old man's whitewashing."

WE MUST MOVE
Our Stock and Fixtures

The extensive alterations made in our store last spring were not complete. The Spalding Hotel Co.'s agreement with the contractor called for a tile floor, but as other alterations were delayed until the busy spring season was upon us, we prevailed upon the contractors to let the flooring remain until February, 1908. We've only a short time now until we must vacate and give possession to the workmen.

Moving a stock, the size of ours, is no easy matter, especially as we have been unable, up to the present time, to find a room, consequently there's nothing left for us to do but sacrifice prices and reduce it quickly.

RAILROADS

MOVEMENT VERY SLOW

Only Small Amount of Pulpwood Moving Through Duluth.

The Conditions Are Becoming More Discouraging Every Day.

The movement of pulpwood over railroads entering Duluth is still discouragingly light. There are plenty of cars to handle any desired amount of freight but a lack of snow continues to keep the wood from being hauled to the railroads. It is claimed that even with two solid months of the best possible sleighing it would be an utter impossibility to get the entire cut of pulpwood and other forest products moved.

No snow is in sight for the immediate future, and the cutters are becoming more discouraged every day. Even if snow came now, the cut would be 35 per cent less than would have been the case had there been sleighing all winter, it is said. Local railroad agents and dealers in forest products are of the opinion that the winter's shipments will be 50 per cent below the figure expected and all on account of a lack of snow.

Almost all other grades of freight are moving in practically the same amounts as last year at this time. The decrease in shipments, outside the pulpwood, ties, posts, poles, etc., lies almost entirely with lumber and coal. The exceedingly mild weather of the last two or three months has resulted in a big falling off in the demand for coal from interior points, and the movement just now out of the Head of the Lakes is very small. A cold spell would mean a big increase in shipments, and more business for the railroads.

Men Needed in Alaska.

The local ticket office of the Great Northern is in receipt of a communication from an Alaskan steamship company asking that the fact of a scarcity of labor in the mining districts of Alaska be advertised locally. It is claimed that 2,000 to 3,000 miners are needed in the Tanana district alone, reached by way of Valdez.

"BIG THREE" TO RESULT

Michigan's Withdrawal Insures New Arrangement in West.

Other Members of Conference Notified of Board's Action.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 21.—Formal notice of Michigan's withdrawal from the Western intercollegiate conference has been sent to members of the new "big eight." Following is the Wolverine declaration of independence:

"The board in control of athletics of the University of Michigan voted last night to withdraw from the conference. While favoring all proper regulation of athletics, and much as we would like to continue athletic relations with the other conference colleges, the board felt that it could not impose on the students of the University of Michigan conditions which were thought not warranted as either promoting good scholarship or purity in athletics, and some of which were deemed by the board to be, under the conditions obtaining at Ann Arbor, not conducive to the best interests of those who participate in athletic games.

"The board does not desire its action to be considered as having been taken on account of any feeling of unfriendliness on its part toward the conference colleges, but to have been taken solely because of its conviction that such action was necessary for the reasons stated.

"A copy of this letter will be sent to the gentlemen who represented their colleges at the recent conference.

"GEORGE W. PATTERSON,
"Chairman board in control of athletics, University of Michigan."

The greatest rejoicing prevailed on all sides, the students appearing to feel they had been delivered from an oppressive bondage. In the colony of athletes who would have been denied further right to compete under the maize and blue if Michigan had returned to the conference there were shouts of joy when the morning papers brought them the news.

It appears that among the conference rules which Michigan will not incorporate in its new code is that prohibiting all freshmen teams from playing intercollegiate schedules. Up to two years ago the freshmen used to have a fairly hard schedule to play, with a couple of short trips to neighboring college towns. It was sorely missed after the conference decided against it.

With Michigan out of the conference Chicago, Minnesota and Wisconsin will have college athletics in the Middle West all to themselves, and to take advantage of the present situation these institutions are planning to form a "big three" combination which will dictate the policies of the competitive athletics in this section of the country.

Such a combination has long been in prospect, and now that the Wolverines have decided to sever all relations with the old big nine alliance, the field is clear for Minnesota, Wisconsin and Chicago to prepare football schedules in which the most important games will be played by these three schools.

The Maroons and Gophers have already decided to play football next fall, and as Wisconsin is certain to be given a date there will be but three other contests to be arranged by Coach Stagg to fill the five-game allotment. The remaining dates will probably be filled by Illinois, Indiana, and Purdue unless Northwestern desires to play the Midway team upon its return to the gridiron after being out of the game for two seasons.

Most of the conference representatives pretend to be surprised at Michigan's withdrawal. Minnesota, Illinois and Iowa express profound regret, while the other colleges appear to be secretly rejoicing at the turn of affairs. The Illini will feel the loss most keenly, as the Urbana baseball team has depended largely upon the Wolverines for its heaviest games.

Rivalry between the two nines has always been keen, and Coach Huff unhesitatingly says he sincerely regrets the withdrawal of the Maize and Blue from the conference.

Minnesota had been hopeful of arranging a football game with the Wolverines, and is bitterly disappointed now that hope for such a contest has been shattered.

Prof. A. G. Smith of Iowa says the loss of Michigan is more serious than any other conference school, and expresses the hope that the Wolverines will desire to return.

Michigan's action means simply that the great school at Ann Arbor is cut off from all athletic contests in its own class. All that is left for Michigan to play is a lot of second rate teams, and the pariah of the eastern college world, Pennsylvania. The Quakers have been practically ostracised in the East because of their contempt for the rules governing amateur athletic sports. Michigan is in much the same situation in the West.

The peculiar phase of the whole question is that a majority of the objectionable rules originated with Michigan. Had the older heads of the faculty been allowed to prevail, Michigan probably would be in the big nine. The withdrawal of the school shows the foolishness of allowing students to have the controlling voice. Student opinion is in nine cases out of ten so wildly biased and ill advised as to be unworthy of serious consideration.

It is undoubtedly true that the fool story about a plot against Michigan caused a feeling at Ann Arbor which precipitated the drastic action. It was typical student talk.

CHEEK.

F. E. L. Beal of the department of agriculture has been pleading the "caws of the crows," those dignified birds that certain farmers want to eradicate. Mr. Beal points out that the crow, eating grasshoppers, grub worms, and the beetles that produce the destructive white grub, does, on the whole, more good service than harm.

"After all this service," said Mr. Beal the other day, "to want to exterminate the poor crow is cheek. Ungrateful cheek. It reminds me of a waiter.

"A waiter, at the end of a dinner, presented his bill on a silver plate to a well-dressed couple.

"The man looked over the bill, frowned, shook his head, and said:

"'But you charge us for three plates of soup here. We had only two plates.

"'Ah,' said the waiter, with a reproachful smile, 'but monsieur forgets the plate I spilled down the lady's neck.'"

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

As announced in The Herald last night, Judge Dibell has decided, as a result of the recount instituted by the Duluth Real Estate exchange, that a mistake was made in canvassing the votes on two of the tax amendments submitted to the people last fall, and that the tax amendment, which has been declared adopted, was in fact defeated: while the good roads amendment, which had been declared lost, was really carried by a substantial majority.

He orders judgment entered to that effect, and the effect will be to eliminate the tax amendment from the constitution of the state, and to put into it the good roads amendment. The state will appeal, and the supreme court will have to pass upon the case.

This is a vitally important decision, as the case involves not alone these two amendments, but the integrity of the constitution itself. Had the decision been otherwise than it was—had the attorney general been successful in his attempt to defeat the contest—an amendment that the people unquestionably rejected at the polls would become a part of the constitution, and an amendment that the people ratified overwhelmingly would be left out.

The error in the official canvass was due to a mistake in the ballots with which everybody is familiar. The two amendments were placed in one order on the ballots, and in the reverse order on the tally sheets. The result was that in the majority of election districts the vote for the good roads amendment was counted for the tax amendment, and the vote for the tax amendment was counted for the good roads amendment. The effect of this transposition upon the final canvass was the official finding that the tax amendment had carried and the good roads amendment had been defeated, when in fact the reverse was the case.

What anybody may think about the merits of these two amendments makes no difference. It has been established beyond possibility of question that the tax amendment failed of passage, that the good roads amendment carried by a comfortable margin, and that by an error in the official returns a result exactly contrary to this was shown. The will of the people is that the tax amendment should be rejected and the good roads amendment adopted, and it is the duty of the courts to see that the will of the people is carried out. It was also the duty of the attorney general to see that justice is done, but he has seen fit, because his own ideals are favorable to the tax amendment and hostile to the good roads amendment, to interpose technicalities in the endeavor to perpetuate a fraud upon the constitution.

Fortunately, however, his attempt has failed. The district court, in a sound, well-reasoned and convincing opinion, has declared that the will of the people shall be carried out. The decision not only seems to be good law, but it is manifestly good sense.

TAMPERING WITH JURIES.

One Sherman S. Smith, long-time well known as a political hanger-on and lobbyist about the Minnesota legislature, has discovered that it is a more serious thing to trifle with the machine of justice than it is to poke one's fingers into the lawmaking machine.

He was accused of having attempted to influence jurors and witnesses in the bucketshop cases on trial before Judge Morris in the federal court in St. Paul. Judge Morris yesterday decided that he is guilty and sentenced him to imprisonment for ninety days.

Those who are acquainted with Smith's type of politician will find no difficulty in believing that Judge Morris saw clearly when he found him guilty. The punishment is none too heavy. A man who will seek corruptly to befoul the source of justice at its fountainhead deserves swift and merciless penalties. Those who try to undermine the integrity of jurors are caught too seldom, and when one is caught, it is in the interest of justice that an example should be made of him in a way that will be deeply educational to others of his breed.

THE ISSUES.

Said Mr. Bryan in a recent address: "The most far-reaching, the paramount issue, is not the tariff, railroads, labor or money; but, Shall the government be run for the people by the people, not for the few by the few?"

The New York Sun, after the manner of its kind—of which it is the acknowledged chief—makes merry over this ringing paragraph, in which the fundamental issue is aptly stated. It says that "government ownership, the initiative and referendum and all the other beliefs which Mr. Bryan shares in common with the Populists and Socialists would be implied."

If the control of the government by the people in their own interests, as a substitute for the control of the government by the big interests in the cause of selfishness, implies these things, what of it? Does the New York Sun, for this reason or for any other, oppose popular government? Does it object to having the people control the government for their own benefit? Of course it does, and that is the reason it finds occasion for merriment in Mr. Bryan's phrase.

The issue all of the time, until it is no longer an issue because it is no longer in doubt, is just exactly what Mr. Bryan says it is: Shall this government be run for the people by the people, not by the few for the few?

To be sure, it is too broad and too abstract to become, as the Sun suggests, a platform by itself. It is the foundation of a platform, the planks of which shall consist of concrete and definite measures to the end that the people shall rule.

The trusts have the power, at present, to tax the people; they got it through iniquitous tariff schedules. The chief plank in that platform, therefore, must be revision of those schedules so as to take that power away from the trusts.

The railroads have abused their special privileges, and another plank in that platform must be that the railroads shall be regulated; that they shall be made the servants of the people, not their masters.

Organized wealth has harried labor, not only by controlling wages but by its tax upon the laborer's household through the tariff; so that another plank of that platform must demand a square deal for labor.

Organized wealth has arranged the laws so that it controls the money supply, makes it a commodity to be gambled with by a few, and holds the whip hand over the people through manipulations of the markets; so that another plank in that platform should be reform of currency and banking laws.

These are but planks in a platform, varying in importance perhaps, but all of vital concern to the people, and all tending to the end that the people instead of property shall control the government.

The fundamental issue is public ownership of government; the paramount issue is an attack upon the chief implement of special privilege—the tariff.

AN ASSOCIATED CHARITIES NEEDED.

Duluth needs, and should have as soon as it can be organized, an Associated Charities.

There is less poverty in Duluth than in most cities, it is true, and there is less excuse for it here than elsewhere; yet no matter whether times are good or bad, there are always widows and orphans who are left helpless through death or desertion, and even if prosperity seemingly abounds in every nook and cranny, "the poor we have with us always."

The need of an organized centralization of relief work was made evident at Christmas. Never has there been in Duluth or anywhere else a more noble outpouring of generosity than there was at that time. Appeals for the unfortunate from various sources all met with a hearty and generous response, and the total amount raised for charity was enough to make a merry Christmas week for every poor family in town.

Yet, sad to say, much of this noble effort in behalf of the poor was wasted. It overlapped. It missed some, and gave too much to others. You might say that it would be impossible to give too much to those who have nothing, yet the gift of seven turkeys with trimmings to one small family with no facilities for cold storage seems to come under that head, and such an incident happened in Duluth.

To be effective and wholesome, the work of charitable relief should be centralized and systematized. There is an ugly side to charity, with all its graces. In any community there are a few undeserving ones who are content to remain paupers so long as there are generous people to provide for them, and who are willing to take relief from as many sources as possible. There were many sources in Duluth at Christmas: the Salvation Army, the Elks and other fraternal organizations, the Bethel society, the churches and hundreds of generous individuals. These did a vast amount of work at Christmas, but, as stated, for lack of centralized effort this work overlapped in many cases, and in some missed deserving objects altogether.

Besides, though the spirit of giving is aroused in many people only at Christmas time, the poor, unfortunately, are poor all the year around. There was fatness at Christmas time; in many cases there is pitiful leanness now.

The functions of an Associated Charities would be these:

To see that none are overlooked.

To see that public generosity is properly and fairly distributed.

To see that promiscuous giving does not create a professional pauper class.

And to see that public support of the deserving poor is continued all the year around, and not lumped in one week. A bountiful Christmas dinner is good, but no matter how much a poor family may eat of it, its nourishment will not sustain their strength and hope until the next Christmas.

Let the charitable organizations of the city get together and organize an Associated Charities, with an agent to see that justice is done, even in the distribution of charity.

THE LOGICAL RESULT.

Apparently the people of this country are committed to the policy of regulating corporations, especially those owning public utilities. The people have tried letting them go unregulated too long, and they have found that it meant that these corporations interfered with politics and legislation, abused their privileges, and took undue advantage of their position to rob the people.

The real object of the reactionary elements in both the great parties is to head off this tide of regulation, and to put the corporations back where they were. It will fail, of course; it would not succeed even if the reactionary interests succeeded in electing a president and a friendly congress. It is a resistless tide that flows from the determination of the people. Its chief exponents are such men as Roosevelt, Bryan, Johnson, Taft and Hughes; but its flood would be undiminished if all these commanding figures were swept away.

What is the ultimate result of this policy of regulation? William Dudley Foulke of Indiana, formerly United States civil service commissioner, in a recent public address in which he warmly approved the president's policies with respect to public utilities, said that beyond doubt the ultimate end will be public ownership. The drift toward greater governmental regulation is unmistakable, he said, and the more intimate it becomes "the less there remains to the owner of ownership. Both the railroads and the public must finally unite in a demand that nominal ownership shall be combined with essential control; in other words, that the government shall finally own and operate the roads."

There can be little doubt of this. Woodrow Wilson, in a scholarly discussion of the subject in a recent issue of the Atlantic Monthly, pointed it out as the logical result of public regulation, though he performed his task with manifest horror at the prospect. Curiously enough, President Roosevelt, the most conspicuous advocate of regulation, does not see its logical result, and professes great disgust at any suggestion of public ownership.

The ultimate result of public regulation is public ownership. The people are not going to retrace their steps and abandon public regulation; but while it may succeed for a time it will always be vexatious and clumsy, and some day the people who have been regulating the corporations that own the public utilities will realize that they must own them, and they will then take them over.

But that won't be right away. Mr. Foulke added that he would not like to see this result at once, because we are no more prepared for it than the French were for self-government after the overthrow of the old regime which was followed by the Reign of Terror.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Could you imagine a lynching bee at a curling match? There came near being one, though, according to Bob Dunbar, who tells of a misguided individual who broke up one of the rinks at a Toronto match. This was an exciting match; all matches are exciting, though they don't look it to the average spectator. "Stop her up, Sandy, boy," and the broad burrs of the muffled Scotch roars of the clan rang through the rink when suddenly silence and attention was implored by an individual, who held aloft a deprecating hand for a moment's lull.

"Gentlemen," he announced, "I have something to show you. Suiting action to the word he drew a bag from his pocket and before the interested players could interfere was sprinkling a scattering of fine sand over the glazed and sacred ice.

"Hoot, mon, talk about your flurries on the market, or the gabfest of an anarchistic red hand club! The air was filled with threats. Dignified Scotch citizens struggled to be the first to place their hands on the villain's thorax. Only a husky cop and a nearby alley exit saved the strenuous practical joker.

It seems that the humorous one had been imbibing more than was good for his sound and better judgment, and catching the merry infection of the liquid matter he was surrounding, conceived this little adventure into the realms of winter sport. He ran bump against that bulwark of Scotch inability to appreciate a joke, poor fellow, and was really quite fortunate to escape with active limbs and unscared countenance.

Walter Scott of Chicago, who is at the Lenox, recently made a business trip through Texas, where the Japanese are colonizing and going into the farming business. Mr. Scott says that the Japs are rapidly settling in Texas, are securing land and are in most instances doing very well. Texas, in regard to the class of settlers it is getting, presents a different aspect than that presented by the Oriental invasion of the Pacific slope. In Texas you will find, says Mr. Scott, some Japanese from the best families of the empire. They have come to Texas with money and have bought outright large sections of land for farming purposes. In some places they are working the land on the co-operative plan. They have the best machinery and are picking up the methods of Americans with a facility that only serves to illustrate the adaptability of the Japanese. The cheap lands of Texas have offered an inducement to the settlement of the state that many of the Orientals are taking full advantage of. They are raising cotton and making money.

According to Stewart de Krafft, a theatrical man, who is at the St. Louis, this is the worst year for the profession since '93, when unfortunate Thespians walked ties and sawed wood in an effort to get back to civilization from some backwoods junction where the obsequies of their meal ticket had been duly observed. Since the opening of the dramatic year about 200 shows have thrown up the sponge. Some of the old bread winners are having great difficulty in making expenses. Theatrical people are the first to feel the bump of adversity in the money line, anyway, and some of the lithesome and smiling chorus girls are now doing a vaudeville act in the kitchen or making a problem play out of chocolate pudding. Some of the erstwhile leading men of the thrilling melodrama have likewise left the stage to seek employment until the shekels that are at the present time being employed to conciliate the butcher and the baker come rolling joyously into the grated window of the box office.

The Rialto presents the appearance of being besieged by a very respectable and well dressed Coxey's army. Down in Gotham they are warming chairs in booking offices and mournfully welcoming the return of the brother Thespian from the wild and uncut, as he brings evidence of just one more play that has stranded on the financial rocks. The present season, from all accounts, will be a stormy one for the members of the profession.

Issues In Cold Storage.

Wall Street Journal (Ind.): William Jennings Bryan accuses Secretary Taft of being "the Great Postponer." Inasmuch as these two estimable citizens are not unlikely to lock horns later on in public issues, it is only proper to say that Mr. Bryan has a few issues of his own on the postponed list. For instance, 16 to 1 is a postponed issue carried on the profit and loss account of the party for several years. Now Mr. Bryan proposes that his party shall declare for government ownership of railroads "not to be discussed during the coming campaign." Both of these issues have excellent keeping qualities for cold storage.

The Editor's Dilemma.

Hallock News: E. A. Nelson, the senior editor of this paper, was laid up for over a week with a severe case of ptomaine poisoning, superinduced by an attack of cholera morbus. He tried for a while to figure out that he had a case of appendicitis but the financial stringency was not sufficiently cleared away to allow of such a luxury.

THE WEATHER.

The cold snaps don't last long. Yesterday it seemed as though Duluth was in the grasp of winter, but in the night the grasp loosened, and this morning it was much warmer. Last night's lowest temperature was 6 degs. above zero, and yesterday's highest was 11 degs. The weather man says it will be a little warmer tonight than last night, but that it will probably turn colder again tomorrow night.

A year ago today the ground was covered with a heavy fall of snow that came in the night, and a cold spell followed.

The sun rose this morning at 7:42 and set tonight at 4:53, making 9 hours and 16 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The cold wave now covers Southern states and most districts east of the Mississippi valley, with the highest pressures centered over Tennessee. Freezing weather extends southward to the northern portions of Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida. Low pressure areas overlie Nevada, the Red River valley and the New York coast. Those disturbances caused light to heavy rain or snow in the Ohio valley, North Atlantic states, California, Nevada and Arizona, and much higher temperatures throughout the Northwest. Rising pressures along the Pacific coast and in British Columbia and Alberta are attended by colder weather in those sections. Partly cloudy weather is indicated for this locality tonight and Saturday, with a probability of colder weather by Saturday night."

Johnson and Bryan.

Washington Post: It is claimed by the friends of Governor Johnson that if he heads the Democratic national ticket it will carry Wisconsin, Minnesota and both Dakotas. There are 85,000 Scandinavian voters in Chicago, and the men who insist on Johnson's nomination assert that these would make Illinois a doubtful state.

To elect, the Democrats must carry all the states that Parker carried and supplement them with ninety-five votes in the college that were cast for Roosevelt. There is nobody, nobody even in the swamps of Arkansas, who believes that Mr. Bryan can carry Wisconsin or Minnesota or either Dakota. Nobody believes that he would come within 100,000 of carrying Illinois or New York. New Jersey, that traditional Democratic state, would give him an adverse vote of at least 50,000 plurality, and Connecticut would be hopeless.

Mr. Bryan cannot get twenty electoral votes outside the state that were slave in 1860; and of the latter he will lose Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia, and Kentucky will be doubtful if he heads the ticket. The Bryan-or-busters are counting on Ohio, but even if the factional quarrel there in the Republican camp becomes far more bitter than it is, every Foraker vote cast for Bryan would be neutralized by a sound money Democratic vote cast for Taft, assuming that Taft will be nominated.

Besides, the Populists will hold their national convention earlier than the Democrats. They will make a Pop platform and nominate Bryan for president. Virtually the Democratic convention will be nothing but a ratification meting of the Pop ticket if Bryan is nominated. It is moon-eyed madness to suppose such a ticket would stand the slightest chance of election.

If the Democrats who believe that Governor Johnson would stand a fair chance of election will rally to him, Bryan cannot be nominated; and if all the men who believe Bryan stands absolutely no show of election should rally to Johnson, his nomination would be practically unanimous on the first ballot.

Why not take a lesson from the past? In 1840 and in 1848 Henry Clay was as much a popular idol with the Whigs as Bryan is with the Democrats of today. He was turned down for Harrison in 1840 and for Taylor in 1848, both of whom were elected.

But the Democratic party of this epoch seemingly cannot learn even in the school of experience.

Mr. Watterson Denies.

Louisville Courier-Journal: Says the Washington Evening Star:

"Mr. Beckham is a machine politician of many resources, and as such has many scalps dangling at his belt. He denied Mr. Watterson a nomination for governor."

Avast there, yer land lubber, and haul in yer line! He never "done nothing of the sort." Mr. W. was not at any time a candidate for governor of Kentucky, or any other office. Urged to become so, he gave tentative consideration to a proposed plan of party unification. Finding this impracticable, quite a year before the calling of a convention, or primary, he announced his refusal, glad to be spared a very great sacrifice.

The Star should give the editor of the Courier-Journal at least the benefit of the doubt expressed by Gen. Jackson's colored body servant, who, being asked, after Old Hickory's death, whether he thought his master had gone to heaven, promptly replied: "I ain't jist so sho' 'bout dat, sir."

"Why, wasn't the general a good man?"

"Yassir, he was a very good man."

"Well, then, if he was such a good man why hasn't he gone to heaven?"

"It all depends, sah," the old darky answered, "on whedder de general wanted to go to heaven, or whedder he didn't want to go thar. Ef he did, he's thar. But ef he didn't, all hell couldn't 'er made him go."

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Ortonville Herald-Star: Some people are beginning to find out that the Duluth daily papers compare very favorably indeed with the Twin City dailies.

Aitkin Republican: The Duluth political situation seems to be ideal. Both Haven and Tessman, the Republican and Democratic candidates for mayor, have expressed themselves as very much pleased with the prospects. This being the case, everybody should be happy.

Waseca Herald: One of the best daily papers that comes to our table is The Duluth Evening Herald. It is not only well filled with news, but its editorials are able, timely and instructive.

Virginia Enterprise: The Enterprise is not over sensitive on small things, but it does object to having The Duluth Evening Herald copy a three-line editorial from the Virginian knocking Congressman Bede and credit the same to us, as occurred in the issue of Wednesday. It is up to The Herald to make the correction. Thank you, we never aspired to an appointment as postmaster at Virginia.

Aitkin Independent: Says our esteemed contemporary, the Republican: "The only thing we have against The Duluth Herald is its politics, but we do not get half so mad at it as we did in '96." To be sure. During the twelve years following those vivacious days, the Republican party has adopted most of the principles advocated by the Democrats then. Confession is good for the soul.

Bovey Iron News: Duluth is building wisely as she plans her park system, for in a few years will come a vast change, when room for parks will be a luxury. Such is the history of rapidly growing cities. The work is being largely pushed on by enterprising citizens, who are philanthropically using their own money, among them being such men as Chester A. Congdon, who for a park at Tischer creek recently donated $10,320.58. This is noble work.

Albert Lea Times-Enterprise: The Duluth Herald refers to Wall street and its stock gambling as a national curse. The Herald sizes Wall street up correctly and puts the matter none too mildly.

Virginia Enterprise: The Twin City papers tell the brethren of the country press that in future the exchange habit does not go with them. To the boys of the north half of the state, however, this will cut no ice, inasmuch as they still receive the Duluth dailies—the two newsiest papers published in the state.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Ely Miner: Hon. John Saarl of Eveleth denies the statement made a few weeks ago as to his having announced himself as a candidate for county auditor. The talk by a few disgruntled ones as to new candidates every election to unseat Odin Halden goes merrily on, and Friend Halden smiles and proceeds to get re-elected. It will take more than election gossip to turn down an official like our present county auditor.

Walker Pilot: The Bertha Headlight and a few others, want to know what has become of the State Editorial association. Evidently the breath of life of the editorial association was the railroad pass, and the organization just naturally died for want of breath.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: E. T. Young, the attorney general of this state, is said to have a gubernatorial bug whisking about under his lid. If the Republicans are playing for Democratic success, they can do no better than place Young at the head of their ticket, and his candidacy would only be the means of continuing the strife that has rent the party asunder. Young is a sectionalist, a rank one, and his favors are all to the lower part of the state. We want a man big enough to understand that everything within its borders is Minnesota and that one section is no better, and no worse, than another.

Appleton Press: If you would have a thing well done, cause your enemies to think you don't want it done.

Hendrum Review: J. F. Jacobson for governor is the call again being heard among the progressive portion of the Republican party. No soft-spoken, scheming politician can lead the party to victory in Minnesota next year—a real man is wanted—and that means Jacobson.

Walker Pilot: The Jacobson boom fails to make the noise it did two years ago. People who two years ago were howling for Jake, can't seem to muster up enthusiasm enough today to even whisper for him.

Willmar Journal: That Bryan what-do-you-call-it has already reacted on its authors and many of the men whose names adorned it are out denouncing all who are responsible for its publication, saying that it was prepared nearly a year ago, long before Governor Johnson had been "mentioned," and that they are for Johnson if he is a candidate.

St. Peter Herald: Three-fourths of the voting population of the country would chortle with glee if the Republicans would nominate Cannon. It would be a golden opportunity to pay off old scores.

Park Rapids Enterprise: The Cambrian magazine for January contains an article on the origin of the cliff dwellers, and the discovery of America, claiming that the real simon pure early settlers were Welshmen. But the question that is agitating the Southern states just now is who discovered John A. Johnson. One thing that is sure, it wasn't Bryan.

The Choice of Pope.

Catholic Columbian-Record: Italians have been popes so long that the rest of the world feels as if the church were, in a way, a national Italian institution. This is an injury to it, especially among the millions of non-Catholics of other nationalities who, without Catholic training, inherit a prejudice against Italians. Isn't it time for the church to be universal in the choice of its head?

LIVELY AND LIGHT.

Baltimore American: Mr. Buttin (genially)—Have you kept any good New Year resolutions?

Mr. Getout (glacially)—Yes, sir—out of my conversation.

Philadelphia Ledger: Ruef, the grafter, looked solemn.

"Schmitz," he said, "this is a blow."

"What are you talking about?"

"I confessed that I was guilty. The court says I am innocent. See what a liar that makes me."

Cleveland Leader: "I thought that you were going to marry that Miss Quiverful?"

"I was, till I found out that she was one of a family of twelve, that her mother had had ten brothers and sisters, and her grandmother fourteen!"

Philadelphia Press: "I noticed," remarked the piano stool to the parlor lamp, "that you started to smoke last night when Miss Yerner was entertaining Mr. Timmid."

"Yes," replied the lamp. "I saw she was just waiting for an excuse to turn me down."

Houston Post: "I understand that she is separated from her husband?"

"Yes."

"Oh, tell me all about it; what did she do?"

"Nothing; he died."

"Chicago Record-Herald: "It is curious how habits fix themselves upon us," said Silas Haydick's nephew, who was studying for the ministry.

"Yep, I know it," replied Silas. "You take Lizzie's husband, fer instance. Since they've moved up to the city where they have all these latest conveniences, he takes a bath regular every week, whether he needs it or not."

Chicago Tribune: Tommy—Paw, what is a professional secret?

Mr. Tucker—A professional secret, my boy, is something that everybody knows but only a select few are supposed to know. For instance, it's a professional secret that every doctor administers bread pills once in a while.

Washington Star: "I hates to hear a man insistin' dat de world is gettin' wusser," said Uncle Eben, "foh de reason dat a man's impression of de world depends a heap on de kind o' society he gits into."

Baltimore American: "That man who is rounding up the amateurs for the fashionable beauty show is acting like a street car conductor."

"In what way?"

"He is collecting the fair."

Philadelphia Press: "Say, Mag," said Mame, "I don't see how you got so stuck on him. He ain't good-looking nor nothin'."

"I know he ain't," replied the lovelorn Maggie, "but didn't yer never notice wat a lot o' gold he's got in his teeth?"

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: When the ghost walks the actor rides.

Some girls consider a kiss on the lips a cheeky thing.

The average woman is shy when it comes to telling her age.

It worries a woman if she can't get some man to worry about her.

When a bachelor meets a widow a little love-making is dangerous.

Most women run up bills, but the female bill collector runs them down.

Another "Paramount."

Birmingham Age-Herald: Governor Johnson of Minnesota thinks the tariff will outrank all other questions in 1908; but if it overshadows this question, "Who permitted the panic to occur?" it will have to get up early and stay up late.

RUMOR NOT CREDITED

Vatican Ignores the Attack on Frisco's Coadjutor Archbishop.

Congregation of Propaganda Considering New Diocese in Illinois.

Rome, Jan. 24.—Rumors are circulating here to the effect that the appointment of Rev. Dr. Hanna as coadjutor archbishop of San Francisco may be revoked because of Modernist doctrines, alleged to have been found in his published works. In Vatican circles the rumors receive no credence whatever. In the first place, it is pointed out that the appointment was made after the usual process of investigation, the same as takes place whenever a bishop is to be appointed, and all the evidence for and against Dr. Hanna is to be found in a printed document which has been distributed among the cardinals and prelates belonging to the congregation of the holy office. In the second place a papal brief confirming the appointment has already been issued by the dataria and has been forwarded to Dr. Hanna. To recall it would be practically impossible, unless most serious charges were brought against him, and no one believes that any such serious charges are pending; indeed it is not believed that any real charges are to be made. Well-informed prelates express the opinion that the rumors of charges are the work of people friendly to a prelate who has been seeking the appointment which finally fell to Dr. Hanna. There is no reason for denying the fact that the pope is very particular and strict in the matter of appointing bishops, for he considers the power of such appointment one of the most important of his functions as the head of the church. That Pius X. is perfectly satisfied with Dr. Hanna's appointment there is no reason whatever for doubting.

An innovation has been introduced into the Vatican grounds. A sort of concert hall has been built in the papal gardens, with seating capacity for about 300 people. It was used for the first time just before Christmas, when there was given the first public performance of the new oratorio of Maestro Perosi, entitled "The Soul." Owing to the fact that the consistory was being held at the very hour of the rendition of the oratorio, the pope and cardinals were unable to attend, as they had desired to do, and arrangements are now under way for another performance of the work, when Pius X, will honor the composer and the singers by his presence.

The concert hall was built at the request of Maestro Perosi, who obtained the necessary consent of the pope. The funds for its construction were raised by Brother Damarus, prefect of the Pious Schools, and this new feature of the Vatican gardens is to be a permanent one. Not only is it planned to have sacred concerts given in the new hall, but it is also intended that there shall be theatrical representation of a scriptural character, to which will be admitted all the members of the Vatican military bodies and members of the families residing in the Apostolic palace. The military band of the Papal Gendarmes, which was organized some time ago, and which has already given several successful concerts under the windows of the papal apartments, will undertake the functions of an orchestra for the new concert hall.

New Opera at Vatican.

In speaking of the Abbe Perosi it has not generally been noticed that he has a brother, a layman, who is also eminently successful as a composer. His name is Marciano Perosi, and he is just now at work preparing for the performance of a new opera which he has composed, and which will have its first hearing in the town hall at Zurich, Switzerland. About 400 singers and an orchestra of eighty pieces will be required for the production. This new opera is entitled "Der Tag" (The Day), and it is of a pastoral character. It is expected that the Abbe Perosi, who is director of the Sistine chapel, will go to Zurich to witness the first rendition of his brother's work. The pope expresses great interest in the matter, and is said to be planning to have the new opera given in the concert hall at the Vatican.

It is asserted in Vatican circles that Francis Joseph, the emperor of Austria, has sent to the pope a gift of $200,000 in fulfillment of a vow which he made during his recent illness, at a time when he was very near to death. The pope took great interest in his condition at the time, and sent many messages of love and cheer to the aged sovereign, through the papal representatives at Munich and Vienna. The emperor desired to show his gratitude and appreciation to the pope, and therefore determined to send the bountiful New Year's gift. For sixty years past the emperor of Austria has never failed to send a gift to the reigning pope in the holiday season. Besides Tokay wine and other delicacies, he has always sent gifts of money, but never before in such amount as is now reported to have been sent in fulfillment of the emperor's vow.

The congregation of the propaganda is just now busy in the consideration of the erection of a new diocese in the state of Illionis, in the archdiocese of Chicago. For some time the Chicago archbishops have complained of the unnecessary vastness of their district, which entiled great efforts on their part in order to make the regular pastoral visits. It was not, however, until some of the parlishioners of several districts adjoining the state of Ohio complained to Rome that they were being neglected, that the congregation of the propaganda consented to take up the matter. It has now been practically decided to erect a new diocese, and the bishops of the Chicago ecclesiastical province have already been requested to forward to Rome a list of three names from which that of the new bishop will be selected. It is expected that the matter will be finally decided within a few weeks to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Von Muhlberg May Be Recalled.

Baron von Muhlberg, the Prussian envoy accredited to the Vatican, is now in trouble and will probably be recalled. The facts in the matter are that the German government recently resented the interference of the Vatican authorities regarding the laws passed against the Polish residents of Prussian Poland, and Baron von Muhlberg was asked by his government to remonstrate with the Vatican, because the matter was considered a national one, and not subject to interference from any foreign powers. It is reported that Baron von Muhlberg used rather forcible language to the cardinal secretary of state, and his recall is expected. Every one here knows that the sympathies of the present pope have always been with the unhappy inhabitants of the dismembered Polish kingdom, even before his election to the papal throne, when he was simply an Italian bishop. It is remembered that in one of his public utterances, while he was still a bishop, Pius X, expressed his sorrow at the condition of the former kingdom of Poland, now divided among three nations. It is then no wonder, according to well-informed prelates here, that the pope tried to help the residents of Prussian Poland in their recent efforts to resist what they deemed injustice on the part of the government.

BUILDINGS THAT ARE DAMAGED

Inferior Class of Structures That Need Special Attention.

New York, Jan.. 24.—Some insurance people and investors seem to be alarmed over the safety of the huge skyscraper buildings of New York and Chicago, because of the fatal and costly fire in the Parker building in the former city. The best engineers in the country, in a recent report, point out that there need not be the slightest apprehension on account of the "skyscrapers," though many of the old-fashioned ten and twelve-storied buildings of the Parker typo ought to be most carefully looked after and protected.

In that building the necessary elements of a fireproof structure were used, that is, steel and brick and hollow tile, but these most excellent materials were not properly put together, much of the steel work was left absolutely unprotected by tile and, of course, was heated and thrown out of place by the fire, thus causing the collapse of many sections of the floor construction. Its stair and elevator shafts were open from story to story and its windows were unprotected by wire glass, so that fire had a clear sweep both within and outside, there was not sufficient water pressure to reach above the fifth floor and the building was used for far more hazardous purposes than those for which it was intended.

It is in just such buildings as that one that danger lurks and not in the great skyscrapers, where every particle of the steel frame is amply protected with fireproof tile, and each story constitutes a unit by itself, and all external openings arye sufficiently protected by metal sash and wire glass. The building departments should give their especial attention to this inferior class of buildings and see to it that they are propertly provided with individual water supplies, alarms, etc., and should compel the owners to take the necessary precaution of closing all vertical openings and protecting all the outside widows, or there will be recorded many other such fires, for there are numbers of just such structures in every one of our large cities.

COLD, HE LONGED FOR JAIL.

Prisoner Asked the Magistrate for a Lengthy Imprisonment.

Altonna, Jan. 24.—When Bert Johnson of McKeesport was sentenced to twenty days in jail by Magistrate Irwin today for railroad treespassing, he said:

"Can't you make it thirty, judge? The weather is cold, times are hard and I can't get work, so I would rather be in jail where I would have a warm place to sleep and three meals a day."

"Law only permits twenty days," replied Irwin.

Barron, Wis., Jan. 23.—W. W. Dietz, who was charged with shipping venison out of season to a friend at Chippewa Falls, was found guilty and fined $25 and costs. He will appeal to the circuit court to test the constitutionality of that part of the law that prohibits a man from disposing of venison as he chooses after the state has given it to him.

GRIDIRON STARS AT PRINCETON

Who Took More Than Average Interest in Religious Work.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 24.—Few people are aware of the fact that many of the college football players are not alone prominent on the gridiron. Some turn their energies to honors in scholarship, some to literature, some to music, and as a fact a goodly proportion take up religious work while in college and are prime movers in the regular religious institutions of the university.

Of football men in Princeton university in the last five years, it is estimated that 35 per cent took more than the average interest in religious work.

Going over a list of some of the gridiron stars in Princeton in the last few years, it shows that many of them have led the prayer meetings of their class on Sunday evening, and have in other ways shown their interest in what is termed the ethical side of college life.

Tooker, who played end on Princeton's 1905 eleven, was president of the Philadelphian Society, the institution which corresponds to a Y. M. C. A. in Princeton.

James L. Cooney, perhaps one of the most famous athletes of the collegiate world in recent years, a football player of all-American honors and captain of two champion baseball nines, led his class in prayer several times during the year and was a member of committees of the Philadelphian society.

Donald Herring, center on the 1905 team, was a religious worker, and is now a Rhodes scholar in Oxford.

E. A. Dillon, the star quarterback of the last three years, who has been elected to captain the 1908 eleven, has always attended religious meetings here and has taken an active interest.

Of the last team which represented Princeton and played Yale the 12-to-10 game which will be entered in gridiron annals as one of the most famous struggles between the Tiger and the Bulldog, there were several men who have been leaders in religion. Among these are Booth 1909 Phillips 1908, Wister 1908, Dillon 1909, MacFayden 1910, and Harlan 1908.

Moreover, there are scores of substitutes and scrub players whose athletic achievements are not as prominent, who are frequently delegates to student conferences, members of religious committees and other college institutions which have to do with the moral side of life.

GAME COCKS WERE TOUGH

Bill Vail Fails to Recognize Their Good Qualities.

This is a story of two brothers and some fighting cocks. Both men have a fondness for birds, but in a somewhat different way. Neither owns any, but one had some unexpectedly placed in his care recently, and thereby hangs the story.

Bill Vail and Ben Vail, both well known in Duluth, are the heroes of the tale. A friend of Ben's had occasion to go down into Indiana, in a region famous for its fighting cocks, a short time ago, and when Ben mentioned this to another friend, the latter asked that friend No. 1 be requested to pick out some good birds for him and send them to Duluth. The reuest was carried out so far as giving instructions to the man who was going to Indiana was concerned.

Two or three weeks passed by, and Ben, to whom the cocks were to be consigned, had heard nothing concerning them. He did not give the matter much thought, but left on his vacation, and two or three days later a large crate containing six real beauties in the way of fighting cocks arrived at Ben's place of business. Mr. Vail had said nothing concerning them, and the people were at a loss to know what to do with them. They finally hit upon the plan of having them delivered to Ben's brother, and this was accordingly done.

Bill was more or less surprised at receiving the shipment, but the matter was satisfactorily explained, and he consented to care for the birds until Ben arrived. Ben had been home some little time before he heard anything about the shipment, and then the information came from the friend who had gone to Indiana. He asked if the birds were satisfactory, and was surprised to learn that Ben had never received them. Inquiry developed the fact that the crate had been turned over to Bill, and the two at once sought him out.

"Did you get a bunch of birds consigned to me?" asked Ben.

"Sure," said Bill, "and say, they were the toughest I ever ate. Where on earth did they come from?"

"Do you mean to say you ate them?"

"Of course. Did you think I was going to keep them under my bed a month just so you could enjoy a good meal when you got home? Not much."

And when he was told, in rather heated terms, that he had eaten game cocks worth $5 each, he had the ill grace to laugh.

SHE RODE THE BUMPERS, TOO.

Woman in Male Attire Traveled With Her Husband.

Mitchell, Ind., Jan. 24.—Burrell Lindsay and his wife, who were married several months ago and went to Portland, Or., to make their fortune, found themselves knocked out by the financial flurry and they have returned home.

They were too independent to send for funds and so Mrs. Lindsay put on a suit of her husband's clothes and together they took the "bumpers" for the East.

They left Portland sixteen days ago and came through without mishap. Mrs. Lindsay found men's clothes attractive while making the trip. However, she is very willing to return to sacques and skirts.

Sleep

Sleep is nature's rebuilding period, when the energy used by the brain, muscles and organs is renewed. If you lose sleep, your system is robbed of the strength sleep should give. Continued loss of sleep multiplies this loss until you become a physical wreck. Dr. Miles' Nervine quiets the irritated nerves and brings refreshing, invigorating sleep. Nervine contains no opiates, and therefor leaves no bad after-effects.

"For over two years I suffered untold agonies; my friends thought I was going crazy. I could not sleep nor rest at all. I tried different doctors, but failed to find relief. My head would ache all the time; I was like one drunk; could not concentrate my mind, and was so restless and worried that sleep was out of the question. After taking one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine I felt wonderfully changed. I am now on my third bottle and am gaining all the time. I can lie down and sleep like a child, and am able to do my work."

HIS GARB CENSURED.

Isle of Man Legislators Object to Hall Caine's Knickerbockers.

London, Jan. 24.—A formal protest has been made by the house of keys of the Isle of Man against the practice of Hall Caine, the novelist, appearing before that body attired in knickerbockers.

An allusion was made to him in the course of a debate on the question whether bald-headed members subject to colds through draughts should be allowed to sit with their hats on.

The chairman said that wearing hats was a grave discourtesy in the presence of the king's representative and that members should be more careful in their attire, and with a withering glance, he pointed to Hall Caine as a flagrant offender.

DISAVOW INTENTION TO REFLECT ON JUDGE.

Washington, Jan. 23.—In the supreme court of the United States today, Attorneys Crawford, Aldrich and McAuley, representing the petitioners, for an appeal in the case of Thomasson and others, opposing the re-organization of the street railways of Chicago, filed a disavowal of any intention to personally reflect on Judge Grosscup in their petition and asked the court to strike from its files the suggestions to that effect yesterday presented to the court by Attorney Burry, on behalf of 75 per cent of the bondholders and stockholders of the various companies.

This was done with the consent of Mr. Barnes, the head of the company, with a view of insuring equitable treatment of all the creditors. Can J. D. Rockefeller's Income Per Minute Compare With This Composer's Earnings?

For just a few short hours a month ago, a young man of Detroit could sit back in his easy chair and congratulate himself upon being the highest paid individual in this country if not the world. He had just received from Jerome H. Remick & Co., a $5,000 check in exchange for the manuscript and publishing rights of a new song, now familiar to everybody, entitled "Sweetheart Days." J. Anton Dailey is the name of this fortunate composer and he explains that within five hours from the time he first conceived the tune of this song, he had put it in shape for the printer and sold his work to the publishing house mentioned. At this rate his remuneration figures down to the sum of $16.66 per minute, and while $5,000 is a big price to pay these days for a song, it looks as if the Remick concern had struck a rich bargain. In an incredibly short time "Sweetheart Days" has almost entirely superseded all other ballads. There is something irresistible about the song and it popularity has spread like wildfire from one town to another. Music houses and department stores are crying for "more" from the publishers. "Sweetheart Days" is a sentimental ballad with melody that charms the sense of hearing and verses that compel heart interest. The old, old story of love has never before been told in such an appealing way. All the world takes to such a song: "Sweetheart Days" is the popular theme. Surely every lover of music will not fail to secure a copy of this great new ballad, even more fascinating than "Dreaming," by the same writer.

In the latter role, Mrs. Campbell is an entire stranger to America. "Magda" was the play in which she made her first appearance in America. Then, as now, under the management of Liebler & Co., managers, who have been identified with the most interesting personalities that have been brought to this country from Europe. Mrs. Campbell created both the title roles of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" and "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith." The latter was written expressly for her by Pinero, and no one has ever been able to sharp in the fame which Mrs. Campbell has found in the part. "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," considered by many the greatest modern problem plays, is a drama that brought almost as much fame to Mrs. Campbell as it did to its author.

WILL ARREST THE ITALIAN MINERS.

Marion, Ill., Jan. 24.—With the announced intention of arresting the Italian rioters who last night fired 100 shots, following a declaration of war between the Italian and American residents of the mining town of Bush, near here, officers from this city are today on their way to quell the disturbance. Reports from Bush today are to the effect that no one was hurt yesterday, but it is expected there will be serious trouble unless the Italians leave the town peaceably. The trouble arose over a quarrel between the superintendent of a mine at Bush and an Italian, the Italian residents siding with the miner, the other residents with the superintendent.

BURGLARS USE SLEDGE

Break in Front Door of Kelley Hardware Company's Store.

Take Twenty-Six Revolvers From Case and Make Their Escape.

Using a heavy sledge to break down the front door, burglars entered the store of the Kelley Hardware company on West Superior street between 5 and 6 o'clock this morning and made a clean getaway with twenty-six high grade revolvers, which they took from a case in the front part of the store.

Nobody heard the noisy operations of the burglars. They did not use the sledge sparingly, as the deep dents in the door indicate, and the burglary was not discovered until about 6 o'clock. The glass was broken in the door and the lock was sprung.

The revolvers were in the show case on the sporting goods side of the store and they evidently attracted the burglars first. Every revolver in the case was taken, including some of especially high grade and of considerable value. The other cases were filled with valuable knives and other goods, but the burglars evidently thought the revolvers were haul enough and departed without touching anything else.

The police are working on the case, but their task is difficult on account of the clean getaway of the burglars.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

That "The Women of Browning" have not the attraction for the Duluth women that the men of the poet have, was proved this morning, as a smaller number of members of the Twentieth Century club gathered for the lecture on the first-mentioned subject than were present last week when "The Men of Browning" were discussed. This morning's talk was one of the finest in which Mr. Powell has been heard, and the lecture was of absorbing interest.

"Browning has shown," said the lecturer in part, "that women's world is essentially a world of love, and that the center and sum of her life must be love; that however many things she may be interested in, however many outside influences she may wield that love primarily, to use a much-hackneyed phrase is 'women's sphere.' I know that there has been much that is silly and light written on the subject and that I am placing myself almost at your mercy in making such a statement, but I hope you will not misunderstand. Woman's function has been limited to a high degree and in many nations and in many walks of life in the history of the world, and today she has had but the one function, that of wife and mother, whereas man has had a thousand functions. The web woven by man's reaction to life in these many ways is more complex than in woman. Whether this be a purpose of God or a matter of evolution, most people will admit that the fact remains. In the depths of character, however, there is no sex. The soul of men and women is of the same stuff, and although they look at life from different angles, in the essentials of character when they come face to face with their own souls and God, there is no sex. Man is more complex than woman in the great questions of the soul.

"In Browning's delineation of women there is a certain unity in his characters that is not due, I think; to a limitation of the poet's insight but in his conviction that different women under the same circumstances, will do much the same thing. The great questions are handled so delicately and with such reverence as to be almost too sacred for public discussion. He treats of the evil in women, of the tragedy suffered from the betrayal of love, of the possibility of ideals being dragged in the mire, with such a delicacy and fineness of feeling that we complete our reading with a feeling that she has been more sinned against than sinning. He treats the subjects with frankness but with a purity of soul that redeems from any taint, and an insight that might go far to solve the problems, the poems suggest. He shows that because woman's relations to life have been greatly limited and confined to a narrow channel, that the current of her life in that channel runs with all the greater force and depth, and that all the intensity of her nature is thrown in that direction; that whether she will or no the center of her life lies here. All the enfranchisement that may come to women will not enable her to do man's work nor can man do women's work. This conviction that love is the center of women's life at which the poet arrives is far from the easy sentimentality of 16-year-olds, and far from the amorousness of the poetry of a century ago and far from the love with which the novelist occupies himself, ending his book with the ring of wedding bells. In the poet we find the exquisite picture of the great love infinitely higher than the passion which the novelists call love and which is after all only a preparation for the deepest love of which man and woman are capable."

The next lecture in the course will be on "Browning's Optimism" and will be presented next Friday morning at the library.

One Solution.

The Women's Page received the following request from "A Reader" last week: "Will some kind reader, pleaso tell me through these columns how to clean a baby's white fur robe? I would like to wash it with soap and water.

"Last fall I tried gasoline. I used five gallons, but it was not a very howling success."

The request was published in these columns, but of all the information in the world there seems to be none for the assistance of those desiring to clean a baby's white fur robe. The Women's Page is absolutely inexperienced, and all the cook books consulted fail to give the formula. However, this much knowledge has been gained. The robe will be dry cleaned at one of the local establishments for $1.25. Gasoline costs 25 cents a gallon. Ergo five gallons will cost $1.25. By a system of pure logic involving some addition and substraction, it will be found economy to send the robe to the cleaners and use the time saved in playing with the baby or reading Darwin's "Descent of Man."

The regular meeting of the Saturday club will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the club room of the library. "News From the Countries," with Mrs. H. L. THE EVENING STORY

An Enjoyable Event

By Mabel Gifford.

"Dear me! I wish we might have a little change. Tea parties are pleasant enough, to be sure, but ten parties every two weeks all winter every winter, dear me!"

The speaker, a young girl, was standing by a window in a pretty parlor, looking out to spy the next arrival and looking in at the four already assembled.

She was agreeable to look at, with her neat dress and smooth hair and what one would call a "common-sense" face.

A bright face it was, and every one felt better for a glimpse at it.

Della Stuart was practical, as you might surmise, and when she said "dear me!" she meant it.

"Here comes Alta Moore and Velista Graves! Now we shall hear the latest invention for entertainments," and Della eagerly joined the group and looked expectantly toward the door.

"Oh, Alta, we are so glad you have come; you are just in time to save us from despair. We have been ransacking our brains, and all in vain, for something new. We are so tired of the regulation tea party. Do tell me how they amuse themselves in H—."

Tall, dignified Alta swept into a comfortable chair and leaned back leisurely, surveying the group a little patronizingly, but she had nothing to offer.

Velista Graves moved uneasily and opened her lips several times as if to speak, and then shrank back.

Velista was one of the mortals who seldom have anything to offer, but stand ready to follow another's lead. Velista was very necessary in every society. This Velista was thin and pale, and seemed always to be shrinking out of sight.

The next time she made her timid attempt to speak Della spied her, and encouraged her with her cordial smile. "What is it, Velista; have you thought of anything?"

"My cousin," she began hesitatingly, "wrote about a little party they had lately at M—. If you can't think of anything—"

"Velista, who would have dreamed of your proving such a treasure? You who never go anywhere. Tell us about it, quick."

Velista looked somewhat overcome, but went on to give them an account in connection with her cousin's letter.

There was a unanimous aye vote in favor of Velista's letter, and they set about "constructing the idea," as Della expressed it, affirming that if they only "executed faithfully" it would certainly be a success.

In the Journal the following week appeared a neat little announcement. "A Basket Party!" all exclaimed; "what is that?"

No one knew. All that could be learned was that the young ladies had offered to furnish the next entertainment for the "Social Circle."

The Thursday evening at last arrived, also a goodly company; the "old folks" to see how the young folks would "make out;" the boys to see "what was up" and to have a good share of the fun, if any was to be had; Mr. Story the stationer, to find out what had been done with so much tissue paper; and all were burning up with curiosity.

All that met their wide-awake eyes was a few tables, chairs, settees, and white curtains each side of the room.

The notice had read "Proceeds to be sent to the orphans' home," and "Don't see where any proceeds are to come from," passed from one to another, with disappointing glances at the curtained platform.

"Wonder what the tables are for?"

Suddenly burst upon the air the inspiring strains of "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," and a portion of the white curtain on the left, furled, and revealed the orchestra—home talent under an arch of red, white and blue.

Somebody started a march, and in the midst of this the music stopped with a crash, and down came the curtain on the right, and there on the tables, against the wall and suspended in the air were baskets, baskets everywhere; in size varying from a collar-box transformed by a bit of tissue paper and a handle to a good sized clothes basket, and in quality from pasteboard to daintiest wickerwork.

The stationer began to look enlightened, the rest looked puzzled.

Wide-awake Dolly mounted a chair behind the tables.

"Boys and girls," she began, with a twinkling glance around the room that included the oldest boy and girl there, "there's something good in every one of these baskets. I hope each boy here will buy one, and it will be his duty to share the contents with the owner of the name he will find under the cover, or the owner of the ribbon that shall match the one he finds in his basket.

"Here's a sensible looking basket, and it's heavy; who bids?"

There was a lively time for half an hour, the baskets going for 25, 50, 75 cents and even $1. The young ladies behind the tables were kept busy pinning names to the baskets, as they were not to be distributed until later, and explaining that the former owners were to be their partners for the evening. Each took a peep into the basket, and securing the name or ribbin, went in search of his fate.

Several cases of color blindness were discovered, especially among the young people.

Della attempted to remedy this. "That is just where the fun comes in," she explained, the odd matches. "You can choose any time." But still some were determined to choose this evening.

Charlie Carroll walked off dutifully with Grandma Elwell, who nodded and smiled till her cap ribbons danced.

Fred Dexter wasn't going to be tied to voluble Miss Phillis all the evening, not he, and coaxed Flossie Maxwell's gentleman, a 10-year-old, to exchange ribbons with him.

Flossie was a great favorite, and Charlie and Fred were rivals for Flossie's favor.

Charlie looked after him with a pang of envy.

The small tables were now utilized for games of all kinds, and one corner of the hall was set apart for a bean-bag game, where all with very young partners betook themselves.

"I wouldn't be such a ninny as to lose all the fun, being polite to an old lady," said Fred to Charlie as the latter passed on his way to his partner, with his basket.

"Mrs. Elwell says she hasn't had such a good time since she was a young girl," remarked Flossie, with an approving glance at Charlie that comforted him somewhat.

The dear old lady understood boys and had filled her basket with doughnuts. Grandma Elwell's doughnuts were known near and far.

Fred glanced from his chocolate caramels to the puffy doughnuts, with a little outward disdain, but with an inward longing.

He looked about for Miss Phillis' basket; pie! But who wouldn't starve on caramels for the sake of pretty Flossie Maxwell's company?

Somehow, Flossie was not as delightful as usual; perhaps because she was so absent minded.

The examination of the contents of the baskets caused considerable merriment. One ample basket contained two cakes of tutti-frutti, another two biscuits, feathery light, and all buttered. A silk affair intended for a twine-ball, was filled with lozenges; a pink tissue-paper box with a tiny bouquet fastened to the handle was packed snugly with peanuts. Pop-corn sugared flag root, dried peaches, cookies, oranges, sassafras-root, and fancy crackers were the contents of others. The white-wire basket contained marshmallows. Mr. Walker had bid off the clothes basket and treated everyone to apples.

One young man found only rose leaves for refreshment, and he refused to eat, or share them, declaring they were just what his sister had been wanting for a rose-jar.

As there were more gentlemen than ladies, a number had bought two baskets, had two ladies to entertain, and fared sumptuously.

Now the remainder of the curtain on the left disappeared, and there stood a happy-looking maid in buttercup yellow, leaning against a very rustic looking well with a suspiciously new looking bucket suspended over it.

She generously offered to treat every man in the room to a glass of lemonade.

This caused a general smile, for of course, every gentleman must have two glasses and some three.

When the bucket was empty, all joined in singing several good old songs, closing with "Auld Lang Syne." Then there was a dissolving of partnerships, though most of the young couples went off together.

Of course, Flossie was retained by Fred, but a gentle pressure of the hand as she bade Charlie good-night, and an assuring smile, sent him home happy.

All agreed that the basket party was the most enjoyable event of the season. The orphans received a gift of $20, and the young men, not to be outdone by the young ladies, proposed to prepare the next entertainment, promising that it should equal and perhaps excel the basket party.

"A rose in the snow," that masterly phrase of English whereby Holmes describes the some time complexion of an old beau is the most suggestive of color that one probably ever heard. The contrast of a beautiful deep, soft velvety pink rose against the beautiful white snow is nice enough to think about for a whole day.

It is added that strawberries in the market do not look anything like a rose in the snow.

The strawberries although they are plump and pudgy and quite buxom looking so far as color goes are yet not a very hearty nor natural looking and as far as that delicious lusciousness that comes later, the kind at present in the market do not even hold a promise of it.

DR. JOHNSON DEAD.

Was 98 Years Old and Character in Copper Country.

Calumet, Mich., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. Johnson, one of the oldest residents of Houghton and Keweenaw counties is dead at his home at the Fulton location.

Dr. Johnson was one of the best known residents of this section, having resided here continuously since the close of the Civil war in 1868. He practiced as a veterinary surgeon, from which he got the soubriquet "Dr." No one seems to know anything of his antecedents. He told a friend not very long ago that he had two sons living in this country, but that he did not know just where they were.

The old man was known throughout the length and breadth of the Copper country. He was possessed of a striking personality. Upright for a person of 98 he was able to get about as well as a man many years his junior. His demise was somewhat sudden. He always wore a long snowy beard, and his hair hung in snowy whiteness, several inches in length down the back of his neck.

BECKER'S CONDITION GOOD.

St. Cloud, Minn., Jan. 24.—The condition of Henry Becker, the patrolman who was shot four times Tuesday night in a gun fight with robbers, is very encouraging. With one bullet still lodged in his breast and another in his back, he spent a good night, and the attending physicians are much encouraged.

DYSPEPSIA-PROOF.

How Any Meal Can Be Thoroughly Enjoyed By Any Stomach.

Men, as a rule, are first discovered by their enemies. Their antagonists turn on the searchlight, and the proof of merit will lie in being able to stand the flash.

It was only in this way that Mr. White ever knew that dyspepsia was one of Mr. Black's worst enemies. Sitting face to face at a two-by-four table, he handed his afflicted friend the bill of fare:

Oyster Cocktail. Stuffed Olives.
Boston Clam Chowder.
Strained Gumbo.
Sirloin Steak with Mushrooms.
Roast Beef Hash.
Boiled Ox Tongue with Sauerkraut.
Lobster a la Newburg.
Baked Pork and Beans.
Combination Crab Salad.
Hot Mince Pie.
Pineapple Fritters.

Mr. White ordered a "little of each." Mr. Dyspepsia Black ordered crackers and a glass of milk. "I had such a big breakfast this morning," he said, "that I'll just take a bite to keep you company." But Mr. White could not be deceived: "I am afraid you can't stand the gleam, Mr. Black. Why don't you say you have dyspepsia and be done with it? You'll always have that hungry look anyhow, as long as you have dyspepsia. Now, listen. My stomach was in just as bad condition as yours at one time. But now I can eat anything, at any time. For instance, this clam chowder, or sirloin steak or even the lobster would be just as welcome to my stomach as your crackers and milk. You don't realize how this dyspepsia business is robbing you of your spirit, of your energy and ability to think quickly. I can't help notice it. You haven't the cheer and sociability you had three months ago. Now, I'll tell you what to do," and thereat the cheerful Mr. White took a vial from his pocket and extracted a wee tablet. "There, there is a tablet that contains an ingredient, one grain of which digests 3,000 grains of food. For even the worst dyspeptic it's the only thing that really gives relief. The reason is it relieves the stomach and stimulates the gastric juice. I can't get along without them. They are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You can get them anywhere on earth for 50c a package."

Yes, it is true. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets absolutely stop heartburn, nausea, indigestion, dyspepsia of the worst type, sour stomach, bloaty feeling and all eructations and irritation, and freshen and invigorate the stomach. They cheer you up, and make you get all the good there is in your food. You will forget you ever had a stomach to worry you.

What the Copper country baseball magnates think of Duluth sporting writers doesn't concern Duluth sporting writers. But it's something of a balm to the conscience of any poor typewriter-pounder to know that his humble predictions have been true, and that, regardless of what adverse criticism may be his as a result of them, his poor little expressions hit the nail on the head.

Duluth sporting writers came in for a round roasting from Dr. Glass, Mann, Spalding, et al., at Houghton Wednesday. The old, old theme of the knocks directed at Houghton and Calumet, which has been worn out during the summer, was again brought out to do service, despite its shabby form, and a few of the scribes present faithfully did their duty in the good cause. But that's neither here nor there.

The impression Duluth fans received when the Houghton meeting was called was that it would be a joke. It was. It was merely a sign to the baseball world that Houghton and Calumet were still on the map, and that Percy R. Glass of Lake Linden, Mich., was living and attempting to do business at the same old stand. There wasn't a particle of necessary business to be done. But Duluth and Winnipeg footed the bills for their trip to Houghton.

It's all over in baseball matters between the Copper country and the western end of the circuit. The last clod has given forth its hollow sound, and the mourners part at the gate, each to go his way. There is no feeling of animosity toward the Copper country baseball people cherished in Duluth. Criticism was harsh and pointed at times, but it was in the best of spirit. The Copper country was unfortunate in not being able to carry out its aspirations for Class C ball, which is for larger communities. Piqued by their failure, those hit looked for the venom in the most casual statements. Baseball of a suitable class will make a go in the red metal region, and Duluth newspapers or baseball men would do nothing to hurt its cause there.

The American association movement to enter Chicago has finally downed. After many conferences between Messrs. O'Brien, Havenor, Tebeau and Cantillion of the circle of the chosen few, it has been decided that the proposition to buckle into the two big leagues is too great a one to tackle at this late stage of the game, and a postponement of activities for one year is a result.

But the fact that the American association has desisted for the time doesn't mean that the ambitious ones have given up their hopes altogether. They will lay their plans well. With a year before them, they will have plenty of time to frame things up. They don't intend to be caught with their guns stacked when they make the invasion. Defeat would be permanent, and they want to put up all possible guards against that contingency.

The big leagues are also forewarned, but they can hardly put themselves in any better position to repel an invasion than they are in right now. The American association plans can be improved in a year, and it is certain the move can be made with more chances of success next year than it would at present.

The manner in which the Hibbing newspapers jumped on the Duluth horsemen for their action in barring Little Jim from the ice track races wasn't slow. With all due respect to the intentions and judgment of the Duluth horsemen, there is considerable justice in the claims of the Hibbing press.

Little Jim was a Hibbing horse, but when Frank Frerker secured him he became a Duluth horse. If the Duluth horsemen wanted to furnish the best sport at any cost, they might have let the little pacer in. If their horses are all they claim for them, they couldn't lose anything, for Little Jim wouldn't take down the cup.

Dr. D. took the biggest prize at Hibbing races last season. In view of that fact, it isn't fair to bar Little Jim on the sole grounds that he is a Hibbing horse, as those who gave the matter voice through the press chose to intimate.

It Does the Business.

DULUTH RINK SAVES THE DAY FOR THE AMERICANS

Hurdon is Only American Skip to Win His Games.

Has Big Enough Margin to Overcome Three Defeats.

The International Trophy, the most coveted prize in the string of awards for victory in the big bonspiel of the Northwestern Curling association, will again remain on the American side of the border this year. By the narrow margin of one point, four American rinks defeated the four Canadian rinks last night and all-American rinks entered in the bonspiel will play down for the trophy and the lapel buttons, which go to the individuals to mark their success.

Interest in the bonspiel yesterday centered in the international event. The Canadians were not without their supporters, who enthusiastically saw three of their rinks win from three of the Americans.

Bob Dunbar lost to Lemon by 12 to 14, Stewart lost to Mackenzie by 8 to 11, and Braden defeated Hastings by 9 to 6, making the cause of the Americans look extremely gloomy. But President Harry Hurdon of the Duluth club and his three assistants came to the fore and turned the tide of fortune. If Hurdon wins nothing else during the entire bonspiel, his work in the international will make his entry not in vain. He was pitted against Rochon, one of the best skips in the bonspiel. But the Duluthians were in great fettle. Stone after stone they placed in the ring, and the most valiant efforts of Rochon and his men to dislodge them were in vain. At the last end, the score stood 13 to 4, with the margin in Hurdon's favor, and it was more than enough to offset the margins of the three Canadian rinks, which were victorious.

Lemon made a wonderful finish against Dunbar. He was two down on the last end, but clever work laid a four head and defeated the great Dunbar for the first time in the present spiel by the score of 14 to 12.

George Mackenzie furnished some excitement in the last few minutes of the play. He and Stewart had a nip and tuck game all the way until the last few ends, Mackenzie came up with a cluster of stones in the charmed circle. It was feared for a time that he would secure margin enough to offset Hurdon's great work, but he fell one shy and the final aggregate scores were made 40 and 38, with the Americans leading.

Following are the rinks which competed in the international, and the scores by ends:

The candidates for the grand average prizes are now beginning to loom up, and in the front rank of them are the Braden and Dunbar rinks.

Braden is making a great record. He has as yet lost only one game in the bonspiel, his match with Lemon. In the Duluth and St. Paul Jobbers events Braden has reached the "eights."

Dunbar has also come through the spiel losing only one game to date, his match in the international event also against Lemon of Winnipeg. He has not progressed as far as Braden, however, not having reached the "eights" in any event.

Dunbar and Braden will come together today in the first round of the Canadian Soo event, and the game will go far toward determining the winner of the grand average prize. It should be one of the most notable contests of the bonspiel.

The crowds at the rink yesterday were greater than on Wednesday, and the observation rooms were well filled all through the day. Last night, especially, they were crowded and the spectators took a keen interest in the play. The cold weather insured good ice and good play.

Close matches were the rule yesterday. Rees and McCutcheon, A. K. Smith and Hastings and Riheldaffer and Braden had merry games in the St. Paul Jobbers event, which were in doubt until the last stone was thrown. McCutcheon and Rees also furnished the excitement in the Duluth event, McCutcheon winning by a score of 9 to 8. Brewer and Rochon had an interesting match in the first round of the Canadian Soo trophy, Brewer winning by the close score of 7 to 6. Rees knocked Hurdon out of the Canadian Soo by 9 to 8 and H. W. Gilroy put Sam Hastings away by 11 to 9. Oldham, who came up strong in the first day's play, was also put out of the Canadian Soo in the preliminaries by Braden. Dr. Catterson and Rev. Harry Knowles were pitted together in the first round of the Canadian Soo and Catterson came out on top by a 9 to 8 and Dunlop put Sam Cleveland out in the first round by a score of 12 to 9.

AFTERMATH OF MEETING

Baseball Gathering at Houghton Wednesday Was Joke Expected.

An analysis of the results of the baseball meeting at Houghton Wednesday, when the Northern-Copper Country league was formally dissolved, reveals facts, which make clear to the confused fans just what the meeting represented and the purpose of its being called. Although baseball relations between Duluth and Winnipeg and the Copper country towns have now been formally, officially and irrevocably broken off, an aftermath is not unseemly at this time.

In the first place, the meeting at Houghton was a joke, called to satisfy the whims of the Copper country men, led by President Percy R. Glass of the league that once existed. It was ostensibly to place the baseball situation in this northern country before a representative of the national commission, but as it turned out, the real purpose was to invalidate the annual meeting of the league held here Dec. 15 for the selfish purposes of the Copper country towns, whose membership in the league was thus extended from Dec. 15 to the time of dissolution at Houghton.

Incidentally, there was no representative of the national commission present. There was nothing done toward opposing the dissolution. There was no action taken except the dissolution of the league, which had already been dissolved and to all outward appearances, the meeting caused a needless expenditure of time and money for all concerned. But under the surface, the aims of the Copper country magnates were satisfied and they went their way rejoicing.

It was charged before the meeting that Duluth and Winnipeg made misrepresentations to the national commission. As things turned out the misrepresentations came from the other direction. When the annual meeting of the league was held at Winnipeg at the close of the season, a circuit committee was appointed, and it was instructed to report at the adjourned annual meeting to be held in Duluth Dec. 12, when the officers were also to be elected. Dec. 8, Dr. Glass sent out letters to the club managers, suggesting that the meeting be not held at that time, but be postponed until January. The Duluth and Winnipeg clubs didn't see fit to postpone the meeting, the date for which was fixed in the regular way at Winnipeg, and they met. The Copper country magnates did not appear, but those present went ahead with the business, dropped Houghton and Calumet, reorganized the league and elected their officers.

Then Dr. Glass claimed that the meeting was illegal as the adjournment of the annual meeting. He said, it is claimed, the annual meeting was not adjourned to Duluth, but that the circuit committee was merely instructed to meet at Duluth on that date. It is claimed he went to the secretary of the national commission with those representations, secured the annullment of the action of the Duluth meeting and the calling of the meeting, which was held at Houghton Wednesday.

When the Duluth and Winnipeg men called upon him for explanations Wednesday, it is said, he could not show the minutes of the Winnipeg meeting, a copy of his order, postponing the adjourned meeting at Duluth, which order took the form of a suggestion, nor could he show anything else to back him up in his assertion that he had called off the Duluth meeting and set the date ahead.

The question as to what the Copper country people gained by their action isn't hard to answer. They gained the annullment of the action of the regular annual meeting and the calling of a special one at Houghton. The Duluth meeting took away their franchises and transferred them, and the players became free agents by the action. Houghton and Calumet had some deals on for the sale of players. To all appearances they decided that the sale of the players was of more importance than the time and expense incurred by the Duluth and Winnipeg people, and they went ahead to serve their own ends, and the national commission unwittingly aided them.

Now the Northern league people must go ahead and reorganize their league again. They were forced to meet the expense of a trip to the Copper country. They received something of a reputation for high-handed measures with the national commission. They had nothing to gain by high-handed methods, where the Copper country people did. The Houghton meeting was a final clincher to the dissension and strife which has marked the league's career, since the two ends banded together and marked the end of it all. The two districts will go their separate ways and continue to boost baseball.

J. M. Lamb and A. H. Pulford remained over in Duluth yesterday and left this morning for Fargo and Grand Forks to line up those towns for the new Northern league. As soon as possible a meeting will be called and the new league will be organized. The St. Paul-Minneapolis idea has been practically given up for this year, on account of the internal strife in the American association and the delay which would be occasioned, regardless of which way further overtures toward securing permission to enter the towns came out. So the Northern league will stick to its own territory next year.

There are several possible circuits in sight. That which is most favored would be made up of Duluth, Superior, Fargo, Grand Forks, Winnipeg and Brandon. Superior is said to be something more than a possibility. Brandon is a flourishing city about 130 miles from Winnipeg, crazy on the baseball question and anxious to get into a league with Winnipeg. Fort William is frowned upon on account of the transportation difficulties. Portage la Prairie, which lies about midway between Winnipeg and Brandon, is a very lively candidate for admittance, and Devils Lake, N. D., is not a dead baseball town.

"We may frame up an eight-club circuit from the towns mentioned, but I am more favorable to a six-club circuit," said A. H. Pulford yesterday. "We aren't a bit anxious about the situation. All of those towns are anxious to get in, and the league can be framed up very easily. We were thinking it might be well to have Winnipeg, Brandon and Portage la Prairie on the other side of the border and three towns on this side, but for schedule reasons it will probably be more advisable to have four towns on this side and two on the Canadian side of the border.

"I can assure you of one thing—we will have the best league this year we have ever had in this Northern country. We have the experience in baseball now to fit us to frame up a league, with an eye to the best advantages, and we will not be slow to take them. We are going to have baseball next summer, and it will not be of an inferior quality, either."

HIGH JUMP ON ROLLERS.

John Davidson Gives Great Exhibition on Roller Skates.

An exceptionally good exhibition of roller skating tricks was given last evening at the Temple rink by John F. Davidson, who claims to be the world's champion fancy roller skater.

One of the most interesting feats he attempts is the high jump on rollers. Davidson holds the world's record for this, having made three feet and ten inches at Madison Square Garden, New York.

He also performed many other interesting and entertaining feats.

VALET ENDS LIFE.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—George Canty, valet to William Faversham, and who also acted minor parts in the play in which his employer is appearing here, committed suicide last night by inhaling gas. No motive for the act could be learned by the police. Canty left a note asking that his wife, who lives in Bangor, Me., and that his uncle, Frank Loftus of the same place be notified.

DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve is especially recommended for piles. Sold by all druggists.

Charles Sevoni, the mat grappler from Wausau, who meets Charles Sutter at the Metropolitan tonight, reached the city yesterday and looked to be in the pink of condition. Sevoni has been throwing all comers in Wisconsin, and from his appearance looks able to give what the man gave Harris, such a battle, last Friday, one of the best matches of his career. Sutter reached the city yesterday evening.

S.S.S. PURIFIES THE BLOOD

Bad blood is responsible for most of the ailments of mankind. When from any cause this vital fluid becomes infected with impurities, humors or poisons, disease in some form is sure to follow. Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Boils, Pimples, etc., while they show on the skin, have an underlying cause which is far deeper—an impure, humor-infected blood supply, and until this is corrected, and the blood purified, the distressing itching and burning symptoms will remain. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Scrofula, Blood Poison and all other blood disorders, are the result of a vitiated, polluted circulation, and will continue to grow worse unless the poison is removed from the blood. In all blood and skin diseases S. S. S. has proved itself a perfect remedy. It goes down into the circulation and removes all waste matter, humors or poisons, and makes the blood pure and health-sustaining. Nothing reaches inherited taints and old chronic troubles like S. S. S.; it cures because it purifies the blood and restores lost properties to the impoverished circulation. Not only is S. S. S. a blood purifier of the highest order, but a tonic and appetizer without an equal. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired sent free to all who write.

THE SIDE OF THE UNIONS

Big Labor Meeting Will be Held at the Armory.

Organized Labor Will Explain Stand in Present Trouble.

Tonight everybody interested will have an opportunity to secure first-hand information concerning organized labor's side of the fight in the open shop movement. A mass meeting, to be addressed by labor leaders, will be held at the Armory, under the auspices of the Federated Trades assembly and the Structural Building Trades alliance. It is expected that the attendance will be very large. The matter is one of general interest, and a good many business and professional men will be among those present.

W. E. McEwen, secretary of the State Federation of Labor, will deliver the principal address of the evening. Henry Perault, president of the Federated Trades assembly, will preside. Rev. C. P. Bordman of Minneapolis, and George B. Howley, president of the State Federation of Labor, and personal representative of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, will also deliver addresses. Mr. Howley will leave tonight after the meeting for St. Paul. He is booked for three addresses in St. Paul and Minneapolis, one at Winona, one at Faribault, one at Austin, one at Red Wing, one at Grand Forks and another at Fargo before his return to Duluth. All of them will be made within the space of seven or eight days.

Matters in labor circles are running along about the same as they have been for the last two or three weeks, and no special developments are looked for for some time yet. There are no indications of an immediate settlement, and both sides seem prepared for a struggle that will extend well into the spring.

THE HIRED MAN CLAIMED ESTATE

And Said That the Dead Woman Was His Wife.

Bowling Green, Ky., Jan. 24.—The visit of Fred M. Porter of Madison, Ill., to this city brings to light a peculiar condition of affairs in connection with a burial which occurred in this city on Nov. 28 last. Mr. Porter is a son-in-law of W. P. Scott of Madison, who at one time lived in this city. He owns a lot in the local cemetery, and some of his family were buried there while he lived here.

It is alleged by Mr. Scott and his son-in-law, Mr. Porter, that Mrs. Scott died in Madison in November, and Mr. Scott being sick in bed, a man named Raymond Engleman, who, it is said, had been in the employ of Mr. and Mrs. Scott, was sent ahead of the remains by Mr. Scott to this city to arrange for Mrs. Scott's burial in the family lot in Fairview cemetery. The deed of Mr. Scott to the lot in the cemetery was given to Engleman, that he might get permission for the burial.

He arrived here on the 27th and made arrangements for the burial on the following day, but had Mrs. Scott buried under the name of Mrs. Susie Engleman, as the records of the undertaker show. Mr. Porter and his wife and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Scott came with the remains, but went directly from the train to the cemetery, and they returned home without knowing that the remains had been buried as those of Mrs. Engleman, instead of Mrs. Scott. Since Mrs. Scott's death, it is said, Engleman claims to have been her husband and has offered for probate a will purporting to be the will of the dead woman and signed as Mrs. Engleman, in which all her property, consisting of several thousand dollars, is bequeathed to Engleman. The probate of the will is fought by Mr. Scott, and Mr. Porter came here to get affidavits showing how she was buried.

It is said that Mr. Scott and his wife had separate estates and lived at different places in the city, but had never been divorced and were still man and wife at the time of her death. Engleman, it is claimed, worked alternately at the two different places.

BOOT FOR "SASSIETY"

Wielded With Fluency by Marse Watterson in New York.

Says Most Angelo-Maniacs Reach Only the Fast Set.

New York, Jan. 24.—Col. Henry Watterson was asked to take a drink and give his views on the question of prohibition. In reply to the invitation the colonel said:

"No, I don't drink anything except wines and light beer, and then only at meals. I know I've been painted as a red-nosed, whiskey-drinking Kentuckian, and that mint juleps have been named after me. I have even seen my name attached to recipes for their concoction. Yet I have probably not drunk more than six mint juleps in my life."

"So you ride the wave of prohibition that is now sweeping over Kentucky?" inquired the reporter.

"No," replied the colonel, frankly. "I believe in every man's right to get drunk if he wants to. The wave of prohibition in Kentucky is receding, I think. A few politicians—Beckman, for instance—thought they might ride it into office. They failed. The movement had its origin in religious hysteria and the camp-meeting spirit.

"Primarily, the Southern prohibition agitation was designed to deprive the negro of whisky. The white man can always get it and have it on his sideboard, but the negro with only 25 or 50 cents to spend cannot.

"At least 90 out of 120 counties in Kentucky are 'dry.' They voted 'dry'—that is, they voted against saloons. I do not think any valid excuse has ever been offered for the existence of the saloon. But efforts to prevent the sale of liquor altogether are fruitless. Prohibition does not prohibit, and I am always opposed to sumptuary laws."

New York Provincials.

Then the colonel was asked why he said a few days ago that New Yorkers are provincial.

"I did not speak of New Yorkers in general," he replied. "I was careful to restrict myself to the 'provincials' of Fifth avenue—persons who won't care to go to heaven unless they can go in their automobiles.

"I criticise New York as a New Yorker, not as an outsider. I have spent a great deal of time here. I was a reporter here. I could take a New Yorker down to where Fourth street crosses Tenth street and lose him. I remember when there were no shops above Union square. The square had a railing about it then, to which persons used to hitch their horses.

"I do not criticise the body of New Yorkers, like you and me, who do something. I refer to the idle class—the rich and the new rich, who know Europe better than their own country, who buy titles for their daughters and spend from $100,000 to $500,000 a year to get into titled society.

"This very love of titles shows the New Yorker's provincialism. A title is nothing without an estate. French titles are not recognized by the government.

"Many of the so-called bearers of ancient French names are known to be descendants of valets and butchers, who took the names of nobles who perished in the Reign of Terror. What can an American girl expect but unhappiness when she marries a man who came over here to sell a title he knows is bogus?"

International Marriages.

"Then you do not believe in international marriages?"

"Not as a rule," Col. Watterson replied, "though I know of two—that of Princess Hatzfeldt and of the Countess of Orford, who was Louise Corbin—that I would call ideal marriages. Many American girls marry Englishmen and are perfectly happy.

"Many of the millionaire families of New York are in the third generation," Col. Watterson reverted, "and strangely enough they have not improved. The original Cornelius Vanderbilt and old William B. Astor were very fine men.

"I took occasion to sail down the whole herd of New York millionaires when young Remington, whose father was my friend, committed suicide in Newport when old Van Alen wouldn't let his daughter marry him.

Some time later I met one of Mrs. Astor's granddaughters whom I had not seen for some time. As I was leaving I asked her to present my respectful homage to Mrs. Astor, whom I had known, adding that she probably wouldn't remember me.

"I should say she does remember you!" was the reply. 'She's done nothing but abuse you for three months.'

"The great mass of what I have called the provincials of Fifth avenue," continued the colonel answering another question, "never attain the titled society they covet. They are never invited to the ducal houses in England. You may meet a world famous man like Andrew Carnegie there, and any friends whom Mr. Carnegie might introduce would be made welcome, but the most the horde can buy with their millions is admission to the London 'fast set,' which has some good names, but whose members all 'go the gaits.' In Paris they storm vainly the outer ramparts of the Faubourg St. Germain."

Havoc Wrought by Plague Almost Inconceivable

The casual observer does not know of the havoc wrought by the white plague in the homes of this city. Its work is quiet, but none the less terrible.

The public should awaken to the demand upon it for sympathy and support. There is no doubt that consumption can be eliminated if the people will join in the efforts of the anti-tuberculosis societies. Much has been accomplished and complete success is certain if the people themselves will help.

The first duty of mankind to itself is to guard in every way possible against the deadly germ. Neglect of even an ordinary cough or cold is dangerous, as the resulting irritation of the lungs renders them sore and especially receptive to the tubercular germ.

To break up a cold quickly and cure any cough that is curable, there is nothing so effective as a mixture of two ounces of glycerine, a half ounce Virgin Oil of Pine and eight ounces of good whisky. Mix thoroughly and take a teaspoonful every four hours. Four ounces of tincture of Cinchona compound can be used instead of the whisky with the same effect.

The ingredients are inexpensive and can be purchased without trouble at any good drug store. To avoid substitution of some inferior pine product for the Virgin Oil of Pine, it is better to purchase each separately and mix them at home.

The genuine Virgin Oil of Pine is put up for dispensing, only in ½-ounce vials, each vial securely sealed in a round wooden case with an engraved wrapper showing plainly the name—Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure, guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, Serial No. 451, prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati, Ohio. Be sure to get the genuine, as the oil sold in bulk and cheap imitations put out to resemble Virgin Oil of Pine in name and style of package are ineffective, being largely composed of a distillation of pine needles, or leaves, instead of from the pine tree proper.

These pine needle oils are not intended for internal use, and when taken internally usually cause nausea. Their use is mainly confined to the manufacture of soap and similar purposes.

A Cure for Misery.

"I have found a cure for the misery malaria poison produces," says R. M. James, of Louellen, S. C. "It's called Electric Bitters, and comes in 50-cent bottles. It breaks up a case of chills or a bilious attack in almost no time; and it puts yellow jaundice clean out of commission." This great tonic medicine and blood purifier gives quick relief in all stomach, liver and kidney complaints and the misery of lame back. Sold under guarantee at all drug stores.

REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE

To Hold Meeting Soon to Call the State Conventions.

Minneapolis, Jan. 24.—Acting upon authority of A. B. Cole, chairman of the Republican state central committee, a meeting of that body will be called in the near future to decide upon the date of the convention to select delegates to the national convention. The committee also will decide upon the date of the state convention to nominate a candidate for governor and state officers.

Dr. Cole's letter was addressed to Thomas Salmon of Minneapolis, who is secretary of the committee. Salmon is now consulting with the other members of the committee relative to their wishes in the matter and the call will be issued soon.

The question of the location of the state convention will also come up at this meeting. It is generally expected that either Minneapolis or St. Paul will be chosen.

Harmony in the Republican ranks is the keynote of Chairman Cole's letter to Secretary Salmon.

Dr. Cole is with his brother, A. L. Cole, former candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, at their ranch at San Benito, Tex. He expects to return next month, but will not be home in time for the committee meeting.

Dr. Cole expresses the hope that harmony will prevail in the committee as well as in the entire party. He says the only way to win is by nominating a man without a pre-convention fight.

CHARGED WITH PLOTTING TO BURN CLOTHING STORE.

Devils Lake, N. D., Jan. 23.—C. Dahl, A. E. Thompson and John Rudsell were arraigned before Judge John Cowan Saturday on a charge of conspiring to commit arson. The defendants asked for the statutory time to plead and Judge Cowan allowed them until Monday. The three men are charged with plotting to burn the I. X. L. clothing store. Rudsell, the last to be arrested, is an employe of the clothing firm. He is said to have made a confession, after being sweated by the authorities. Dahl and Rudsell are out on bail, while Thompson, the painter, is still in jail.

LAST OBJECTION GONE.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—The denial of the petition for an appeal in the Chicago Traction case disposes of the last objection to the reorganization plan approved some time ago by Judge Grosscup of the United States circuit court. The reorganization of the street car company will now be completed.

JAP CONSUL RECALLED.

Portland, Or., Jan. 23.—Tsuneji Aiba, Japanese vice consul in this city, has been recalled by his government. He will be succeeded by Jokichi Iwaya, former secretary to Consul General C. Kerke at San Francisco. Aiba's recall follows those of Vice Consul T. T. Anaka at Seattle and of Consul General K. Uyemo at San Francisco, which occurred about three months ago. Aiba says he is not informed of the reason of his recall.

QUARREL ENDS IN DEPARTURE

Of Henry Gassoway Davis From Home of His Daughter.

New York, Jan. 24.—A Washington dispatch says: As a result of the bitterness engendered by thoughts of his coming marriage with Miss Maud Ashford, Senator Henry Gassoway Davis of West Virginia, who ran for vice president on the Democratic ticket in 1904, has quarreled with his daughter, Mrs. Arthur Lee, packed his baggage and moved to the Shoreham hotel.

It is understood that despite all family opposition—and on the part of Mrs. Lee and her elder sister, the wife of Senator Stephen B. Elkins—that opposition has been bitter and continuous, the marriage will take place, though when and where nobody can now say, as the date has not been decided upon.

Yesterday afternoon a rumor flew through Washington society channels that the opposition of the daughters of the aged senator had finally been successful, and that he had announced that he would not marry the young woman. The rumor was throttled a few hours later by Miss Ashford herself, who was found in her handsome home, No. 918 Farragut square.

"There is no truth in the rumor that my engagement to Senator Davis has been broken," said the young woman. "There were early denials sent out, because Senator Davis and I believed that the public was unduly concerned over a matter which we deemed of a strictly personal nature. Possibly a mistake was then made by sending out denials rather than confirmations.

"It is, I regret to say, very true that there is opposition on the part of the daughters of the senator. Mrs. Lee, who has been a friend of mine for years—since we were children together—is unalterably opposed to her father's wedding, even though she is a sufficiently good friend of mine to call for me yesterday afternoon with her motor car and invite me to ride with her. Mrs. Elkins has never been a friend of mine."

Asked whether there was truth in the statement that Senator Davis had smothered all family opposition by agreeing to make a settlement of $1,500,000 upon his prospective bride, in lieu of dower, Miss Ashford said that she had never had any discussion of financial settlements with Senator Davis, or with anybody else, and that she was in ignorance of any discussions which might have occurred in the Davis household.

SEVEN COMPANIONS DIED,

Says Mosse, Who Claims to Have Walked 50,000 Miles.

New York, Jan. 24.—Footsore and weary after walking nearly 50,000 miles on his way round the world, Henri Mosse, a middle-aged Frenchman, whose seven companions, with whom he started four years ago from Lyons, France, died from exposure or were murdered by natives in uncivilized countries through which they passed, arrived in New York from Washington and the South. Monday morning Mosse plans to start for Quebec, there to take a steamship for his native land.

On June 24, 1904, according to entries in Mosse's notebook, he began his tour, accompanied by three fellow countrymen and four Englishmen, the eight men being equally divided as members of the Sportsmen's club of London and the Touring club of France.

From France the eight went into Turkey, then into Bulgaria and on to Russia, where Mosse was arrested on suspicion of being a Japanese spy, and was thrown into prison for forty-eight days. In China one of the eight was murdered by the Chinese; two were killed by natives in Australia; three died from exposure and one committed suicide.

The pedestrian says he is walking on a $10,000 wager, offered jointly by the two clubs.

CONSTANTINE DIES FROM HIS INJURIES.

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 24.—Frank J. Constantine, who killed Mrs. Louise Gentry in Chicago, and who attempted suicide last Saturday by throwing himself from an upper stairway gallery died last night of the injuries sustained. He made no statement, remaining unconscious from the time of his fall, until death relieved him of life imprisonment.

MRS. BRADLEY ASKS AID.

Penniless and Suffering in Little Hut With Four Children.

Salt Lake, Utah, Jan. 24.—Mrs. Annie Bradley, who shot and killed Former United States Senator Arthur Brown of Utah, at the Raleigh hotel in Washington, D. C., Dec. 8, 1906, and who was freed by a jury in the capitol city less than two months ago, is penniless in this city with her four children. She has appealed to her friends for aid. She was a former resident of this city and here she met Brown. She returned believing that she would be received with open arms.

"I am more in prison now than I was in Washington," said Mrs. Bradley. She has been shunned by all her former women friends.

In a little hut on the outskirts of the city Mrs. Bradley is living with her four children, two by her former husband and two that she claims are the sons of Brown.

BEYOND BELIEF

(Pacific Coast Manufacturers' Journal, Portland, Ore.).

It is amazing that in this intelligent age there should be an almost certain specific for Bright's Disease and Diabetes, and yet but few know of it. The promoters are trying hard enough to tell the people, but patent medicine men have, with their testimonial bureaus, so imposed upon the people as to create general distrust. The innocent are now suffering with the guilty, for who can pick out the honest from the dishonest statements?

Let it be recorded for thoughtful people that these diseases are no longer necessarily fatal; that with care and proper treatment they yield almost to a certainty. I will see that parties desiring it are sent literature. This item is not written by a subordinate, but by the editor of this publication, and I speak by the Card. I had Diabetes myself. THE EDITOR.

We heard about this and sent for it in the interest of people here. If those interested in the curability of Bright's Disease or Diabetes will call I will give them full information.

Mass of Itching, Burning Humor on Ankles—Feet Fearfully Swollen—Opiates Alone Brought Sleep—Many Treatments Failed but

TORTURES OF ECZEMA YIELDED TO CUTICURA

"Cuticura Remedies are all you claim them to be. I had eczema for over two years. I had two physicians, but they only gave me relief for a short time and I cannot enumerate the ointments and lotions I used to no purpose. My ankles were one mass of sores. The itching and burning were so intense that I could not sleep. I could not walk for nearly four months. One day my husband said I had better try the Cuticura Remedies. After using them three times, I had the best night's rest in months unless I took an opiate. I used one set of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent Pills, and my ankles healed in a short time. It is now a year since I used Cuticura, and there has been no return of the eczema.

"I had a small lump in the corner of my eye for over a year which was very painful and got larger all the time. I thought I would try Cuticura Soap and Ointment on it, and now it is gone. I am seventy-three years old and have lived on the farm I now occupy for twenty-seven years. Cuticura Remedies are the safest and most reliable I have ever used for all skin humors. DRIVEN INSANE

By Jealousy, Washington Woman Murders Her Adopted Son.

Ellensburg, Wash., Jan. 23.—Driven by an insane jealousy, Mrs. Mamie Norris shot her adopted son, Thomas Murray, as he lay sleeping, and then attempted to commit suicide. Murray died in two hours.

Mrs. Norris adopted Murray several years ago. She never allowed him to go out with young women or girls and always went to dances with him. Recently Murray had been spending his evenings down town playing billiards. Mrs. Norris, however, believed that he was calling on the girls and she openly charged him with the fact in public places.

The night before the shooting Murray stayed out until midnight. Mrs Norris waited up for him, but said nothing when he got home. After he had fallen asleep she committed the fatal act. She will recover.

LUMBERMEN NEED SNOW

And Cold Weather to Work Effectively in the Woods.

Brainerd, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—General Manager Gemmell and Supt. Strachan of the Minnesota & International railroad have returned from a trip up the line, having been at International Falls Tuesday. Mr. Gemmell stated that they met a number of the leading lumbermen of that section while on the trip, and that the lumbermen were pretty badly worried over the continued warm weather. It is a pretty serious problem which confronts them, especially those dependent upon snow roads, and a continuation of the warm weather would mean a disastrous reduction in the output. Mr. Genimell, therefore, was much pleased to observe the cold wave flag out.

Mr. Gemmell and Mr. Strachan drove to Rainier Tuesday morning, and took a trip down over the Duluth & Rainy Lake railroad. Mr. Gemmell states that they have a fine road, though there will have to be considerable work done on the roadbed in the spring.

SECURE SPECIAL RATES.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 24.—Special rates to the convention of the North Dakota Implement Dealers' convention, to be held here, have been assured by the passenger transportation department of the Great Northern railroad, and similar rates will no doubt be put into effect by the Northern Pacific.

The rate will be 2 cents a mile on the certificate plan, and should result in bringing to the city a large number of implement dealers from every part of North Dakota, and from the northwestern part of Minnesota, which is a part of the territory embraced in the association.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

MUNN MAY NOT SWING

Judge Who Sentenced Him Believes He Should be Given

Chance to Have His Sentence Commuted by Pardon Board.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Murten S. Munn, who is waiting in the Beltrami county jail at Bemidji to be taken out and hanged Feb. 7 in accordance with the sentence of Judge McClenehan and the direction of Governor Johnson for killing August Franklin at Spooner several months ago, can afford to take heart as he may yet escape the gallows. Although the state board of pardons declined to consider the application for clemency presented in the Munn case this week when it commuted the Mathiasen sentence to life imprisonment, certain things have transpired since, that may lead the board to reverse its ruling and reopen the case.

Governor Johnson has received a telegram from Judge McClenehan, who sentenced both Munn and Peter Mathiasen on the same day to hang, saying that of the two men Munn was the more entitled to clemency by the board, inasmuch as there was an element of self-defense in the Munn case, not apparent in the other. Coming from such a source it is not expected the board can refuse to reopen the Munn case and if Judge McClenehan continues to take the interest he has already evinced it is quite probable the hanging of Munn next month at Bemidji may never be carried out.

WARD IS LOCATED; MYSTERY CLEARED

Missing Fairmont Man is Alive in Spokane, Wash.

Fairmont, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Former Mayor W. W. Ward of this city, whose sudden disappearance from St. Paul last September gave rise to the belief he had met with foul play, is alive and well and the mystery connected with his dropping out of sight has been partially cleared.

His wife received a letter from him at Spokane, Wash., in which he recounts his wanderings since leaving home, but gives no statement of the cause of his disappearance.

During a part of the time he has been sick in a hospital at Oakland, Cal. His position as mayor has been declared vacant and a successor appointed.

Since his disappearance police all over the country have been searching for him and several persons have reported seeing him from time to time, but this is the first authentic word received.

There was nothing in his official record to cause him to wish to leave the country and the only motive which explains his conduct is the financial difficulty in which he was involved. He disappeared on Sept. 29.

UNIQUE VERDICT AGAINST RAILWAY

Farmer Mulcts Northern Pacific for Grass Burned on Prairie.

Jamestown, N. D., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The case of Mahan against the Northern Pacific Railway company, just tried here in the district court, probably stands without a parallel in the whole country.

This was an action brought to recover damages against the railway company for burning of prairie and prairie grass roots, and the damage occasioned thereby. The fire was alleged to have occurred on the Northern Pacific right-of-way, at a point two and a quarter miles west of Tappen, and to have headed southeast till it burned over 145 acres of plaintiff's homestead. After being out for an hour, the jury returned a verdict in

THREE LYNX KILLED AT SWAN RIVER

FRED TOOD AND THE LYNX HE SHOT.

Swan River, Minn., Jan. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fred Tood, filer for T. J. Feeley, went out last Sunday looking for wolves, and ran into a family of four lynx enjoying an afternoon meal on a couple of rabbits. He opened fire on them, killing three and badly wounding the fourth, which disappeared into the thicket. Having no more ammunition, he thought it good policy to carry the dead lynx to camp, which took two trips, as the combined weight of the three was 133½ pounds. The largest measured 3 feet, 9 inches from tip to tip. Mr. Tood feels proud of his game, and the camp crew in general feel that he is second to none as a hunter. The accompanying picture was taken by M. H. Reardon shortly after the animals were brought into camp.

the sum of $200, as plaintiff's damages. Mr. Knauf, for the plaintiff, made a fight to establish the right of land owner to recover for damage done land by prairie fire. It is said that this is the first case in which a verdict has been sought for prairie burned without hay, building or other property, and is a victory for Mr. Knauf in this class of cases.

JAIL SENTENCES ARE THREATENED

Against All Saloon Keepers Violating Michigan Liquor Law.

Escanaba, Mich., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—In circuit court here this week Judge John W. Stone reiterated the statement he made from the bench during the October term relative to the disposition of cases in which violations of the liquor laws of the state were established. He announced that he would adhere to the policy in Delta county as in all other counties of his circuit in imposing jail sentences on all violators of the liquor laws who are brought before him for a second time.

The occasion for the reiteration of the warning to the saloon men was the arraignment in court of three saloonkeepers charged with keeping their places open on Sunday. Two of the number had never before been arraigned for a similar offense and the third, while once before arraigned on a similar charge, was on that occasion found not guilty. Jack Rowan and William Sullivan were the saloonekeepers never before arrested and Michael Shea was the dealer who was one found not guilty of a similar charge and whose appearance this week was accordingly reckoned by the court as his first arraignment. Each of the three defendants pleaded guilty to the charge against them and each was required to pay a fine of $25 and costs.

COUNTY AUDITORS' MEETING

Held This Week Has Resulted in Mutual Benefit.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The county auditors of the state have concluded their annual meeting, and the election of officers resulted in the selection of George Robinson of La Moure county, president; S. D. Tjosvold of Granite Falls, vice president; John W. Carle of Mahomen county, secretary, and John P. Paulson of Lake county, treasurer.

The meetings have been productive of splendid results, many suggestions being given by the members for the betterment of the manner of operating individual offices, and many close points on tax matters being settled by members giving their experience. The lecture by the chairman of the state tax commission proved of such value to the members that a resolution was passed asking the state board to recommend to the legislature that a law be passed providing that the auditors should meet every year with the members of the tax commission, at the state capitol, and that the expense of the meeting he borne by the state treasury.

WORK DONE IN PRIVATE

By Haven's Friends to Land Much Scorned "Saloon Vote."

Three Rousing Tessman Meetings Held in Different Wards.

While preaching law enforcement and making this the chief point in all of his public utterances, Alderman Haven, the Republican candidate for mayor, has not kept his workers from advancing his cause wherever possible among the saloon men.

Alderman Haven's friends even went so far as to attempt to turn a temperance meeting at a Sunday evening church service into a political rally, but while his friends were doing this in one part of the city, his ward workers have been buttonholing saloon men and have been actively trying to enlist them in the support of Mr. Haven's cause, assuring them that they have nothing to fear from Mr. Haven in the event of his election.

Several Superior street saloon men have been approached during the last week in the interests of Mr. Haven and asked for their support, and one of the Haven workers made a trip to New Duluth, visiting a saloon man there and trying to line up the so-called "saloon vote," against which the Haven organ, the News Tribune, and Mr. Haven himself have so bitterly railed in public.

Alderman Haven's mouthpiece, the News Tribune, quotes C. E. Adams, Mr. Haven's manager, as stating to the Haven meeting held in Sloan's hall last evening, that Mr. Haven favored an enforcement of the law "with reasonable strictness."

The term "reasonable strictness" was not explained by Mr. Adams, but coming in connection with the activity of Mr. Haven's friends among the saloonmen, it is considered very interesting.

Mr. Adams also dwelt upon the claim that Mr. Haven, if elected, would retain Chief Troyer, in spite of the fact that Mr. Haven has asserted that he has made no pre-election pledges whatever.

Three rousing Tessman meetings were held last evening.

At the headquarters in the St. Louis hotel, the Third ward workers gathered for a conference. The two rooms were packed to the doors, and many who wished to get in had to remain outside in the corridor. The proceedings were informal and those present simply talked over the situation and discussed their candidate's chances. It was a most optimistic gathering, and the opinion seemed to be that the election would not be as hard a fought battle as the primaries.

The second meeting was up in the Fifth ward on the Heights. Joseph W. Reynolds, Mayor Cullum's manager, is proving one of the best workers in the Tessman ranks. Since his defeat at the primaries, he has given every assistance to the successfu candidate, and last evening he delivered an amusing speech on the Heights, in Mr. Tessman's behalf. Mr. Tessman was also present at this meting, and spoke along with several others.

The third meeting was out in the Seventh ward, in what is considered Mr. Haven's private political stamping ground. It was a meeting of the ward workers, held at 2801 West Second street, and about fifty of the most prominent Democrats of the West end were present.

RECLAMATION OF SWAMP LANDS

Of Minnesota Provided in Bill Introduced by Bede.

Washington, Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Bede today introduced a bill providing for the setting aside as a fund in the treasury department of all moneys received from the sale of public lands in Minnesota, to be used by the secretary of the interior for reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands. Mr. Bede's bill looks to the betterment of conditions in the so-called swamp regions of Minnesota. If the Bede bill becomes law it will materially relieve the conditions of the settlers in Aitkin county.

Mr. Bede also introduced a bill appropriating $250,000 for the construction of a new revenue cutter for service on Lake Superior. Though, of course, it is not known where the headquarters of the new boat may be located, Representative Bede thinks that, should he be able to pass this bill, the cutter will be stationed at the Duluth-Superior harbor.

Representative Hammond today introduced a bill carrying an appropriation of $60,000 for the site and construction of a public building at New Ulm.

The wise men come early.

JAPANIZED ENGLISH.

San Francisco Chroncle: The superintendent of the Southern Pacific dining car service forwarded to General Manager Calvin the following characteristic letter of resignation sent in by a Japanese waiter boy:

"November 13, 1907.

"My Dear Great Man Boss—I beg to you that I am absent today and I am thanking for your great kindness. But I have necessary to desire that to resign with my business because I had sickness on hand. Your faithfully,

"M. FUJIYAMA."

TO UPLIFT THE NEGRO

Rev. Withers Would Interest Them in New Work.

Promoting Society to Better Conditions of Colored Men.

Rev. M. W. Withers of Minneapolis, district secretary of the Loyal Legion of Labor, a national organization of colored citizens, designed to uplift the black race in this country, is in Duluth, and tomorrow evening will conduct a meeting for colored people at Ritchie's barber shop, First avenue west and Superior street.

The object of the gathering will be to interest the negroes of this city in the work of the Loyal Legion of Labor, which has been carried on with no small measure of success in different parts of the country for the past two or three years.

The movement covers a number of the states, among which are Minnesota Ohio, Virginia, North Carolina and Kansas. The Western headquarters of the organization are at Minneapolis and the society's work in this section of the United States is carried on from that city.

Z. W. Mitchell, supreme master of the Loyal Legion of Labor, has his headquarters in Minneapolis, and all the district officers make their homes in that city.

The movement is new to Duluth, but it is the hope of Rev. Mr. Withers to have it well under way before he leaves. The meeting tomorrow evening is for negroes, but as the co-operation of the whites in every community where the legion undertakes its work, is asked, Mr. Withers will likely make an effort to interest the prominent white business men of the city in the aims of his society.

The object of the Loyal Legion of Labor is to attempt to solve the negro problem by a co-operation of the races. Efforts are made to teach the vicious, shiftless, lawless, unscrupulous and visionary negroes, so that they may become useful citizens, and to protect whites from impositions at the hands of the first named classes of the colored race.

Advisory boards of the Loyal Legion are named in each place where the work is carried on, supplemented by an advisory board of the Loyal Heart of the Legion, which is the women's auxiliary, and co-operative boards of white citizens.

The advisory boards of the negroes' organization look into the condition of the negroes, try to suppress vice among them and make them useful citizens. Employment is secured for them and an effort made to open to them positions where they can earn good wages and improve their conditions.

In Minneapolis the movement has met with the co-operation of business men and institutions and a good work has been carried on. Undesirable citizens among the blacks have been given to understand by the self-respecting members of their race that their actions will not be tolerated, and attempts made to mould their characters in a better direction.

In that city the co-opertaive board of whites includes such prominent Mill City residents as Fendall G. Winston, David C. Bell, Former Mayor D. P. Jones and J. F. Conklin.

The Loyal Legion of Labor and its plan of operation have the endorsement of Booker T. Washington and prominent men of both races all over the country.

It fills the arteries with rich, red blood, makes new flesh, and healthy men, women and children. Nothing can take its place; no remedy has done so much good as Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35c. Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

THE FUTURE OF MITCHELL

Much Discussed Among Delegates to the Miners' Convention.

Indianapolis, Jan. 24.—The convention of the United Mine Workers of America adjourned at noon until tomorrow. None of the committees were ready to report. President Mitchell took notice of rumors published here that he probably would become the head of a national bureau of mines, which the organization desired to have created. He announced to the delegates that he had not accepted a government position, none had been offered to him and to the best of his knowledge at this time he never would accept a government position. It is stated today that there is a movement on foot to create a national advisory board of the miners' organization, of which President Mitchell would be the head. This movement will be taken up probably next week. There will be opposition to it in the ranks of the miners. The future of President Mitchell is being much discussed among the delegates.

The resolutions committee is flooded with resolutions proposing a per capita tax for him of 50 cents and a dollar. This would raise a fund of from $150,000 to $300,000. It is believed he would not accept it.

Watered Stocks.

Not the kind you read so much about, but wearing apparel which suffered damage in last week's little flood, will be sold at next to nothing prices. See Gidding's ad.

TWO WOMEN END THEIR LIVES IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Two suicides, an accidental asphyxiation and an unsuccessful attempt at self-destruction occurred in Washington today. In the early morning Mrs. Daisy M. Wagner, wife of Howard G. Wagner, was found partly covered with snow and with a bullet hole in her head on a roadway near the Zoological park.

Some time between midnight and 6 o'clock this morning Mrs. Georgianna Hartley, who keeps a boarding house, turned on a gas jet in her room, and when discovered by a servant was so near death that attempts at resuscitation were futile.

Thomas Rowe, an iron worker, was found in an unconscious condition in his room in a boarding house. He was taken to a hospital, where he is lying in a critical condition. He was in excellent spirits last evening and it is supposed that he accidentally turned on the gas.

THE AWAKENING OF CHINA.

A. Maurice Low in the Forum: A giant sunk in slumber under the influence of a spell does not cast it off lightly, and China, a giant in potential power, but ignorant of its own strength, does not easily emerge from the lethargy of centuries. But now the time is coming—it has not yet come, it will not come in a day or year even—when China will throw off its inertia, prepared to exert a giant's strength. That great, slow moving mass is being stirred into life. The spirit of progress has been quickened. Soon much sooner than most people imagine, China will be ready to act; to defy as well as to defend. The progress of any people can be measured by the self-government they enjoy. China has for centuries lain under the blighting influence of an autocratic government; a government that was centered in a few hands, and deprived the people of all voice in their own affairs. Ten years ago nobody dreamed that China would be under a constitutional form of government; but the world moves with incredible rapidity in these days, and at no time has it moved more swiftly than in the last decade. Earnest men, men of progress and ideas, men who know that with all its vices the civilization of the West is the only real civilization the world has known; such men, of instance, as Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, the former Chinese minister to the United States, and now one of the high officials of the Chinese customs, have labored zealously and intelligently to bring about a change in the form of government. They have encountered many obstacles; they have to beat down prejudice and ignorance; at times they stood in peril of their lives, but they never faltered. The reformers of China have triumphed, for on the day that the last issue of this Review appeared the dowager empress issued a decree declaring China to be under a constitutional form of government. But the Chinese reformers are not content merely with paper decrees. Between that and a working constitution, a constitution that means something, is a long gap that must be bridged, and they have taken the first steps.

PEOPLE WHO DISAPPEAR.

London Daily Graphic: "Women do not disappear so much as men," said Mr. Hartley, an international detective, who was interviewed in reference to a mysterious disappearance which is now attracting much public attention.

"When a woman goes it is usually a love affair. Either the parents object to the man, or there is some other cause. And it is important to remember what cunning schemers women can be. Even quite young girls may be wonderfully clever in keeping things from their parents. During the course of my work I am very sceptical of women for this reason. A girl might arange for her lover or some one sent by him to met her, and it would be a very simple matter for her to give her friends the slip in a crowded street. Of course, very often we get cases of sudden loss of memory happening to people who are in the best of health and spirits, but one rarely finds this occur to a young girl, and where the tendency does exist the family or friends usually know of it and keep watch accordingly. Again, it is possible a girl does not like the prospect of going home after she has been away for a holiday, and some one with whom she was in touch might assist her in carrying out a plan of her own.

"Disappearances are very common not only in London but in Paris and New York, but the public seldom heard of them. Not only girls but old men and others disappear. Generally these are not cases of kidnapping; they had to do with family or business matters, and as the families as a rule did not wish the police to know the circumstance they employed private detectives. Thus the outside world does not get to know of half of the disappearances and their causes.

"Crime sometimes enters into these sudden disappearances. A cool headed man of the world who has committed theft or felony either in business of private life will take it into his head to disappear and make a fresh start in life somewhere else. A few years ago a gentleman whose family was high in the social world vanished. He had been suspected of robbing his brother-in-law during a period of pressure in the latter's business. The victim knew that if he informed the police his brother-in-law would stand in danger of being prosecuted, so he handed the case over to me. It was proved that the man had actually been robbing him right and left, but for the sake of his wife he was allowed—and even assisted—to disappear.

"A husband walked out of his flat in Marylebone one day and was not heard of. His wife searched for three months herself, then came to me. She knew her husband could not have endured hardship or adventure, because he was physically unable to do much for himself. It was a troublesome case, but eventually I found the husband in a nursing home. What had happened was that the man's parents were strict living people, who did not go to the theater and did not drink stout. They did not think their son's wife—who did those things — was good enough for him, and they chose this means of getting him away from her."

INDIAN WOMAN LAWYER.

Pittsburg Dispatch: The only Indian woman lawyer in the United States, Julia St. Cyr, a Winnebago Indian, has been before the federal court in Omaha this week, where she defended herself on a charge of having accepted too large a fee as a pension attorney from an old Indian squaw of her tribe whose husband had been a scout under Crook, and so well did the Indian woman conduct her defense that the jury found for her on the very first ballot. During the trial Miss St. Cyr used all arts of a trained pleader, not neglecting to shed a few tears at a critical moment. But having departed from the customary stolidity of Indian character long enough to make her impression on the jurymen, she returned to the impassive mask of the red man, and when the verdict of "not guilty" was announced simply said, with the greatest indifference:

"Well, I knew it would be that way."

She did not attempt to thank the jury for its verdict, but with head erect stalked out of the court room when told that she was free.

Julia St. Cyr, the Indian woman attorney, is a woman of intellectual attainment and is well known all over the Winnebago and Omaha tribes. Although a Winnebago herself, when any Indian of either of those tribes gets into trouble he runs to Miss St. Cyr for advice. And so much influence has she over them that probably half the disputes of the members of those two tribes are settled by her, never reaching a court of law at all. Her word is mighty near law on the reservations.

In a letter received from Emerson Hill, superintendent of the Copper Queen Mining & Smelting company of Idaho, Duluth people who are interested in the mining property, are informed of a strike of high-grade ore, made Jan. 11, at the Copper Queen mine.

The Copper Queen Mining & Smelting company owns outright, all payments having been made, seventeen full mining claims, situated seven miles from Salmon City, Idaho, on the main ridge of the Bitter-Root mountains. Adjoining them on the North is the "U. P." mine, owned and operated by ex-Governor Frederick Gooding and his brother, who have their own reducing plant. To the south lies the "Tindoy," a paying mine owned by Idaho capitalists. The same veins these mines are working on, are supposed to cross the Copper Queen property.

Mr. Hill, in his letter, said he had taken samples weighing from fifty to seventy-five pounds from each drift and after quartering them, had the ore assayed, the assay resulting in the following values to the ton:

No. 1 south drift, Queen vein, $101.60;
No. 2 north drift, Queen vein, $123.20;
No. 3 Nellie drift, Nellie vein, $59.20.

The company is now driving a new drift towards the junction of the Nellie, the Queen and the Mammoth veins which are supposed to meet in the Gilsie claim.

Material for the construction of a stamp mill has been sent to the mine and already a survey has been made preparatory to installing a pipe line from Wallace, a small lake situated some 15,000 feet away, on a rise of ground, which gives a fall or head of 750 feet. This will enable the mill to work 100 stamps besides furnishing water power for mining.

As to the geology of the locality, the veins lie in what is knowna as a "sheer zone," that is the rock has been at some time exposed to such great pressure and has been so moved and crushed by faulting action, that the walls of the veins are of a soft decomposed micashist and grade into the more solid country granite. This decomposed and loose composition of the rocks allows free access to the percolating waters, thus making possible the deposition of rich ore bodies. The ore in the veins is of a fine milling quality, and consists in the matrix, mostly of quartz, mica shist and decomposed granite.

ELECTRIC HEAT BETTER.

Review of Reviews: Flame, as a direct source of heat, is at best a faulty servant. In consuming oxygen it produces carbon dioxide and other harmful gases; it wastefully warms huge volumes of inert nitrogen, with the result that temperatures are much reduced. If the fuel contains sulphur or phosphorus, these much impair the quality of molten iron or seething steel. In dwellings, in mines, on shipboard, the necessary consumption of air is a dire evil; more serious still is the outpouring of deadly gases. Flame labors under other disadvantages. It is on the outside of a crucible or retort that it beats; the shell to be penetrated, if the steel plate of a big boiler, may be an inch thick; much thicker, and non-conducting as well, is the brick wall of a bake-oven. Flame produces much heat of little worth, because of low temperature. The whole Atlantic ocean might be lukewarm and still leave a potato unboiled. It is the margin by which a temperature overtops the degree needed for boiling, melting or welding that decides its value. Yet more; flame at most has a play of only a few inches. Even when it raises steam, the best of all heat-carriers, that steam may be borne no further than a mile without excessive loss. All these faults and wastes disappear when, instead of flame, we employ electric heat, notwithstanding the cost of its round-about production by a furnace, a heat-engine and a dynamo. In many cases the engineer can happily dispense with fuel altogether, and draw upon a waterfall, as notably at Niagara. Electricity, in whatever mode produced, may be easily and fully insulated, taken, if we please, 100 miles, and there, through non-conducting mica or asbestos, enter the very heart of a kettle, or still, to exert itself as heat, without an iota of subtraction. It has no partner, gaseous or other, to work injury or levy a tax. Electricity, too, by a transformer, may be readily lifted from low to high voltage, or pressure, immensely widening its effective play in soldering, welding, smelting. At any temperature desired, there, with perfect constancy, electric heat may be maintained, with no need that a branding or smoothing iron return periodically to a fire, with risk of scorching.

A SCOTCH-IRISH INDIAN.

H. G. Spaulding, in the World To-Day: No greater interest attaches to any member of the Sixtieth congress than to Charles D. Carter, the member from the Fourth district of Oklahoma, an Indian who has all his life lived among his kinsmen. Carter is a man of great strength of character, and maintains that the Indian will be better off if thrown on his own resources and not watched over and guarded by the federal authorities. He hoped to become a member of the Indian affairs committee of the house, where he will advocate the removal of restriction from the sale of Indian lands except the homesteads of full-bloods and the taxation of all lands held by them. He believes the Indians should assume all of the burdens of citizenship, participating as he does in all the benefits.

Mr. Carter gives his nationality as seven-sixteenths Chickasaw and Cherokee Indian, nine-sixteenths Scotch-Irish. He is a man of generous disposition and jovial to a marked degree, and his laugh will soon come to be known throughout the cloakrooms and his stories will always attract a group about him. He has a serious side, and is in a position to do his country a vast amount of good by bringing about a change in the treatment of the red man, which will check the steady degeneration of the race, which has set in under the paternal care of the government.

EUROPEAN "RETIRED" CLASS.

Review of Reviews: According to continental views, whoever can secure for himself a daily pittance without toiling for it, ought not to toil, and no credit is given to the wealthy young man intent on increasing his capital by engaging in some trade, nor to a man of 5 or 55 who remains at work after amassing a small competence.

Therefore, we meet in every continental city a large class of idle men, who, having dismissed for the balance of their life the care of money-making, have no ambition beyond that of living and enjoying life. That their enjoyment includes but a meagre dole of life's material comfort is evident, but this gives them a peculiar charm.

There is, however, a real value to the state in their view of life. Many devote themselves to intellectual pursuits which routine work made an impossibility in the preceding years. A large number of interesting works on military matters, science, history, biography, and memoirs, are due to the pen of "retraites" from the army or navy, who, owing to the importance the army plays in European life, forms a large contingent of the retired class.

Some of the retired continentals engage in minor political activities. Town councilors are in the majority of cases retired officers or former civil-service men, who, with their indifference to money questions, make perhaps rather poor administrators, but public-spirited and of an unimpeachable character.

The influence of this great leisure class in the shaping of the nation's tastes and ideals is a thing an untraveled Anglo-Saxon can hardly realize. Thanks to this "idle" class, literary and artistic salons after the fashion of the eighteenth century are still a possibility on the continent of Surope. In the late afternoon the "retraites" gather either around the marble tables of some cafe and play cards, or preferably meet at the fireside of some hospitable hostess. These men of a mature age, who have ample leisure for thoughts of the past and can observe the present without haste, make the most delightful conversationalists.

STEEL CORPORATION AND SALOON.

Clara C. Thomas in The World To-Day: Coleraine, Minnesota, is the center of what is fast becoming the greatest iron ore mining district of the world. In disposing of teh lots for business ventures, the town builder "reserved to the company" the right to sell liquor and to conduct the games of chance, thereby restricting the two main evils of a frontier town. Gambling has never raised its head in the community, but inasmuch as with foreign workmen to make demands, John C. Greenway, the superintendent of the Steel corporation's works, realized that prohibition would mean only a clever system of "blind piggery," the edict went forth that one saloon was to be allowed for every five hundred of population, provided that it conformed to certain conditions.

First of all it must obey the state law to the letter, no opening in the morning until 7, which is after the men have gone to work, closing at night at 11, and remaining closed all day Sunday. It is required to be a place of purely commercial, not social nature, even the chairs being removed to prevent lounging about. Whisky only of a standard quality is sold, and a provision is made, and found most effective, for commissions to bartenders on all sales of non-intoxicants.

WHEAT HAS AN UP-TURN

Bullish Reports From Southwest Cause a Little Bulge.

Flax is Easier at the Close of Quiet Session.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 24.—Wheat closed firm in America upon bullish reports from the Southwest, which put the market up late in the session. Both the green bug and the Hessian fly figured in the news from the Southwest, and this stimulated the buying, which during the early hours of the session was weak, because of easier cables and larger Argentine shipments than were expected.

The Modern Miller says:

"In response to request of the Modern Miller, millers of Southern Kansas and Northern Oklahoma, from whence emigrated recent reports of the presence of green bugs and Hessian fly in the wheat fields, made an investigation of conditions. Nearly all report insects in the wheat fields, some saying they are the green bugs and others the fly. Farmers complain that the wheat has turned brown and many claim more or less damage. A bill appropriating $10,000 to fight these pests has been introduced in the Kansas legislature, in other states, notably Missouri and Illinois, insect life has been found in the wheat. This is believed to be the Hessian fly."

Argentine shipments of wheat were 3,352,000 bus., against 2,160,000 bus., last week, and 1,672,000 bus., a year ago.

Liverpool closed ¾d lower, Budapest, ⅝c lower, and Berlin unchanged.

The May option closed 1½c higher in Duluth and Chicago, ⅞c up in Minneapolis, ½c lower in New York and ½c higher in Winnipeg. The July option closed ⅛c higher in Duluth, 1⅛-1⅛c higher in Chicago, ⅜c up in Minneapolis and New York and ⅝c higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ⅜-½c higher in Chicago and ⅜d to 1½d lower in Liverpool. May oats closed ¾c up in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"There was an easy tone to the speculative wheat market at the start and values were ¼d lower, followed later by a further decline of ¼d. Weakness resulted from the late easiness in America yesterday, larger Argentine shipments than expected and the withdrawal of American supporting orders. The spot markets were weak and there was generally a poor demand for wheat in all positions. At midday the market was weak and ¼d lower than Thursday.

"Corn was easy and ⅛d lower at the opening, followed by an additional decline of ⅛d. The weakness in wheat and the fact of large tenders of new corn caused selling to realize."

Car receipts at Duluth were 67 against 19 last year, and at Minneapolis 139 against 151 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 206 against 170 last year. Chicago received 21 against 21 last year. Winnipeg received 143 against 1 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 538,000 bus, last year, 214,000 bus. Shipments 292,000 bus, last year 292,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 405,657 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 870,000 bus, last year 600,000 bus. Shipments 510,000 bus last year 392,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 319,867 bus.

Wheat was quiet during the session in Duluth, and prices were down except during the last hour, when bullish Southwestern news buoyed the market up. May wheat opened ¾c lower at 81.03¾, advanced to $1.03⅝, declined to $1.03¼, reacted to $1.03⅝ and closed at $1.03⅝, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. July wheat was inactive and closed ⅛c higher than yesterday at $1.01⅜.

It is expected that the stock of wheat in store at Duluth will increase 380,000 bus this week.

There is a strong tone to the durum wheat market. The foreign demand has been very firm for the past two weeks. Cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was easy during the latter part and at the close of a quiet session. May flax opened ⅜c lower at $1.20¾ bid, advanced to $1.20⅞, declined to $1.20¾, rallied to $1.20½ and closed at $1.20¼, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday. July flax was inactive and closed ½c lower than yesterday at $1.22¼.

It is expected that the stock of flax in store at Duluth will increase 85,000 bus., this week.

Coarse grains were unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Weak on Account of a Decline in Liverpool.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—The wheat market today opened weak because of a decline of 1d at Liverpool, which was based upon large shipments from Argentina than had been expected. Liberal Northwestern receipts also constituted a weakening factor. May opened ⅝@⅝c lower, at $1.01⅝@1.01¾ and for a time held within that range. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 297 cars against 383 cars last week and 191 cars one year ago.

The strength of corn caused some strength in wheat in the last hour of trading and May advanced to $1.02⅜@1.02½. The close was firm with May up ⅛c at $1.02¾.

The corn market opened weak, partly in sympathy with wheat and also because of the cold weather. May opened ⅛@¼c lower, at 60⅝@60¾c, sold up to 60⅞@61c and then reacted to 60¾c. Local receipts were 373 cars, with none of contract grade.

A good demand from commission houses sent the price of May up to 61½@61⅝c. The close was strong with May ⅜@½c higher at 61⅜@61½c.

The oats market was quiet, with prices steady. May opened unchanged at 53¾c, and sold at 53⅝@¾c. Local receipts were 156 cars.

Provisions, firm. May pork opened 5c higher at $13.07½. Lard was a shade higher at $7.90. Ribs were 5c higher at $6.97½.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.02¼; July, 98¾@½c; September, 95⅞. Corn, May, 61⅜@⅝c; July, 60c; September, 59½@⅝c. Oats, May, old, 54½c; May, 52¼; July, old, 47½c; July, 45c; September, 39¼c. Corn, nothing doing; No. 3, 54@55c.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Options Were Weak, But Cash Wheat Was Not.

Minneapolis, Jan. 24.—Cash wheat made the feature today. The option was weak early, because Argentina had shipped 3,352,000 bus for the week, which put Liverpool down a full penny, also because elevator stocks in Minneapolis promise an increase of 600,000 bus for the week and a total of 8,000,000 bus in tomorrow's report. But cash wheat was not weak. On the contrary, No. 1 northern was ⅛c over May as soon as the posting was up for 119 cars received against 151 a year ago did not look so heavy as of late. No. 2 was 2@4c under. Later No. 1 was ⅜c over and No. 2 only 2c under. About noon a buyer appeared and bid No. 1 northern up to 1⅜c over May, in effort to buy 50,000 bus to arrive. The option which had been down to $1.03 for May at 10 o'clock, grew very strong and was up to $1.10¼ closing at $1.10@1.10⅛. July closed at $1.10¼@⅜. No. 1 northern $1.07⅜; No. 2 northern $1.05⅜@⅝; No. 3 wheat, $1.05@1.07; No. 1 northern, to arrive, $1.10⅜; No. 2, to arrive, $1.08⅜.

Flour seemed on the verge of an advance, but millers had not changed quotations up to the close of the market. The demand was satisfactory. First patents, $5.40@5.60; second patents, $5.35@5.50; first clears, $4.30@4.40; second clears, $3.50@3.60. Shipments, 41,695 barrels.

Barley was a cent up for all grades, and there was a very strong undertone. Range, $77.00@97.00. Flax closed $1.17½. Demand good at 2½c under May. Bran in bulk, $20.00@20.25.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: This trade was inclined to consider the large Argentina shipments the whole thing this morning. The Liverpool market was off 1d. Private cables reported spot wheat heavy on the other side also. The market started with a break of 3c for May. The fighting point appeared to be close around $1.02 on the latter recovery near the close when corn showed strength the May touched $1.02⅝. Reports from Great Bend, Kansas, told of Hessian fly and other insects in many of the best counties of that state. Short sellers inclined to be cautious on the breaks under $1.02. It will take decided falling off in receipts, a renewal of export sales and possibly some scare over the growing crop to offset the very bearish Argentina news.

Corn—Naturally there was a disposition to follow the break in wheat and considerable selling pressure was noted at the opening. A group of active houses took the buying side later, and for some time the market held firm around 61c. When the shorts attempted to cover in the last hour, the May was forced up to 61½@⅝c. New York reported 38 boatloads export business.

Oats—Prices ruled steady early, with no special feature. When corn turned strong before the close, May advanced to 54½c, ¾c over the close yesterday.

Provisions—There was some falling off in the big run of hogs, and this encouraged buyers to take hold in provisions. The strong corn market is encouraging buyers of hog products. Investors appear ready to take hold as soon as the big run lets up.

DECLINES IN STOCKS

Tone Was Heavy Most of Day and Close Was Dull.

Prices Receded to Low Level in the Final Dealings.

New York, Jan. 24.—The stock market was easier in tone at the outset on a resumption of yesterday's late selling, but the losses were mostly limited to small fractions. American Smelting advanced ½, which it soon surrendered, and both Louisville & Nashville and Southern Pacific lost ⅝.

A further dip in prices was followed by a good rally in which American Smelting was lifted a point, but the list again weakened materially in sympathy with the severe decline in the high priced coal road stocks. United States Express fell 9½; Central Railroad of New Jersey, 8½; Delaware & Hudson, 4½; Consolidated Gas, 2, and Great Northern preferred and Rock Island preferred, 1. The market was quiet and a trifle above the low point at 11 o'clock.

The dullness of the demand allowed prices to slip back, losses reaching a point in Atchison, Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie, American Car preferred and Corn Products preferred, 1½ in Erie first preferred, and American Woolen preferred 1¾, in Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing and 2 in Westinghouse Electric first preferred. United Railways and Investment preferred rose 2 and Utah Copper 1. Bonds were irregular.

Price movements were without significance. The culmination of the forenoon declines left the market without any definitive lead, and different stocks shifted about aimlessly on a narrow range. The tone in general was firmer, a rise of a point in Northern Pacific and a rally of 3 in Delaware & Hudson having a beneficial effect on the general list. St. Paul preferred rose 1. Prices fluctuated accordingly, the rally from the low point not being well held. United States Pipe preferred rose 2.

The market closed easy and dull. The tone became heavy again when United States Steel and Reading were pressed for sale. Prices receded again to the low level. Reading fell 2¼, Pittsburg, C. C. C. & St. Louis 2, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie preferred 1⅞, Pacific Coast 1½, Southern Pacific ⅜ and Northewestern, C. C. & St. Louis, Wheeling and Lake Erie and Great Northern Ore Certificates 1, Delaware & Hudson also weakened afresh.

Stock Gossip.

New York to Walter W. Carr:

"The stock market today has been rather a tame affair, with the tendency towards lower levels. There were several small rallies during the day, but they did not hold at the close. Declines in most of the active list ranged from ½ to over a point. The Harriman issues were rather heavy throughout. Northern Pacific was the one strong spot and it held well, closing with slight gains. Rumors of extra dividends were again revived and were responsible for the strength of the stock.

London sold about ten thousand shares mostly Steel common. Weakness in Steels were on rumors that the earnings for the quarter would not be above $20,000,000. Reading was again under pressure during most of the day. Money ruled easier, with ruling rates today about 1¾ per cent, and the prospects for a fairly good bank statement tomorrow.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 24.—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: A number of buyers are on the market, loading and filling out orders filled at yesterday's sale. While the sale was well attended and the bulk of the consignments sold, the shippers as a rule made very little money, as they are unable to buy horses from the farmer cheap enough so that they can make a profit at the present market price. Horses are too cheap at the present going prices:

The Cotton Market.

New York, Jan. 24.—The cotton market opened steady, but irregular, at a decline of 6 points to an advance of 5 points, and during the first few minutes showed a net gain of 6@8 points on the active months as a result of relatively steady cables, covering and Wall street buying. General business was restricted by a poor wire service, and subsequently fluctuations were irregular, with the market ruling about one to three points net higher during the middle of the morning.

Spot closed quiet, 15 points lower; middling uplands, 11.75; middling gulf, 12.00. Sales 1,400 bales. Futures closed steady. Closing bids: January, 11.02; February, 11.02; March, 11.15; April, 11.20; May, 11.25; June, 11.20; July, 11.13; August, 10.92; October, 10.32.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Just before the close, good buying of Isle Royale and Atlantic came in both stocks and they were active at high prices. The rest of the session was without feature and very dull. Calumet & Hecla was weaker and Butte hung around 50. Utah Consolidated was strong on buying from New York. Bearish sentiment is increasing and the short interest must be getting unwieldy again and we expect a rally tomorrow or Monday.

St. Paul Livestock.

St. Paul, Jan. 24.—Cattle: Receipts, 300; steady and unchanged. Hogs: Receipts, 3,000; 5c higher; trade slow; range, $4.06¾@4.13½; bulk, $4.05@4.10. Sheep: Receipts, 1,000; quiet and unchanged.

DECISION IS REVERSED

Because Secretary of Defendant Brought Coat of Juror.

St. Paul, Jan. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Because the secretary of the defendant companies purchased a coat from one of the jurors during the trial, the supreme court today ordered a reversal of the jury findings and a new trial in the case of Peter F. Akin, respondent, vs. the Lake Superior Consolidated Iron Mines, et al, defendants. The case comes from St. Louis county.

The Oliver Iron Mining company was the appellant, and the Roberts Kingston Contracting company, defendants-respondents. The suit was one for damages for injuries and was brought in behalf of Peter Akin, a boy, by his father.

The jury gave young Akin $10,000 after hearing the evidence. During the trial it was learned that the secretary of the Roberts Kingston company, one of the defendants-respondents, had purchased a coat of one of the jurors, paying him a good round figure, and this the Oliver Mining company used as the principal argument in its appeal to the supreme court.

Other opinions were filed by the court as fallows:

Andrew E. Anderson, respondent, vs. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway company, appellant. Affirmed. From Grant county.

Johanna Johnson, respondent, vs. John Paulson and Anna Paulson, appellants. Affirmed. From St. Louis count.

George Welsh and George M. Durkee, as receivers of Depue Brothers company, appellants, vs. First National bank of Benson, respondent. Order affirmed. From Swift county.

Martin Anderson, appellant, vs. Peter Omystrom, et al., respondents, affirmed. Brown, Judge. From Wright county.

John Sjobtom and Andrew Sjobtom, as Sjobtom and Theodore Ham Brewing company, appellants, vs. Emark, et al., defendants. Frank Smith, et al., respondents. Affirmed.

MAYOR OF OMAHA LED FROM HALL.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 24.—Mayor James C. Dahlman of Omaha was led from the hall by the sergeant-at-arms of the waterways congress, at its final session last evening, at the request of Governor Burke of North Dakota, who was acting chairman of the congress.

The mayor rose in his seat to talk on the motion to adopt the report of the committee on organization. His attitude was unsatisfactory to several delegates, who declared Mayor Dahlman was out of order, because he was trying to inject politics into the congress.

STILL HEARING DURAND.

Washington, Jan. 24.—In laying the foundation of its case against the Standard Oil company in the suit for the annulment of the company's charter, the government continued today the examination of Chief E. Dana Durand, deputy commissionre of corporations, before the state examiner, Judge Franklin Ferris.

FOR THE SCOLDING WIFE.

London Evening Standard: A fine specimen of a scold's chair is among the remaining contents of Sherfield Manor, Basingstoke. It dates from 1723 and is in oak and is elaborately carved in high relief in bold scroll ornament. The sent is worked by a lever from behind, and the sitter is locked in by falling arched bars in front. The canopy is inscribed, "Presented to Archibald Acheson, Earl of Gosford," and hears these lines:

If you have a wife who scolds,
Life indeed is bitter,
So in this chair you'd better sit her,
Then go out to take your pleasure,
Come back, release her at your leisure,
And after all too light a measure.

The chair is eighty-six inches high and forty-two inches wide.

THE REWARD OF POLITENESS.

President Harahan of the Illinois Central, at a dinner in New York compared foreign with home roads.

"And another thing," he said—"our railway servants are more courteous than foreign ones. Foreign porters and ticket sellers are a very crusty lot.

"An American and a Briton were once riding up to London in a first class carrige. The American, at a certain station, leaned out and said to the porter on the platform:

"'What station is this, brother?"

"'Birmingham, of course,' said the porter in a surly tone. 'Can't you see the name posted up?'

"The American, after drawing in his head, said to the Englishman:

"'Now that was a piece of discourtesy you wouldn't meet with in America. All American porter would have answered me with polished politeness.'

"The Englishman smiled.

"'Ah, but it was your own fault, that rebuff,' he said. 'Pardon me for mentioning it, but your manner was too bluff, too rough-and-ready. The porter took you for a—er—a bounder. Now, at the next station, I will myself ask a porter some question, and I'll ask it in the gracious, condescending way we do such things over here. I warrant you I'll receive the most courteous of answers.'

"'All right,' said the American shortly.

"Well, at the next station the carriage drew up near a porter, and the Englishman—he was a typical, rotund, rosy old John Bull—put his head out of the window, showed all his false teeth in a glittering smile, and purred:

"'Porter, would you kindly tell me the name of this station?'

"The porter glanced up, and then, as he slouched off, called back over his shoulder,

"'Ah, shut tha trap, that bacon-faced old bluffer! Put tha daft fat head in before I knock it off for thee.'"

What are your "lucky numbers?" Perhaps the number of the classified ads, in today's paper is one of your lucky numbers.

NOTHING NEW.

Inventions Credited to Modern Times Were Enjoyed by the Ancients.

Modern civilized man is clever, of course. But so were others before him.

Whether it is bone collar studs or milk bottles, safety pins or magnifying glasses, rubber stamps, sun signals, or bacilli, orchestras, or chess, somebody knew about them, somebody had used them hundreds or thousands or hundreds of thousands of years ago, as the case may be. But always before they were rediscovered, remade and reused in the bouncing, big, boasting world of the West today, says the Chicago Tribune.

It was ancient Egypt that had bone collar studs and babies' milk bottles. It was the Moors that had rubber stamps and sun signals as they are used today in the British armies. It was Pompeii that had safety pins; it was Nineveh that had magnifying glasses; it was India that had knowledge of the bacilli; it was Timbuctoo that had orchestras and chess as well as fine libraries and surgeons that operated upon at least one European for a successful disposition of cataract in the year 1618.

Were words ever wiser than "there is nothing new under the sun?" Either nothing is new or everything is new. Every day is a fresh beginning. Every day is the world made new. Every day means new made hope, new made life, new discovery, new achievement. Things may be old to Egypt and Nineveh, but they are new to America, to England, to the twentieth century, to every one that lives until he has discovered them, until he has achieved them.

Perhaps we got the idea of our suspension bridge of steel and iron from the bamboo suspension bridge which Orientals have been accustomed to build for centuries. We have historical memoranda of a suspension bridge built across the Imjin river in Korea, in the year 1592. At that time there was a war in progress between the Chinese and Koreans on one side and the Japanese on the other. The Japanese were defeated and withdrew across the river. Then the Koreans built the suspension bridge out of great cables twisted from a native vine, called chik, so as to enable the Chinese soldiers to follow. The bridge was 150 yards long, but so well built that an army of 120,000 men crossed over safely.

The Dyaks built an amazing suspension bridge out of bamboo. The natives of New GGulnea are experts in suspension bridge building, although they are reputed in the wise Western world to be degraded savages. When Pizarro marched through Peru he found terrific mountain gorges spanned by stout suspension bridges, made of twisted lianas and capable of sustaining great weight.

No science is more modern than medicine; at least, not among civilized races. Only comparatively recently have we been willing to relinquish the horrible practices of the middle ages. But the savages of two and three centuries ago understood inoculation for fevers. There are instances recorded of Europeans having been cured by this process when all white men's medicines failed utterly of their object.

The Indian pelmans or medicine men of South America understand and use curative herbs, vervain, henweed and many others, and have cured fevers by the aid of medicine of their own composition. The people living along the borders of the Gulf of Mexico are proof against serpents' bites. Their immunity was brought by inoculation with a mixture of snake venom and the juice of the mano delsano, or toad's hand."

The Gallas of British East Africa are believed to have employed vaccination to secure immunity from smallpox long before Jenner's discovery among the civilized folks. They inoculated in the nose. In days when an unfortunate patient was packed tight in a hot bed, in a stuffy room, secluded from every breath of fresh air, the Zulus carried their wounded to high mountains, well aware that pure hillop air is the best of nature's antiseptics.

Nearly all of our carpenters' tools come from the savages. The sources of the knife and hammer are lost in the dimmest distances, and have been found in one form or another in the possession of even the lowest savage tribes. But aboriginal races are responsible for far more complicated implements than these, the cross cut saw, for example. More than one tribe has evolved a saw.

The Polynesian Islanders made an ingenius and fairly useful instrument by inserting sharks' teeth into a handle of wood. Other savages use a thin strip of wood or bone in connection with moistened sand, and thus are enabled to cut through stone or other hard substances. Many dark-skinned tribes were found to have drills. The shaft usually is of wood, the point of intensely hard stone, such as jade. By means of drills the Samoan natives can bore holes in the shanks of their beautifully fashioned pearl shell hooks.

Tools of one sort and another were evolved simultaneously, it appears, in different parts of the world. So we cannot say that we got our carpenters' tools from savagedom direct. But they, nevertheless, are on a par with us with many of their common inventions. The Eskimos are a little people whose life has meant a long and hard strife against the bitter cold and wild storms of the Arctic climate. And they have developed a marvelous ingenuity. The sledge was known in Europe before the Europeans found the Eskimos, but it was not known in the handsome form that travelers see in Greenland. The proof is that the white inhabitants of Canada and the Northwest, as well as all Arctic and Antarctic explorers, have adopted the Eskimos sled, and in Alaska and elsewhere employ dogs to pull them, with harness of the Eskimo pattern.

Snowshoes of every sort come direct from savages. The long Norwegian ski probably are creations of the Lapps. The Canadian snow shoe has a frame of tough wood supporting a web of rawhide. This practically is identical with the shoe the first settlers found the Indians wearing. And it is like the shoes of the modern Eskimo.

Whence came our motor-car goggles? Are they the lineal descendants of the Eskimo snow spectacles? The Eskimos protect their eyes from the glare by little cups of wood with narrow slits cut across the bottom and inverted across the eyes.

Are potted meats the descendants of the Indians pemmincans. The early fur traders of the Northwest found pemmican in universal use as a winter food among the Indian tribes. They introduced it into the British navy for the purpose of supplying Arctic expeditions with a portable, easily preserved and nutritious food. There seems to be no doubt that this savage concoction is the forerunner of all tinned foods.

Sago comes direct from the natives of Ceram. They have had it centuries longer than the civilized people, and eat 15,000 tons of it every year. Maize is one of the most important cereals. Yet in spite of its common name, Indian corn, perhaps, we forget that we owe all our corn concoctions and delights to the uncivilized new world. It was there, too, that we got the yam, or sweet potato. The world at large would not miss the disappearance of the Irish potato so much as they would the passing of the yam. Yet the yam is a genuine savage food.

Perhaps our boats do not come from the savages, but the Pacific savages have a boat that will beat the American five-masted schooner and the Australian clipper. It is the flying proa. This marvelous little boat can outsail not only anything else that moves by wind power, but also can beat most steamers. Twenty knots an hour is the speed with which most of them are credited. We have borrowed from native races the idea of the double hull. One of the most popular sorts of river craft is the canoe. This is a purely savage invention, a red Indian patent which civilization cannot improve. There is no other craft which weighs so little and still carries so large a cargo, is propelled so easily, is so elastic and so seaworthy as the true birch bark canoe of the North American Indian.

The paddle is the usual implement the savages use for propelling their boats. But the oar is not a civilized tool. For centuries unnumbered the Eskimo has moved his umiak, or heavy boat, by means of genuine oars. His rowlocks are ingenious contrivances of loops of rawhide linked together.

Even some of our finest fashions come from the low savages. The finest, coolest and most costly head coverings in the world were invented and are today made by little brown men. They come from Ecuador and they are mysteriously called Panama hats. M. Jean de Reszke is credited with having paid about $500 for one of these noble headgear, while King Edward is said to have given about $400 for his in the summer of 1902. The fiber for these hats is got from a grass which grows in Ecuador, and also from palm leaves. It takes a lifetime of training to become an adept in the weaving of a Panama; perhaps none bu ta native would have the requisite patience needed to split the fiber to the thinness of sewing cotton and to spend weeks, even months, in the delicate plaiting. In making the finer kinds of hats the weaving has to be done under water so as to prevent the fiber from becoming too brittle for use. No product of machinery can vie with these specimens of semi-savage handiwork. The perfect Panama is light as a feather, can be folded up like a silk handkerchief, and even if run over by a loaded van can be straightened out, washed and then looks like new.

The Zuni Indians of New Mexico deserve to rank among the world's best handicraftsmen. Their blankets are so beautifully woven that some of the best of these hand-woven tissues actually are almost as waterproof as oilskin. No other fabric known is at once so light and so warm. The patterns are geometrically precise and the dyes they use are their own. Some of our most handsome of modern dyes come from savagery. The cochineal, for example, was cultivated in Mexico long ere the Spaniards found it in Mexico.

We have borrowed from native races the idea of the double hull. One of the most popular sorts of river craft is the canoe. This is a purely savage invention, a red Indian patent which civilization cannot improve. There is no other craft which weighs so little and still carries so large a cargo, is propelled so easily, is so elastic and so seaworthy as the true birch bark canoe of the North American Indian.

The paddle is the usual implement the savages use for propelling their boats. But the oar is not a civilized tool. For centuries unnumbered the Eskimo has moved his umiak, or heavy boat, by means of genuine oars. His rowlocks are ingenious contrivances of loops of rawhide linked together.

Even some of our finest fashions come from the low savages. The finest, coolest and most costly head coverings in the world were invented and are today made by little brown men. They come from Ecuador and they are mysteriously called Panama hats. M. Jean de Reszke is credited with having paid about $500 for one of these noble headgear, while King Edward is said to have given about $400 for his in the summer of 1902. The fiber for these hats is got from a grass which grows in Ecuador, and also from palm leaves. It takes a lifetime of training to become an adept in the weaving of a Panama; perhaps none bu ta native would have the requisite patience needed to split the fiber to the thinness of sewing cotton and to spend weeks, even months, in the delicate plaiting. In making the finer kinds of hats the weaving has to be done under water so as to prevent the fiber from becoming too brittle for use. No product of machinery can vie with these specimens of semi-savage handiwork. The perfect Panama is light as a feather, can be folded up like a silk handkerchief, and even if run over by a loaded van can be straightened out, washed and then looks like new.

The Zuni Indians of New Mexico deserve to rank among the world's best handicraftsmen. Their blankets are so beautifully woven that some of the best of these hand-woven tissues actually are almost as waterproof as oilskin. No other fabric known is at once so light and so warm. The patterns are geometrically precise and the dyes they use are their own. Some of our most handsome of modern dyes come from savagery. The cochineal, for example, was cultivated in Mexico long ere the Spaniards found it in Mexico.

ANOTHER JAIL BIRD

Arrested in Connection With Shooting of Policeman Becker.

Paul Davis is Gathered in by St. Paul Detective.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.) — Detective William Springer of Central station at 2 o'clock this morning arrested Paul Davis for implication in the shooting of Patrolman Becker of St. Cloud. Davis is well known to the St. Paul police, and has served seventeen years of his thirty-four years of existence in state prisons and reformatories. In company with Edward Carmody, he was only recently released from the St. Paul workhouse. He has served two terms in Stillwater, one five year term in the Waupun, Wis., penitentiary, and a term in the St. Cloud reformatory. He was seen in company with Carmody, Sheehan and Green, drinking in a St. Cloud saloon on the night of the shooting.

Identified by Becker.

Carmody, when taken to St. Cloud last night by Sheriff Wright was taken at once to the bedside of Patrolman Becker. Becker at once identified him as one of his assailants. A number of witnesses, who were brought to St. Paul from St. Cloud last night positively identified the photographs of the quartet as the ones seen drinking in the saloon and hanging around town together.

Carmody has a record of four and one-half years in Waupun penitentiary, six and one-half years in Stillwater and three workhouse sentences. There is a possibility that the men may be brought to St. Paul for safekeeping as they are in danger of mob violence at St. Cloud.

When Carmody reached St. Cloud last night after having been arrested in St. Paul, a large crowd gathered and made threatening demonstrations while he was being taken to the city jail.

It is feared that an attempt to storm the jail may be made.

Paul Davis, the fourth man wanted in connection with the shooting, was arrested in St. Paul early this morning, and is confined in the county jail.

SHE FLIRTED; IS DETAINED

Beautiful Female Passenger From Naples Held at Ellis Island.

New York, Jan. 25.—A beautiful young woman, richly attired and occupying the state room in the first cabin of the Hamburg-American steamship Moltke was not permitted to land when the latter berthed, because of several vivacious flirtations she is alleged to have participated in during the voyage. The captain of the Moltke had complained to an immigration inspector of these actions, and as the young woman had no address here and no husband waiting for her at the pier, she was taken to Ellis Island.

The detained voyager declared that she is Mrs. Ameila Boris, the wife of a New York man. Mr. Boris would meet her at the pier, she said, and there really was a man there waiting for her, but when Immigration Inspector Mooney, got to him and asked him if he was the handsome young foreigner's husband he replied in the negative.

The case is one of the most unusual ever handled by the board of inquiry at Ellis Island. The vivacious young woman was not only liberally supplied with fine raiment, rich furs and splendid jewels, but carried in a silver purse, 26,000 francs in French currency.

She boarded the Moltke at Naples alone. She had no friends or acquaintances among the passengers—at first. But directly afterward, according to the officer's testimony before the board of inquiry, she became very popular with the unmarried men of the ship.

Miss Inspector Mooney listened severely to the captain's story and then questioned the fair passenger.

"Do you know where you are going when you reach New York?" asked the inspector.

Mrs. Boris raised her eyebrows and then said, with a rippling laugh: "I am going to fly to my husband's arms. He will meet me at the pier."

So Miss Mooney waited until the Moltke docked. A tall, well-dressed man was waiting at the foot of the gangway.

"Ah! He is there!" cried the beautiful passenger, gathering her fur cloak about her and tripping forward. But the grim inspector brushed by her and ran to the side of the waiting man.

"Are you this lady's husband?" she asked. The man shook his head.

BRITISH WITHDRAW FROM RIVER PATROL.

Pekin, Jan. 25.—Vice Admiral Sir Arthur William Moore, commander-in-chief of the British naval forces on the Chinese coast, has advised the British legation here that he is entirely satisfied with the assurances given him by the viceroys of Canton regarding the future patrol of the West river, and consequently the British flotilla which has been patroling this riven since Dec. 3 for the purpose of suppressing piracy was withdrawn yesterday. The paying of the Sainam indemnity by the Chinese also influenced Vice Admiral Moore to withdraw from the river. The Canton viceroys have agreed to increase the efficiency of the Chinese patrol boats and place them under the command of an officer named Li Chun, who has been trained in modern naval methods.

Tobacco Buyer Taken to River and Threatened With Ducking.

His Promise Not to Buy Any More Saves Him.

Dawson Springs, Ky., Jan. 25.—A band of fifty masked night riders, late last night, took possession of the Arcadia hotel, here, and after terrifying the guests by "shooting up" the place, took John Heath, an independent tobacco buyer, who was a guest, to a river nearby, and upon the threats of a "ducking," made him promise not to sell any more tobacco.

The riders first tried to force the night clerk to show them to Mr. Heath's room, but this he declined to do. The men then scattered to all parts of the hotel, shooting as they went. The guests, terrified by the shooting, rushed from their rooms into the halls, only to be frightened back.

Mr. Heath was recognized by the night riders as soon as he appeared. He was quickly seized, and although dressed only in his night shirt, was put on a horse and taken to the river, about a mile away, where, after threats of being whipped and thrown into the river, he was forced to promise that he would not buy any more tobacco. He finally found his way back to the hotel, and the masked raiders disappeared.

TO RESTRICT EMIGRATION

Stringent Orders Are Issued by Japanese Government.

All Emigration to Hawaiian Islands Practically Prohibited.

Tokio, Jan. 25.—The program for today's session of the diet, including the speech of Foreign Minister Viscount Hayashi, regarding the emigration question was suddenly changed, and the speech was postponed until Jan. 26, when it is expected that Viscount Hayashi will outline definitely the plans of the government for the restriction of emigration to America and Canada. It is understood that the postponement was due to the fact that a reply from the American government to the last memorandum from Japan was expected to be handed to the foreign office this afternoon.

Since the delivery of its last memorandum, the Japanese government has issued the most stringent instructions to all governors and other officials concerning the regulation of future emigration along the lines of the future definite policy of restriction, which includes the prevention of emigration of laborers to America and Canada except under given conditions, which will be satisfactory to the governments of both of those countries. No laborers will be permitted to emigrate to Mexico.

Government Determined.

Evidence of the determination of the Japanese government is shown by an official order issued to emigration companies today, wherein all emigration to the Hawaiian islands is absolutely prohibited except in the case of relatives of Japanese already residing there.

The order bearing on emigration to the Hawaiian islands has created consternation among the emigration companies, who expected to institute a virulent attack upon the foreign office policy in this respect. Viscount Hayashi, however, is determined not to yield and says that the Japanese government, having given a promise, will not recede from it, regardless of political pressure.

MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEARED

No Trace Found of Josephine Malone, Janesville Dressmaker.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 25.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Janesville, Wis., says: Thus far no trace of Josephine Malone, the dressmaker who mysteriously disappeared Wednesday night, has been discovered, despite the fact that her two brothers, Frank and William, have searched every foot of the river bank, from the Court street bridge to Mongorey dam. Aside from her muff, and a white fur, which belonged to her mother, nothing has been found, and no reason can be assigned for her disappearance. Miss Malone was between 40 and 45 years of age, and moved into the city from a farm seven miles north of here, several years ago. The last seen of her was when leaving the home of the Hayes family, shortly after 9 o'clock, starting for home over the Court street bridge.

Court street bridge is the one upon which Madeline Odell Clayton is supposed to have met her death. That she disappeared in the same mysterious manner has given rise to a theory that when her body is found foul play will be discovered.

This morning a systematic search of the river has been begun by the police

DULUTH MAN IN A PRETTY ROMANCE

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The climax of a pretty romance of more than eighteen years was reached here Thursday evening with the marriage of Alpha Baker of Duluth, Minn., and Miss Ada Wright, a school teacher of Morgantown, W. Va. As children they went to school at Parkersburg. They separated eighteen years ago, Miss Wright's family moving to Morgantown, and Baker going to the West. After ten years Baker learned of Miss Wright's address and began a correspondence, which resulted in the engagement of the young people. By mail their wedding was set for Thursday evening, neither the bride nor the groom having seen each other since Baker went West.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY

Bill Designed to Take Place of Law Declared Unconstitutional.

Measure by Senator Knox Meets Objections Raised by Court.

Washington, Jan. 25.—A bill of tremendous importance to hundreds of thousands of railway employes throughout the country has been introduced in the senate by Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania, and is now under consideration by the judiciary committee of that body. This bill is designed to take the place of the employers' liability law, which was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court of the United States.

The Knox bill makes all railroads engaged in interstate commerce liable to their employes for injury incurred in service, and to their heirs, in the event of a fatal accident. The fellow-servant doctrine is overturned by the Knox bill, and the rule of contributory negligence is greatly modified. Under its terms the mere fact that an employe is injured or killed through the negligence of a fellow employe, does not relieve the employer from responsibility. Nor does contributory negligence bar an injured employe from claiming ramages. It merely lessens the amount of damage, in proportion to the percentage of negligence contributed.

Under the terms of this bill, no contract of employment, insurance, relief benefit, etc., can constitute a bar or defense to any action brought to recover damages for personal injuries or death. Mr. Knox is looked upon as one of the great lawyers of the country, and it is believed that in his bill he has met all of the objections raised to the former law by the supreme court. He believes that the railroad men deserve

PRISON SENTENCE FOR YOUNG WOMAN

Augusta Fahrm Must Serve One Year and Four Months.

Minneapolis, Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Augusta Fahrm, the young woman who was arrested a few weks ago, charged with embezzling several thousand dollars from a steamship agency, by which she was employed, pleaded guilty today to grand larceny in the second degree, when arraigned in the Hennepin district court, and was sentenced to one year and four months in the state prison.

MAN ENDS LIFE IN THE PRESENCE OF WIFE WHO REFUSED HIS REQUEST

Clarence Bambard Appeals to His Spouse for Reconciliation.

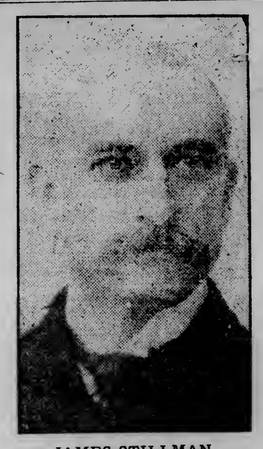

Upon Her Refusal, He Drinks Deadly Draught of Acid.

Tragedy in Kitchen in Oppel Block on Superior Street.

With a gasp of farewell, uttered through acid-stained lips to the wife who had a few minutes before refused to consent to a reconciliation with him, Clarence Bambard dropped to the floor in the kitchen of his wife's apartments in the Oppel block on East Superior street at 10:45 this morning and, though antidotes were freely used by his wife and the neighboring tenants, he died within a few minutes. The physician, who was summoned, appeared too late to be of assistance.

UNITED STATES RANKS SECOND

In the World for Ship Construction for Past year.

New York, Jan. 25.—The shipbuilding summary for 1907, compiled by the Shipping World, shows that the United States ranks second for the year in the total tonnage of ships constructed, only England having outstripped this country.

The summary shows that the total ship construction in American yards last year reached 488,059 tons, which is 195,986 tons greater than the output of the Germania yards for the same period, Germany standing third in 1907 among the maritime nations in ship construction.

Great Britain, which stands first on the list, has to her credit a tonnage of 1,673,121 tons of new ships, this figure including such great ships as the new Cunarders, Lusitania and Mauretania. This is nevertheless a decrease from the total tonnage of the output of the British yards in 1906.

France and Japan are about tied in the total tonnage of their output, the figures for the first named power being 109,622 and for the last 122,096.

PUFFS HER CIGARETTE

Young Woman Lights "Nail" in Superior Street Cafe.

Problem of Women Smoking in Public Hits Duluth.

New York city, under the spiritual and moral preceptorship of little "Tim" Sullivan, protege and earnest emulator of big "Tim" Sullivan, has passed a city ordinance prohibiting the public smoking of women in the restaurants and public eating places of New York. In Duluth it has never been thought necessary to bring such an ordinance before the serious consideration of the city fathers. But, listen—

Last night's diners in a Superior street cafe were startled and astounded by the sight of a young lady coolly taking a package of tobacco from her pocketbook and rolling a pill with the finesse of an expert, and then lighting and smoking the little nerve destroyer.

"Have you any objection," asked the young woman, as she carelessly struck the match on the table, as there were several women in the restaurant at the time. Everyone was either too interested in the performance, or else too polite to register a protest. Anyway, the smoking went on unmolested.

Of course it is not thought that any general practice will be made of women puffing the insidous cigarette in public; but then the example of last night only shows that independence and courage of conviction is not confined to "little old New York."

A SENSATION IN DRUCE CASE

Important Letters From Woman Are Reported as Missing.

London, Jan. 25.—The Druce case, which has been so prolific of sensations, today offered still another.

The solicitor for George Hollamby Druce, who claimed to be the son of the duke of Portland in the latter's dual personality of Thomas Charles Druce and as such to be heir to the title and estate, today made public the correspondence he has had with the public prosecutor in which he asks that official to assist him in locating letters offered him by Miss Mary Paterson of New York, but which has fallen into the hands of a man purporting to be his representative. In a letter to George Hollamby Druce, Miss Paterson said she had several letters written by T. C. Druce to her mother in which Druce referred to himself as the duke of Portland. George Hollamby Druce sent Miss Paterson money to come to England, but according to her later letters a man representing himself as an agent of George Hollamby Druce's solicitor called on her and got the letters. The solicitor is anxious now to find the letters, as he says they are necessary in the defense of Miss Robinson.

Miss Mary Robinson said to be an American woman, the daughter of a Southern planter, testified during the progress of the Druce case that she knew Druce as the duke of Portland, that Charles Dickens told her that Druce was the duke of Portland and that Druce himself afterward confirmed the statement. Miss Robinson was arrested Jan. 17 on a warrant charging her with perjury.

PAY FINES AND ESCAPE

Jail Sentence for Guilty Rebaters is Omitted by Judge.

Broker Thomas Hands Over $7,000 and Taggart Pays $4,000.

Kansas City, Jan. 25.—George L. Thomas, a freight broker of New York city, and L. B. Taggart, his clerk, pleaded guilty in the United States district court here today to the charge of conspiring to pay rebates to shippers. Judge Smith McPherson then fined Thomas $7,000 and Taggart $4,000, omitting the jail sentences previously assessed. Both defendants were in court and after sentence was passed checks covering the fines were tendered and accepted by the judge.

Thus ends the case against these men. The jail sentence, which was omitted today, was the first sentence of imprisonment ever passed for rebating.

OVERDUE SHIP IS HEARD FROM

The Princess Anne Sends Message That She is Safe.

New York, Jan. 25.—The Old Dominion line steamer Princess Anne, twenty hours overdue at this port from Norfolk, Va., was located off Northeast lightship outside of Cape May this forenoon. Capt. Tapley of the Princess Anne sent a message to the United Wireless Telegraph company that all was well on board and that the steamer would dock about 5 p. m. today.

New York, Jan. 25.—The Old Dominion liner, Princess Anne, which left Norfolk, Va., for New York, at 7 p. m. on Thursday, had not reached New York this morning, although she was due to arrive yesterday afternoon. Apprehension that she had suffered some mishap in the severe snow storm Thursday night was considerably lessened by the news of the sighting off the Virginia Capes of the overdue steamer Jamestown of the line, bound south from New York. The fact that the Jamestown was delayed in her trip down the coast before the gale, was accepted by the officers of the line as showing that it is reasonable to expect the Princess Anne to suffer greater delay in a trip up the coast, against a heavy sea and high wind. The steamer may have stopped at some harbor of refuge on her way and not have been reported.

Efforts were continued today to locate her by use of the wireless telegraph, with which the Princess Anne is equipped, but up to 10 a. m., the land stations had not been able to find the missing steamer. The Princess Anne carried eighteen passengers, and officers and crew to the number of about 100.

WORKING HOURS ARE REDUCED

Thousands of Men on Union Pacific Affected by New Order.

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 25.—The reduction of working hours of Union Pacific shop men, which began last Monday, is to be followed after today with a reduction of working days, from six to five a week. At the headquarters of the Union Pacific, it is stated that Omaha will not be the only place affected, and that there soon will be a general reduction of the mechanical force of the road along its entire line. This reduction probably will affect several thousand men, either by reduction of working hours or final dismissal.

The World Herald today quotes Vice President Mohler as charging the reduction to "President Roosevelt's mania for reform," and indicating that his company would work with a reduced force so long as the president's activity against corporations continues.

No Pleasure to Cut Down.

"You may say that the Union Pacific is only cutting down because it has to," he said, "and not because it is any pleasure to the company to throw thousands of men out of work. The public will be in no way affected by the reduction in force, and all the comforts to travel will be preserved just as before.

"It is this Roosevelt prosperity that makes this step necessary, and it disgusts me to think that his mania for reform should make the working class thus suffer. This retrenchment and economy will be necessary just as long as this administration keeps up its 'reform' activity, and so I am unable to say how long it will be before the old working time, and the rest of the working force, will be reinstalled."

The motor car shops will not be affected by the new rule, but all other shops will. Superintendent of Motive Power McKeen admitted that the cut had been made, but further than that refused to talk.

AMMONS PRESIDENT.

Denver, Jan. 25.—At a meeting of the directors of the Western Livestock Show association last night, E. M. Ammons was re-elected president; W. E. Skinner, vice president, and Fred P. Johnson, secretary. John M. Caulkins was elected treasurer.

Gokey Gets Jail Sentence.

William Gauthier, who was indicted and convicted of grand larceny under the name of William Gokey, was sentenced by Judge Cant yesterday afternoon to a term of ninety days in the county jail. Gokey's sentence was light by reason of the fact he had never before been arrested for crime. He is one of a family of six brothers and six sisters, and was brought up at Marquette, Mich. Gauthier claims to be a cook and says he has spent most of his life cooking in the logging camps in Northern Michigan.

NEW FRENCH MACHINE GUN.

London Globe: Although the French army remains unshaken in the belief that its new machine gun, firing 650 balls a minute, is the most formidable in the world, certain important defects have been pointed out in all the gunnery camps where it has been tested.

Owing to its practically unceasing fire gases generate, which throw it out of gear, though in some cases 10,000 shots have been fired without revealing any fault. The arsenal at St. Etienne has been furnished with designs for modifications which will remedy the defect, allowing for which officers believe that no regiment could advance 500 yards without most of the men and horses being hit, owing to the gun's differential action.

APOSTLE OF SUCCESS

James A. Wharton Attacks Business Record of Emil Tessman.

Haven Followers Have Forgotton Their Public Statement.

With James A. Wharton, clerk in the office of the probate judge, as the chief apostle of success, the business record of Alderman Tessman was attacked in the Lakeside town hall last evening, during the progress of a little orgie of mud-slinging indulged in by the Haven camp followers.

A lovely time "was had."

Mr. Haven discovered a $5,000 "slush" fund raised by the breweries for Mr. Tessman's support, and slipped in some little innuendoes regarding the man brought back from San Francisco for illegal voting.

A. G. McKnight "jollied" the ladies present, and tried to persuade them to use their influence with their male relatives in the interests of Mr. Haven and incidentally Mr. McKnight, candidate for alderman on the Republican ticket from the First ward of the city of Duluth.

"If we get the right kind of a council the mayor's office will to a certain extent take care of itself. Under the decisions of our supreme court the mayor is bound to enforce the laws under pain of impeachment and deposition, but no court can control city legislation."

The above is an extract from the circular letter fathered by Aldermen Willson and Moore in support of A. G. McKnight for alderman of the First ward.

"Coryate S. Wilson, who is about to retire as alderman, said he viewed with alarm the possibility of the seizure of the reins of city government by the 'interests' which are supporting Mr. Tessman."

The second statement is an extract from the account given by the News-Tribune, Mr. Haven's mouthpiece, of the meeting held in the First ward last evening.

Mr. McKnight is out of the woods now, and has no longer anything to fear, as he has no opposition at the election.

Mr. Haven, however, has to be pulled through to victory, if possible, and Mr. McKnight is forgotten in the shuffle.

MUNN'S LIFE MAY BE SAVED

State Board of Pardons Takes Up His Case Again.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—M. S. Munn, sentenced to be hanged Feb. 7 at Bemidji for the murder of August Franklin, will in all probability escape that fate.

Though denied clemency at the meeting of the state board of pardons last Tuesday, his case was again taken up at a special meeting of the board this afternoon and everything pointed to a commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment. Two of the members of the board expressed themselves as ready to vote for a commutation of the sentence.

If Munn's neck is saved, he can thank Judge W. S. McClenahan, who presided at the trial.

The judge wrote the board a letter, giving it as his opinion, that if clemency were extended to Mathiason, which was done at the last meeting, it should by all means be extended to Munn. Munn was first assaulted before he shot his man, while in the case of Mathiason there were no actual extenuating circumstances of this nature.

This letter was received today, and without delay the call for the special meeting was issued.

IS GETTING OUT NEW TRANSFERS

R. R. Dunn Thinks 30 Per Cent Reduction in Fare is Enough.

"Just as soon as we can get the stationery printed we will begin to give the people transfers from our line to points in the city on the Duluth Street Railway company's lines, on the 7-cent fare basis," said R. R. Dunn of St. Paul, president of the Park Point Street Railway company, who is in the city, on a business trip, today.

"This is a reduction of 30 per cent from the regular fare and I think that is a pretty good concession to start with. We will continue carrying people on the 7-cent fare and transfer system for a time, at least, and see how it works out. Whether we can do anything beyond that proposition remains to be seen.

"Some people have the idea that the street railway lines up town and on Park Point are owned by the same interests. That is wrong. The Park Point line is owned by just two people, O. C. Hartman and myself."

SPONGES TO SAVE CHAMPAGNE.

Louisville Times: "The champagne makers of Reims buy a lot of our sponges," said a wholesale dealer. "They squeeze champagne out of them. They must squeeze in the year's course 1,000,000 bottles of champagne out of sponges. Mystified, aren't you?

"But there is no mystery about the matter. Champagne, as it ferments, is powerful stuff; it breaks the strongest bottles, and in the past all the champagne that broke its bottles and escaped was lost.

"Now, though, they pack the champagne in clean sponges, and every day or two they go over the plant, and if any of the bottles have broken, they squeeze into casks the wine that the sponges have retained.

"This wine, reclarified, refined and bottled again, makes a very good second quality drink."

APPLICATION OF COOKE DEFINED

Judge McEwen Refuses to Issue Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Judge McEwen today denied the application of John A. Cooke, formerly clerk of the Cook county circuit court for a writ of habeas corpus.

Cooke was some time ago convicted of misuse of the funds of the county, and was sentenced to the penitentiary. He made a strenuous fight through the higher courts, and tried to obtain a ruling from the United States supreme court, which, however, declined to interfere. He then sought relief through an application for a writ of habeas corpus, which was denied today, the court holding that the conviction of Cooke was legal and binding.

The attorneys for the prisoner, before the reading of the court's decision, sought to withdraw the application for the writ, but Judge McEwen declared that he intended to read his decision anyway and that he would then consider the application for withdrawal. This matter was taken up immediately following the denial of the application and the court said that he saw no objection to the withdrawal of the writ. He then directed that Cook be turned over to the sheriff.

It is believed that counsel for Cooke will attempt further steps to save him from the penitentiary, inasmuch as the decision of Judge McEwen amounts to nothing because of the subsequent withdrawal of the writ.

Cooke was originally indicted upon thirty-one counts, and was given an indeterminate sentence.

MAY DIE FROM HIS INJURIES

Employe of Shipyard Falls and Fractures His Skull.

Joseph Trudeau, a shipbuilder, living at 2304 West Huron street, lies at St. Mary's hospital probably fatally injured, as a result of the breaking of a scaffold on which he and two other men were working about 10:20 this morning, at the yards of the Marine Iron works, Twelfth avenue west.

The scaffold was a light affair and broke, all three falling. Trudeau struck on the back of his head and was rendered unconscious. His skull was fractured. At the hospital it was stated that he would probably not recover. He is 45 years old and has a family. The other two men escaped with a few bruises.

MILWAUKEE MAN ROBBED

Loses Pocket Book While Attending Boxing Match at Racine.

Milwaukee, Jan. 25.—A Journal special from Racine, Wis., says: F. J. Cameron, a prominent lumber dealer of Milwaukee, was robbed here last night of $340 in money and bonds, stock certificates and other valuable papers, amounting to between five and six thousand dollars.

Mr. Cameron came here with a party of Milwaukee friends to attend the boxing match. When he left the street car at Hotel Racine, several men jostled against him and it is thought extracted a long pocket-book from his hip pocket, containing the valuables. He reboarded the car and searched for the pocket-book, but failed to find it. All the passengers denied having seen the pocketbook or any knowledge of the robbery. Chief of Police Baker is making an investigation. Mr. Cameron offers a large reward for the return of the valuables, and no questions asked.

RATHER OUT OF HAND.

Prof. Ogden Chalmers Lorimer, Toledo's veteran educator, is one of the few remaining schoolmasters who still cling to corporal punishment.

"I believe in corporal punishment," he said stoutly in a recent address. "I take no stock in moral suasion. Good, healthy boys under moral suasion have too free a time of it. They get out of hand.

"There is a friend of mine," said Prof. Lorimer, with a grim smile, "who is raising a family of six boys with the help of moral suasion. The mild little chap argued about the matter the other night at the club.

"'And do you believe,' said I, 'that moral suasion is better than corporal punishment for big, lusty boys like yours?'

"'Yes,' said my friend.

"For my part, I sneered.

"'And do you mean to say that you have never whipped your boys?' I asked.

"'As true as I sit here,' my friend declared earnestly, 'I have never struck one of my children except in self-defence.'"

MARKET IS QUITE FIRM

Copper Stocks Are Fairly Steady During the Short Session.

George L. Walker Writes of the Metal Market.

The copper stock market was fairly firm during the short session today, and closed about unchanged from yesterday. Some of the issues were a trifle off from yesterday and some closed a little up, but the market was steady as a whole.

North Butte opened at $49.75, went off to $49.37½, rallied to $49.50 and closed at $49.50 bid and $50 asked. Amalgamated opened at $49.37½, went to $49.75, declined to $49.62½ and closed at $49.62½ bid.

Greene-Cananea opened at $5.12½, advanced to $5.50 and closed at $5.50 bid and $5.75 asked. Butte Coalition opened at $18.87½, advanced to $19 and closed at $18.87½ bid and $19.12½ asked. Walker's copper letter in Saturday's Boston Commercial says:

"Copper continues strong. Lake is 14 to 14⅛ cents, and electrolytic 13⅞ to 14 cents per pound. Sales of lake have been made by several companies at 14⅛ cents during the past week or ten days. At this writing some lake is obtainable at 14 cents. The metal market has continued more active than during December. Domestic consumers, however, are still buying very sparingly. As a result of the easy tendency of money, it is expected that the demand from this source may increase in the near future. The demand is more than taking care of current production, and surplus supplies are gradually disappearing. The outlook is now favorable to a further advance in prices. It is good opinion that copper will sell at 15 cents in the early spring."

TRANSFER MATTER NOT SETTLED

Street Railway Company Contends It Has Been Misrepresented.

The solution of the Park Point transfer question seems to be no nearer than it was some time ago. The recent letter from Alderman Joseph Shartel, which was published in The Herald a few days ago, and in which the writer took occasion to criticise the Duluth Street Railway company and the Interstate Traction company, because they have not provided a free transfer system between the two lines of street railway, is regarded as unfair by the Duluth Street Railway company, inasmuch as the latter company at a conference held on or about Dec. 25 last, agreed to exchange transfers with the Park Point street railway company. This offer was made voluntarily by the street railway people, as the report of the conference will show, and meant, virtually, the reducing of the fare to one-half to any part of the city to those who had occasion to use the Lake avenue and the Park Point lines. This is exactly what the Park Point people have asked for.

In view of its offer the street railway company contends that there is little ground for a complaint against it in the transfer matter and statements to the effect that the company is blocking the matter on technical grounds are claimed by it to be unfair representations of the situation.

TO STOP SALE TO BLIND PIGS

Eveleth Business Men and Brewers Hold a Conference.

The committee of the Eveleth Business Men's association, consisting of Supt. Greening of the Eveleth schools, Neil McInnis and Solomon Sax, met at the Spalding today, with the brewers doing business at Eveleth, to consider what can be done to do away with the abuses resulting from the selling of beer to the so-called mining location trade.

The brewers expressed themselves emphatically and declared that under no circumstances would they sell to known blind pigs, and would refuse to sell to any so-called boarding houses conducted by foreigners who persistently and promiscuously sell the beer to other than the regular boarders in the boarding houses.

Those interested were unable to arrive at a plan to stop the sale of such boarding houses, which may at times give or sell to visitors from neighboring boarding houses. It was distinctly agreed on the part of the brewers to assist in every way possible to do away with abuses of the traffic on locations.

The members of the committee talked at length on the legal aspect and what could be accomplished by legal remedies against the illegal part of the selling, and the possible legal remedies, and while in some respects there was perhaps not as much accomplished as the committee expected, yet it is believed good results will follow the meeting. Further efforts may be expected from both sides.

PLANT LIKE A CAMEL.

San Francisco Chronicle: The nearest thing to a camel among plants is a curious specimen of the cucumber family which bears the name of the Ibervillea sonorae. This plant, like the camel, is a native of the desert and it has to go without water longer than the animal.

As the rainy season in the desert comes only once a year nature provides the I. S. with a reservoir to store up enough moisture to last it between times. The organ in which the water is stored is located at the base of the stem. It is covered with a sort of macintosh envelope, through which the water can neither escape nor evaporate.

This water holder rests on the sand throughout the entire period of drought, but when the rain comes it springs into activity.

The only way to guard against these dangers is to keep the body in a healthy condition. With sound mucous membranes, and a normal activity of the bodily functions, the system is fortified against any weather.

There is no better remedy for this purpose than Peruna. Peruna tones up the mucous surfaces, invigorates the whole system. It is not only a restorative, but a preventive. A few doses of it taken in time may save you many months of sickness. BUILD NEW STRUCTURE

That Plan is Favored on the Postoffice Question.

Commercial Club Will Call on Owners to Submit Bids.

"Whereas, your committee on a postoffice site has considered the matter and deem it is to the best interest of the West Duluth station that a new building be put up; therefore

"Be it resolved, That the West Duluth Commercial club approve such action and that it hereby calls upon owners of property to make bids upon such a building at the proper time and place."

The above resolutions were introduced last night at the meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club by the committee that was appointed at the meeting last Friday to investigate the getting of a new postoffice building for West Duluth. The resolution was passed by the club.

M. M. Clark and George Miller gave their report of the convention of Commercial clubs, held at St. Paul, where they attended as representatives from the West Duluth Commercial club. Mr. Miller said the convention was a very large and enthusiastic one. He gave a detailed statement of the many matters that came before the meeting, and regretted that only two days had been set aside for the convention, as the time was far too short to get over all the matters of commercial interest to the state.

Judge Dibell's decision in regard to the good roads and tax amendment, made this week, was explained by Attorney H. H. Phelps, chairman of the committee, consisting of Mr. Phelps, L. A. Barnes and J. A. Scott, appointed by the West Duluth Commercial club to investigate the matter.

Mr. Phelps said that The Herald was the only paper to get the decision stright.

The club voted that the committee continue as it was, and extended them a vote of thanks for their good services.

The annual report of the secretary and treasurer were read, giving a statement of the club's financial condition, which proved to be excellent.

James Murry and John Monger of Duluth made short addressses, complimenting the West Duluth club on its progress.

CLAIMS LEASE NEEDS CHANGING

Virginia Brewing Company Starts Suit to Have Change Made.

The Virginia Brewing company of Virginia has instituted a suit in the district court against William T. Murchy and other residents of that city to have the defendants enjoined from interfering with the plaintiff's possession of certain premises occupied by a saloon on a sub-lease, and to compel the defendants to reform a certain lease executed by them to the Virginia Brewing company. The brewing company claims that when the lease was drawn up and signed, portions of the agreement between the parties was omitted; that the omission was not noticed for a long time, and that the defendant has been occupying the premises it claims under the lease, with the full knowledge and consent of the defendants.

REFUSES TO DISCUSS IT

M. H. Kane, Accused of "Repeating," Will Not Talk About Case.

Sheriff Brings Accused From the Mare Island Navy Yard.

"I have no statement to make about anything relating to my case," declared M. H. Kane, as he nervously fingered the brass buttons on his uniform in the county jail office this morning.

Kane is a recruit of the marine corps of the United States navy whom Sheriff W. J. Bates arrested at the Mare Island navy yard last Saturday on a warrant charging him with participating in an election fraud in this city, when the primary election was held last December.

Sheriff Bates and his prisoner arrived in Duluth this morning, having been on the way from San Francisco since last Monday.

Assistant County Attorney W. J. Stevenson, who accompanied Sheriff Bates to California, did not return with the officer. It is understood that Mr. Stevenson remained in California for a "visit," which may mean a little or it may mean much. In either event the county attorney's office is not giving out any information.

Kane, who is about 25 years old, judging from his appearance, says he came here from Baltimore, Md., and has been in and around Duluth for the past eight years, working in the woods.

He refuses to talk about the alleged act for which he was indicted, that of "repeating" at the primary election.

Kane states that the other five men who were sent to Mare Island navy yards with him and who are said to be indicted for election fraud, have "jumped out."

To the query whether he or any of the others were given a warning from Duluth Kane said he knew nothing that had transpired here until the officer arrested him. He does not know whether the other men were warned. Kane says he had little to do with the other five men, who seemed to keep together. According to the story told by Kane, the other five men did not desert the marine corps in a bunch. Their desertions occurred in intervals extending from the time they reached the Mare Island yard over two or three weeks, one man deserting at a time. Kane claims he does not know what became of the other five men that accompanied him West.

It is probable that Kane will be arraigned some time this afternoon, and an attorney appointed to defend him, if he is without funds of his own to employ a lawyer.

The young man still wears the uniform of the United States marine corps, and spends most of his time polishing the buttons and the brass decorations on his cap.

Sheriff Bates has nothing further to say about the case than that he was given the warrant to serve, and did so, bringing Kane back to this county to stand trial.

Mr. Bates says that the weather in San Francisco, while he was there, was fairly warm. Last Moandy it rained hard all day. He says that everywhere over the city new buildings have been started, but that most of the building operations have ceased since the money stringency affected the California city. Mr. Bates saw evidences on every hand of the great earthquake disaster, but he thinks that when the present building projects are carried out, as they will be in time, San Francisco will undoubtedly be a greater city than it was before the catastrophe.

CHARLES H. STEINWAY DECORATED BY KAISER WILHELM OF GERMANY

Noted Piano Man Receives Order of the Red Eagle, Making Fourth Decoration Conferred Upon Him Within a Few Years.

In recognition of the eminent services rendered to music and art, Emperor William has conferred the Prussian order of the Red Eagle upon Charles H. Steinway, head of Steinway & Sons. The honor is another evidence of the international recognition accorded Steinway & Sons, and demonstrates the high regard in which Mr. Steinway and the instrument which bears his name is held abroad.

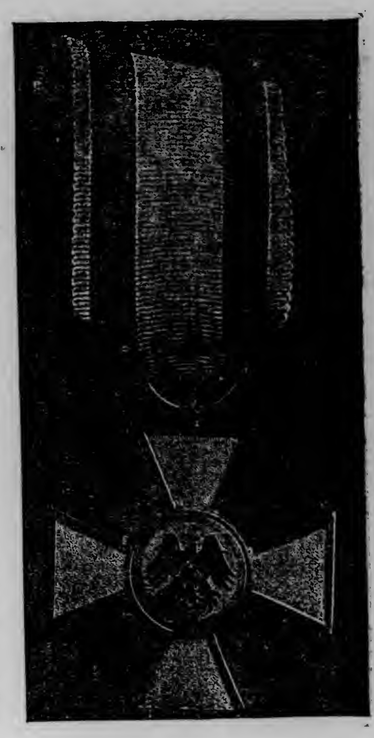

The new decoration is the second to be bestowed upon a member of the house of Steinway by the German Emperor, the first having been awarded to William Steinway in 1893, and in addition to the Prussian Order of the Red Eagle, Charles H. Steinway is the possessor of many other foreign titles. He has received the Cross of the Legion of Honor, granted by the republic of France, in 1905 the Order of the Liakat from the Sultan of Turkey, in 1900, and the Order of the Lion and the Sun, bestowed upon him by the Shah of Persia, in 1906.

Apart from the distinguished decorations received by individual members of the house, Steinway & Sons have been, by royal warrant, appointed piano makers to sixteen of the reigning courts of the Old World, and not only have the crowned heads of Europe endorsed the Steinway instrument, but many of the greatest artists of the present time have singled out the Steinway piano and given it their endorsement.

The Prussian Order of the Red Eagle is composed of four classes, and was founded in 1705, by Hereditary Prince Georg Wilhelm von Brandenburg, and it was then named the Order of Sincerity. The order was reorganized in July, 1734, by Markgraf Georg Friedrich Karl and was then called the Order of the Brandenburgian Red Eagle, from which its present name descended. King Friedrich Wilhelm raised the order to rank second in the knighthood of his royal house in 1792, and the present members include many of the most famous statesmen, philosophers, inventors and business men of the world.

Illustrated catalogues mailed free on application.

SUPERIOR NEWS

WILL ENJOIN BREWERS.

Mayor Linley Directs City Attorney to Begin Injunction Suits.

Mayor Linley of Superior has ordered the city attorney to start injunctional proceedings against the brewing companies either manufacturing or doing business in Superior, to restrain them from selling and dellvering beer to private consumers.

This action is taken as a result of a civil suit in the municipal court yesterday when President Klinkert of a local brewing company was acquitted on the charge of selling liquor without a license. He sold a keg of beer on Sunday to a consumer.

The saloonkeepers of Superior have to pay for a license and are compelled to shut their places of business Sunday, and the mayor intends to find out if there is any legal means of preventing the brewing companies from selling beer on Sunday when the retail liquor stores are closed.

Educator Makes Prophecy.

Prof. J. C. Monaghan, formerly of Wisconsin university, gave a lecture at the Grand opera house last evening, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. During his lecture, Prof. Monaghan prophesied that the time will come when such men as James J. Hill and E. H. Harriman will be lauded as among the truly great men of the country, and that monuments will be erected to their memory. Prof. Monaghan argued that Andrew Carnegie might have done more for humanity by paying as wages to the men he employs, the money he is spending for libraries. He urged the young men of the country to qualify themselves in husbandry, forestry, the sciences and similar studies and callings.

Jury Acquitted Brewer.

Although J. A. Klinkert of the Klinkert Brewing company admitted that he did not have a license, and made no denial to the facts alleged in the complaint, a jury in the municipal court yesterday found him not guilty of selling beer without a license. A few months ago, one of the employes of the brewing company pleaded guilty to the same charge, and paid a fine of $50. The evidence showed that Mr. Klinkert sold a keg of beer direct to a consumer on Sunday, and that he did not have a liquor license. The saloonkeepers in Superior have to pay $500 for their licenses, and must kep their saloons closed on Sunday.

May Use Union Depot.

It is rumored in Superior that the Wisconsin Central Railway company is likely to make use of the union depot for its passenger traffic, for a time, following the completion of its road to the Head of the Lakes. The big steel bridge over the Nemadji river is practically completed and ready to be turned over to the railroad company. With the bridge finished, construction trains can haul material southward from Superior, and work can proceed at both ends of the forty-mile gap remaining to complete the line between Ladysmith and Superior.

Clubhouse is Robbed.

Thieves broke into the clubhouse of the Lake Superior Gun club and carried away a large quantity of stuff stored there for the winter, besides demolishing practically all the club's property. The traps were broken up and the damage will amount in all to about $100. The club will offer a reward for the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties.

AN EXPLOSION OF DYNAMITE

In Iowa Mining Town Seriously Injures Five Men.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 25.—Five hundred pounds of dynamite in a boxcar at the mining town of Hocking, two miles from Albia, exploded during a fire which started in the company's store today, and five men were injured and $600,000 worth of property destroyed. The injured are John Cluett, cut by glass and flying timbers, rendered unconscious; Will Pilkington bruised seriously; Frank Davis knocked down and injured; two unknown men knocked down and cut by flying glass and timbers.

The shock of the explosion was felt for five miles around, and at Albia, two miles distance, windows were broken.

The fire started from an uncommon cause in the company's store of the Hocking Supply company, a frame building containing a stock worth $50,000. On a side-track nearby was a string of box cars, one of which contained 500 pounds of dynamite. The flames jumped to the cars and when the dynamite was reached, it exploded.

Miners fought the flames, even when they knew the dynamite was in the car next to the fire, and that it was likely to explode at any time.

THE RECIPE TO PREPARE

An Eminent Authority Predicts Much Suffering and Disease.

A Simple Prescription Which Sufferers Should Make Up and Try.

The coming months will be a harvest for the doctors and patent medicine manufacturers unless great care is taken to keep the feet dry, also dress warmly.

This advice should be heeded by all who are subject to rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles and especially catarrh. While the latter is considered by most sufferers an incurable disease, there are few men or women who will fail to experience great relief from the following simple home prescription, and if taken in time it will prevent an attack of catarrh during the entire season.

Here is the prescription which any one can mix: Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce, Compound Kargon one ounce, Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

The Compound Kargon in this prescription acts directly upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys to make them filter and strain from the blood, the poisons that produce all forms of catarrhal affections. Relief is often felt even after the first few doses and it is seldom that the sufferer ever experiences a return attack within the year.

This prescription makes a splendid remedy for all forms of blood disorders and such symptoms as lame back, bladder weaknesses and rheumatism pains are entirely dispelled.

As this valuable, though, simple, recipe comes from a thoroughly reliable source, it should be heeded by every afflicted reader.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Boston Transcript: Does the statement of that Jersey City minister that the church of the future will be "an ecclesiastical department store" mean that there will be bargain counters for salvation?

Baltimore American: "God calls some men to be lawyers, some doctors and some millionaires," said a well known bishop recently. Those who are not called at all probably go into politics or become plumbers.

Springfield Republican: A Hebrew rabbi in New York has become alarmed because, in his opinion, the Jews in this country are assimilating themselves too rapidly to their surroundings. What especially disturbs him is that his people are becoming infected with the American love of money making.

New York Sun: A remarkable ecclesiastical record is that of Archbishop Daniel Murphy of Hobart, Tasmania, whose death in his 93d year is announced. He was the last surviving bishop consecrated by Pope Gregory XVI. That was in 1836, and he had thus been a bishop for sixty-one years. He was born the day of the battle of Waterloo, was in charge of his see in India during the mutiny and was transferred to the Van Diemen's Land diocese forty-six years ago because his health had broken down.

New York Tribune: Churchmen will watch with much interest the operation of the new marriage laws of the Roman Catholic church, which, according to reports, will be universally enforced after next Easter. The most interesting clause is the one providing that betrothals, to be binding before ecclesiastical courts, must be formalized in writing and attested by a priest or two other trustworthy persons. What makes this significant is the fact that it has long been insisted upon, in all essential respects, by not a few priests here and there, and in some cases has resulted in tempting many persons to break with the church. Will the increased authority with which the regulation is now promulgated succeed in bringing the free American back to the good old custom of "publishing the banns?" The merits of this custom are great indeed, but we suspect that the headstrong and too independent American youth will not see them.

"There's a Reason"

MONSTER MASS MEETING IS HELD AT THE ARMORY

Labor's Side in Present Controversy Presented to Public.

Remarkable Spirit of Enthusiasm Greets the Several Speakers.

The labor mass meeting at the Armory last night was one of the biggest and most enthusiastic gatherings ever held there. The audience consisted very largely of union men, who have been locked out by their employers in the building trades. Many of them had their wives along with them, and there was a liberal sprinkling of ladies all through the hall. Numerous business and professional men were in attendance, and several members of the Duluth Real Estate exchange.

If the latter attended the meeting, which was conducted by the Federated Trades assembly, in the hope of detecting some sign of weakness in the ranks of labor in the present struggle, they were sadly disappointed, for a spirit of cheerfulness over the outlook, and unbounded enthusaism seemed to pervade the entire audience, or that portion of it, at least, that was drawn from labor's ranks. The sentiments of the speakers were greeted with loud and general applause, and the enthusaism when telling points were made by the labor orators, frequently broke out into shouts of approval that issued from scores of throats, drowning all other sounds until quietness was restored. The main floor of the Armory was closely packed with chairs to within a few feet of the rear wall. Every chair was taken, and scores of men stood up behind, and along the sides of the room. The balconies were also full, and many people were forced to stand there, although a considerable seating capacity had been provided in the balconies.

The List of Speakers.

The meeting was for the purpose of presenting labor's side in the present controversy between labor and capital to the general public. There was a good selection of speakers. Among them were George B. Howley, president of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, and personal representative of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; J. J. McHugh, vice president of the State Federation of Labor and representative of the St. Paul Carpenters' union; Rev. C. B. Boardman of Minneapolis, fraternal delegate from the Congregational Ministerial association to the Minneapolis Trades and Labor assembly, and W. E. McEwen, secretary of the State Federation of Labor, and a prime favorite with organized labor in Duluth.

The ground was well covered by the several speakers. Some new points were brought out, and the old arguments were briefly reviewed. None of the addressses was very long. All of them held the close attention of the audience, and all the speakers were frequently interrupted by enthusiastic applause. Mr. Howley was the first speaker.

He reviewed the cause of the lockout, and laid the blame for the trouble entirely at the doors of the American Bridge company, which had the contract for erecting the iron work of the Sellwood building. He explained how Josep Sellwood had offered to take the contract off their hands, at a profit to themselves, in order that trouble might be averted, and complimented Mr. Sellwood for the spirit of fairness he had manifested in connection with the matter. The bridge company, he asserted, rejected the reasonable terms offered by the Duluth man, and refused to get out of the field and take a profit, merely because of the principle of the thing.

"And yet," declared the speaker, "they expected the unions to sacrifice all the principles of unionism, and work beside non-union men, in violation of the laws of organized labor. By their little, so-called sacrifice they could have gotten away with money they did not earn."

Mr. Howley said this has been one of the cleanest fights between capital and labor that he has ever witnessed, and complimented both the contractors and the men locked out for the manner in which the fight has been carried on. There has been no violence or low methods resorted to on either side, he stated. He took the position of labor in the present struggle as proof of what has been contended for years, that the American Federation of Labor will not stand for violence or unfair tactics.

He mentioned the fact that thousands of men in Chicago and other large cities are out of work, and are being cared for by public charity. Their wants are such that they are driven in desperation to parade the streets to emphasize their demands for work and food. He contrasted this condition with conditions in Duluth, where, in spite of the fact that there has been a lockout in effect for weeks, with nearly 2,000 men thrown out of work as a result, there is no want among the organized labor classes, which are being cared for by their organizations.

Mr. McHugh, who was the next speaker, made some humorous and effective comparisons between the struggle of organized labor against injustice at the hands of capital, and the struggle of America for freedom and independence. The United States, he said, was started by a few men, who went on a strike because they were unsatisfied with conditions.

"In 1774," he said, "a man named Samuel Adams became dissatisfied with the state of affairs then existing. Others were also dissatisfied. They got together and organized a union. The Declaration of Independence was the result. The boss, whose name was John Bull, got roaring mad, and said he would be ding busted if he would give them what they asked for. He said they would be fired off the job. They were possessed with a liberal amount of backbone themselves, and declared they would go on strike, even if they did lose their jobs in consequence.

"Some objected to their attitude, as objections are sometimes filed in our union meetings today, but the motion carried, and George Washington was elected business agent of the new union. You all know the result. Boss John Bull was put off the job entirely, and the United States have been run on the co-operative plan ever since.

"Some time after this another little difficulty arose, and an attempt was made to work non-union men. President Lincoln was then at the head of affairs. He said: 'No, we must preserve our union.' He got after the backsliders and drove them back into line again and our union was preserved. Orators of the present time shout themselves hoarse on Fourth of July and other special occasions in lauding George Washington, Lincoln and others like them to the skies, but when called upon to support exactly the same principles which Washington, Lincoln and other patriots fought for, they fail miserably, and run to the sheltering wing of capital.

History Repeated.

"Union men of today are asking only for what their forefathers asked for. It is the same spirit all the way through, and they stand for the same principles. The unions have done more to elevate the workingman than anything else in the world. They have changed the starvation wage to the living wage, and the non-union men have prospered with the union men, because of the efforts of the latter."

Rev. Boardman Talks.

Rev. Boardman made a strong and effective address. He told something of his own history, how he had been led to expect that the early luxuries surrounding him would always continue, and how, at the age of 16, he was thrown on his own resources. He worked as a hired man on the farm, as a coal miner, as a roofer, as a carpenter, and at two three other occupations before finally getting into the ministry. He said he spoke entirely from an unprejudiced standpoint, and asserted that for real, genuine brotherhood, and the fraternal spirit organized labor was a world beater.

He declared that should unions be blotted out today the world over, the labor problem would not be solved. The labor unions do not create the problem, but it is problem that creates the labor unions, he said. He argued that the principle of the union shop was the principle of free government, and asserted that the United States is now standing together on the union shop principle. The trusts of today, he remarked, were operating on the union shop principle.

"If the union shop is wrong in principle, why is there not some legislation passed against it?" he asked. "It's legality has been proven time and time again. The union shop stands for a square deal on both sides. Oh, you say, the unions make unjust demands. Yes, and so does the other side. Yes, and the unions make mistakes. So does capital. Unions do wrong sometimes. Yes, and they pay the bill, too."

Rev. Boardman spoke of the spirit of brotherhood as exemplified by the unions, and illustrated his meaning with a touching story of a union man who died after being in this country only a year and one-half. He had no relatives or friends on this side of the Atlantic, but the fact that he was a union man was enough to influence nineteen men to lay off work for half a day and lose their wages for that period in order that they might pay their respects at the funeral. More than half the men had never even seen the man they thus honored. The incident was given as having come under the personal observation of the speaker.

He said the union men did not ask good wages for poor work. Reports of inefficient service rendered are carefully investigated, he declared, and steps always are taken to remedy conditions, where it is found there is some ground for complaint. He argued that unions were necessary in order to get a living wage, and said no man had a moral right to sell his labor on the open market in competition with others. When labor gets in competition, and when the lowest bidder gets the job, labor is paid lower than the living wage, he said. He asserted that union men were battling not alone for themselves, but for the generations yet to come.

"As Christ died to make men holy, let us die to make men free," he concluded.

McEwen Is Cheered.

As W. E. McEwen stepped to the front of the platform he was greeted with a round of ringing cheers and loud applause. He began by saying that the great question of capital and labor overshadows all other public questions of the day. The union labor movement he characterized as being as holy as any movement in the cause of righteousness. The speaker showed his knowledge of the Bible, and said Moses was the first walking delegate, carrying with him the grievances of his people. He said there was much similarity between the present struggle of labor and the struggle of the children of Israel. They wandered for forty years in the wilderness, and labor must expect to wander many years in the wilderness.

The speaker told of the opposition that all new movements have met with since the beginning of history, and said the leaders of such movements had been subject to persecution, and had struggled against great odds. He said that if a man or a movement stands for right and truth there can be no failure. Every step of progress in the history of the world has been made in the face of opposition and attempts at detraction, he declared, and there is scarcely a great proof or doctrine that has not subjected the man or men behind it to persecution. Explaining this meaning, he spoke of the religious persecutions of the past, and of other persecutions in this line.

He believed industrial independence the next step to religious independence. He spoke of an old cartoon, showing a king, a soldier and a minister resting upon the back of a laboring man. The minister said, "I pray for all;" the soldier said, "I fight for all;" the king said, "I rule all," and the laboring man said, 'I pay all." He said capital was necessary to industry, but that labor comes first, and also that the modern machinery of society is necessary.

Mr. McEwen treated the subject exhaustively, and made many telling arguments. He spoke particularly of the benefits accruing from union labor in Duluth, and declared that fewer women and children are working in Duluth in proportion to the population than any other city in the United States, ascribing this condition to the good influence of the labor unions. He quoted William H. Taft in the defense of unionism, saying that the words of so eminent an authority should bear some weight, for he could hardly be classed as a labor agitator. Mr. Taft's remarks, read from a newspaper article, were strongly in defense of organized labor as it exists today. The speaker also read from other authorities in defense of the union labor movement.

The speaker endeavored to refute the arguments of the non-union shop party in regard to the apprentice problem and declared that it was a problem which was too great for the union to dispose of in a week, or a year. It required a little time, and the assistance of the employer, in order that all might be worked out satisfactorily. He said it would never do to have an unlimited number of apprentices, for then many trades might become flooded with labor, and after surviving a five-years' apprenticeship a young man might find himself with a trade but no place to work... The graded wage scale, he declared, had been proven no good. He said it would not work, for the employer always insisted on paying the lowest wage in the scale. He declared a minimum wage necessary, and said the employers were at liberty to pay more than the minimum when they wished to retain the services of an extra good man.

Lower Wages Will Follow.

The speaker declared that under the non-union shop wages would be lowered in spite of the assurance of the contractors, and said the real estate men of Duluth were directly responsible for the fact that manufacturers and business interests are slow to come to the city, because the real estate men are responsible for the excessive tax rate of 36 mills, through having established a system where unimproved property is assessed ridiculously low, while improved property is made to bear practically all the tax.

Mr. McEwen told of a conversation with Chief of Police O'Connor of St. Paul, and said the latter asserted that never had so many crimes been committed as during a certain period when numerous strike breakers were in the city. The police department was on edge during the entire time of their stay, it was claimed. Mr. McEwen mentioned it as being a curious coincidence that not for years has there been such an era of crime in Duluth as at present, when there are scores of so-called strike-breakers here to take the places of union men locked out. He said he did not charge the imported non-unionists with being thieves, but merely thought it an odd coincidence that porch climbing and all kinds of burglary should come with a rush, almost immediately after their arrival here.

Rev. Boardman, during the course of his remarks, asserted that if the non-union shop movement won out in Duluth, there would be more cheap real estate for sale here during the next six months than has been placed on sale in Duluth during the last ten years. He said remarks of this nature were not merely speculation on his part, for the condition he pictured followed whenever the non-union shop principle had become established in any town.

Of course, neither diet, water, rest nor exercise will cure these afflictions. I advise them as preventives only. SOLE SURVIVOR OF GREAT WRECK

On Great Lakes Many Years Ago, Dies at Oconomowoc.

Manitowoc, Wis., Jan. 25.—The death of Frank Willis, a well-known resident of Manitowoc, at St. Mary's hospital, recalls the burning of the steamer Niagara on Lake Michigan in the '40s, a disaster of which he was one of the few survivors. The Niagara, then the pride of the Great Lakes, was en route from Buffalo to Milwaukee, with emigrants for the West. It caught fire off Port Washington and burned to the water's edge. A deck hand brought ashore an infant which was nearly dead from exposure, but was nursed back to life. The clothing of the child indicated that its parents were well to do, but the only evidence of its identity was a locket about its neck on which were inscribed the letters "F. W." It was adopted and given the name of Frank Willis. It was this child grown up that died at the hospital, where he had been for the last three years as a city charge.

MAY HAVE A CANDIDATE

If Not, Princeton Union Will Support J. F. Jacobson for Governor.

Inference to be Drawn From Editorial in Dunn's Paper.

Unless Robert C. Dunn of Princeton himself decides to become a candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, the Princeton man will lend his most ardent support to the candidacy of J. F. Jacobson. At least this is the inference to be drawn from an editorial appearing in the current issue of the Princeton Union, Mr. Dunn's paper.

After saying a lot of nice things about Mr. Jacobson, and asserting that he would be elected, if nominated, the Princeton Union femarks that it is not urging his candidacy at this time, because it "may have a candidate of its own," but says it could support him with pleasure, and that if he should receive the nomination, he will have no more earnest and loyal supporter than the publisher of the Union.

Their has been talk in the air for some little time past that Mr. Dunn might enter the field again for the Republican nomination for governor, and it would be no very great surprise if he should announce his candidacy. In connection with gubernatorial talk, it is said that Attorney General Young hastened his announcement that he would be a candidate, in the hope that it would do something in the way of heading off the Jacobson boom. Both Jacobson and Young come from the same part of the state, and the candidacy of one naturally would injure the chances of the other more than would be the case if a candidate came from another portion of the state. Friends of Jacobson, and several friendly papers have been boosting his interests in the governorship line, and it has been regarded as an assured fact that he would get into the game. Just what effect Young's announcement will have on any plans in this direction remains to be seen. The Union's editorial is given in full below:

Dunn's Position.

"What is there about Hon. J. F. Jacobson that causes some people to froth at the mouth when his name is mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination for governor? We have known Mr. Jacobson for almost a score of years, and have always found him to be square and manly, and one who fights in the open. Bushwhacking tactics are foreign to Mr. Jacobson's nature. He is frank, outspoken and above board, and he respects the same qualities in others.

"It is needless to recapitulate his services to the state as a legislator. But there is a particular service he rendered during the last two sessions he served in the legislature to which we wish to call the attention of those conservative people who seem to regard Mr. Jacobson as a fire-eating anarchist. The most important committee in either branch of the legislature is the house committee on appropriations—the constitution provides that all bills for raising a revenue shall originate in the house. All bills carrying appropriations for any purpose including the omnibus appropriation bill are referred to the appropriations committee. In the session of 1899 and 1901 Mr. Jacobson was at the head of this most important committee. Did any state institution suffer for lack of means to provide for its support during the years 1900-'04? Was any meritorious measure carrying an appropriation turned down by Mr. Jacobson's committee? Was not every educational, charitable and correctional institution amply cared for by the legislatures of 1899-'01? Was not every department of the state government provided with means sufficient with which to conduct the state's business? Was there any niggardly cheese-paring of appropriations indulged in by Mr. Jacobson's committee in those two sessions? Most assuredly not. But the appropriations were kept within bounds. No extravagance was indulged in and the tax rate for state purposes was reduced.

"J. F. Jacobson is not a radical. Placed in responsible positions he has always proved himself to be a conservative. As chairman of the house appropriations committee and as a member of the state board of control Mr. Jacobson has demonstrated his conservativeness.

"Then why should he be debarred from aspiring to the governorship? Was it Mr. Jacobson's fault that he was deprived of the honor that he had rightfully earned in 1906? Must he keep in th background "in the interest of harmony" now and forever afterwards?

"J. F. Jacobson has every right to aspire to the governorship. His friends are justified in pushing his candidacy. If he is nominated he will run like a prairie fire and he will be elected and will prove a capable, conservative governor.

"The Union is not urging Mr. Jacobson's candidacy at this time—it may have a candidate of its own—but we could support him with pleasure, and should he receive the Republican nomination for governor he will have no more earnest and loyal supporter within or without the confines of the state than the publisher of the Union."

REMARKABLE OPERATION

Surgeon Removes Part of Spine and Patient Will Recover.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 25.—Joseph Pittoria, a miner from Bush, Ill., will be walking about and doing his regular work minus a portion of his backbone if he recovers from an operation performed on him at the Evangelical Deaconess hospital, a few mornings since.

Pittoria, who had recently come from Italy, was working in a mine at Bush, when a cave-in occurred. He was buried under tons of rock and coal, which broke his back, in the lumbar region. The mass of rock fell on his head, doubling him up and crushing the transverse and spinous processses of the first, second and third vertebrae.

The crushing of these bones immediately affected the network of nerves which branch off from the spinal cord at the point of injury.

The motor tract of the spinal cord, or those nerves which control the locomotion of the lower limbs, were deadened so that he was paralyzed in the lower half of his body. The sensatory tract, or those nerves which governed the senses, were rendered acute, so that the man suffered intense agony constantly, making it necessary to keep him under the influence of opiates. So great was the agony that he would have succumbed soon unless relieved by an operation.

According to information obtained at the hospital, the subject was on the operating table three hours.

It was believed to be necessary to remove the arches of the three vertebrae, take out the crushed bone and reach the spinal canal, through which the spinal cord runs to the brain, in order to remove the mass of clotted blood and splintered bone which was pressing on the sensory nerves and causing the man such intense agony.

Another difficult factor in the operation was the excessive hemorrhage due to the network of veins which surrounded the crushed vertebrae, and the two arteries which run up each side of the spine, the walls of which were torn and crushed, filling the spinal cavity with blood and spicula of splintered bone. All during the operation, Dr. Menestrina was working with his instrument, under the flow of blood and entirely by the sense of touch.

The skin was lifted back from the seat of the injury, and then the heavy muscles that guard the spine were divided and lifted away, being held out of the way by retractors so that the operator could get at fractured bones.

The periosteum, a cartilaginous or fibrous substance which covers the bones, was chipped away and the spinous process, or the bone which projects from the spine outward, was chiseled and broken away by forceps.

After the spinous process had been removed the operator was able to get into the spinal canal through which the spinal cord runs to the brain.

For the length of the three vertebrae the spinal cord was lifted from the canal with delicate instruments and the canal cleared of fluid and spicula, or splinters of bone, which were pressing against it. Then, with forcep-like instruments the transverse processes were crushed and taken out until all the bony structure of the three vertebrae nearest the outside of the back had been removed by a process of gouging, crushing and chiseling, and all the while concealed from the view of the operator by the blood.

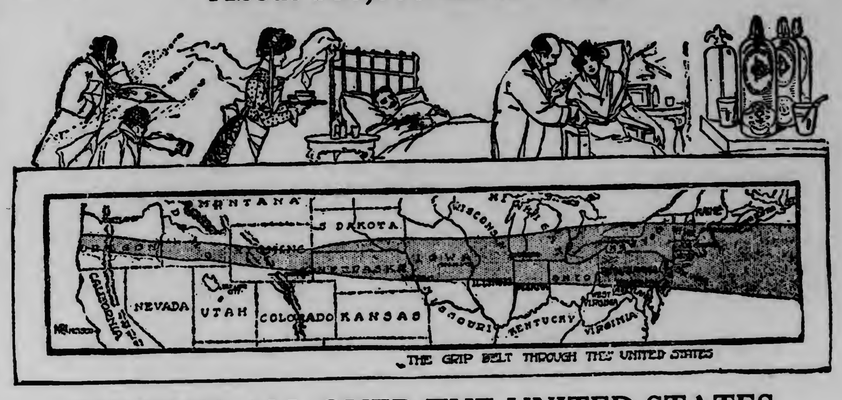

The body of the bony structure of the spine, that which lies back of or behind the canal, was left and forms the bed or support of the remaining portions of the spine.

When the spinous and transverse vertebrae had been removed, the anterior portion of the canal, a fibrous substance, was cleaned and sewed as a protection to the spinal cord, and the heavy muscles brought over and joined as an artificial wall for the canal.

Dr. Menestrina said that his patient was doing as well as he had expected, and he had strong hopes for his recovery.

Grip Raging

The Health Department's Weekly Reports Show 650,000 People Ill With Grip in Chicago and About 500,000 in New York.

EPIDEMIC ALL OVER THE UNITED STATES.

Grip has practically taken Chicago captive. Nearly 650,000 people in the city are suffering from the disease in some form, according to the estimate of the City Health Bureau.

New York city has about 500,000 cases and cities large and small, all over the country, have many victims.

If you feel the Grip or Influenza coming on you, saturate a corner of your handkerchief with Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, and inhale it, also take a teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every hour, and keep warm. This will stop the progress of the disease and drive it out at once. Do not dose yourself with so-called grip cures which contain opiates. They do not cure; they only deaden the membrane and injure the entire nervous system. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey cures and drives out the disease, but does no injury to the system, nor does it leave any bad after effects. It stimulates the blood and strengthens the run-down system, so as to enable it to throw off all grip germs.

Mr. M. D. Wingate, Petoskey, Mich. recently wrote: "I wish to tell you and the public what your Pure Malt Whiskey has done for me. Last February I was taken with a severe attack of the grip, but I did not improve, and as I had used several bottles of your Malt Whiskey, I procured a bottle and took it according to directions. In a day or two I felt much better, and by the time I had used the one bottle I was much stronger. It is surely a great medicine for old people. My wife used it for throat and lung trouble, and she thinks it has done her more good than anything else she ever tried."

Dr. R. Curran, White St., Rochester N. Y., the world-renowned grip specialist, says: "Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey will cure the most obstinate case of grip, and if taken in time will prevent the inception of the disease. I advise my patients to take a teaspoonful in hot water every hour if they feel the grip coming on and to saturate a handkerchief with a little Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and inhale it. I have never known a case where it has failed to cure and drive out the disease, and it leave no bad after effects."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is a positive cure for grip, with all its symptoms. Taken early, it cut it short promptly. Taken during its prevalence it preoccupies the system and prevents the invasion of grip. Taken while suffering from it, a speedy relief is realized.

Thousands of grateful patients voluntarily attest the great healing power of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and recommend its use.

Caution—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in sealed bottles only—never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1 Illustrated medical booklet and doctor's advice free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co. SMITH PUTS MONEY UP

Duluth Skater Will Meet Charley Rankin at Calumet.

Contest Will be Best Two in Three Half Mile Heats.

Ed Smith, the Duluth skater, yesterday afternoon post 1 $25 with The Evening Herald to cover the $50 posted by Rankin, and if the Calumet man sticks to his agreement, the two will meet at Calumet some time within the next two weeks. Rankin has been notified of the covering of his money and the final details of the match will be arranged early next week.

The match was arranged through a letter from Rankin some time ago, with which he sent $50 to bet. He agreed to bet $50 to Smith's $25 that he could beat the local man any distance under five miles, the same being applied to Harry Webb. He offered to bet the $50 even for a race with Carl Alroth, but Alroth did not take up the proposition.

Smith agrees to go to Calumet for the race, which will be best two out of three half-mile heats. Both men are fast and have been in the racing game for several years. Rankin has been working out at the Palestra in Calumet, and he is said to be in fine shape for the contest. Smith is confident he can defeat the former Duluth boy, and the result of the race will be awaited with considerable interest by Duluth followers of speed skating.

The annual crop of holders for larger contracts is looking promising in the big leagues. A little later the smaller organizations will have their share of them, and when the umpire calls play next spring, they will all be in line and their holding out will get them nothing but a lot of notoriety.

The most promising of the gang at the present stage of the game is Ty Cobb, the marvelous outfielder of the Detroit team, leader of the American league batting list and one of the phenomena of the age in baseball. Ty wants his contract to read for $5,000 a year of three years, with nothing deducted on account of lay-off for sickness or accident. Cobb is real conservative in his demands. Secretary Navin isn't a bit inclined to dig up to the extent Ty wants, and the chances are Ty will be back with the American league champs next year, without his three-year contract.

Bobby Wallace, the St. Louis American league shortstop, is holding out for the modest sum of $9,500. His contract calls for $8,000, but the Scot thinks he's worth more than that amount. Hedges will take him into a corner, giving him a bit of fatherly advice, and Bobby will not get his $9,500 contract.

Fred Tenney, traded to New York by the Boston Nationals, is another big league star who doesn't like the conditions of the contract sent him, and Jiggs Donohue of Chicago is another.

But they'll all get into line. They roar when they get their contracts, they give out interviews, in which they say they'll attend to their business, or till the soil, or play with the outlaws. But in their saner moments they consider that, with their particular talents they can earn more in a few months of organized baseball than they could in any other line of business in a whole year. So they fall into line and take the salaries offered them. There were a good many "kickers" last season, but they all returned to the fold, including Hal Chase, who had evidently set out to stick to his determination to step out of organized baseball, and the managers would undoubtedly be able to gather in the erring ones before the first game of next season.

If you don't believe curling is a strenuous sport, drop around to the curling rink this evening and size up the men who have been sliding the stones there since early Wednesday morning. Excepting a few, who are buoyed up by brilliant victories and hopes of honors at home, when they return with the "junk," they carry the hang-dog look of exhaustion. Stiff arms and legs, sore hands and aching joints are the lot of the unsuccessful ones, who receive not so much as a medal to show for their week of sport.

They aren't complaining. Goodness, no. They wouldn't have missed the bonspiel for anything under Duluth's cloudy skies. They had their week of sport, and, prizes or no prizes, they are content to return home, to talk over this year's bonspiel and dream of the next. They'll be right back in 1909, ready to go through more day and night sessions.

But they're tired. They don't deny it, themselves. From 8 o'clock in the morning until 1 or 2 o'clock the next morning is quite a long stretch and some of the curlers have sent the stones flying along and wielded the brooms for the greater part of the time each day. Their enthusiasm didn't flag, but their arms and legs began to give forth uncomfortable aches and pains. They swung their brooms with just as much vigor, on the surface, but the after effects were more trying.

This year's bonspiel was a great success. With two days out of the period allotted to them, the curlers went ahead and fought against time to settle the question of supremacy and possession of the different trophies. They put the best they had in them into the sport and some of the curlers worked harder this week than they will for a year again. They're tired, but they come up smiling when it's all over.

No, curling doesn't come in the list of mollycoddles' games.

It's pleasing to note that the Northern league magnates do not intend to wait until the grass begins to force its way through the frozen earth and the buds begin to shoot, before they get their new circuit lined up. The fact that they have started right in to get the towns in line and organize the league, indicates good intentions and it's natural to presume that Duluth will not be without baseball next year.

The new league idea doesn't take with some people, on account of the dropping of the Twin City project. But if it was a circuit outside of the Twin Cities, or nothing, we certainly do not want the nothing. The men, who have taken up the furnishing of baseball to that part of the Northwest lying within the territory of the Northern league, are of the right sort. They have had years of experience and have paid a lot of good money to secure the knowledge they now possess. The men, who can push their head up through failures and finally succeed, are those to be trusted with an enterprise of this kind, and in placing their confidence in the men, who are organizing the Northern league, the fans are safe. They have lost money and sometimes they lost patience, but they came back every time, with more money and ability, to back baseball again, to lose more money, and then they repeat the same performance over again.

The league magnates have all good towns in sight. Pick a league where they will, if they stick to the towns already mentioned, they will have a good circuit. Baseball will flourish in the Northern league next year. If the fans do their part, the magnates will do theirs, so let everybody get together and boost.

FEW OLD-TIME PLUNGERS

Some of the Famous Turfmen Who Staked Fortunes on a Single Race.

Turf statisticians who have carefully reviewed the season seem to have neglected the plungers, who are supposed to have started the financial stringency by their many coups, which in startling headlines added a spice to the game, says the New York World. But, as a matter of fact, isn't the race nearly extinct?

One day at the old Garfield Park track in Chicago Frank Shaw called the turf scribes together and said: "I don't mind it when you fellows print a fellow's losses along with a statement of his winnings. That sort of evens things up, you know, and a fellow wouldn't be chased by every creditor, 'cause I'm as likely to have debts as any one else. Now, yesterday, for instance, you said I won $23,000 on the third race. That's true, but I quit the day $22,000 loser."

Shaw was at one time the heaviest plunger in the West and Northwest. He would bet on the number of hairs in your eyebrows. But he's gone like all the rest.

It takes nerve to be a real plunger. In the olden days of open booking at the track it was a custom with many employes to bet $5—half their daily salary—on the first race and continue to parley through the card, betting every dollar back on their choice in every race. A former judge, now dead, tried this system, and one day picked six winners and was $20,000 to the good. His choice in the seventh race was a 1-to-3 shot, but he went to it for his whole pile, and it won. That's nerve. Many with $20,000 would have hiked it back to town and quit the game.

Mike Dwyer was probably the first real plunger to come into public notice. This man of iron never batted an eyelash, even when on a close head finish there depended a fortune. The chances are that Mike Dwyer had no nerves. Or, if he did have them, his outward show of feeling was so repressed that there was no smoke visible of the fire burning within. There was no time when Mike Dwyer did not present a cheerful, smiling face to his friends. Even when half of his body was practically dead he spoke cheerfully of the future and seemed to take enjoyment in the fact that he was existing.

After Mike Dwyer came George E. ("Pittsburg Phil") Smith, a young corkcutter, who made a lucky play in the pool rooms and finally drifted to the race tracks. He reduced racing to a science. Like Sherlock Holmes, he made observations and drew deductions. "Pittsburg Phil" had a carefully trained corps of assistants. Nothing escaped him. He was not content with the mere watching of the running of a race, but he carefully observed the preliminary gallops, and after a race he could be found carefully watching each horse as he came back to the judges. Their condition was noticed by the plunger for future races.

Smith studies the science of chances. He knew just where smart money was being played. He knew the connection between bookmakers and owners. It took a cold, patient man to analyze all these things and profit by them. "Pittsburg Phil" was the man, and his vigilance never relaxed. The strain, however, finally broke him down.

Steve L'Hammedieu flashed upon the betting horizon and was a blazing star for a few seasons. L'Hommedieu was a careless, loud-mouthed chap, who made big wagers on what appeared to be impossible chances. There was something peculiar in the accuracy with which L'Hommedieu landed these big wagers, as well as the way certain riders performed in the races, so the Jockey club quietly instituted an investigation, which resulted in L'Hommedieu being warned off Eastern tracks. L'Hommedieu has since frequented the Western tracks, sometimes booking, sometimes laying. He has had his ups and downs, but more downs than anything else, and he is now off the turf for good. He was ruled off at Latonia for offering a bribe to a rider.

L'Hommedieu was always very bitter against the Pinkertons, who dug up the evidence which resulted in the plunger being barred in the East. Robert Pinkerton, on a visit to New Orleans some years ago, sat in Morgan's restaurant dining with a friend. L'Hommedieu entered. He had been drinking. He saw Pinkerton and swaggered up to the detective's table.

"I've been looking for you," said L'Hommedieu fiercely. "You did me in the East; now I'm going to do you."

He whipped out a gun and pointed it at Pinkerton's head. Pinkerton never flinched. He looked up at L'Hommedieu and laughed. He knew his man. L'Hommedieu did not shoot. He permitted friends to lead him away. The man who had the nerve to risk a fortune on a horse race hadn't the nerve to kill the man who was responsible for his downfall.

Riley Grannan is another plunger now a derelict. The tall, thin young man who stood on a bookmaker's box at Gravesend on the occasion of the memorable Henry of Navarre-Domino match and bet the money men of the East to a standstill is now content with a modest wager now and then. Grannan took in something like $32,000 on that one race. He laid only against Domino, and the dead heat made him a few thousand winner on the split.

It has been related that Grannan was not wagering all his own money that day. He had with him $50,000 to bet that Henry of Navarre would beat Domino, and a great portion of the money was Byron McClelland's. Grannan was quite a plunger in his day. He did not last long.

Joe Yeager was another meteor. He is a clever handicapper and a good judge of form. He had one luck year, but his money soon melted away, and he is up and down, like the elevator man.

Of all the plungers "Pittsburg Phil" was the only man to hold onto his winnings. He died a millionaire. Smith was an exception, for he did not depend on luck, but made speculating on races a study and a science.

UNION MATCH COMPANY TROPHY.

With the close of the bonspiel the Western Curling club's attention will center about the contest for the trophies which were presented to the club by the West Duluth Commercial club, the Union Match company and William F. Hurst.

The Union Match company donated the silver loving cup last month, but so far the West Duluth curler's time has been completely occupied by the Manley-McLennan contests, and the bonspiel, which will finish today.

The Hurst medals have just been completed by Mr. Hurst. They are of gold. On their clasps are engraved the initials, W. C. C., and below on the shields, a curling stone crossed by a broom, the emblems of the game.

The rink composed of Neil Buckley, Ernest Larson, Dr. Graham and Ike Deatherage, skip, carried off the Commercial club cup last winter, and will endeavor to retain it this season.

Wrestle to a Draw.

Charley Sevoni of Wausau, Wis., and Charles Sutter of Proctor, went sixty-five minutes to a draw at the Metropolitan last night before a large crowd. Both men started in strong, with Sutter in the aggressive, but as the match progressed it dragged, both playing largely on the defensive. Sutter didn't show the promising form he did a week ago and unless he is holding back and has something he hasn't shown yet, he will not win from Mauritz Harris when they meet again. Sutter outweighed Sevoni by several pounds.

NEW TEAM TAKES HAND

Centrals Start Out Well in City Bowling League.

Bank and Fitwell Teams Are Tied at the Head.

The new Central team, which broke into the game last night for the first time, replacing the Baltimore team in the Duluth City Bowling league, won two out of three games and took possession of first place in the percentage column. Teske of the new Central team stands at the head of the individual averages with 203 for three games. S. Olson is the real individual leader with 201 or eighteen games, and Smith is next with 185 for eighteen games.

J. Smith has the high individual score thus far, with 277 and also the high average for three games, 225. The Oak Halls have the high score for one five-man game, with 1,120 and also the high score for three games, 2,953.

FINISH OF THE CURLING BONSPIEL NOW IN SIGHT

All Games Will Probably be Completed by Night.

At Least One Duluth Rink Left in Each Event.

Yesterday's games brought the bonspiel within reaching distance of completion, and practically all of the events will be cleaned up by tonight if the curlers can stand the strain.

The winning rinks are leading a strenuous life these days, some of them playing as many as five games a day.

This means almost constant curling from 8 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night, with only a short rest for meals. The rinks which are left in three or four events are compelled to do this in order not to keep the others back. Dunbar forfeited one of his games yesterday, in order not to hold back the International event.

At least one Duluth rink is left in each of the four principal events.

The Bradley rink was the first rink to reach the "jewelry" class in any of the events, going into the semi-finals of the Duluth event yesterday afternoon. The Hurdon and Dunbar rinks will play to see which shall meet Bradley, and the other two rinks in the event are the Stocking and Rochon. But four games remain to be played in this event, and it will doubtless be finished before night.

The Minneapolis event is almost as far along. Five games remain to be played in this event. MacKenzie and MacLeod have reached the semi-finals, and Dunbar and Lemon and Stewart and Rochon will come together to decide which two shall enter the semi-final round.

Rees, Rochon and Braden have reached the semi-finals in the St. Paul Jobbers event, while Brewer, Duncan, Lemon, and Stocking are still fighting it out to see which shall be the fourth member of the "jewelry" class in this event. Brewer defeated the great Dunbar yesterday, in a beautiful contest by the score of 15 to 10. The members of the Brewer rink were in great form, and their victory over the "Great Bob" was the most decisive he has ever received in a Duluth bonspiel.

GETS WIFE FOR AN EAR.

Lover of Chicago Girl Rewarded for Bravery in Battle.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Mary Meleka had two lovers, and to save her she could not determine which she loved the more. Neither could the lovers, so they argued the matter with considerable vehemence. Michael Dentawitha shaved off the ear of Vosa Koknite, his rival and they took Ronknite to a hospital The victor then appeared before Mary expecting her to reward his valor, but she spurned him and hastened to the hospital to nurse Koknite. "Any man who loves me enough to lose his ear can have me," said Mary, and they were married yesterday in the hospital ward, thus proving that the victor is sometimes really the vanquished one.

BOOKMAKERS' EXPENSES HEAVY

"Oh! the bookmaker always wins," is a common expression among casual and regular race-goers alike. And usually they are right, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The bookmaker has to win, and win heavily, to make bare expenses. Just what it costs to run a book on one of the big metropolitan tracks is something that the general public has only the haziest idea of, and did the average patron of the tracks who always is protesting about "short prices" realize the expense there would not be so many complaints.

Careful estimates of the actual legitimate expenses of a single big book—that is one run without its owner being represented under several other names and by apparently independent layers—brings out the total of upwards of nearly $250 a day, and that with nothing estimated for the layer's own time. Many books cost far more than this, but the figures given are conservative ones.

Summarized, these expenses are:

Cavanagh information	$12.00
Maintenance of auto	20.00
Badges for crew	35.00
Interest on "bank roll"	75.00
Three lockers at $10	30.00
Sheet writer	12.00
Cashier	15.00
Four "outside men"	40.00
Total	$240.00

Every one of these items is put down at rock bottom figures, and if the truth were known it would be found that many books in the ring cost twice, and even three times, as much to run. But their expenses would not show as do those named in the table. Some, in fact, hardly would bear the light of publicity and so cannot be enumerated for want of actual proof of their having been incurred.

In the very first item, that of "Cavanagh information," there has been a cut within the last two years that has saved many a layer's bank roll from extinction. Time was when it cost $100 a day at any track of consequence for the privilege of making book. Now, the only charge exacted by the association is in the form of "advance information," of starters, weights, jockeys and corrections, furnished by the ring manager, John Cavanagh.

This is $2 a race, and the average racing day has only six events, so $12 is counted. The information comes on bits of tissue paper, and the bookmakers get it perhaps five minutes before the public in the betting ring and 10 or 15 minutes before it is posted for the benefit of the patrons of the grand stand. It is a charge that none can dodge, and "Popular John" may be seen every day, after the first race, going from book to book, cashing "his one best bet"—advance information, at the odds of 12 to 0 usually, and sometimes 14 to 0, when there are seven races.

Few bookmakers use the race trains these days, because of the greater safety and speed of the auto. "Safety" is used in the sense of security for the large sums of money carried. In a book of the size for which expenses are given hardly less than $50,000 actual cash is taken to the course. As every one knows who has maintained an auto, even a modest one, $20 a day for gasoline, chauffeurs' wages, wear and tear and interest on cost is a very moderate estimate indeed. In fact, there are many bookmakers who spend twice that sum when they come to count things up at the season's end.

Now that the racing associations have eliminated the charge for the bookmaking privilege and established the open ring, badges must be bought for each and every one of the layer's entourage. Complimentary badges given to politicians and members of the legislature were bought and sold in great numbers among the betting craft, but this season all that was stopped and Mr. Bookie has to pay cash.

Interest on the bankroll is another item of importance. A big book must have on call $250,000, and many have twice or three times that sum immediately available. Much of this does not draw interest, and is in the nature of a "time loan" taken by the year and secured by stocks and bonds, much as is a stock broker's loan. Interest on $250,000 for a year at 6 per cent is $15,000, and as there are, say 200 racing days, the cost of the money used is easily $75 daily.

Nearly every book of importance has its clocking brigade, the men who watch the horses' trials and report their training gallops and give opinions on their fitness to race. The $10 a day given for each is conservative, as high as $50 a day having been paid in the past for such work. There are three great training tracks to be covered, Gravesend, Sheepshead Bay and Belmont Park, though the latter is not so important. The Belmont Park clocker therefore may be counted an "extra man," for he is as likely to appear at Aqueduct or Jamaica or Brighton for a few days to watch some "good thing" being prepared under cover.

Any good sheetwriter can command $12 a day, and many get $15 and $20. It is the same with cashier, and in many instances, the latter have an interest of some sort in the profits of the book. It is difficult to tell how many "outside" men a book employs, so diverse are the duties. They have the important task of "laying off" wagers, of keeping their employer posted as to big bets of "wise money," of gathering up paddock and clubhouse gossip, and of bringing in other layers prices. There is ample work in a big book for four men and even six.

There are hundreds who yearly try their luck and pit their brains against the players with very small backing. These cheap books are usually co-operative affairs, every one employed having an interest in the bank roll, and working as a full partner without salary. These are the majority of layers in the field inclosure and along the back line, and their expenses are as nothing compared with the real books—as are their gains—except in rare instances. In these cheap books the information costs the same, $12, as in the big books, and the crew usually consists of four, hence $12 has to be paid for badges.

One of the quartet will "hold the slate," or take in the bets; another will write sheet; the third handle the cash, and the fourth do the "outside" work, gathering the odds from the big ring and "laying off" any bets that can be advantageously. These little books handle the dollars and two dollars of the "pikers," and naturally balk at taking a bet of more than $5 or $10 on anything but an odds-on choice.

If each of the four members of the syndicate gets $5 for his day's work he is lucky, averaging winning and losing days, and eventually the "kitty," or the association's share, as shown by the $12 daily for information and $12 for badges, gets the bank roll. Still, because the big bookmakers look so prosperous, there are any number who try to emulate them. Where one goes on and is graduated into the real thing, hundreds fail, and many try time and time again before they abandon the idea.

It would be thought that with so many small fry playing, there would be an infinite amount of "welching," or taking in the public's money and decamping during the running of the race. But this practice, so common on the English tracks, is absolutely unknown on the American courses. Hundreds of thousands of dollars change hands daily, and the percentage of loss is nil—remarkable when compared with the banking business, for instance.

Of course there are individual betters who fail to pay "markers," or credit bets, but the absconding bookmaker is absolutely unknown. Should a layer find himself short, the freemasonry of the ring will assure him of finding some one to make good the deficiency at once, and the next day or the same night he "digs up" the amount of the loan. But hardly three times in the season does a layer even be threatened with the embarrassing question of solvency.

The main reason for this rests in the supervision of John Cavanaugh, the ring manager, to whom all applicants for bookmaking stands must apply. Sometimes the privilege is refused, and when the man of attenuated bank roll begins there is a Cavanaugh agent with a sharp eye on all his play. He is not permitted to "overplay" himself; hence, he cannot fail to pay out. Thus, there is no welching, something distinctly American and distinctly the best point of the entire bookmaking game.

ATTORNEY GENERAL WILL APPEAL FROM DECISION.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 25.—Attorney General Young will appeal from the decision filed by Judge Dibell at Duluth Thursday, declaring the wide open tax amendment lost at the 1906 election. He said that he had not seen the decision and could not make no comment, but would confer with his assistant, George T. Simpson, who handled the case and no doubt would appeal.

The only effect of the Dibell decision at this time, if sustained, would be to invalidate the mortgage registry tax law.

News of the Theater

AT THE LYCEUM

The Mack-Leone Players Will be in Duluth All Next Week in Famous Old Rural Drama---"The Lion and the Mouse" Coming.

"Blue Jeans," Joseph Arthur's celebrated rural comedy drama, is the next week's offering at the Lyceum by the Mack-Leone Stock company.

"Blue Jeans" is possibly one of the greatest old rural plays in existence. It has lived as long as "The Old Homestead," "Shore Acres," and plays of that ilk. The scenes are located in Rising Sun, Ind., and the characters are all rustic, with one or two exceptions.

The scenic equipment necessary to put on this play is the largest yet used by the Mack-Leones.

The first act shows the home of the Interwillers, at Rising Sun. The second act is the barbecue scene. In the third act occurs the most laughable supper scene imaginable, and the fourth act shows the interior of Bascom & Risener's sawmill, with the mill in full swing. Logs are sawed in view of the audience, and the general work of the plant is shown. It is in this act that the great scene of the play takes place, when Perry Bascom is knocked senseless by Ben Boone, placed on the carriage and started towards the saw, only to be rescued by the heroine, June, when within a foot of the saw.

Years ago, at the Fourteenth Street theater, New York, when the play was produced, this scene caused almost a riot. The action was so marvelous, the sensation so startling, that even "blase" New York theater patrons stood up and yelled like madmen. The Mack-Leone players are giving more than their usual attention to this great effect. The players are all well cast, and it gives the Duluth public a chance to see their favorites in a different line of characters than any in which they have appeared heretofore. Mr. Mack will play Perry Bascom, while Miss Leone will play the part of the waif, June. Miss Leone is always at her best as an ingenue, and June is pre-eminently such a role.

The play will open Monday night, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

There will be no advance in prices, and watch for the searchlight.

"THE LION AND THE MOUSE."

Famous Drama of Business Life Will Return to Duluth.

In "The Lion and the Mouse," which Henry B. Harris will produce here Feb. 3 and 4, Charles Klein has written a play which is destined to live in the minds of all theatergoers whose privilege it has been to see it.

The theme is the power of money in American politics and the possibilities for evil held by unscrupulous hands.

Shirley Rossmore, daughter of Judge Rossmore of the supreme court, returns from Europe to find her father ruined financially and undergoing impeachment at the inspiration of the money octopus, against which he has rendered unfavorable decisions. Her homecoming is naturally one of disappointments and heartaches, for during her visit to Europe she has met and fallen in love with the son of John Burkett Ryder, the very man who has ruined her father. Jefferson Ryder, who is in turn in love with Shirley Rossmore, accompanies her to her home and asks for her hand in marriage, but when Shirley is informed of the new conditions that exist she refuses and dismisses him and declares her intention to fight his father. Jefferson, however, is also shocked at his father's pernicious means of dishonoring the name of Rossmore and in his sympathy for Shirley decided to help her, although he knows it is to defeat his father's plans. The second act shows the the inner private library of the Ryder mansion on Fifth avenue with fawning senators, chairmen of national political committees and judges kicking their heels in the outer corridors as a suggestion of the atmosphere of money power. All of them are sent gruffly away, because John Burkett Ryder has an appointment with Sarah Green, author of "The Octopus," a book which she has written and whose central character is John Burkett Ryder, under another name. Miss Green, who of course, is Shirley Rossmore, enters and there follows a remarkably stimulating encounter between her and Ryder. Delighted with her frankness and cleverness he asks her to write his autobiography and puts her in possession of secret documents from which to get the data. After being one of the members of his household for a considerable length of time, the subjugation to her cleverness and wit is so complete, that he asks her to marry his son in order to keep him out of the clutches of the daughter of the hated Rossmores. Her keen sense of womanhood and her love for Jefferson will not allow her to further deceive those who have shown her personal kindness, whereupon she admits her identity as being the real Miss Rossmore. Outwitted and cheated in his fondest hopes, Ryder in a fit of exasperation, orders her from his house, whereupon the son Jefferson interferes, telling his father his determination to leave with her and become her husband. Here Shirley's pride interferes and she denounces Ryder, Sr., assuring him that she would not allow herself to fall so low as to marry the son of a man who tramples all good under his golden heel and who refuses to lift his hand to save her father from unmerited disgrace. This scene has been unanimously conceded by all critics to be one of the very best introduced in a drama of recent years.

AT THE METROPOLITAN

The Brigadiers, Offering a Big Musical and Vaudeville Show With the Original Moving Pictures of the Burns-Moir Fight, Will be Next Week's Attraction.

The management of The Brigadiers, who come to the Metropolitan next week, with the usual matinees, is particularly proud of its trio of comedians, and the advance agent claims that they are the best the Empire circuit stages have ever seen.

Tim Healey, Frank H. White and William Lester are the gentlemen by whom the management sets such a great store. Ample opportunities to display their cleverness have been provided by the librettist, they say, and Metropolitan patrons are looking forward to a mirthful week.

In addition to the regular entertainment, the original moving pictures of the Burns-Moir prize fight, showing each round and the knockout blow, will be offered, without extra charge during the coming week by the managements of the Brigadiers and the Metropolitan. These pictures are said to be remarkably clear and interesting.

The principal frolic of the program is a two-act musical comedy, called "Married by Telephone." The skit is said to be rich in humorous situations and well-chosen musical numbers. The song hits, written especially for the production, will be given, in addition to a number of interpolated numbers.

Beside the large chorus and principals of both sexes, the vaudeville company includes Lester and Moure, in "A Day at the Beach;" Tim Healey, comedian and dancer; Rogers and Warren, novelty dancers; Emma Krause and Lester Pike, Maude Clifton and Minnie Harrison.

MISS GERTRUDE COGHLAN IN "THE LION AND THE MOUSE"

GERTRUDE COGHLAN AS SHIRLEY ROSSMORE IN "THE LION AND THE MOUSE." FROM PHOTO BY WHITE

New York, Jan. 25.—Miss Gertrude Coghlan, under the direction of Henry B. Harris, is now appearing as Shirley Rossmore in Company A of "The Lion and the Mouse." Miss Coghlan comes of a theatrical family, the daughter of the late Charles Coghlan, one of the greatest English speaking actors of his day. She is a niece of Rose Coghlan, long a prominent stage figure. Miss Coghlan, who was born in Hertfordshire, England, in 1883, made her professional debut in her father's company, playing the role of Juliet in "The Royal Box." After the death of her father she appeared in this play as a star, and also as a star in another of her father's plays called "Colinette." Other plays which she used as starring vehicles were "Alice of Old Vincennes" and "Becky Sharp." It was through her impersonation of the character of Manuela, with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, in "The Sorceress," that Mr. Harris was first attracted by her work, and soon after opened negotiations with her to appear under his management.

AT THE BIJOU

The Trolley Car Trio of Comedy Acrobats Will Head a Strong Bill Next Week---Several Good Comedy Sketches Also Included.

A fine bill of vaudeville attractions will open at the Bijou, commencing with the Monday matinee. Heading the bill will be "The Trolley Car Trio of Comedy Acrobats," whose sensational gymnastic feats form one of the best acts of its kind before the public. They also do a number of comedy stunts that keep the audience in roars of laughter.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. O'Brien will be seen as "The Bachelor and The Maid," introducing popular singing selections, some refined comedy and some good dancing.

A sensational novelty will be "The Original Young Buffalo," the noted American marksman, who will introduce a line of expert and fancy shooting. Young Buffalo is assisted by Mlle. Vera and his wonderful dog Frank. He has made two European tours with William F. Cody, (Buffalo Bill) and was featured as principal marksman of this noted show.

The Gillette Sisters will be seen in "A Study In Black." They are the Primrose and Dockstader of their sex and introduce perfect imitations of the dashing Southern colored belle with plenty of good singing and dancing.

An extra good number will be Sam Brooks and Rose Jeanette, in comedy talking, singing and dancing.

There is not a dull moment from the opening to the finish of their act.

Isadore Silver will sing the beautiful ballad entitled "There's Another Picture In Mamma's Frame," a pathetic home song illustrated with colored views. There will be two big moving picture subjects, entitled "Mr. Gay and Mrs.", and "Seltzer Given Away." Both are comedy pictures.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Maud Adams in "The Jesters" Has Another French Poetic Drama---Katherine Grey in "The Reckoning" Produces New German Play.

New York, Jan. 21.—In "Les Boufons," or "The Jesters," as it is to be known henceforth in English, Miguel Zamacois, its author, directly challenges those who say that a poetic play is not what the modern public demands. Yet the Empire theater was packed to the doors when Maud Adams made her first appearance in the play, and the enthusiasm was infectious. It was partly for Miss Adams, whose hypnotic influence on the average magazine-reading miss is simply maddening, but largely for the clever play, which John Raffael has cleverly translated into English-rhyming meter.

The piece enabled Miss Adams to score a triumph in a role which the divine Sarah recently created in Paris. It is probably the best thing Miss Adams has ever done, for she played Rene de Chansenac, afterward the fool Chicot, with fewer mannerisms, fewer grimaces and meaningless gestures than anything she has attempted in the past. Which shows that she is developing and becoming settled in her art. There was genuine music in the manner in which she delivered the rhymed verses in the tourney of wit, in which all the clowns engage before the Lady Solange de Maupre and her father.

The title of "The Jesters" is suggested by the circumstance that five wits enter the lists for Solange's choice of a court fool. She is the daughter of a generous nobleman, whose estates have gone to seed through his goodness of heart and prodigality, still preserving his uncompromising pride to the last degree. Rene de Chancenac, a young nobleman loves Solange, but as her father is too proud to expose his poverty, he allows no strangers in the moldering Castle of Maupre. But Oliver, his faithful factotum and steward, seeing how it is with his young mistress, who must forego all pleasures in life and live in cloistered seclusion, arranges matters so that Solange feigns melancholy and De Maupre issues a proclamation announcing a tourney of wit to take place in his castle. Whoever shall carry off the victory in this contest shall be my lady's clown.

Three fools enter the combat and later two others are announced. With the connivance of Oliver, Rene comes, accompanied by Robert de Belfonte, also a gentleman and in love with the young chatelaine, and disguised as a humpback jester, Rene easily wins the approval of milady by his nimble wit and graceful improvisation.

This scene of the wit combat is a charming bit of writing, suggesting in its rhymed elegance and delicate play of mind the famous duel episode in Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," a play with which "The Jesters" may be compared in other particulars, especially in the attempt to classify it. In this scene Miss Adams rose grandly to the occasion. The improvisation to the breeze, a charming bit of rhyme, was admirably delivered by the actress.

Solange becomes infatuated with the supposed jester, but deplores his hump. It is not till he casts off his disguise and discards the deforming pad that the young girl's love is wholly inflamed. Her father's pride, however, still bars the way to their union. Then Rene contrives to make it appear that a mythical buried treasure with which De Maupre has long beguiled the credulity of his servants, whose wages are long in arrears, is unearthed on his estate. Rene is rich and has stocked the iron-bound chest with gold and jewels. It is brought in, and opened, and now that De Maupre is again flush and pride need no longer stand in the way, he takes the young nobleman by the hand and places it in that of Solange with his blessing.

A strong comedy interest is created by a swaggering Florentine bravo, Vulcano, in the employ of De Maupre, who bullies the inmates of the castle and awes them by his boasted swordsmanship until disarmed in a duel with the supposed Chicot and sent adrift in disgrace. This part was admirably played by Gustav von Seyfertitz, recently of the German stage, who makes his first appearance in an English speaking part. Others in the cast are Consuelo Bailey (Solange), William Lewers (Robert de Belfonte), Edwin Holt (Oliver) and Mathilde Cotrelly, who plays Nicole, one of the humorous servants.

The performance is generally credited with marking a distinct success for Miss Adams, as well as the author.

The first performance in English of "The Reckoning," by Arthur Schnitzler, one of the younger German dramatists, was seen last year at the little Berkeley Lyceum in this city. In the part of Christine Weiring appeared Katherine Grey. The play was so distinct in character and so simple in treatment, yet so moving in its pathos, and Miss Grey acted the emotional role of the sentimental Christine so convincingly in spite of her lapse into strident declamation and hysteria in the bigger moments, that considerable interest was inspired by the event and much favorable comment followed. But the hoodoo which is believed to attach to the Berkeley (once known as Mrs. Osborn's Playhouse) clung so persistently to the heels of "The Reckoning" that it was silently withdrawn after a few weeks.

It was revived at the Madison Square theater, which of late has shared somewhat in the unlucky repute of the Berkeley, though not in the same degree, Katherine Grey was again seen as Christine and Robert Conness as Theodore Kaiser. Otherwise the cast was changed, Amy Ricard playing the ingenue role of Mitzi Schlaeger, the insoulcant little milliner, played by Phyllis Rankin in the original production here.

In the role of the Baron, in which Albert Bruning made a decided impression, appeared Walter D. Greene with equal effect, although the Baron has but one scene of little more than a dozen words. The piece was well received, and after running as long as it will at the Madison Square, will be used as a matinee card next season, when Miss Grey is to be starred in a new play.

"The Reckoning" is of the new school, but in spite of its tragic tone is a bright little drama of compelling interest, strictly Viennese in color and locale. If it were French it would be impossible to conceive the verity of the honest love that obtains between Fritz Sommer, the young bon vivant and bachelor, and the poor girl Christine, who has a heart only for him, and who, with her gay friend, Mitzi, and the latter's "steady," Theorode, bosom friend of Fritz, partakes of little midnight suppers in Fritz's apartments.

But Fritz has had an affair with the baron's wife, and is distressed by fear that the jealous husband has been made aware of the fact.

In the midst of their happy supper the bell rings. A stranger is announced. Fritz ushers his friends into the next room and admits the baron. The scene between them is short. Fritz's letter to the baroness are returned by the husband, and a challenge passes. There is an intervening day between the meeting and the duel. Christine is not permitted to know the truth. The interval is spent in delusive joy. Fritz feels that it is the last time he shall be in the presence of his trusting Christine; that he will fall in the duel and leave her in ignorance of his fate. And so it comes to pass. The young man is killed and buried ere Theodore comes to break the news to the poor girl.

Then theer is woe and misery. She is even denied the melancholy consolation of seeing him in his coffin, for who is she and what is she to those who bemoan his death as a son and friend? She the simple child of the old musician at the theater! But her grief cannot be restrained. Her father's appeals are in vain, and vain the representations of Theodore. Christine goes to the grave, and as she leaves the little room with its old-fashioned furniture and its flowers, the old white-haired father bows his head and says: "She will never return."

Schnitzler is one of the cleverest men of the day, with a tendency to depict the outer and bizarre in life, and with a marvelous skill in complicating his problems and unrevelling them to a logical issue. This was shown in a curtain raiser, "The Literary Sense," which preceded "The Reckoning." It would require a column to follow the involutions of this farce, yet it occupied no more than twenty minutes in the playing. It was one of three similar one-act pieces featured at the German theater here a few weeks ago. I shall not undertake to tell the story. The interest is concentrated on a romantic woman who has written poetry and a novel, and is in love with a nobleman who has no sentiment for poetry, and detests blue stockings, but who is authority on horses and duels. She has incorporated in her novel a sentimental correspondence that once passed between herself and a literary bohemian, with whom she was in love. This same bohemian has done likewise with the same correspondence which he has embodied in a novel just issued.

Our little bluestocking is horrified to discover that this sacred correspondence has thus been desecrated and fears the worst when the two novels shall fall into the hands of the belligerent nobleman. The situation is complicated still more when the baron returns from the publisher with the first copy of her book, just off press. But the happy ending is secured when his inamorata herself throws the volume into the fire, apparently to please him, and as he has stopped the press and paid the publisher for destroying the whole issue he is kept in ignorance of the truth as to the lady's little peccadillo.

All this sounds serious. But Schnitzler is one of those writers whose seriousness always verges on travesty, whose solemnity is always ready to be upset by a jest. So instead, of gravity we have farce, which proves sometimes explosive. Amy Ricard played the literary lady and Robert Connes the baron, while Walter D. Greene impersonated the grandiose bohemian.

Now the Madison Square theater also has fallen prey to the prevailing fad of abolishing the orchestra, for which the fashion was set by Belasco when he opened the new Stuyvesant with David Warfield in "A Grand Army Man." The Belasco theater followed suit when "The Warrens of Virginia" came to that playhouse. Mrs. Fiske abolished the orchestra and is playing "Rosmersholm" at the Lyric withou music. Belasco substituted chimes, which announce the rising of the curtain. The other theaters simply turn down the light to indicate that the curtain is about to rise.

The engagement of Mrs. Fiske in "Rosmersholm," by the way, was extended another week, and will close tonight when she will resume her tour and appear in the larger cities till the end of the season.

The translation of Henri Bernstein's latest play, "Samson," has reached this country. William Gillette has been mentioned as the star who is likely to be seen in the name part. Some uncertainty still obtains on this score, but at all events it is soon to be produced. It was produced in Paris a few months ago. M. Bernstein is the author of "The Thief," and since this play scored the success it did in Paris, London and here at the Lyceum, where it is still running, everything he writes takes on a special value. Hence interest in "Samson" is very keen. Before it is produced in this country, however, it is apt to undergo considerable toning down as regards the harsher features, which would unquestionably have placed it under the ban of the London censor. It is big in elemental moments and artistically quite up to the standard of expectancy engendered by Bernstein's other plays. I am able to give the readers of the this column the essential details of the story from the Parisian version:

It deals with the life of Jacques Brachard, a brute, but essentially a man, who has grown up on the Marseilles wharf. He was a barefoot boy, but, developing a pair of shoulders, became a doctor and went to Egypt. He made money and came to Paris, where he made more money, became rich and fell in love. The object of his adoration is Anne Marie, the daughter of the Marquis and Marquise d'Andoyne, a foolish couple of the old-fashioned Faubourg St. Germain ilk, whose children Max and Anne Marie, are extremely modern in thought and manner. Brachard practically buys his wife. Max, her brother, is a frequenter of Maxim's, talks slang and calls his father "mon bon vieux." Anne Marie, after marrying Brachard, not unnaturally yearns for romance, and takes for her lover Jerome Le Godin. Jerome is an adventurer of good family, whom the husband has made rich, and as unprincipled a scoundrel as ever went unhanged. His relations with Mme. Brachard fire the angry resentment of Jerome's other mistress, who moves in good society but has had a checkered past. Although she knows Jerome to be a scoundrel she loves him, and it is through her that Brachard learns of his wife's infidelity.

Now, Brachard's love for Anne Marie is the one sacred reality in his life, compared to which success, fortune and position are of little account to him. He pretends to leave for London, but returns in the night.

The unexpected happens.

Jerome Le Godin has boasted of his intimacy with Anne Marie, at an orgy at a cafe. She is disgusted with and embittered against him to the last degree. Brachard resolves to ruin him.

His own fortune and that of Le Godin consist of shares quoted high on the Paris bourse. Brachard breaks the market, causes a panic by throwing his own holding on it and selling short a huge block of shares. He has kept Jerome with him during the panic, and when the crash is complete, and Le Godin is ruined, he tells him how and why he ruined him, tells him the scoundrel he is, and bids him marry Grace Rutherford, whose past is worthy of Jerome's future.

In a subsequent act, Brachard repeats in a pathetic scene the story of Samson's death. He, too—he, Jacques Brachard—is a strong man, whose only gentle trait is his love for his wife. To punish Le Godin, who robbed him of his wife, no sacrifice was too great, and as Samson had pulled the temple down upon him to bring death upon himself and upon those who betrayed him, so Brachard, in ruining Godin, ruined himself and paid the cost willingly.

Anne Marie's romantic heart is touched. Not till then does she realize the great love of this man and his heedless self-sacrifice, and as the curtain falls, the inference is that she will come to love Brachard in time.

The corporation of a company that means the forming of the Assaciation of Theatrical Producing Managers is practically settled in New York. It is said that the more powerful managers who now represent nearly 200 of the biggest shows in the various fields of theatrical entertainment are heart and soul in the new work.

There are many features of this organization that will bring forth benefits if the privileges sought are not subject to too much abuse in the future. One move that is likely to be taken up at the outset is the matter of getting a ruling by the interstate commerce commission which will serve to permit the establishment of special rates for the big traveling companies. The high rates and the strict interpretation of the federal laws in the South has damaged theatrical business down these. In order to meet the changed conditions, managers have been compelled to reduce the number of people they use in their productions. The economy has resulted in cheapening the shows and the public have sufferede. Some sensible ones have rather got out of the habit of patronizing the cheap offerings, and this with the depression in finances, has played havoc with theatrical business all through the South. Incidentally it has not done the business any noticeable good in other sections of the country.

The producing managers, by acting in concert, can lay their legitimate claims before the commerce commission, and it looks as if they will be able to get new ruling there that will modify the situation considerably. The strength of the appeal will lie in the concerted effort put forth. The same will apply to other steps in the way of reforming conditions. By making the business appeal thoroughly legitimate the managers will secure concessions that they never would have secured otherwise. In acquiring advantages from the business end they can also look within their own ranks and raise the morale of their comunaties. By holding the individual members of their forces to an accounting for their behavior they will soon make it possible for traveling theatrical organizations to be treated with consideration and courtesy in towns where at present they are handled in upper floors of the hotels like so many sheep and regarded as little short of mountebanks and crooks. The producing managers know the conditions that have given rise to these offenses and they can relieve the entire situation by first striking at the root of the evil within their companies and therefore be in a position to back up any demands for better treatment that their companies might make.

Quite the silliest expression of the new association was made by one of the managrs who gave out in an interview that part of the reason for forming this mutual society was to take care of adverse legislation. It, perhaps never struck into the minds of some producers that there was never any ned or legislation until their sort broke into the business. Just a little house cleaning and attention will never be bothered about adverse legislation. They will be better occupied getting legitimate reforms established and clearing up the situation from their practical point of view. This, done properly, will kill the need for any legislation.

Jack Bernard, an older brother of Sam and Dick Bernard, died last week in Rivercrest sanitarium, where he had been confined for the past nine months suffering from a nervous breakdown, which eventually proved fatal. Several years ago he played the part of Hoggenheimer in "The Girl From Kay's" at the head of the second company, following his brother, Sam, in his amusing creation o fthat character.

Word from London has it that Lewis Waller has scored a real emphatic hit in the English production of "The Squaw Man," which is called "The White Man" over there. That row which Henry Miller had with a newspaper critic in Pittsburg last week turns out to have been pretty much of a tempest in a teapot. "The Great Divide" was originally produced by Mr. Miller in Pittsburg early last season. The critic in question denounced the play at that time for its alleged immorality. Since its great triumph Henry Miller has rather had the laugh upon Pittsburg, or at least the squeamish part of it, that was offended by the morals of the Moody drama. On Monday night, when he returned there, the action of the play was interrupted by some people starting to leave the theater. Mr. Miller, imagining that they had been influenced by the local critic, stopped the play and delivered a speech in which he said some things about certain Pittsburg reviewers. It turned out that the excitement had been caused by a fire in the building adjoining the theater where Miller was playing. He later appeared before the curtain and apologized. The feud between the actor and the critic is still on, according to latest reports.

Remember the song in "Mlle. Modiste" about wanting a thing when you want it? There was a case of that the other evening in Wilmington, Del. The lurid melodrama, "The Flaming Arrow," had reached one of those tense dark moments in the action when you feel the breathing of your neighbors. Suddenly a flickering flame shot its thin reflections about the blackened house and died away. There was a crack that sounded ominous and a second flash sent chills down the spine of the nervously-wrought audience. This, too, died away and a third offense was noticed when several people rushed to the part of the house to find an old man down on his hands and knees and groping for something, while he held a match and continued the search. They started to drag him out, when the old fellow replied testily:

"For heaven's sake, go away. Can't you see I dropped my false teeth in the excitement?"

Henry Jewett's starring tour in the second The Squaw-Man company has been closed and that actor is waiting for a new play, which he will bring out before the end of the season. "The Squaw Man" has been a big success, but as the open time for the tour was in country where theatricals have been very poor this season Liebler & Co. decided to abandon the tour rather than take chances on losing some of their profits in bad territory. This same rule has held good with a number of the smaller traveling organizations this season and more than double the number of failures in the one-night stands have been recorded this year on account of the slump in business. It is remarkable but true that the real winners have not felt the depression at all and with them business has been as big as ever.

Henry W. Savage sailed last week for London and Paris, and will be gone at least two months before returning to America to take up his productions for nevt season. Manager Savage has the option upon the new opera by Franz Lehar, composer of "The Merry Widow," and will likely close for the American rights to the new piece. He will also look over the Parisian production of "The Prince of Pilsen," and may send out a company to present that musical comedy in Germany. Before sailing Mr. Savage called in the American company playing that piece because it has exhausted all the available territory and has about run its course in the high-priced theaters of this country.

Victor Herbert, who is leading the fight of the composers to have the copyright laws so changed that they can share in the profits of the phonograph music rolls and dics, reports that the committee will give the writers more hearings within the next few weeks. Mr. Herbert says that the fight will be continued, and the composers are more hopeful than ever that they will gain their points. Mr. Herbert now refers to the rolls for the mechanical players as "mutilated music." He insists that the composers should get their share of the remuneration from this great source of revenue. As Mr. Herbert pointed out, they give Caruso an enormous sum to sing for their records and then allow him a royalty of $1 a roll, for which they charge more than five times that fee. The Puccini music, which Caruso sings, is issued without consent, and the great composer, who has much to do with the success of the number, receives absolutely no return for his efforts in the original instance. This Mr. Herbert cites as a fair sample of the business principles that are argued by the music roll manufacturers.

The suicide of Charles Jackson, the actor, in the Hotel Gerrard, in New York last week, was caused by his despondency. He had been out of an engagement for some time, and when he did secure work he found that worry over his affairs had so affected him that he could not memorize his lines. This induced him to hang himself with a trunk strap, and he was found in the closet of his room. He had been dead some time. Jackson is best remembered for his work in "David Harum" in the Crane company, when that comedian produced the piece. He was a son of Cornella Jackson, a sister of Joseph Jefferson. Jackson was a member of the Lambs club and other actors' societies. He was a widower and about 45 years old.

Henry W. Savage has explained his remarks regarding actors in general at a recent meeting of the managers' association. Mr. Savage was quoted as making comments that were derogatory to players. In a card recently published Mr. Savage makes the following explanation:

"I will say that in my speech at the meeting of the National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers, in referring to traveling theatrical organizations, not one actors' name was used, a favorite quotation of Sir Henry Irving's, dating from Shakespear's time —i. e., 'Take the linen from the hedges, the actors are coming to town'—and I continued:

"The feeling in many of the one-night stands has not materially changed toward us (note the pronoun) since." I also quoted examples, ranging from petty graft to absolute violence, to which both actors and managers in these traveling organizations have been obliged to submit I furthermore said: "Now we must stand back of and protect ourselves so that, instead of dropping the fight when one organization leaves town, the newcomer may take it up until it is fought to a finish."

"The word 'actors,' as used in the quotation, certainly designates show folk as a class, including every one from the manager down, or, up, if you like; and, as in the above remarks, I especially included ourselves as managers in every reference.

"From the above facts ,from the entire spirit of my speech and from the entire spirit of the meeting, it is not easy to see how any one, unless desirous of stirring up feeling inimical to the new managers' association, can extract any intent other than an honest endeavor on the part of those who are responsible to the companies and the public to solve the many difficulties which harass the traveling organization, and protect and promote the interests not only of its members, but of all sincere professionals."

Charles Frohman produced "Twenty Days in the Shade" at the Savoy on Monday evening . It is a new farce from the French, the first farce production that Mr. Frohman has made in this country in several years. Hennequin and Veber are the authors of the original play, which was one of the sensations of the present Paris season. Its title is taken from a bit of French slang. Mr. Frohman produces it with a fine cast, including Dallas Wellford, the original "Mr. Hopkinson" Ernest Lawford, the pirate chief in Maude Adams' "Peter Pan" companyy for three years Richard Bennett, who did excellent work in "The Hypocrites" Charles Dickson, Pauline Frederick ,and Grace Heyer, reputed stage beauties, Jeffreys Lewis, Frank Burbeck, Vira Stowe and Fanny Hartz.

NEWS OF THE WEEK AT CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL

Freshmen Were Rare Articles at the Midwinter Examinations.

Senior and School Teams Will Meet in a Debate.

Although a freshman was a rare article on Thursday and Friday at the Central high, there were sophomores, juniors and seniors in droves, plugging away like college graduates to capture a passing mark on the semester examinations. On Monday the results will appear on the monthly report cards, if the hard-working teachers succeed in doing a 23-hour day's work in the interval, and the suspense of the poor students and the anxious parents will be at an end. The few wise lads, and the many wise lassies, who studied hard, (or have better memories), were exempt from the examinations and enjoped a few days' vacation.

On account of the examinations the Public Speaking club postponed its meeting until Jan. 27, when the juniors will try out for a place on the class debating team. On Feb. 7, the school and the senior teams will clash in chapel on the following topic: "Resolved, That United States Senators should be elected by popular vote." The same question will be discussed later in February when our team will endeavor to convince the "team from across the pond," that they are not in the same class when it comes to debating.

On Thursday, the Pine City High School Debating club was in the city enroute to Virginia, and a few of the students who weren't cramming, got a glimpse of the boys who scalped the team three weeks ago. They visited the high school in a body and looked over the building, being given a cordial reception.

The sophomores didn't lose much time in paying back old scores they have held against the juniors. Last Tuesday they played under and over and all around the '09 men in one of the basketball games at the gymnasium. The way they doubled the score on the juniors will go down in large type in the sophomore album. The game with the seniors will be watched with interest, for each class has scored in one game and the teams are evenly matched.

The senior hockey team played circles around the freshies on Wednesday, defeating them 5 to 0 in the first game of the season. The little boys played well, but the "Giants" outclassed them in wind and in length of limb.

Some of the students think that the reason they "flunked" in examinations was because they had to take them on Thursday, their Jonah day, and the twenty-third day of the month.

• • •

The juniors held a short business session on Wednesday night and were delighted to find that they were well supplied with money for the coming class spread and hop, which will take place next Friday. They are anticipating much pleasure in outdoing all the other classes in originality of cards and decorations, at least they claim this in advance. The class spread will be held in the lunchroom of the school and dancing will be on the floor above.

• • •

Curtis Pillsbury, one of the most talented and original of the junior class has been elected to edit the junior portion of the Zenith. Much is hoped from his wise counselling.

Final orders for the senior pins must be in by next Wednesday, as that is the latest date they can be ordered. The new pins will be the same price, $2, and all class men are urged to send in their names.

The interclass basketball schedule has been arranged as follows: Tuesday, Jan. 28, juniors vs. freshmen; Friday, Feb. 7, freshmen vs. sophomores; Tuesday, Feb. 11, juniors vs. seniors. The two teams with highest scores will then play three games to decide the championship.

GOODSELL GOT ROYAL FLUSH

Took Three Years to Land It, But He Cleaned Out the Crowd and Gave Up the Game.

The droning buzz of bees that were busy in the blossoms of the big hollyhocks that adorned the prim garden in front of the village postoffice was no more monotonous and meaningless than the steady, emotionless clack of the old men who sat on the front porch, says the New York Press: From morning till night they sat there 'and talked and talked. Not for them was the bland and merciful taciturnity of age. Each one of the three was afflicted with unreasonable and inexplicable loquacity. Having hardly ever anything to say, they never ceased saying it, so that it had become a standard village witticism to say that when Gabriel should blow his horn, David and Darius and Daniel would keep right on talking as if they had something to talk about, and as if nothing more serious than an earthquake was happening to interrupt.

For the most part they talked of nothing whatever—of the number of bees in a hive; of the best time o' the moon to plant potatoes; of how long their shoes lasted; of the proper way to avoid financial crises, and other maunderings, but at long intervals one would tell a story of human interest. It was not in the nature of things that the other two should listen. They babbled on, uninterested, uninteresting, but another, pausing, it might be, on his way for his mail, might happen on a pearl of price. It was thus I heard of Silas Goodsell and his royal flush.

"Speaking of draw poker," said Darius, and nobody had even suggested draw poker, "I don't see no such games as them 't use to be played in Bill Hopkins' back room, 'fore Farmin'ton got to be so all-fired pious. You could buy hard cider them days, 'n play cards in the back room 'thout no constable a-swoopin' in to see 'f you had a license 'n whether you was playin' f'r reel money 'r on'y f'r chips. Them was sporty days, 'n ther was some sporty boys here, too.

"Why, I can remember one night Jim Peters an' Billy Ransom an' Sol James set into a game o' dollar limit about 7 o'clock at night an' played plumb through till half-past 9. George Riddle set in with 'em f'r a spell, but he had to quit 'em at 10, 'long of his wife not lettin' him out no later 'n that. But them three played right along like there wasn't no such things as clocks, an' they do say they wouldn't 've quit when they did, they wouldn't 've, on'y f'r Bill Hopkins tellin' of 'em 't he'd got to have some sleep, an' closin' up the place on 'em.

"O' course, there were an onusual stiff game. They tell me 'tain't offen 't anybody plays dollar limit, e'en in the city, but them three never cared nothin' about money. I've known Billy Ransom to spend as high as $30 f'r an overcoat, an' the other two was nigh about as reckless as him.

"But there was others in Farmin'ton them days as was sporty as them, on'y p'r'haps they might not have so much money to throw 'round. What they did have, though, they wan't none afraid o' usin'.

"There was Sile Goodsell. He's an elder in the church now." Here Darius interrupted himself to chuckle wickedly for a full minute. "Yes, sir, that's the same man. You wouldn't think now to see him passin' the hat up to the church, 't he was the darin'est devil in Farmin'ton a spell ago, an' played the most scientific game o' poker there was played anywheres 'rond these parts. Well, he did, even if he didn't have the money to play so high as them three I was tellin' about. There was them 't used to see him play 't said he wasn't so golderned scientific as he mought be, but that was 'count o' them not understandin' history o' the game. I guess maybe I wouldn't 've understood it neither, on'y f'r him tellin' me about it.

"I was talkin' to him about it one day, bein' as him an' me was consid'rable chummy afore he got plous. Used to spark the same girl when we was young, an' neither one on us got her.

"I says to him, I says, 'Sile, how is it,' I says, ''t you come in so frequent when you don't have nothin' f'r it? I've never heard of Silas Goodsell and his royal flush.

Didn't 'mount up like you'd think it would, 'count o' him bein' lucky, like I said, an' some cautious a'ter the draw; but what he lost none to a mighty heap in the course o' time.

"'He says to me one day, Sile did: 'I been keepin' count o' that there royal flush,' he says, an' figgerin' in last night's game,' he says, 'I've invested $67.20 into it. I've always counted on cleanin' up a hundred on it when it come, but I've got to do better'n that now. Figgerin' in the interest on the money,' he says, 'there ain't enough margin left f'r to pay me f'r the time an' labor I've put into it. Two years' work is wuth somethin',' he says.

"'So I says: 'Sile, you won't never come out even on it. There ain't no such flush,' I says, 'is ever goin' to bet a hundred dollars onto a poker hand, an' more'n likely when you do get it there won't nobody else hold nothin'.

"'I've studied on that, a monstrous lot,' he says, 'an' I must say that's the on'y weak p'int in the play, but I figger it,' he says, 'as you've got to trust in Providence some. Tain't likely such a thing as a royal flush'll come to a man an' him not get any into it.'

"'Well, the time came, like he'd always said 'twould, an' him puttin' his faith in Providence sartin was justified. Seems Billy Ransom an' Jim Peters had been in the city on a little toot, an' had made friends with a chap 't called hisself George Noble, 't was some of a sport an' he'd come back with 'em f'r a spell in the country, he said, like as if Farmington was country.

"'We figgered it out later that he was a real gambler and was playin' crooked, anyway he made a mistake, like the slickest of 'em will. Him an' Sile Goodsell, set in to play poker one night in Bill Hopkin's back room, an' Ransom says, 'Let's make it a dollar limit,' he says, him bein' a cut-up f'r fair when he started.

"'But the stranger says, 'What's the use of a limit? Let's play table stakes.' An' when he told 'em what table stakes was, they said they'd try it. They was goin' to put in $5 apiece, but the stranger put up $10, an' says they might as well have enough to play with, so they all put up $10.

"'I was lookin' on, same's others, an' we seen from the first 'twan't no ordinary game. I don't b'lieve that there stranger was honest, not f'r a minute, but 'twan't f'r me to say nothin' seein' I wa'n't playin'. It was sartinly a sin, though, the way he win their money f'r a time. They all had to put up more money, some on 'em three or four times, till there was nigh $300 on the table.

"'Sile was drawin' to his royal flushes, wild as ever, when he had 'em to draw to, but he was tol'able lucky in not havin' 'em often, so 's 't he was a big winner in the end. Then he'd lay down quick enough after the draw if he didn't have nothin', so he didn't lose so terrible, not to one time, he didn't. Then, o' course, he'd make an onexpected hand sometimes an' pull in considerable with it.

"'Stood to reason though, 't he must ha' lost quite some in the course o' two or three year 't he was pullin' f'r that royal flush. Didn't 'mount up like you'd think it would, 'count o' him bein' lucky, like I said, an' some cautious a'ter the draw; but what he lost none to a mighty heap in the course o' time.

"Then come the stranger's deal, an' he gives out some all-fired big hands. Ransom had the say, an' he anted a quarter like they was doin'. Sile set next, an' he put up his 50 cents, havin' the ace an' jack o' hearts. Peters he raised it fifty, havin' a ace full. Sol James made it a dollar more, havin' that flush, an' the dealer he made it $5 to play.

"Well, Ransom, he hadn't looked at more'n three o' his cards, but he comes in, an' Sile, havin' that fool confidence in his royal flush

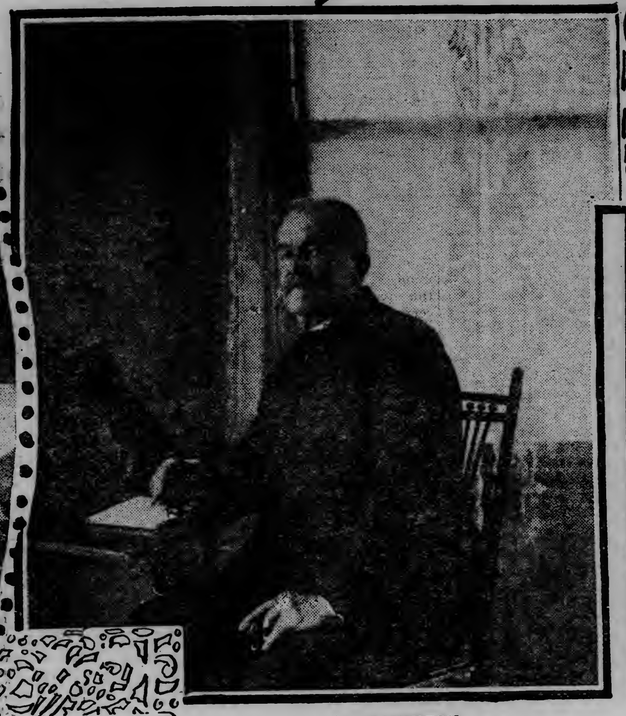

THE NEW TIMBER IN THE SENATE

CURTIS,
Of Kansas, One of the Few Surviving Kaws.

NORRIS BROWN,
Of Nebraska, the Poor Member of the Senate.

JOHNSTON,
Of Oklahoma, One of the Two Civil War Veterans Among the New Timber.

SIMON GUGGENHEIM,
Of Colorado, the Seventh Jew to Sit in the Senate.

OWEN,
Of Oklahoma, One-Eighth Indian and One of the Senate's "Good Lookers."

The Blind Senator, Gore of Oklahoma, with His Wife and Daughter.

BOURNE,
Of Oregon, Who Was Born in Massachusetts.

(Copyright, 1908, by Dexter Marshall.)

IF the new timber in the senate of the United States—some eighteen toga wearers, all told—Isaac Stephenson, who succeeds John C. Spooner of Wisconsin, is by far the wealthiest; a conservative estimate of the value of his world's goods is $10,000,000. He also is the oldest, being only three and a half months younger than William B. Allison of Iowa, who was born March 2, 1829, and six weeks younger than Senator Whyte of Maryland. They are the oldest senators. Senator Stephenson is the only one of the new senators who is not eligible to the presidency; his birthplace was on foreign soil, in Fredericton, N. B.

The youngest of the legislative fledglings is W. James Bryan of Florida, who was 31 last October; the next youngest is Thomas P. Gore, who, in December, drew the lot of junior senator from Oklahoma. He is the only blind member, and, moreover, the first blind man to be elected to the senate. His colleague, Robert L. Owen, is fifteen years his senior. Bryan and Gore are the only senators born since the sixties.

Simon Guggenheim of Colorado, the third youngest member of the senate, being 49 years old on Dec. 30 last, is the seventh Jew to secure a seat in the senate. Other Jews in the senate at present are Isador Rayner of Maryland and Levi Ankeny of Washington. Hebrew senators of the past were Benjamin and Jonas of Louisiana, Yulee of Florida, and Simon of Oregon. Guggenheim is the sixth of the seven sons of Meyer Gugenheim, who control the smelting business of the country, and he is the only one of the new senators who is the son of an immigrant. The father, who died not very long ago, came over in the steerage, met his wife-to-be in the steerage, and began his new-world career as a peddler of stove polish. After Stephenson of Wisconsin Senator Guggenheim is probably the richest new member, though Jonathan Bourne, Jr., of Oregon, on a count of millions, might turn up in second place.

Other millionaires among the new timber are H. A. Richardson of Delaware, who is interested in numerous industrial concerns; William Alden Smith of Michigan and Frank O. Briggs, manufacturer, of New Jersey. Owen of Oklahoma, as victorious chief attorney of the Cherokee Nation in its famous suit against the United States involving a claim of approximately $5,000,000, made himself a three-quarters millionaire.

Owen is one-eighth Cherokee himself. He is over six feet tall, straight as the proverbial Indian arrow, and with a face and complexion typifying the Indian more than the white man. Charles Curtis, the junior senator from Kansas, and successor to the seat of the unfortunate Ralph Burton, is one of the few remaining Kaws. His mother's grandmother was a full-blooded Kaw, his maternal grandfather was a French Canadian, and his father's parents were of Pilgrim New England stock. Owen and Curtis are the only senators with Indian blood in their veins.

Curtis, like Owen, has sufficient to keep the wolf from the door, though he is not so dangerously near the millionaire class as his fellow Indian. As a representative and a prominent member of the house committee on Indian affairs, Curtis put through what is known as the Curtis act, which provided for the allotment in severalty of lands and money to the Five Civilized Tribes, and wound up the communal affairs of 97,000 Indians. Under this act he and his children received from the government 3,000 acres of fine Oklahoma land. This is the real basis of the Curtis fortune. Like Owen, Curtis shows his Indian blood. He has the straight figure, the straight hair and the dark features of the original American.

Norris Brown of Nebraska is probably the only senator who does not own his own house. He frankly acknowledges that he is too poor to hold the deed to a home of his own. Thomas P. Gore also should be classed with the poor men of the senate. His chief worldly possession is his modest little home in Lawton, Okla. This he had to mortgage in order to raise funds with which to prosecute his campaign for senator. Jefferson Davis of Arkansas, whose anti-plutocratic antics have led most people to believe that he is shy of the dollars, is very well fixed as to this world's goods, thank you. Brown and Gore are radicals, too, but they do not use the Davis methods to make known their views. Gore was a Populist when Populism was at its height; Brown was elected senator on an anti-railroad platform. As attorney general of Nebraska he made it extremely interesting for the corporations, and one of his pet measures is the election of senators by popular vote.

Jonathan Bourne, Jr., of Oregon is the first senator so to be elected. He is the only new member to have made a tour of the world; this he did soon after leaving Harvard, in 1876, at the end of his junior year. Two years later he located in Portland, Or., and has lived there ever since. Born at New Bedford, Mass., on the Atlantic, he represents a state whose shore is washed by the waters of our other ocean. His father made a million or two out of whaling and lumber; the son is adding to his share of "the pile" by operating mines in his adopted state, and cotton mills in his native state. In the latter state there is a town named for Bourne, Sr.; in the former a town named for Bourne, Jr.

Other college educated men among the new timber are Davis, who is a graduate of Vanderbilt university; Joseph M. Dixon of Montana, whose alma mater is Guilford college, N. C.; William H. Borah of Idaho, who went to the University of Kansas; Frank O. Briggs, who was educated at government expense at West Point; Owen of Oklahoma, Washington and Lee university of Virginia; Brown of Nebraska, University of Iowa; T. H. Paynter of Kentucky, Center college, from where his predecessor, J. C. S. Blackburn, was graduated; and Bryan of Florida, Emory college. Gore of Oklahoma attended a university law school. Smith of Michigan, who was self-educated, holds an honorary degree of M. A. from Dartmouth college.

Three Self-Made Men.

Smith was a page in the Michigan legislature; Gore was a page in the Mississippi senate. Before he was a page Smith was a newsboy, selling newspapers on trains. Curtis of Kansas was a newsboy, too. As a boy he also blacked boots, worked in a butcher shop, ran a peanut stand, sold apples and sandwiches to travelers at the Topeka depot, and rode racehorses in summer, when school was over. He is the only ex-jockey in the United States senate.

His constituents delight to tell this story of his horse riding days. He was about 14 years old at the time. An extremely vicious horse, known as "the crazy horse" was entered in a race at a big Kansas fair. Three boys who essayed to ride him were swiftly thrown in turn. Then Curtis volunteered to tackle the brute. Two men held the horse while Curtis was lifted to the saddle. Off bolted the beast. Curtis stuck on, the spectators cheered. Finally, however, the horse wore out the lad's strength and threw him. Curtis was badly hurt, but a week later he remounted "the crazy horse" and rode him to victory.

The last year he was in school Curtis drove a cab from 7 o'clock at night until midnight. He was, literally, what is known as a "night hawk," but his ambitions were not those of the typical "night hawk." When he did not have a fare he was busily engaged in reading borrowed law books by the light of his cab's lamps. When he had decided that he had learned all he could in this way he went to A. H. Case, a leading Topeka lawyer, who had frequently been a "fare," and told him of his ambition to become a lawyer. Case replied that the profession was overcrowded; that there was no room in it for a struggling youngster. Curtis' answer was that he understood there was plenty of room at the top, and it was his intention to make the top. That being the case, said Case, he thought he could make room for Curtis in his office.

Curtis was admitted to the bar when he was 21. That was in 1881; the same year he became a partner of Mr. Case and three years later county attorney of Shawnee county. He has been addicted to office holding ever since. He was elected to the Fifty-third congress, and remained a representative until his elevation to the senate.

Stephenson of Wisconsin is another self-made man. His father was so poor that the son had to go barefoot even in winter. He knows from actual experience the hardships of the lumber camps and the farm. He has sailed a lumber schooner between Milwaukee and Escanaba. In brief, before he had managed to get hold of that first $1,000, he had received so many hard knocks that, figuratively speaking, his body was black and blue from them.

Stephenson is one of the three new senators who was old enough to take part in the Civil war, and the only one who did not. John J. Bankhead and Joseph F. Johnston, both of Alabama, fought for the Confederacy, and right valiantly, too; Bankhead was wounded three times and Johnston four. The latter rose to the rank of captain. He left high school at the age of 18 to respond to the bugle's call. Each man, despite his wounds, served throughout the war. Bankhead has held office continually since the war. Johnston put down his sword to study law. He was president of the Alabama National bank for ten years, the first president of the Sloss Iron & Steel company, and governor of Alabama from 1896 to 1900. He is not a poor man, and is about a year younger than his colleague, who was born Sept. 13, 1842.

Bankhead, Curtis of Kansas, Davis of Arkansas, Smith of Michigan, Bryan of Florida, Paynter of Kentucky, Robert L. Taylor of Tennessee, Richardson of Delaware—these are the senators who were born and have lived wholly in the states they represent. Johnston of Alabama and Dixon of Montana were born in North Carolina, in the western half of that state. Borah of Idaho hails from Fairfield, Ill., down in "Egypt." Brown of Nebraska is from Iowa; Bourne of Oregon from Massachusetts; Briggs of New Jersey from New Hampshire; Gore and Owens of Oklahoma from Mississippi and Virginia, respectively. Guggenheim of Colorado was born in Philadelphia, where he went to high school before going abroad to learn the French and German languages. By that time his father had become a prosperous embroidery manufacturer. Stephenson is the only native of New Brunswick and Eastern Canada among our toga wearers.

Stephenson, Bankhead and Johnston are the only men old in years among the new material. The oldest of the three, Stephenson, is the spryest; he does not seem to be more than 40. Of the senators born in the fifties—Taylor, Bourne, Smith Briggs, Owen, Paynter and Richardson—Taylor is the oldest, his birth date being July 31, 1850, and Smith the youngest, May 12, 1859. The "kid" senators are Curtis, Jan. 25, 1860; Davis, June 27, 1862; Brown, May 2, 1863; Borah, June 26, 1862; Dixon, July 31, 1867; Guggenheim, Dec. 30, 1867; Gore, 1871, and Bryan. The lawyers are Curtis, Davis, Dixon, Smith, Taylor, Borah, Bourne, Brown, Gore, Johnston, Owen, Paynter. Briggs and Richardson are manufacturers, Guggenheim a smelter, Stephenson a lumberman, and all four are capitalists also. Bankhead is the sole farmer among the new timber.

Richardson is holding his first office; likewise Gore and Guggenheim. Richardson tried in vain to be governor of Delaware. Gore ran unsuccessfully as a Populist for congress. Guggenheim, in 1896, was nominated by the Republicans for lieutenant governor of Colorado, but when the state committee discovered that he was only 29 it took his name off the ticket. Borah is now holding his first important office. Davis, like Johnston, was governor of his state before going to the senate; Davis is the only man who has been elected three times governor of Arkansas. As everybody knows, "Bob" Taylor fiddled and joked his way to the governor's chair of Tennessee, defeating his brother, running on the Republican ticket. That was in 1894, and he was re-elected twice.

Bankhead, Dixon and Smith were promoted to the senate from the house. Stephenson was a member of the house for six years beginning in 1883; Taylor was a national representative before his first campaign for governor added to the humor of the nation; Paynter was sent to congress in 1882 and served three successive terms. In 1889 he was elected a member of the Kentucky court of appeals and was in the fifth year of his second term of eight years when he was elevated to the senate. Stephenson, Bourne and Dixon have served in their respective state legislatures.

Of all the new timber, Paynter conducted the most dignified campaign, and the most unusual, in that he did not make a single speech in behalf of his candidacy. Much of the time while the campaign was in progress he was sitting in court rendering decisions, mostly in banking cases. What little campaigning he did was to visit county fairs with Governor Beckham. He thus met thousands of people, and gained their support without even asking for it. He relied solely on his record as a judge to speak for him.

Jeff Davis, "Trust Buster."

Like Davis, Paynter never has suffered political defeat. He began his political career in 1876, when he was appointed county attorney for Greenup county, and he has held office continually since then. He and Owen divide the honors as the handsomest men among the new timber. Both are in the six-foot class and splendid physical specimens.

Paynter's victorious political career has run rather smoothly; every step in Davis' political career has been marked by picturesque turbulence. He claims that he became the original "trust buster" when he went in as attorney general of Arkansas. He was elected to that office in 1898, and certain it is that the corporations have been persona non grata in Arkansas since the day Davis took office. He was elected governor on an anti-trust platform and was re-elected twice on the same platform. Fighting trusts means plenty of excitement.

While serving his first term as governor he was expelled from the Baptist church on a charge of drunkenness and immorality. He is the only member of the senate who has been expelled by a religious body. His personal encounters have not been as numerous as the public believes. But once, when governor, he was arrested for engaging in a gun fight in a Fayetteville, Ark., hotel with Former Representative Hugh Dinsmore. From the platform he has breathed more personal slaughter of opponents than all the rest of the new timber combined; and on several occasions he has had his fistic challenges called with promptness and dispatch. It was of Davis that a politcal enemy said, "Pull a corncob pipe from a hip pocket and point it at him and he would jump clean across the Mississippi."

In the use of invective Davis can out-Tillman Tillman, and, like the pitchfork wielder from South Carolina, he is versed in the art of winning the affection of the "common people." He calls the old men fathers in Israel, the old women mothers in Israel and the younger ones sisters. He cries when he makes his audience cry and laughs when he makes them laugh. Though excellently educated and a man of polish, when he is among uncouth people he is uncouth and his language is as shockingly ungrammatical as theirs. Then he always rides behind an ox team, the favorite motive power in that region. Naturally this little trick does not lose him any votes. He also has a habit of tearing off his collar and cravat and removing his coat when talking to hill folk, generally prefacing this action with some such explanation as this:

"Ladies and gentlemen, high collars are made for those dudes down in Little Rock. I can't wear one and make a speech, and I hate 'em. I wear no man's collar." And with that the disrobing act begins.

His enemies have tried in vain to destroy the affection of the hill people for him. They thought they were in a fair way to do so when they announced that Davis had a fine house down in Little Rock and was somewhat of a plutocrat himself.

"Why," said Davis in reply, "do you know what I have got that fine house they talk so much about for? To entertain plain people in. If the door isn't open when you come to see me," he went on, "kick it in. When you come in, keep a-walking. If you don't find Mrs. Davis in the front part of the house, you'll find her out in the back yard making soft soap just like she used to make at at home."

Davis's ability to give some such down-to-the-ground reply as this to every attack made on him explains in large measure the hold he has on the state of Arkansas.

In one respect, if no other, Davis should delight the heart of the president; he is the father of nine children. No other senator, new timber or old, is so much of a parent. Davis has used this circumstance to his political advantage, just as he has used Mrs. Davis to the same end.

At the most interesting part of a speeech in the hill country Davis ostentatiously pulled a huge red bandanna from his coat pocket. There followed a shower of assorted safety-pins. The audience set up a great haw-hawing. Davis waited until the merriment had quieted down, then shot this at them:

"You can laugh if you want to, you men who have no family responsibilities. I have a wife that's none too strong, and I have to help dress the babies. But I'd rather be that sort of a man than one that would sit on a keg in a grocery store and let his wife chop the wood. You can vote for that sort of a man if you want to—but if you vote for me, you'll vote for a man that loves his wife and babies."

The crowd yelled itself wild with delight.

His pre-senatorial reputation and the snub the senate administered to him when he made his first speech recently have combined to make him the most prominent of the new timber. How long he will remain so is a question. He is in the six-foot class along with Paynter and Owen, but, unlike them, he is thin and does not have the prepossessing appearance of the Kentuckian or the Oklahoman.

urtis's Great Memory.

Davis has a remarkable memory, but Curtis can show him one better. It is doubtful whether another senator, new or old, with the possible exception of Gore, whose blindness has driven him to develop his memory phenomenally, can perform such feats of memory. In his first campaign for congress Curtis shook hands with 50,000 persons, he says, and it is his belief that he has not forgotten a single name or face of the 50,000. Some time after the campaign was over he was the guest o fa state senator in the latter's home town. The host undertook to introduce a lot of his fellow townsmen to Curtis, but for the life of him he could not recall the names of many of his neighbors. Curtis had campaigned in the town, so when the senator could not recall a man's name Curtis would address him properly and recall some incident of their former meeting. Curtis' stock is away above par in that community even to this day.

It is a patent fact that the average cab driver has a great memory for names and faces. It was as a cab driver that Curtis unconsciously began to equip himself with his marvelous powers of memory. When he went into politics he realized how valuable an asset a good memory is, and he never has negleted an opportunity to cultivate it.

Another of his hobbies is to write letters on every conceivable occasion. No matter whether it is stranger or friend, he seizes the slightest pretext to write a letter to him, and it is the sort of letter, too, that makes the recipient warm up to the writer. He has secured thousands of followers in this way. He is the ready letter writer of the senate, and he says that he never regretted any sort of communication that has reached him.

In the pioneer days of the Kansas prohibition law, Curtis, at that time county attorney of Shawnee county, had a lot to do with the enforcement of the law, and as they do things with some degree of strenuosity in the Sunflower state he was the hero of many a scrimmage with the enemies of the law. Naturally, his name got pretty well known throughout the state in this connection, especially as he was the man back of the law in the county in which the state capital is located. And it was only natural, since Curtis usually came off victorious in his scrimmages for the populace to picture him as a physical giant.

In 1897 Curtis' home county was placed in a new congressional district. In appealing for re-election to congress Curtis one day found himself in the new part of his district for the first time. While he was waiting his turn to speak an enormous man, over six feet tall and about four broad, walked up to the medium-sized representative and asked:

"Are you Charlie Curtis?"

"Yes."

"Of Topeka?"

"Yes."

"Used to enforce the prohibitory law?"

"Yes."

"Well, dod blast it, I expected to see a man."

"Bob" Taylor is easily the humorist of the new timber, and my, the way he can tickle that fiddle of his! Its strains would doubtless make even Senator Aldrich's feet itch to get a-shuffling. Borah is the tireless student; he would rather pore over some abstruse book than eat a lobster dinner. He, Davis and Smith are reckoned the best speakers among the new men. Borah and Davis are orators in all that the word implies. Smith is not so much an orator as he is a magnetic speaker, seizing on the psychological moment to deliver himself of the thoughts arising in him.

Just before the war with Spain Smith went to Cuba. When he came back he talked to the house about what he had seen there, and as he went on the tears, unheeded, rolled down his cheeks. Tears rolled down the cheeks of many of his auditors, too, and the whole house listened to his remarks with that rapt attention which it reserves for a truly great speech. More recently, when Smith made his speech nominating Speaker Cannon for the presidency, he again set the house wild. It was rumored that he would follow this speech by another.

"No," he replied, when asked if the rumor was true, "when you've made your bullseye it won't do any good, and may damage your reputation as a marksman if you fire the other barrel."

It was due to Smith's strict adherence to this bit of philosophy that the house only seldom heard his voice. But when he arose to speak it knew that he would have something interesting to say, and so it hung on his every word. A rather simple and common-sense way to earn a reputation as a speechmaker.

Owen a Heap Big Indian.

Owen has the distinction of being the first president of the first Indian national bank. It was through his efforts that the national banking act was extended over the Indian Territory, and under it he organized, on Aug. 1, 1890, the First National bank of Muskogee, this being his home town. Of all the new senators who went to college he made the most brilliant record, being honor and gold medal man and valedictorian at his graduation. He is almost as much of a student as Borah.

He has been intimately identified with the Cherokee and other Indian tribes of the new state since 1879; he removed to the territory in 1877, immediately following his graduation from Washington and Lee university. He drew up the act passed by congress extending citizenship to 70,000 Indians, or all those living in Indian Territory. Cortelyou gave him the pen with which McKinley signed the act, and he holds it as one of his chief treasures.

He and Curtis undoubtedly will be recognized by the senate as its experts on Indian affairs. Owen has a mighty good motto, and an uncommon one:

FROM THE MINES AND THE SMELTERS

ON THE MESABA IRON RANGE

Little Decline in Production This Year Expected---More Extensive Operation of the Open-Cut Properties---Big Stripping Contracts.

Judging from the preparations, there will be little if any falling off in production on the Mesaba iron range this year. There will not be as many underground mines in commission, and fewer men will be employed than last season, but there will be a more extensive operation of the open-cut properties, from which, after all, there comes the great bulk of the output of ore. The Steel corporation alone will have a number of new pits whence to draw a very large tonnage.

Stripping contracts awarded since the first of the year call for the removal of upwards of ten million cubic yards of overburden. This is in addition to work of this nature already in hand. Among the new contracts are three calling for important operations at the Monroe-Tener, Burt-Pool and Morris mines of the Steel corporation, 3,500,000 cubic yards of material to be removed from the former property and lesser quantities from the others. From the Grant property of the Intestate Iron company, 3,00,000 cubic yards of overburlen are to be taken off. This mine is a Jones & Laughlin possession, located at Buhl, and special interest has been aroused in it the past two years because of the extensive test it has given of the grab system of stripping at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars. This method of taking off the surface by means of an electrically-operated clam-shell device suspended from cables was expected to work a revolution in Mesaba mining and stripping practice, had it been a success, but it has been a matter of common knowledge for a long time past that it has not been giving satisfaction.

Another interesting contract is that for the stripping of a portion of the so-called silver tract, famous because of the extended litigation between the claimants to its fee. The M. A. Hanna mining interests have been exploring the property since securing a lease on the land when the litigants came to terms, a few months ago, and it is

IN THE BUTTE COPPER CAMP

Decision in Smoke Case Anxiously Awaited—Expected to be in Favor of Anaconda—New Converter at Clark Smelter, and North Butte Output to be Increased.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 25.—The public is anxiously awaiting the opinion and decision of Federal Judge William H. Hunt in the now famous smoke case, upon which much depends. While this may not be a crucial point concerning the local copper situation, it is one of the most important issues. The decision, which, according to the findings of Master-in-Chancery Crane, must logically be in favor of the Anaconda Copper company, will be the first step toward the resumption of operations at the mines of the Amalgamated Copper company, and with this disposed of it will be a comparatively easy matter to adjust other matters which are regarded as of a retarding character. While some fear is entertained that when mining is resumed the miners will be asked to go to work at a reduced scale of wages, there is, in fact, little danger of this or of any of the consequent disturbances. That the companies will compel the men in their employ to render a fair day's work for a fair day's pay, however, there is no question. There is no disputing the fact that the hold of the labor unions on the companies, prior to the time operations were suspended, became so strong and dominating that the efficiency of labor dropped from 25 to 50 per cent. With resumption of work this will no longer exist, and every man on the pay rolls will be required to do a stipulated amount of work or he will lose his place on the pay roll.

During the past few weeks the various companies have been educating their time-keepers and shift-bosses in a method of checking which will increase the amount of work on every shift at least 25 per cent and in some instances to 50 per cent.

Under the new regime the cost of production, will be materially decreased.

There are some subtle indications that work at the mines and Washoe smelter may be resumed in the near future. It is known that the Amalgamated company has placed large orders for coal for the smelting plant at Anaconda, and it is also a fact that the fires have never been allowed to die out completely. Hence, it will be possible to resume operations at a moment's notice.

At all of the mines the pumps are kept in operation, and sufficient work is being done in all of them to keep them in good condition. Especially where the ground is shifting, as in the West Colusa and Leonard, sufficient stoping and timbering is being done to keep the properties from caving in, and in such shape that production will be only a matter of securing the miners to take out the ore.

The North Butte will not suffer from the closing of the Washoe smelter extemporarily, for the capacity of the Butte Reduction works is being increased. A new converter is being put in place, which means not only that the Clark mines will continue to turn out copper, but that the North Butte output will be considerably increased. The superintendent of the Butte Reduction works says: "We have another converter in place, which increases our number to three. We are treating the ores of the North Butte company and will continue to do so. The new converter means an increased output and we will take from the North Butte company such quantity of ore as is required to operate the reduction works to its full capacity." The works have been treating 50 tons of ore a day from the Clark mines and 300 tons from North Butte. The normal output of the North Butte is over 1,000 tons a day, and while it is having treated only a third of this amount at present the property is being opened up and when normal times in the copper market come again it will be able to maintain a much heavier tonnage than ever before.

Operating its smelter at Great Falls to full capacity, the Boston & Montana company is enabled to produce 5,000,000 pounds of refined copper every month, and this together with about 2,000,000 pounds of copper matte, which is shipped east for treatment, is now the total product from which the Amalgamated Copper company is deriving revenue. During the curtailment period the Boston & Montana company reduced only about 1,000 tons of ore a day, and the refinery was run to about one-third of its capacity. With the refinery at the Anaconda plant closed down completely, even during the period of production, the Amalgamated company was putting out in refined form only the copper which came from the Great Falls plant. Hence the operation of the Boston & Montana smelter at full capacity is equal to more than the curtailed production of the Great Falls and Anaconda plants.

It is understood that the Butte Coalition company will be able to

SYNDICATE GETS CONTROL

Of Consolidated Arizona Smelting Company---Lawson One of the Syndicate Which Agrees to Pay $1,000,000 for the Control.

New York, Jan. 25.—A Boston and New York syndicate has secured control of the properties and smelting plant of the Consolidated Arizona Smelting company of Humbolt, Ariz. Negotiations for the purchase of the control of this property have been protracted and an entire day was consumed in fighting out the details involved in the transfer of the property before an agreement was finally reached. While no mention is made of the name of Thomas W. Lawson in the transfer, it is known absolutely that he was one of the big participants of the syndicate, his end of the transaction being represented by A. C. Burrage of Boston.

The deal as agreed to by the various principals calls for an immediate payment of $40,000 by the purchasers, subsequent payments to be made from time to time until $1,000,000 will have been paid over for control. In addition, 1,400,000 shares of the company's 1,700,000 shares of capital stock will be tied up for over a year and deposited with Strong, Sturgis & Co., members of the New York stock exchange.

The Consolidated Arizona company has been in the hands of the receiver for over a month, and it is presumed that the first steps of the new interests will be toward compromising the claims outstanding against the company, and if those can be settled on an equitable basis an immediate resumption will be forthcoming. The plant is believed to have been secured in order to give the Nevada-Utah ocmpany an outlet for its copper sulphide ores.

The smelter of the Consolidated Arizona Smelting company is equipped with two reverbatory furnaces of a daily capacity of 300 tons each and one blast furnace of 300 tons a day capacity, making in all 900 tons per day. The company has likewise a lead stack, which was never delivered at the property, but which could be of service for the treatment of the Nevada-Utah company's lead-silver ores at Ploche, Nev.

The Consolidated company also owns a large and well developed copper mine near Prescott whose past tonnage, together with custom ores, furnished the masis of smelting operations. The plant up to last December had been in operation about twelve months, having produced 2,500,000 pounds of copper in that time. Its net profits were given at $90,000 a month. The slump in copper last year caught the company heavily loaded with copper ore, which it had bought from the surrounding mines on a basis of from 25 to 22 cents a pound. When the time came to sell this product the market had declined to 16 cents, with the result that a $350,000 surplus accumulated during the year was wiped out. When copper dropped to 12 cents the mines stopped shipping and the smelter shut down. A receiver was appointed later in compliance with a petition from the creditors.

HIGH GRADE GOLD ORE BODY

Prescott, Ariz., Jan. 25.—Two of the most promising strikes of ore ever made at the camp of the Octave Mining company, and the turning out, by the company's mill, of a gold bar, weighing 1,213 ounces, troy, estimated in value at $25,000, furnished more or less excitement to the miners of the Weaver district, last week. The news of the rich finds were corroborated here by C. E. Miesse, president, and E. K. Hum, vice president of the Octave company, who delivered the gold bar to R. N. Fredericks of the Prescott National bank, at the depot, as they passed through the city on their way to Chicago.

The bar is the result of a two weeks' run of the mill. On arrival at the bank it was taken from the box in which it was encased and weighed. It tipped the scales at 83½ pounds, avoirdupois. The great ingot of yellow metal will be on exhibition at the bank for a few days, after which it will be shipped to the San Francisco mint.

Four feet of ore has been uncovered in the sixteenth level of the Octave, in a cross vein, never before known to exist, averaging in value $100 to the ton. The ore is a quartz, carrying heavy sulphides, streaked with gold. In places, some of which assays thousands of dollars to the ton. The strike was made in one of the drifts from the No. 3 shaft, at an approximate depth of 1,600 feet. The finding of the ore of such richness startled the camp, in which there are 175 men now employed, and the management is using every precaution in guarding the rich quartz from the cupidity of the specimen hunter.

Almost equally as promising is the strike made in the Joker mine, at a depth of 1,100 feet. This new find was made 2,000 feet east of the No. 3 shaft. The ore body has a thickness of six feet, and carries average values, according to mill tests, of $33 to the ton in gold. As in the case of the cross vein find, a good deal of this ore is of very high grade.

INCREASE SMELTER OUTPUT

Work Preliminary to Extensive Improvements at Calumet & Arizona About Completed, Meaning Early Doubling of Capacity—Work on the Globe Consolidated Property is Progressing Rapidly.

Douglas, Ariz., Jan. 25.—Since the recent new ore strikes in the Hoatson and Junction shafts, both Superior & Pittsburg properties, there have been signs of renewed activity at the Calumet & Arizona smelter and the four furnaces now in commission are booked for a record production this month.

No. 2 furnace is now undergoing needed repairs and when this work is completed No. 2 will go into commission, and No. 5 will be shut down for repairs, after a continuous run since Jan. 4, 1907. This is claimed as a marvelous record for a furnace. A close estimate places the number of tons of ore which have been fed into this furnace since it was started up during the first days of last year at 106,000.

The installation of machinery in the new powerhouse built this year at the Calumet & Arizona smelter is about complete, only one Norberg blowing engine remaining to be put in position. Since the completion of the new powerhouse, which was really an extension of the old one, there has been installed in it two new Connersville engines, one 500 k. w. electric turbine of the Parsons type, an additional condenser, a new Prescott triple-expansion circulating pump and the large Nordberg blowing engine mentioned above, which has not yet been connected. Thus has been provided all the power which will be required to operate the smelter when it has been enlarged according to the plans decided upon just about one year ago. In the meantime there has been other important work done in preparation for the increased capacity of this smelter, two steel frame buildings have been completed—one for machine and the other for blacksmith shop.

Now that all the preparatory work necessary to the enlargement of the Calumet & Arizona smelter to more than double its present capacity has been completed, the work of building new furnace converter stands and other requirements will go forward and no doubt with the intention of increasing the production of copper in the near future. The converter stands are to be moved to the opposite side of the smelter building and an additional converter stand has been ordered constructed.

As soon as the converters have been moved over to their new position work on the first of the two new furnaces will begin and for its construction much of the required material has been received. When the new furnace is completed then it will be put into commission and the work of lengthening each of the five old furnaces will be taken up, and as one is completed it will increase the capacity of the plant something like 150 tons per day. When the old furnaces have been completed then the work of building the second new 500-ton furnace will be started and hurried to completion as soon as possible.

When the present plan of enlargement has been completed the Calumet & Arizona smelter will have a capacity of 3,000 tons of ore per day as against a capacity of 1,500 tons at the present time. It now has five furnaces of 300 tons capacity each, which are to be enlarged in capacity at least 25 per cent. This, with the two new 500-ton furnaces, will give a total capacity of 3,000 tons every twenty-four hours.

The four furnaces are now being operated to the extreme limit of their capacity in order to meet the requirements of the increased ore receipts from the mines, where almost daily reports of the finding of new and important ore bodies are given out; especially is this the case at the Junction and Hoatson shafts. It is understood that the product from Superior & Pittsburg this month will be increased 75 per cent.

Judging by the present activity and evident desire to handle every pound of ore possible it is quite likely that the fifth furnace will be put into commission within the next two weeks.

An extra reverbatory furnace was started this week at the Copper Queen smelter.

Globe, Ariz., Jan. 25.—Work on the property of the Globe Consolidated Copper company is being pushed steadily ahead and satisfactory results are being obtained. During the past couple of weeks a great amount of development work has been done, and it is probable that within the next month the vein encountered on one of the upper levels will be cut below.

ORE STRIKE AT THE HELVETIA

Body of Ore Found on the 300-Foot Level, Carrying 12 Per Cent Copper---Find Causing Much Comment.

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 25.—News has reached Tucson of a good ore strike which was made in the Copper World shaft on the Helvetia property.

It was stated that an ore body, which averages 10 per cent copper, was struck on the 300-foot level. This body has been crosscut for twelve feet without the opposite wall being struck.

The best report that has come out of Helvetia in several months was given when it was announced that the Helvetia had made a big ore strike on the 300-foot level in its Copper World shaft, which is one of the main workings on the company's extensive holdings in the Helvetia district, about twenty-five miles south of Tucson.

The strike was made while drifting was being done on the 300-foot level of the shaft. A number of assays were made of samples from the ore body and they averaged 10 per cent copper.

The crosscutting of the ore is being continued and although the crosscut is in twelve feet, the opposite wall of the body has not yet been found.

Operations have been carried on at Helvetia on a fair scale, despite the copper slump and most attention has been paid to the development work. The news which was received from the mines today will be especially cheering to the entire district, which includes a number of properties of considerable size.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

New Stamp Mill at the Lucky Strike is Completed---Work to be Resumed on the Pluma Company's Property.

Deadwood, S. D., Jan. 25.—Construction of the new thirty-stamp mill of the Lucky Strike Mining company on Elk Creek, south of here, has been concluded and the mill will be in operation within a few weeks. The treatment consists in the stamps, plates, classifier, and then after the separation of the slimes and sands, the leaching of sands and the agitation and decanation method for the slimes. The mine has been well developed and shows a large body of fair grade free milling gold ores, on which Manager Allen has made a number of successful tests. The property is owned by stockholders principally in Minnesota and Wisconsin and Eastern South Dakota.

Work will soon be resumed on the property of the Pluma Mining company near this city. The new electric hoist is expected daily and immediately upon its installation the Washington shaft will be continued. This was sunk 235 feet with a small whim until more powerful machinery was required. In sinking the shaft Supt. Fillian ran across some high grade material of a free milling character that is believed to come from the main vein, for which the shaft is being sunk. It is rock that is easy to handle and the new hoist should make rapid progress. It is proposed to continue the shaft to the 600-foot depth before any tunnel or drift work is done. In the main shaft below Washington work will be started probably in the spring when it is planned by the company to commence more extensive operations with a larger force of miners.

Keystone, S. D., Jan. 25.—Manager W. T. H. Gray of the Holy Terror mine, has returned from New York, where he went to consult with the United Mining company with the new owners of the property, and after paying off the old debts, has put men to work in the mill cleaning up. It will require but a few days to do all the necessary preliminary work and by the first of the coming month it is expected that the Holy Terror will again be in full operation.

BIG SHOOT OF SOLID GALENA

Uncovered on Mormon Stope of Bunker Hill & Sullivan Mine in Coeur d'Alenes---New Ore Body of Unknown Width.

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 25.—The Bunker Hill & Sullivan mine at Wardner, Idaho, discovered in 1885 by two prospectors of Spokane while lost in the Coeur d'Alene hills, and which has since proved itself to be the greatest lead-silver producer in the world, has uncovered the longest shoot of solid galena ever found underground. The "strike" was made on the Sullivan side the afternoon of Jan. 15, on what is known as the Mormon stope. The new ore body has a known length of at least 250 feet and is of unknown width. It will add from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 to the property, which is valued at $70,000,000, and means that it will require hundreds of men and years of time to mine the ore contained in the mammoth reserve.

This is the second important discovery made on the property in the last twelve months. The value of the first of these, found on the tenth level, was placed at $15,000,000 by R. N. Bell, state inspector of mines in Idaho, who added in his annual report that if the body were developed to depth the value would be trebled. This prediction has been more than verified, the workings indicated producing millions of dollars' worth of high grade ore. What new riches will be uncovered as the work progresses cannot be foretold or even imagined, but, judging from what has been done, it is safe to say at this time that the most profitable history of the Coeur d'Alene hills remains to be written.

The upper workings of the mine have produced and shipped millions of dollars' worth of ore and paid $10,000,000 in dividends in the last twenty years. Then the Kellogg tunnel, driven miles through the rocks, suddenly opened into the greatest bodies of lead-silver ore the world had ever heard of at that time. Experienced mining men turned their attention to the deeper workings, and as drift after drift, and lower tunnels continued to cut and develop other great ore bodies to at present unknown depths, the upper workings were apparently forgotten, and to the layman they were practically worked out. Following the find in the Kellogg tunnel, the company turned its attention to developing the March tunnel, which turned out to be a veritable bonanza, after thousands of dollars had been spent on non-paying work.

THE COLORADO DISTRICTS

Close Corporation Formed to Reopen the Brighton Mine, Idle For Twelve Years---New Method of Treating Tungsten Ores.

Colorado Springs, Jan. 25.—A close corporation has been formed by Capt. E. D. Quigley of Denver to renovate the Brighton mine in Boomerang gulch, Idaho Springs. The property has been idle for twelve years, due to inflow of water. The Newhouse tunnel has drained it dry recently. The new owners will install an electric hoist, clean out and retimber the 300-foot shaft and levels and start work in old stopes, which have godo bodies of galena ore already exposed.

Dr. John B. Ekeley, the head of the chemical department at Colorado State university at Boulder, has discovered a new method of treating tungsten ores which may reduce the average loss of 15 per cent resulting from the present method.

The British-American Leasing company is sinking the new shaft on the south end of the Dante mine, Cripple Crek, from 530 feet on a vein that is yielding $18 to $60 a ton. Stations will be cut every fifty feet. The company is shipping 1,500 tons of ore monthly. The vein on the 300-foot level is 30 feet wide. The company is composed of five stockholders. Profits disbursed as dividends in 1907 reached $50,000.

The Becker-Travell Leasing company, composed mainly of the same men, is shipping a carload weekly from the Christmas mine, adjoining the Golden Circle property, the ore averaging $20 for coarse rock and $35 for screenings. This company disbursed $15,000 in dividends in 1907.

Work on the Newhouse tunnel, now in 17,000 feet, has been suspended temporarily owing to the failure of mine owners directly benefited to contribute adequately to the expenses of the big bore. The tunnel head is within a few hundred feet of its objective, the famous properties of the Quartz hill or Nevadaville district. These mines are subject to flooding. The tunnel, if completed, can relieve this trouble, making pumping unnecessary.

The Moore-Seeley lease in the Lucky Gus of the Stratton estate, Cripple Creek, is in a rich sand streak between the fifth and sixth levels, from a carload of which returns show $246 a ton. The gross bullion valu ofe the shipment was $10,489. The estate's royalty was $2,622.

A retort from a cleanup on a fourteen days' run of the Ironclad cyanide mill, Cripple Creek, amounted to $2,300. The mill is handling about 100 tons daily of oxidized ore. The retort represents a saving at the rate of $1.65 a ton.

A retort from the Isabella cyanide mill, Cripple Creek, brought $2,800 at the Denver mint. The weight was thirty pounds.

AT THE LAKE COPPER MINES

Good Showing From Work on Baltic Lode in the Superior—Lode on the Isle Royal, Believed to be the Baltic, Penetrated With the Diamond Drill.

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Superior is within thirty feet of the eighth level in No. 1 shaft on the Baltic lode. Two drills are sinking and six are drifting. The shaft is in the foot wall at an incline of 53 degs, which conforms to the dip of the lode, compared with a dip of 72 degs. at the Baltic, which is the nearest place where the Baltic lode has been developed outside the Superior property.

The showing at No. 1 shaft has been good at every level, but the best is at the sixth, where the lode measures eighty-five feet in width horizontally, with a horse of trap measuring thirty feet that divides it into two parts. The part between the foot wall and the horse measures eighteen feet and contains good stamp copper, while that between the horse and the hanging wall measures twenty-five feet and is rich throughout.

At the seventh level the horse has disappeared and the lode measures twenty-one feet with good copper values. Drifting is in progress both north and south at the sixth and seventh levels and north at the fourth and fifth levels. The third, fourth and fifth levels have reached the boundary in the south drifts. The distance to the boundary in that direction increases with depth, and in a few hundred feet the corner of the intervening triangle of land will be passed, after which the drifts can be extended 4,000 feet south of No. 1 shaft within the Superior boundary.

Superior recently installed a hoisting engine capable of working to a depth of 1,200 feet. It was brought from Calumet & Hecla's No. 20 shaft on the Kearsarge lode, now idle. To accommodate the enlarged building to enclose this engine a tract 500 feet square was bought from J. C. Bruneau, as the Superior boundary at that point lies close to the Baltic lode outcrop.

Superior No. 3 shaft, 2,540 feet south of No. 1, is idle, at a depth of 235 feet. Evidently developments will be centered indefinitely at No. 1, where such favorable results have been secured. A small townsite has been laid out and six houses built for the miners. Others will follow as needed. Some of the men also live at Atlantic and are accommodated by the train service to Section 16, from whence the walk to Superior is about a mile. The remainder find accommodation at neighboring farmhouses and a few at Baltic. About fifty men are employed.

A party of Superior officials, including General Manager James MacNaughton, Supt. Frederick W. Ridley and Vice President Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., recently visited the property and proceeded to Atlantic's Section 16, looking over the possibilities of railroad construction to Superior. This has led to the conjecture that connection may be made with the Atlantic & Lake Superior railroad at Section 16, thus affording transportation to the Atlanic mill, where it is possible Superior rock may be treated.

Some time ago preliminary steps were taken with a view to having a Copper Range spur extended from Baltic to Superior, but this fell through. Such a service would give haulage over a single line to Lake Linden, where the Calumet & Hecla, owning control of Superior, could treat the rock in its own mill. The Superior stockpile is conservatively estimated to contain 10,000 tons of copper rock and estimates by careful observers figure the contents as high as thirty pounds of copper per ton.

Isle Royale's regular production of 600 tons daily comes from No. 2 shaft, which is nearly 2,400 feet deep. The bottom levels are equal in copper showing to those above and about 2,000 feet of workable territory is tributary north and south of the shaft. Shipments of four cars weekly comes from the other shafts undergoing development on the Isle Royale lode.

The Isle Royale management is reticent about its developments on the Baltic lode, but from unofficial sources it is learned that a lode believed to be the Baltic, although not fully identified, has been penetrated with the diamond drill, showing a width of forty feet, of which four or five feet shows a drill core well charged with copper. The drill exploration was on section 11, as near as practicable to Superior No. 1 shaft. Isle Royale is also exploring in a shaft on section 32 for the Baltic lode, crosscutting both east and west at the eighth level. Nothing definite has been determined there, but the results will now be much more valuable since the probable identification of the lode by the diamond drill, as the various formations can be correlated and the work directed more intelligibly. It seems probable that a shaft may be started near the site of the drill development, although such a course will not be adopted until the identification is fully established.

South of No. 2 shaft is a stretch of over two miles on the Isle Royale lode, where gigantic development has been inaugurated. Immediately south are the old Huron workings, 2,000 feet deep and filled with water. These will not be touched now, but eventually they will be unwatered and No. 3 shaft opened there. South of the Huron workings is No. 4 shaft, the most recent development. It is down 120 feet, with good copper from surface. No drifting has been started. The equipment will carry the shaft to 1,000 feet, but will doubtless be replaced by a permanent equipment before that depth is reached.

South of No. 4 is No. 5 shaft, 190 feet deep, and in ground from top to bottom better than the average produced from No. 2 shaft. It is equipped for

UTAH SMELTER COMPROMISE

American Refining Company Makes Deal With Farmers---Output of Copper Company Last Year Was Fifteen Million Pounds.

Salt Lake, Utah, Jan. 25.—That the American Smelting & Refining company is to be permitted to operate its plant at Murray, eight miles south of Salt Lake, was definitely settled this week when a stipulation was filed in the federal court for a modification of the smoke nuisance decree as affecting the American Smelting & Refining company. This action opens the way for a renewal of shipments by mines that have been requested to cease production when metal market conditions justify it, and on its face makes it reasonably certain that the United States company will also get a chance to operate its lead smelting works if it desires to do so.

Under the terms of the stipulation agreed to by the American company with the farmers for a modification of the decree the chief point is in the fact that under it ores carrying less than 25 per cent sulphur may be treated. The court's original decree was that "no ore or ores in any shape or form whatsoever should have a higher sulphur content than 10 per cent." The agreement allows the operation of the American company's plant at its full capacity of 1,500 tons of crude ore a day, this exclusive of flux and fuel others than sulphur.

The output of copper by the Utah Copper company during 1907 was 15,000,000 pounds, according to the figures given out by General Manager Jackling. The greater part of this production was during the closing months of the year. The first section of the mill was placed in commission in July, beginning with the treatment of 500 tons daily. Gradually other sections were added until now eight are in operation. It is expected that the output for January will reach 3,500,000 pounds. In December the production was nearly 3,000,000 pounds, and operations at the mill were materially affected by an interruption of the power line. The expense of taking out the ore was cut to 31 cents a ton during December.

A strike of considerable importance to the Scott Hill section of the Park city district has been made in its tunnel by the Copper Apex company. The Apex drove an incline shaft a distance of 180 feet into the vein, giving it a vertical depth of 70 feet. From these workings 250 tons of good ore was shipped. A tunnel was then started

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

Matters of vast import hinge upon the outcome of the contest cases involving two of the amendments submitted to the people of Minnesota at the last election. Judge Dibell, of the district court of St. Louis county, decided Thursday that the tax amendment failed to carry and that the good roads amendment was adopted, though the official canvass showed the contrary result: that the tax amendment was adopted and the good roads amendment rejected.

The tax amendment embodies the so-called "wide open" principle of taxation. The constitution as it now stands provides that all property must be taxed equally upon a cash basis. Faulty administration of this system, which the creation of the tax commission will go far to remedy, has led to injustices. The proposed amendment simply provides that taxes must be uniform upon the same classes of subjects; all else is left to the discretion of the legislature. This, in the opinion of many, would open the way to injustices vastly graver than any possible under the present provisions of the constitution. The legislature could tax one class of property heavily, and let another escape. It would be possible, for instance, to make real estate bear the entire expense of government. It would be possible to exempt from taxation the great city mercantile houses, giving them a vast advantage over their competitors of the country districts. There is no end, in fact, to the possibilities opened up by this amendment. It is not one to be hastily adopted at the behest of wild-eyed theorists.

The good roads amendment increases the limit of the state levy for road-building from 1-20 of a mill to ¼ of a mill, increasing the possible amount available for state aid in road construction from a little more than $60,000 a year to about $250,000 a year. At present the constitution limits the state road levy to 1-20 of a mill, which provides a very inadequate amount. The increase of this limit, permitting larger extensions of state aid in road-building, is along the line of good public policy. That is why the people adopted the amendment by a large majority at the election of 1906, though the fact that they did so was obscured by the error in making up the ballots and tally sheets, whereby the order of the two amendments was reversed and in a majority of the voting districts of the state the votes cast for the tax amendment were counted for the goods roads amendment, and vice versa.

It is evident from the results of the recount in a large number of voting districts that the people did not want the tax amendment, and that they did want the good roads amendment. They were right in both cases, and showed their usual sound judgment. That the count was confused by a mysterious error is no fault of theirs. It is due to the people that the public authorities of the state should right the injustice that has been done by the mistake in counting the vote, and Judge Dibell of the district court has taken the first step.

NARROWNESS AND HEALTH.

There are in Duluth two business partners—call the firm Smith & Jones, for convenience and because that isn't its name. In the customs and habits of these two business men there is a very interesting and very common contrast.

Smith, the head of the firm, has always been a hard worker. He has no interest in life, apparently, but his business; no recreation but his business, no love but his business. He is at the office early and he stays late. He never takes a vacation; says he can't afford it. When his employes ask for vacations he gives them grudgingly because others do it, but he always manages to let them know that he has to work himself, and intimates that others ought to work, too. Smith gets up at 6:30, bolts his breakfast, washing it down with gulps of hot coffee, and then dashes forty feet to the street car, which he always takes to the office, a dozen or so blocks away. He plunges into his work, keeps his head in it until noon, when he dashes out to a lunch counter, swallows hurriedly anything that can be quickly served and quickly eaten, and is back at his desk in fifteen minutes, there to remain until 6 o'clock at night, when he takes a car home again. After dinner he reads the paper—that is he looks for news that may affect his business, skims over the real estate advertisements, and then throws it aside. He is not very good company at home, because his mind is on his business, and he never goes out anywhere. That is his life, day in and day out. He grudges Sundays and holidays because there is no business then. Smith is in poor health, increasingly so. He is dyspeptic, his nerves are bad, his temper is fearful. His capacity for work is decreasing every year, though he works as hard as ever, and more and more of the burden falls upon his partner.

Jones is different. He lives farther from the office than Smith, but he seldom takes a car. He is rosy and healthy, full of life and good spirits. He spends much time every day out of doors, though some way his work is always kept up as well as Jones', and, of late, better. Twice a year he takes a couple of weeks off, and goes away with his family. Sometimes it is camping, fishing or hunting; sometimes it is a trip to some part of the country that he has never seen. His appetite is good, he does not know he has a stomach, he sleeps well,—with window thrown wide open summer and winter inviting in the night air,—his work is a pleasure to him and his capacity for it is increasing every day. He finds pleasure not alone in work, but he finds it in good books, good pictures, good music, good plays, good company; and he finds time for these, too.

Smith is five years younger than Jones, and looks ten years older. Jones is popular, respected, loved; Smith is lonely, unloved, miserable. Jones is enjoying life, because he is broad, vigorous and cheerful; Smith is beginning to think life not worth the living, because he is narrow, sick and gloomy.

If Smith lived in Jones' way and Jones tried Smith's way of living, in a few years their physical and mental characteristics would be exchanged.

Do you know any people like these? Or are you one of them?

MAKING VOTERS VOTE.

There can be no occasion for debate over the fact that the best results are obtained from popular government when all of the citizens exercise their franchise intelligently. When a large body of the voters stay away from primaries and polls results are more open to manipulation, of course, and results cannot be so good.

But what are you going to do about it? Various plans have been proposed for compelling voters to vote, but whatever the plan is, those who consider it thoughtfully will be disturbed about the problematic value of the expression of a voter who votes because he has to, and not because he is interested in the election and knows and cares what he is doing.

Governor-elect Fort of New Jersey, in a recent public address, advocated the enactment of a statute that will, he believes, tend to encourage voters to vote. He proposes a law imposing a poll tax of $10 on all voters, with a proviso that it shall be remitted if they go to the polls and vote. That would mean a fine of $10 upon every voter who failed to perform the chief duty of citizenship.

The Utica Press, commenting upon this plan, says that "men of means who do not wish to vote would not regard $10 as a very high price to pay for the privilege of staying away." We are not so sure about that. Men of means are usually just as careful of their ten-dollar bills as anybody. The probabilities are that they would prove to be just as alert to save that $10 fine as the humblest workingman would be.

There is far more pertinency in the suggestion of the New York Sun: what about the poor devils that have no $10, and whom circumstances may keep away from the polls? Are you going to send them to jail for ten days to work out the poll tax?

This plan is very different from the custom that prevails in several states, of compelling voters to pay for the privilege of voting. It is worth paying for, and the privilege has been bought at a costly price: the blood of heroes and the sufferings of martyrs have paid for it. But now we have it, it doesn't seem just right to make people pay for using it. In Texas, for instance, you can't vote unless you have paid a poll tax of $2.50. The Houston Post in a recent issue appealed to the citizens to qualify as voters by paying the tax on the ground that a Texas man might be the Democratic nominee for president, and that they would be very sorry they hadn't paid if it turned out that he was the candidate and they couldn't vote for him. Probably the Post does not mean that there is danger that the forty or fifty Republicans of Texas will walk off with the electoral vote, however.

Tennessee requires payment of a poll tax as a qualification for voting, and in Delaware the voters have to pay a registration fee of $1.

At any rate, the plan suggested by Governor Fort is better than these. The voting franchise should be free, and it is better to penalize the failure to vote than to put a price upon the privilege.

WHOSE IS THE BURDEN?

The coroner of Cook county, in which Chicago, is situated, has been investigating last year's deaths by accident, with an eye to the social and economic interest which these sad rolls contain.

There were last year in Cook county 4,607 deaths which required the coroner's attention. What struck his mind a more thought-compelling blow than anything else was the large number of industrial accidents—deaths of men through conditions of their employment. There were, in this list, losses of life in railroad work, in elevators, from bursting refrigeration pipes and from unprotected machinery. In the year thirty-three men were killed in Chicago by being caught in machinery.

Sadder than any list of statistics is the discovery by the coroner that in nearly all cases those killed in shops, factories and industrial pursuits were young married men, whose widows and small children became dependent upon charity.

To take a concrete example, imagine a workingman of 30 years, employed in a factory. At home he has a wife and three children. His wages, which no doubt the employer considers generous, are scarcely more than enough to house, warm, feed, clothe and educate his children. Indeed, the margin is so small that the children will be put at work as soon as possible, no doubt, in order to relieve the little household of the burden of their care. Anybody who has analyzed the finances of such a workingman will realize that there is no margin for luxuries, however small, and that though the family may live comfortably on the father's wages, there is little possibility of laying by a store against the rainy days that come into all lives.

But one day an accident happens at the shop. An unguarded piece of machinery seizes the workman and draws him into cruel jaws which grind him to death. From that moment the income of that household stops. A widow and three small children are left to face the world. Possibly there is ground for a damage suit, but the employer has clever attorneys employed to protect him against such expenses, and they do the best they can, which is much. The widow has no money for court expenses, and must trust her case to a lawyer who will conduct it for half the damages. He is probably not the best in the profession, and he may be no match for the employer's lawyers. The prospect of recovery is doubtful indeed, and when anything is gained it has to be shared with the lawyer.

The same thing happens when the workman is only crippled for life, and is condemned to lie uselessly around his home.

In either event society soon finds a pauper family on its hands, which must be cared for either by public or private charity.

The employer, who had the benefit of the workman's strength and productiveness while he lived, merely employs a man in his place and goes on as before, leaving the care of the workman's family to charity.

Isn't it quite clear to you that society ought to consider some system that would compel the employer to stand this burden, rather than the public, which is not at fault and which did not directly receive the benefit of the workman's strength? State industrial insurance such as Germany provides would do it.

A LIFE'S LESSON.

There is a lesson in the life of Edmund Clarence Stedman, the poet-banker who died recently at a ripe age after a long and busy and happy life.

The lesson is this: seek a broader life; don't let any one thing monopolize your time and attention; give your business the attention it deserves, but make yourself better fitted to conduct it by broadening your life and thereby your mind and your capacity.

Stedman was not only a poet and author of wide culture and much achievement, but he was also a successful banker. He was so much of a success as a poet that he ranks as one of the last of the old school of American poets but by no means one of the least. He was so much of a success as a banker that he was comfortably situated all his life, and died far from poor. He has said: "At 30 I went into the stock exchange because I needed to be independent in order to write and study." He remained in the stock exchange all his life, and was successful there; yet he found time to be a broad and cultured and wholesome poet as well; he found time to live the large, free life of thought and culture.

Too many men give room in their lives to but one thing. If it is their business, they make it fill their lives and crowd out everything else, even though that means crowding out everything that is really worth while. No business man can find excuse for failure to let into his life the light and uplift of books, music, art, clean recreation. No man can afford to crowd these things out of his life. They are just as necessary as his daily bread. If he lacks bread, he starves; if he lacks books, he starves again; but when he starves from lack of bread it is only his body that dies, while if he starves from lack of mental nourishment it is mind and soul that die.

The average man of business dreads retirement, and continues at his labors until he drops in the traces, because he has no resource but business. There is a vast world of delights and pleasures outside of business, if he would only open his eyes and see them. A man who has grown in all directions instead of in only one may look forward to retirement from business with pleasure, because with him the choice is not between idleness and business cares. In the world of books and art and music; in the world of out-of-doors with its million miracles of growth and birth and resurrection of plant life out of seeming death, there is plenty to occupy his mind and to make life interesting and beautiful.

The man who throws himself body and soul into business is serving himself and forgetting the vast pleasure and true happiness to be found in serving others. By cultivating the neglected side of his mind he could enlarge his outlook upon life, develop beauties and interests hitherto unsuspected, and find a thousand pleasures in the world about him that he overlooks when he lets business circumscribe his life and mind.

THE CZAR.

It is very pleasant to note that somebody has had the courage to stand up on the floor of the house of representatives and tell Speaker Cannon what people think of him.

Yesterday Representative Shackelford of Missouri, in a speech on the floor of the house, said that Speaker Cannon is the "ablest, boldest champion of autocracy in this age;" that "he exercises a greater despotism than exists in any monarchy of Europe;" that before any bill can pass its author must bend his body forward in proper pose, fold his hands, and say: "Oh Lord, Uncle Joe, thy will be done, not mine." Mr. Shackelford protested against this one-man power as in violation of the law, and urged the members to "break down this autocracy in order that the people's representatives may do the things they want done."

Now Mr. Shackelford's attack may have been actuated by politics, but it is timely, and a loud burst of applause will follow across the continent the news that he made it.

It is doubtful if Speaker Cannon and the Republican leaders by whose acquiescence his power is continued fully realize what the people of the country are thinking about his czar-like absolutism. The people favor the enactment of certain laws in their interest, and find themselves balked and their representatives bound and gagged by the power of the speaker, who says that these measures shall not go through. It is little wonder, in view of the wide knowledge of the condition in which the house of representatives has unhappily put itself, that there are widespread mutterings against the autocratic rule of Cannon, the czar.

The house, with its four hundred members sitting in helpless awe, rendered impotent and useless by the arbitrary power of one man, presents one of the most shameful and pitiful pictures in the history of government. Yet the house continues not only to tolerate this ancient satrap of the big interests, but to return him to his place of power time after time.

The people might be content with a czar who wielded his power in their interest; but they will not always tolerate a despot whose power is invariably used in behalf of those great interests whose prosperity is attained at bitter cost to the people.

Pretty soon it will occur to somebody to propose that no congressman be returned to office who will not solemnly pledge himself before the people to do his share in throwing out the American czar and the despotic rules that give him his absolute power.

That is the way to attack this modern tyranny, which would lead to riot and revolution if it were exerted by the ruler of any civilized country in the world.

Puzzle: Why is a candidate with no issue but a dead one?

HOTEL GOSSIP.

The La Tours are reunited.

It was indeed a joyous scene when Felix and Mose La Tour did the Corsican brother act and fell into each other's arms at the Lenox hotel. For twenty-five long years they have not looked upon each other's face. During all this time they have been nursing up memories of each other, and when they met yesterday the pent-up feeling had a regular Gallic outburst. It takes the French to put on the affectionate fireworks, anyway, and the way the La Tour brothers delighted the natives with their twenty-minute affectionate act was good to behold.

Mose La Tour has lived in Duluth for the past twenty-five years. Felix has journeyed from Montreal. There is another brother, but neither of the La Tours can spell the name in English, and as their pronunciation permits of three ways of misusing the name of the absent brother, it is, perhaps, best not to attempt to use his name. He has been absent for forty-one years, and when he bursts into the range of the waiting brothers' eyes, he will receive a welcome that will put any regular everyday greeting in the shade.

Both of the brothers possess a shrug that would be worth a lot of money to the New York matchmakers. It is only when they attempt to deal with the English language that they become confused and perplexed. Let them tell you about the brothers' reunion in the French language and you would have one of the nicest pictures imaginable of the ties that bind, but to attempt to take notes when the two brothers are telling in the native tongue of their long separation an dthe joy of meeting, is quite useless.

Mose started in the woods here twenty-five years ago. Like John D. Rockefeller, he worked hard. His brother started here, also, but later deserted our friendly clime for the allurements of Canada. Then during the long period of struggling they never had the inspiration of each other's presence. While Mose was carving out a future here, Felix was doing his best up in Montreal. Then finally came the time when the brothers were to meet. It sure was a joyous occasion, and yesterday when the train pulled into the depot, with Felix defying the elements and daring grip and penumonia to do its worst by sticking his head out of the window, Mose did a little shuffle, out of pure delight, and grabbed him with a clutch that would have been misinterpreted by a total stranger. Then they went over to the Lenox, and in the sacred loneliness of a room told each other of the doings that had transpired during the twenty-five years they had been apart. Then they went down into the lobby and told everybody they met of the excessive joy they were enjoying. Indeed, the brother act was the occasion for quite a celebration at the Lenox yesterday afternoon.

The La Tours will hang together—that is, be with each other for at least a week. They expect the other brother, who has been away from family ties for the past forty-one years, and when the joy duet is changed into a trio of mutual love and admiration, you can bet that the doings of the three La Tours will make that graphic story of the Corsican brothers look like a description or the recital of the financial report of a civic league. They are lovingly preparing for the arrival of the long-absent brother.

A traveling man at the St. Louis was telling of a dream he had the night before last. He dreamt he went to heaven. He was given a chance to look the place over, and taking full advantage of the kind offer, made a complete tour of the place.

Everything seemed fine. They had guides to show him around and everyone seemed inclined to be sociable and no want to put him wise to the things he didn't understand. Everything went fine until 5 o'clock, when he looked around for a newspaper. The sheet they handed him didn't contain any news, and the news it did contain wasn't played upon or elaborated. In fact, he was very much disappointed in the press of heaven.

When he rejoined St. Peter at the gate, he told him of the poor newspapers. He spoke right out about it.

"Well, you see," replied St. Peter, by way of explanation, "we are handicapped because we never receive any newspaper men up here."

THE WEATHER.

More good weather. This morning, though it was a little cloudy, it was pleasant and the temperature was moderate. Last night's lowest temperature was 14 degs. and yesterday's highest was 22 degs. above zero. The weather man expects generally fair weather tonight and tomorrow, without much change in temperature.

A year ago today it was very cold, a temperature of 14 degs. below zero the night before being helped out by a biting, searching northwest wind.

The sun rose this morning at 7:41 and set tonight at 5, making 9 hours and 19 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "A chain of low pressure areas extending from New England states across the upper lake region to Saskatchewan caused light snow or rain during Friday or last night in North Atlantic states and Northern Michigan and somewhat warmer weather in the lake region, Ohio and Mississippi valleys and western gulf states. Another low pressure condition over California is causing rain there and in Nevada and Utah. The barometer is high over Florida and Washington. A slight rise in pressure in the Red River valley is attended by slightly colder weather in that section and the Eastern Dakotas. Indications favor generally fair weather in this locality tonight and Sunday with not very much change in temperature."

Diabolo.

How do you perch the bobbin on the string
Before you send it skyward with a perk?
How the diabolo do you get the thing
To work?

Last night I practiced for an hour or so
Until a difference of opinion led
To the diabolo skulking in below
The bed.

I caught it twice—once off my looking glass,
And once it got entangled with my ear;
We're needing three new mantles in my gasolier.

I could admire the creature's graceful waltz
Did it reverse with less unholy glee;
I can't forgive its cowardly assaults
On me.

Are not its fascinations mostly sham?
Do its exponents really find the fun
Worth all the loss of temper and the damage done?

Next year its name will be anathema;
The present cry will in a month or so
Be changed to "Au diabao with diabolo."

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

The Things That Really Matter.

A young woman artist submitted a design to a periodical. After due consideration the design was returned with a courteous note, suggesting wherein it was defective. Instead of being disheartened, the girl tried again and when returning the modified design to the editor, wrote as follows: "Papa used to try to train us to look below the surface to the essential things beneath that really mattered, and sometimes the reason why a design is not accepted gives me an idea I could not have learned in any other way. I don't think that any artist who really loves her work can afford to neglect an honest criticism from anyone who has had experience."

Wise father! Fortunate daughter! What better thing can a parent do for a child than to teach him to care for the big things of life and to brush aside as he would gnats and flies the non-essential things that might easily become nuisances and burdens. A prolific source of trouble is the disposition to magnify trifles. I have seen a breakfast table transformed from a peaceful company into warring camps over an issue which, when simmered down to its real proportions, could hardly be seen with the naked eye. It may have been as small a matter as the question whether a certain neighbor wore a fish or a derby hat on the previous Sunday. I have known communities to be equally excited over as diminutive an issue as to whether the school teacher ought to choose her own boarding place, or to accept the place to which the authorities assigned her. I have known churches almost rent in twain over the question of introducing new hymn books, or changing the hour of a certain service. And I have known multitudes of individual lives that have grown narrow, weak and crabbed because they got into the habit of confusing the non-essential with the essential, the trivial with the important, the temporal with the eternal. After all, the things that do not matter are pretty inconsequential besides the things that do matter. For example:

Clothes and food do not matter. Of course, we must dress decently and in good taste, and we must have a sufficiency of substantial, palatable food. But the frills and the fancy dishes are not worth enough to justify spending long days over them. Imagine Socrates, or Marcus Aurelius, or Emerson, or any other great sould much concerned over the size of his wardrobe or the number of courses at dinner. Recognition on the part of others does not matter. No one need despise popularity, provided it has not been attained at the sacrifice of one's conviction, but if we happen to be left out of this or that evening company, or if nobody pays any attention to the good things we think we have done, why should we sulk or fume?

Whether or not we have our own way does not matter. The proper ongoing of the universe does not depend on our little schemes and ambitions coming to their realization. We may stake a good deal on them and believe it would be vastly better for the home, the neighborhood, the church, the state if they were carried out, but maybe we have a distorted view of our own importance.

What does matter then? Our work matters much. It is of supreme importance that we should do the day's assignment faithfully and cheerfully.

Friends matter. We must have a few who trust and love us, in whom we may confide, for whom we may give ourselves unsparingly, with no thought of reward other than the deepening of the friendship.

A pure soul matters infinitely. Somehow we must make our Ego as fine and true as possible. The trappings of life will drop off in due time, one by one, but God and our souls remain. What joy to be able to say then, and to be able also to say now:

"I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul."

ABORIGINAL PORTO RICANS

Appearance, Mental and Moral Traits, Political Systems and Customs of Americans Who Ruled West Indies Before Columbus Came.

Washington, Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the culture of the aboriginal inhabitants of Porto Rico was derived from South America rather than from Yucatan in Central America, or from Florida, is but one of the interesting conclusions drawn by Dr. J. Walter Fewkes of the bureau of American ethnology of the Smithsonian institution, in a memoir appended to a recently published report of that bureau.

Dr. Fewkes, not very long after the acquisition of Porto Rico by this country, was assigned to find out all he could about the first inhabitants of that island. He spent several seasons in the field, not only gathering early documents, and unearthing objects of primitive Indian culture, but studying the men now living on the mountains and other out of the way places least affected by civilization. He brought back with him collections which nearly doubled the number of specimens already in the United States National museum.

The memoir, embodying the results of extensive research, gives an authoritative picture of the men who wandered on the shores of Porto Rico and the neighboring islands before Columbus brought over the first representatives of European culture. Here are a few extracts:

Thickly Populated.

"The Europeans who first landed on these shores of Porto Rico reported the island to be densely people. The early Spanish voyagers state that the population was distributed over the whole island, but that it was thickly settled in the littoral tracts and along the banks of rivers. It has been estimated that the population was $200,000, probably too large a number, though a conservative estimate would still make prehistoric Porto Rico a populous island.

"Frequent wars and epidemics, however, rapidly decimated them after their discovery, while a system of repartimientos, or division of them as slaves among the Spaniards, speedily diminished still further the number of the natives, so that the race was practically exterminated in a few years. Before their extinction, Indians were brought to Porto Rico from neighboring islands, and Kongo Africans were introduced from across the ocean."

Appearance of Natives.

As to the appearance of these natives Dr. Fewkes quotes from a very early account:

"The Caribbeans are a handsome, well-shaped people, of a smiling countenance, middle stature, having broad shoulders; their mouths are not over large, and their teeth are perfectly white and close. True it is their complexion is of an olive color, naturally; their foreheads and noses are flat, not naturally, but by artifice, for their mothers crush them down at their birth, and later, imagining it a kind of beauty and perfection. They have large and thick feet, because they go barefoot, but they are withal, so hard that they defy wood and rocks. They are great lovers of cleanliness, bathing every day; are generous and hospitable. Like many natives, they eradicate the beard and the hair on other parts of the body, and they compress the skulls of the new-born infants, dyeing their bodies with 'rocou,' which makes them red all over."

Mental and Moral Traits.

He continues:

"Of the mental and moral traits of the ancient Borinquenos, or natives, we may form a good judgment from early records. A sense of justice and traits of heroism, admirable in any race, were strong among the people and widely spread. No one who reads the Spanish records, which can hardly be called prejudicial in favor of the aborigines, can deny that these Indians were both hospitable and generous. Regarding the Europeans as a race of supernatural beings, they received them with kindness, until forced to do otherwise in order to defend their own lives and those of their families. Several accounts tell of how theft was regarded as a crime and severely punished.

"In the social organization of the aboriginal West Indians there was a clan chief called by the Spaniards a cacique, who exercised the function of a leader in peace and war and often served also as priest. The political was closely knit with the religious leadership, and the caciques apparently performed both functions. The word cacique was applied to any leader or chief of the Indians, being used in an indefinite way by the early Spaniards. Authority over the Indians, both secular and religious, was vested in chiefs of apparently different grades, as heads of clans, chiefs of phratries, rulers of provinces, and even, it is said, a king, supreme ruler of the whole island.

"Descent among the Borinquenos was in the female line, and their names, of which the son of a cacique had several, were given in a ceremony that occurred immediately after birth. Such names as 'Heavenly,' 'Highness,' 'Bright One,' were borne by some of the chiefs, whom it was customary to address by all their titles.

Marriage Customs.

"Comparatively little is known of the marriage customs of the aboriginal native Porto Ricans, and it commonly stated that the wives were treated as slaves. There is every reason to believe that the caciques were polygamous, also that certain of the women exercised considerable power in the government of the island. Their marriage ceremonies were celebrated with dances called 'areitos.'

"It is mentioned that in the betrothal of the caciques, the would-be husband was wont to send his principal man to the maid's father, asking for the daughter as wife and companion for life. In some sections of the island he sometimes sent with his embassy presents of food or game. It was customary, after the father had promised his daughter to the cacique, for the latter to accompany the messengers to the father and determine the amount of the dowry of the bride. On his return he sent a present to the father of the girl every day for a month, and when that time had passed he again went to the father to receive the bride, who had been shut up in a specially prepared apartment where no one could see her but the children who brought her food.

"When the groom had given the father all the dower he had promised, the bride's hair was cut as a sign that she had become a matron and had lost her liberty by marriage. Among the common people the would-be husband worked out the dowry of his bride by becoming the servant of her father, as Jacob served Laban for Rachel and Leah.

Religion.

"From the available historical material it may be supposed that the ancient Antilleans believed in two great supernatural beings called 'zemis,' that were parents of all others. These may be known as earth goddess and sky god, or personifications of the magic power of earth and sky. One was male, the other female, and from them originated all minor gods, men and animals; but neither of these parents created the universe, which was supposed always to have existed. These two first parents were symbolized by idols, made of stone, wood or clay, to which the Indians addressed prayers and in the presence of which they performed rites for the well-being of the human race.

"The 'zemis' were supposed to have prophetic powers and were consulted by the caciques and common people through the medium of priests.

"After a death a fire was made by rubbing two sticks together, the act being connected in an esoteric way with the perpetuation of the life of the deceased. Some of the dead they took out of the house, others were left within, placing the corpse in a hammock with water and bread. In both classes the house was deserted and shunned by the relatives. They believed that after death the deceased went to a valley where the ancestors lived and where they would have plenty to eat and all kinds of pleasure.

"When a cacique died, one of his wives was sometimes buried alive with the corpse, bowls of water and food, such as cassava bread and fruits, being placed with her in the grave. For from fifteen to twenty days after burial the relatives and other persons, both male and female, sang dirges over the grave, and caciques of the neighboring territory came to do honor to the deceased. The family divided the property among the strangers who recited dirges and songs commemorative of the important events in the life of the dead man, telling of the battles he had fought and of other worthy deeds, the mortuary songs being accompanied by the dances."

In conducting his researches Dr. Fewkes gathered a number of interesting legends of the early people. He was also able to draw many conclusions from the examination of considerably over 1,000 idols, stones, utensils, ceremonial objects, etc., representing the early culture of the island. Some of these he unearthed himself from caves, shell heaps, and burial mounds; others were purchased or presented to the United States National museum for study and exhibition purposes.

In looking at their culture as a whole he believes it to be much more similar to that found in South America than to the culture of other adjacent lands. Geologically the islands are so made that at some time there may well have been land connection with that continent along which the first men reached what is now Porto Rico.

BRADFORD SENTENCED

Unfortunate Physician is Sent to State Penitentiary.

Convicted on Charge of Stealing Two Suits of Clothes.

"Doc" Bradford, who was yesterday convicted of the charge of grand larceny in the second degree, was sentenced by Judge Cant to the state penitentiary at Stillwater on the reformatory plan. Under this arrangement Bradford's term is indeterminate, and will depend to a certain extent on his behavior.

According to the information of the state, Bradford stole two suits of clothes from a West end clothing store, and pawned them under an assumed name. Bradford admitted that he pawned the clothes, but claimed they had been giving him by a colored man called "Al." He could not produce the alleged colored man as a corroborative witness. Bradford's condition illustrates the depths that a person will fall who becomes addicted to the use of drugs. A few years ago the defendant was a practicing physician in the town of Salem, S. D., and was prospering. He began taking morphine, in small doses, and before he realized it was a slave to the habit. Bradford worked for a time in a doctor's office in Lincoln, Neb., and took an alleged "cure" at Minneapolis, but it failed to eradicate his craving for the drug.

Bradford drifted to Superior, where he spent considerable time in the workhouse for vagrancy and drunkenness, and finally came to Duluth, where he has nad about the same experience.

Bradford comes from an excellent family, and his relatives have done all that they could to set him right. It is believed that a term in the penitentiary will be a good thing for the defendant; that he may, with proper treatment, be gradually broken of the morphine habit.

UNIFORM RANK OF ODDFELLOWS

Holds Annual Installation of Officers at Its Hall.

The most brilliant installation of the season was that of Canton North Star, No. 14 P. M.—I. O. O. F., Thursday evening at Odd Fellows' hall.

This annual event is of more than usual interest as the patriarch militant is the highest degree in Odd Fellowship and comprises the uniform rank.

GEORGE M. PETERSON, Commandant.

Col. William Street of Minneapolis from the department of Minnesota, accompanied by a representative staff of the department, reviewed for inspection purposes the canton in its various workings, after which he proceeded with the ceremony of installation and the following officers were with military honors installed into their respective offices for the ensuing term of one year:

Commandant, George M. Peterson; lieutenant, W. J. McFadden; ensign, David Frame; clerk, John Gillis; accountant, R. E. McFarlane.

A banquet in honor of the colonel was then attended and the rest of the evening very pleasantly spent.

The colonel was at one time very closely associated with this canton and complimented very heartily its condition relative to manual and ritualistic work, also as to membership and equipment, it being the best at the Head of the Lakes and very active.

During the evening a notice was received by the canton of the appointment of past commander, A. H. Paul of this canton to the officer of major of the First Battalion, Department of Minnesota, with headquarters in Duluth.

The major will remain with this canton.

A. H. PAUL.

Twin City & Lake Superior Railway Co.

What Has Been Accomplished In 1907 and What Will Be Done In 1908.

On March 1st, 1907, TWIN CITY & LAKE SUPERIOR RAILWAY COMPANY was incorporated, being therefore ten months old; and we feel a pardonable pride in presenting at this time a brief summary of what has been accomplished in the past ten months, together with a forecast for the calendar year now beginning.

Within thirty days from the incorporation, this company had assumed the task of financing its first effort,—the building of a direct line double track railway from the Twin Cities to the head of the lakes and the plan was adopted of offering stock in the enterprise to the general public, welcoming the investor, both large and small, to participate in the building and to share in the profits. The idea and the plan, carefully worked out and legally anchored, was such a radical departure from accepted methods of financing railway enterprises that at first many well meaning friends were disposed to doubt its practicability.

Another class, far sighted enough to see the future power to come with an awakening of the small investor to his golden opportunities by co-operation with other tens of thousands of his class, farmers and wage earners, in the development of this middle northwest and in the ownership of public utilities of commerce and transportation, were quick to condemn and disprove, prompted by personal motives, the plans, the managers and even the necessity for the building of this road; this latter in opposition to cumulated testimony of the best minds credited with knowing the transportation problem in the northwest as it is today and without taking into account the necessity of the future under the present rapid growth and expansion.

Opposed, however, to these two classes, many hundred of people here at home in Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, many in Iowa, Illinois, Michigan and even far off British Columbia, Washington, California, Arizona, Texas, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and North Carolina; in fact from nearly every state, were quick to see the project and to join hands for its accomplishment and for their personal betterment and profit, so that today, seven and a half months since our first offering of the stock, nearly two thousand people are shareholders in this enterprise or are carrying installment payment contracts for the purchase of shares, and the cash paid and due upon installment contracts is $400,000.00, an extraordinary showing, we say, of public confidence.

And when it is remembered that during the last three months of this period, months when under normal conditions money is most plentiful in the northwest, the shadow of a money panic has spread its gloom over all business and it required a grocer's or a butcher's affidavit attached to a check to accomplish the withdrawal of funds from banks and savings institutions; our success, under such conditions, we assert to our critics, you must seek a better explanation for than by charging it to our smoothness or the public ignorance. A GOOD PLAN, SQUARELY PRESENTED, CAPABLY MANAGED and CONSERVATIVELY EXECUTED—Look for the reasons why we are successful under some of these heads.

So much for the financial end in 1907, and now for what has been done in construction to this date when the season has about closed for active construction. The engineering is complete, the grades determined, the stakes driven, the bridges located, the cost of the complete work is known, the right-of-way secured from Minneapolis to Superior, (the distance under 130 miles) better than thirty miles of roadway is ready for the rails and best of all, $200,000 of the subscribed funds are unexpended and in hand to push the construction in 1908, a showing and a record so remarkable that we do not hesitate to extend congratulations upon it to the railway company, its officers and its each and every stockholder.

FOR 1908

During the seven and a half months of 1907 that we have been offering this stock to the public, we have always held fast to one idea or principle, one that is directly opposed to the opinion and judgment of some of our critics,—we have based our appeal on the theory that the public was neither ignorant nor gullible. We have asked for confidence and co-operation on a straightforward presentation of facts and figures and a plan so fully matured, a foundation so well laid, that we have not had to back up an inch or change front on even a minor detail. Our advertising has been carefully edited with the result that not a single public or private, written or printed statement made at any time but what can be repeated and successfully defended today.

As a general result of all this we are becoming better known, we are retaining our old friends and making new ones every day. We begin 1908 with two hundred thousand dollars of the capital assembled in 1907 unexpended and ready for the beginning of operations in spring and we confidently expect this construction fund to expand to the point that by May 1st, 1908, we shall have not less than $500,000 in actual cash in hand.

During 1907 we made three special points in offering this stock: FIRST, the merit of the proposition; SECOND, the low price of the stock and the daily progress of the work; THIRD, the guarantee on every certificate to redeem each share at its full par value by its acceptance at $100 in the payment of transportation charges over any portion of the line in operation. All of these are equally strong and potent for 1908 and have gained strength and convincing force with each day and each yard of dirt moved, and now, with the beginning of this year, we add a guarantee that must disarm the last doubting Thomas.

Western Promotion & Improvement Company owns THREE MILLION DOLLARS worth of real estate, agricultural and timber lands along the "ARROW LINE" in Minnesota and Wisconsin. We have made arrangements with this company and other interests that we may guarantee to every Twin City & Lake Superior Railway Company stockholder that Western Promotion & Improvement Co. will accept his Twin City & Lake Superior Railway Co. stock at its FULL MARKET VALUE, ADVERTISED BY US, as cash in payment for LANDS, high class lands—CHEAP TOO—and one price to all, whether bought with stock or with cash. This means then that if you buy stock today at $42, you may exchange it into land tomorrow at exactly what you paid for it and get a WARRANTY DEED. If you hold the stock until July 1st, you may turn it in AS CASH then in the purchase of lands at the then selling price which will probably be near $60 per share and which is GUARANTEED to be above what it is today. And to stockholders who bought in 1907, at whatever price, it means they can exchange their stock today at $42 for lands and the longer they hold it the more they get for it. Asked today then what guarantee is there that this road will be built, WHO IS BEHIND IT, we can answer as we have in 1907,—the merit of the proposition and the good judgment of the small investor, but we may now add, THREE MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF REAL PROPERTY—LAND—that the people want and are buying every day, more than enough in amount to completely build and equip every mile of this road and put it in operation. What better guarantee could be offered and what further excuse can you offer for neglecting to invest in some of these shares now at $42? You are guaranteed a profit of nearly 150 per cent on your investment when the stock reaches par as it does with the completion of the road and until that time your stock will advance from 4 to 10 per cent a month and you can cash it at the advanced price in land any time you choose. In view of these facts and guarantees then, we are making a conservative prediction when we say every share of Twin City & Lake Superior Railway Company stock will be sold and off the market by December 31st, 1908, and we believe much sooner. Ask the Croaker who cheerfully assails the honesty of act and purpose of every one but himself where the freeze-out of any one's interest comes in in this proposition.

During the winter activities will be transferred to the north end where right-of-way clearing will be done and a considerable force employed getting out ties, piling and timbers and delivering same on the right-of-way. As soon after April 1st as the season will permit, grading will begin again and be pushed vigorously with a large force all along the line to the townsite of Montgomery on Clam River, which it is planned to reach on July 4th. By December 31st, 1908, it is confidently expected the steel will be laid well up into Pine County and if present plans for work on the extreme north end mature, they will here meet the rails laid south from the G. N. crossing east of Foxboro, Wisconsin.

BANISH SLOT MACHINES.

Saloonkeepers' Organization Takes Reform Step of Own Accord.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Music and slot machines will disappear next week from 5,000 Chicago saloons by order, not of the police, but of officials of the saloonkeepers' organization. Closer observance of the Sunday closing ordinance also has been commanded, and drawn shades and unlighted windows advised for Sunday.

At a directors' meeting of the Chicago Liquor Dealers' Protective association yesterday, the decision to banish music and slot machines came after an earnest plea of several officials. The activity of State's Attorney Healy in the Sunday closing cases, and the work of the No-License and Chicago Law and Order leagues, were declared to precede a saloon upheaval if close observance was not paid to the law.

"ANGEL" DENNETT DEAD.

California Man, Once Worth $500,000, Dies in Poverty.

Stockton, Cal., Jan. 25.—Alfred W. Dennett, known throughout the country as "Angel" Dennett, who amassed a fortune through a chain of lunch rooms in many of the larger cities, died here Thursday. At one time reputed to be worth more than $500,000, he died poor, a victim of financial enterprises that were impelled by religious enthusiasm.

WIFE MUST CHOOSE.

Hough Gives Her Ten Days to Make a Decision.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 25.—"Whom shall it be, John Cottrell or Alonzo Hough?"

That is the question which Hough, a carpenter, husband of Representative Cottrell's affinity, has put to his wife upon discovering a burning love letter written to Mrs. Hough by Cottrell, who was thought to have renounced his affinity forever.

And now Hough has given his wife ten days in which to make up her mind. She must choose between husband and affinity.

"If you decide to stick to Cottrell, then by the eternal gods I shall see that Cottrell sticks to you," Hough has said.

Thus the Cottrell-Hough affinity scandal has taken a turn even more sensational than those which have gone before.

The finding of the telltale letter has again put this remarkable affair in a turmoil. For the letter was written after Mrs. Cottrell had withdrawn her petition for divorce, and after it had been announced that the Cottrells and the Houghs had been full reconciled.

It begun "dearie brown eyes,' and as he read Hough seemed to see that Cottrell and his wife were playing with him. He began an investigation. He found that the affinities had been corresponding regularly. And he threatened to start ault against Cottrell for the alienation of Mrs. Hough's affections. He also discovered that Cottrell has given Mrs. Hough a residence property worth $5,000.

FIVE MURDERS

Charged to Montana Man, Saved From Mob by Officers.

Lewistown, Mont., Jan. 25.—Sheriff Edward Martin and party returned yesterday from the Musselshell, bringing with them Ole Nordell, who is charged with the murder of Mrs. Fred Slatter and her four children a few days ago.

The evidence against Nordell is of such a nature that persons residing in the vicinity of the crime, were so firmly convinced of the man's guilt that he doubtless would have been lynched had not the officers taken him away at once.

Nordell's infatuation for the eldest Slatter girl, 15 years old, is looked upon as having a possible bearing on the case. The bodies of three of the children were almost entirely destroyed. All that was left of the mother's body was the trunk, which was badly charred. The body of the fourth child was in about the same condition as that of the mother.

The officers say coal oil was freely used to accomplish the destruction of the bodies, and those who witnessed a part of the fire say it burned fiercely.

Nordell is a Scandinavian about 40 years old, and formerly resided near White Sulphur Springs. His wife's death and burial several months ago gave rise to some suspicion at the time. The jury promptly recommended that he be held.

Disturbed the Congregation.

The person who disturbed the congregation last Sunday by continually coughing is requested to buy a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. "Sold by all druggists."

MICHELET RESIGNS.

John R. Howard to be Superintendent at White Earth.

Washington, Jan. 25—Simon Michelet, United States superintendent of White Earth reesrvation, resigned his position, and is to be succeeded by John R. Howard of Sauk Center. The resignation of Mr. Michelet was not unexpected, as he has, it is stated, been anxious to quit the reservation for some time. Several years ago attempts were made to have him removed, but Mr. Michelet at that time exposed a scheme of certain Wisconsin lumbermen to defeat him.

J. R. Howard, who succeeds him, was a member of the Minnesota legislature for sveral years, and a prominent candidate for speaker at one time. He was indorsed by both Senators Nelson and Clapp.

WOMEN BEGIN CAMPAIGN FOR "A CLEANER DULUTH"

Will Push Prosecutions of Violators of the City Ordinances.

Two Important Measures Which They Will See Are Enforced.

"A cleaner, better and brighter Duluth" is the object toward which the civic committee of the Women's Council is working and indirectly through them every club woman of the city. In spite of their disappointment in not having it possible for the voters of the community to vote for the reorganization of the health board at the next election, the women are going forward to do what is possible under existing conditions. The following report was made during the week by the committee of the council:

"It is a great disappointment to the women of the council who have worked so hard for cleaner streets in Duluth that the amendments to the city charter will not be voted on at the coming election, but the women will do all in their power to see that the present laws are enforced.

"The women of the civic committee of the Woman's Council feel that public sentiment should be kept stirred up about this matter of cleaning and keeping clean our streets, avenues, alleys and sidewalks, and that every man, woman and child in our city should co-operate with the city council and work for this object, and that our merchants should bend greater energy to clean their part of the sidewalks and rear alleys once a day and to provide receptacles for sweepings from their stores.

"To this end the civic committee of the Women's council submitted at the last meeting of that body the following resolutions, viz:

"Be it resolved, That every woman in our council constitute herself a committee of one to see that the ordinances No. 31 and 81 of our city charter, in reference to cleaning the streets, sidewalks, premises, etc., be enforced; That should the residents and merchants fail to do their part of this work and such delinquents come under the eyes of the club women, that they report the names of offenders to this committee so that they may be able to investigate and report them to the proper authorities to be prosecuted.

"The names of offenders may be sent to the committee by postal card and it is not necessary to sign the informant's name."

That every one may be conversant with these ordinances that mean so much to the cleanliness of our city they are herewith appended.

Ordinance 31.

"Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to obstruct or encumber or cause to be obstructed or encumbered any sidewalk, street, avenue, alley, or any public landing or approach, thereto, or any public ground within the limits of the city of Duluth with any boxes, merchandise, lumber, wood, coal, or other material or substance whatever, or for any person to sweep, throw or otherwise place, or cause or allow to be swept, thrown or placed, from any building owned or occupied by him into any street or avenue; or into the gutter of any alley, any dust, sweepings, shavings, ashes or other refuse matter of any kind whatever.

Provided, that if the quantity of snow removed from the space occupied by said tracks, is not sufficient to obstruct or inconvenience public travel upon said highways, the same need not be removed.

"Section 6. Penalty. Any person violating any of the foregoing provisions of this ordinance shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of not less than two ($2) dollars nor more than twenty ($20) dollars, and the costs of prosecution; and shall be subject to imprisonment in the county jail or city prison for a term of not exceeding twenty days. And the foregoing penalties shall not be held to relieve him from paying the cost of removing said snow or sprinkling, as hereinbefore provided.

"The committee to whom the post cards of information may be sent is as follows: Miss Mary B. Statham, chairman, 2232 East First street; Mrs. James Dow Morrison, 2139 East Superior street; Mrs. I. P. Swangle, 10 South Fifty-eighth avenue west."

TO INTIMIDATE PROHIBITIONISTS

Bombs Exploded at the Homes of Workers at Girard, Ala.

Columbus, Ga., June 25.—Feeling between the members of the Law and Order league at Girard, Ala., and persons opposed to the prohibition laws, reached its height last night, when dynamite bombs were exploded in front of the residences of O. T. Gifford, president of the league, and two Girard ministers active in the league. No damage was done to persons or property.

The explosions followed the arrest of six men, three whites and three negroes, for violating the prohibition laws. The Law and Order league yesterday swore out eleven warrants on informations secured by a detective in the employ of the league.

Officers of the league express the opinion that the dynamite explosions were made to intimidate them. Friends of the anti-Prohibitionists declare that mischievous young men caused the explosions.

Girard is just across the river from Columbus, and the heavy explosions were heard there.

DON'T BLAME HER

For she cannot help it. Women are often cross, irritable, hysteric, and declare they are driven to distraction at the slightest provocation.

Men cannot understand why this should be so. To them it is a mystery because in nine times out of ten this condition is caused by a serious feminine derangement.

A remedy is necessary which acts directly upon the organs afflicted, restoring a healthy normal condition to the feminine system, which will quickly dispel all hysterical, nervous and irritable conditions. Such is

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

The following letter serves to prove this fact.

Mrs. Mattie Copenhaver, 315 So. 21st St., Parsons, Kans., writes:

"For two years I suffered from the worst forms of feminine ills, until I was almost driven frantic. Nothing but morphine would relieve me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me health and happiness and made me a well woman."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

THE STRANGE STORY OF PINE COP. BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

Pine Cop was a strangely shaped mountain. It reared itself in the midst of a beautiful valley. From its southern side flowed a sparkling stream, falling over rocks and precipices. From its northern side yawned deep canyons filled with ice and snow the year round. On its eastern and western sides grew verdure, fresh and green, almost reaching to the very top of the mountain. And all about this strange mountain stretched splendid valleys full of fields, broken here and there by forests almost impregnable, forests in which lurked all manner of wild bird and beast.

The people living in the valleys about Pine Cop looked with awe upon it, feeling in their hearts fear of the strange spectacle that forever loomed frowningly above them. And during the hundreds of years the man had made his home at the foot of Pine Cop none had ever explored the mysterious mountain to its top. A few brave hunters had gone into one or two of its deep canyons, but with the growing darkness and narrowness of the gorges had returned to the open land without having penetrated very far.

There was a legend which had been handed down for hundreds of years that once upon a time a wizard had been seen to pass through the town, which lay at the base of Pine Cop on its southern side, and to ascend the mountain, climbing beside the waterfalls. It was told of him that he had said to some of the villagers that he had suffered at the hands of one of their townsmen and that he was going to the top of Pine Cop to spend the remainder of his life, where he would plan his revenge on the offending citizen of their town. And soon after that, according to legend, terrible storms began to sweep down the mountain side and great avalanches slid upon the town, sometimes doing great damage to man and property.

And even to the day of which I write the inhabitants of the region of Pine Cop believed that the old man—or wizard, as most of them thought him to be—was still alive and wrecking his vengeance upon the hapless town and thereby upon the descendants of the one man who had offended or wronged him. Every time a storm broke over their heads they swore it was the effects of the evil wizard upon the top of Pine Cop. If a drouth killed their crops they blamed the Pine Cop dweller for their bad luck. Did a milk cow sicken, or a sheep die, they turned their eyes towards the top of Pine Cop and swore their threats against the wizard, whose evil influence was being used to their disadvantage.

Now, in the town lived a wheelwright, with an only child, a little son of some 12 summers old. The name of this child was Peter—his father and friends called him Pete. All day long Pete worked in his father's shop, for there was very little money to be made at the trade in their town, and the father could not afford to employ an assistant.

In the evenings Pete would sit beside the great blazing fire in the shop (he and his father lived in rooms attached to the shop) and listen to the wonderful legendary tales told by his father and chance friends who would drop in to chat and have a smoke beside the cheerful fireplace of the wheelwright. And long after the company had gone and his father had fallen asleep in his high-backed wooden settle beside the fire Pete would sit and dream of the strange stories he had heard, and would plan and plan on making a journey up to the very top of Pine Cop when he should become a man.

But a day soon came when Pete decided upon making the strange and perilous journey to Pine Cop's top. It happened in this way. Several very brave youths had gone hunting for squirrels in the woods that covered the lower portion of the eastern side of Pine Cop, and on their return to the village they reported that they heard strange sounds as of some human being in distress. And again they had heard laughter and singing. They had hurried home in fear, each boy having stranger and more weird tales to tell than those told by his fellows.

But as Pete listened the spirit of adventure outbalanced his feelings of fear, and he made up his mind to go into the woods whence the sounds of wails, songs and laughter had been heard—or reported to have been heard—by the young hunters. The time set for the journey was a day when work in the shop was lagging, and his father consented for him to take his gun and go hunting. Not a word of his plan had he spoken, for had he told his father that he intended going in search of the mysterious person or persons—or mayhap witches and wizards—who were responsible for the tales told by the young hunters, objections might have been raised to his plan, and his father's permission refused him.

It was a bright, cold January day on which Pete set out towards the place of mystery. He entered the wood, traversed the old familiar paths made by the village hunters, then crossed the stream which had always been the huntman's boundary line dividing him from dangerous territory. Once on the opposite side—the up-mountain side—Pete cocked his gun and walked cautiously, peering ahead of him into the deep wood which grew on undisputed ground, for according to legend the wizard's realm extended downward to this spot.

Pete kept his ears and eyes wide open, expecting to hear strange sounds and to see strange sights. But after a whole hour's hard climbing his expectations gave way to fatigue, for nothing save the wild woods about him had he seen and nothing save the sounds of the wind in the bare branches had he heard. Being overcome by his weariness he dropped down beside a great boulder and fell into a deep sleep. When he awoke the evening was falling about him and he could see that clouds covered the sky.

He had uncovered what resembled a human skull.

Quickly getting on his feet, Pete took up his gun and determined to return home as fast as he possibly could. But in turning down the mountain side he heard a rumble; then the earth trembled beneath his feet and he fell to the ground. At once he thought of the old wizard, and feared that he was about to kill him. He scrambled to his feet again, got his gun and looked about him. A strange roaring noise was still filling his ears and still he could feel a quiver of the earth beneath his feet, but both sound and motion were growing less with each second. Pete turned about, facing the downward way, when to his utter amazement—and fear, too—he beheld a sight that quite took his breath away. In front of him, and covering a large space, the ground had fallen away, carrying boulders and trees with it. A terrible avalanche had just rolled away from him. He had been on its very edge, had felt its quiver as it separated itself from the steep side of the mountain. Pete stood transfixed, staring in the semidarkness at the horrible ravage wrought in the side of old Pine Cop. And his path homeward had been changed by the avalanche! Now he must turn about and find his way down the mountain at another point. He chose the side of the avalanche, which would lead him to the village most directly. It was a rugged way, leading through a canyon and beside a dangerous precipice. But there was no other way open for Pete, and he took a fresh grip on courage and set forth, his gun over his shoulder. Somehow, he felt no fear of unnatural happening. Having advanced up the mountain to this point without meeting anything that smacked of wizards or witches, he began to doubt the stories told by the villagers of the dangers that had lurked there for hundreds of years—dangers that had made all men such cowards that they feared to pass beyond a certain boundary line that cut them off from the top of mysterious Pine Cop's summit.

But the growing darkness soon made it impossible for Pete to see his way, and he feared that he might be forced to seek shelter for the night under the protecting edge of some projecting boulder. True, it would not be so snug and warm as his own bed in the little room opening from the big fire-warmed shop. But his apprehension was not for himself; it was for his father, who would be so anxious at his little son's prolonged absence.

The wind had risen as the darkness fell, and Pete decided to look about for some sort of shelter made by Nature. He was on the edge of a deep gorge, and followed it for a few paces in the hope of finding a sheltering rock. Pretty soon there loomed before him a dark mass, something not so large as his father's shop, but much larger than any boulder he had yet seen on the side of Pine Cop. He made straight for it, hoping to find a place snug from wind and threatening snow. To his great surprise he found the dark mass to be a rude stone hut, with a small door facing the south. Pete stopped beside the entrance—which was without a shutter—and knocked against the stone step with the butt of his gun. There was no response from within, so Pete made bold to enter the hut. All was darkness and silence within. Pete felt about him, discovering a sort of stone table and bench in one corner and a fireplace nearby. As his eyes became accustomed to the darkness he made out the interior of this odd place quite distinctly. In another corner of the room was a mass of dark stuff which felt like leaf-mold. It had evidently been a bed of leaves in the long, long ago.

Pete felt in his pockets to see if he had a few matches about him. He seldom set off without supplying himself with these necessary articles, and on this occasion found he had quite a handful of them snugly tucked away in his vest. "Oh, I'll soon have a fire to give me light and warmth," he said. Then he went out and gathered bits of bark and decaying tree branches that littered the ground near to a patch of pine trees. Soon the fuel was blazing in the stone chimney, throwing out light and warmth. Then Pete began to explore the hut. No sign of life was visible. No food was on the stone table, and no appearance that any had ever been there. Not even a handful of ashes was to be seen about the hearth. Evidently the one-time dweller in the place had been absent many, many years, for no traces of his having been there remained.

After he had become warm Pete went to the corner where the mass of leaf-mold lay. It had become so packed to earth that it was almost of the very soil. Pete dug into it with a stick. But what was that he dragged forth? He stared at it wildly, then leaped up and ran out of the cabin, almost too startled to think. He had uncovered what resembled a human skull. It had grinning teeth and eye sockets. After a while Pete became calm and his fear subsided. So he returned to the hut and looked a long time at the white, round thing which lay grinning at him. "I'll not be afraid of a thing that's dead," he declared bravely. "I only hope it's the old wizard who has been accused of wrecking all the mischief against our town. I'll carry this skull back home with me and show it to the people. My, won't their eyes bulge, though?"

Then he fell to digging in the bed of mold for other parts of the anatomy belonging to the skull, and soon he had almost the entire skeleton. Strange to say, Pete was no longer afraid of the uncanny bones as he dug them forth from the long-decayed mold. But while still digging for more relics of a human body his stick struck against something round and smooth. Pete went after the object with his hands and, extricating it from the soil that had buried it for so long, he saw by the firelight that he held an old pewter pot with a rust-tightened lid. With some difficulty he removed the lid and there, glistening in the firelight, were golden coins of a strange design. Pete hurried to the fireplace, that he might examine them more closely. On one of the coins he could make out a date about 150 years old. Ah, the owner of this hut had been a miser; possibly the very man that had passed through the village so long ago threatening vengeance against one of the townsmen of that day. And here he had lain dead, buried in his bed of decaying mold, with his treasure of gold beneath his head. The threat against the town had simply been a means of frightening the simple people of the time and preventing them from molesting him in his solitary mountain home. And here he had lived and hoarded. And, here was but lifeless bone left to whisper of flesh and blood. But the gold—it was as bright and precious as ever.

"And since there's no one to claim this pot of coins it is mine by right of discovery," said Pete. "Ah, if it's any good it will enable father and me to go away from the mean, slow little town at the foot of Pine Cop and to seek our fortunes in a better and more thriving place."

The next morning bright and early Pete set out for his home. As he entered the town he saw the streets filled with excited people. They saw him coming, and several ran to meet him. "Ah!" they cried. "Then you were not buried beneath the avalanche of last night! Your father is grieving in his shop, thinking you were killed. The avalanche came near to our town, damaging some sheepfolds at the foot of Pine Cop. Oh, it's that old wizard who is still seeking revenge on this town for some slight offense done him hundreds of years ago."

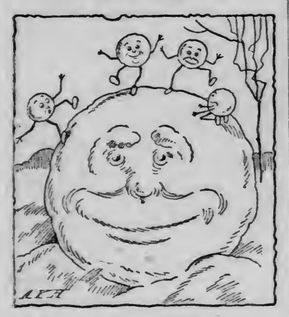

"Well, neighbors," said Pete, taking from the folds of his coat a human skull, "here's all that remains of the old wizard. And I have a pot of gold that is mine by right of discovery."

"Ah, my son, my son." And Pete looked about to see his own father coming to embrace him. "So you are found, my son. God be thanked!"

And all that day, and all that week, and all that month and year the people in the village at the foot of Pine Cop marveled at the discovery made up in Danger Canyon by little Pete, the wheelwright's son, and none dared to question his courage nor his right to the rich treasure of gold he had found in the old pewter pot. And when he and his father bade adieu to their old friends—for they were going away to seek their fortunes in a better place—Pete said laughingly to them:

"It was courage and love of adventure made me rich. Learn the lesson, my friends, and banish fear and superstition from your hearts. The man or boy who quakes and trembles at fairy tales and fears to go beyond a fixed boundary will remain ignorant and poor. You'd better all go to the top of Pine Cop. You may find another pot of gold at the summit. If not, you'll find nothing there to fear. Good-by, and be brave."

At the Ball.

It was the very loveliest time
The Snow Flakes ever had.
They went there with their good Mama
And their loving Dad.

The music it was splendid!
The crowd so jolly nice:
To see the way they frisked you'd think
They were not cold as ice.

Around about they fluttered,
To the music's call.
Oh, it was a grand affair
For 'twas a big snow ball.

Peeps into Places of Interest in Foreign Lands.

In St. Luke's Church (Chelsea Old Church, as it is commonly called) lies buried the remains of Sir Thomas More. Chelsea Old Church is one of the most interesting relics of old London. It has suffered little at the hands of time and has never been "restored." On its walls hang relics rich in historical interest, and beneath its floors of masonry lie sleeping many world-famed men and women—personages who made and sometimes marred the history of their time.

To the east of the south aisle is the little chapel built by Sir Thomas More in the year 1520. Inside the chancel he had erected in 1532 a tomb to the memory of himself and his two wives. In this tomb his headless body was placed long after his execution, for it had been buried in the chapel in the Tower as soon as it was carried from the scaffold. And beside him lie his two wives, Joan the first and the mother of his children. To her More was married more through a sense of justice than through love, for at the time of his betrothal to her he said: "Though his affection most served him to her younger sister, it would be a grief and some blemish to the eldest to have the younger sister preferred before her." His second wife was a widow at the time of their marriage. Her name was Mrs. Alice Middleton.

Impertinent Piggie.

Said the little Piggie
To the tall Giraffe:
What a rubberer you are!
How you make me laugh.

"Is the weather very fine
In the clouds so high?
Do you see rare sights up there
In the distant sky?"

Tall Giraffe did slowly bend
Forward his small head;
Then he opened wide his mouth,
And to Piggie said:

"Of the weather up so high
You shall judge, my dear."
And he stretched his neck and took
Small Piggie by the ear.

Up and up he lifted him,
And held him there a while;
And Piggie squealed so very loud
He could be heard a mile.

The Deadly Conflict Between Artie and a Bear.

Artie was not a boy. Artie was not a child. Artie was a big rag doll that belonged to Little Lucy Grover. And Artie was about two years old. Now, did you ever hear of a doll living to be two years old? I never did till I knew Artie. But the way it happened that Artie had outlived his time—that is, the allotted time for a doll—was this way: When he was given to Little Lucy she had loved him very dearly. Indeed, had not Artie been made of cloth he would have been broken into a good many pieces, for it was Little Lucy's habit to hug and hug him so hard that sometimes his breath was all squeezed out of his body, and he must have cracked in two had he been of a crackable material. As it was his poor body suffered the consequence of such great hugs, and became sadly flattened and out of shape. But so long as Little Lucy loved him Artie did not care a straw about how hard she hugged him, nor how flat his formerly round body became. He was happy in holding supreme place in his mistress' affection.

But after Artie had been the nursery favorite for about six months he was suddenly set aside for a new toy—a stupid, feelingless, pink, white and yellow doll, all done up in dainty white lawn, with pink ribbons. Little Lucy seemed to forget Artie entirely in the possession of this new pet, and she left him lying in a corner, where she had thrown him upon receiving into her arms the new pink and white thing which Artie soon grew so jealous of.

But what could he do? In the sad state of neglect to which he was left he could only grieve and regret. And so the days and weeks passed by with Artie, disconsolate and heart-broken, lying dumped into a corner of the nursery, with never a look nor a word from Little Lucy, who gave all her attention to the horrid thing with the pink cheeks and yellow hair. Pauline was the name of this new member of the nursery. And the very name made Artie shiver. He could tell by the very expression on Pauline's face—or, rather, the lack of expression—that she had no strength of character. She was just a silly French doll, whose vanity was her dominant trait. All day long she would sit, with her mouth drawn up into a silly, meaningless pucker, her useless hands folded across her lap and her tiny slippered feet thrust forward as if to say: "Look at my pretty, small tootsies."

But pretty soon after her arrival Pauline began to droop and look a bit worn. Her white frock became dreadfully soiled and her curls tangled and her ribbons disarranged. Artie noted these gradual changes in her appearance with pleasure. Now, this may sound as though Artie was a bad-disposed fellow. Well, one may not condone his feelings, but one cannot really condemn him. He would not have minded sharing—mind you, SHARING—his place in the nursery with Pauline. But who could blame him for feeling heart-broken when his place was usurped by the strange lady doll, with no place left for him save a dusty corner where only cast-offs were thrown? And though he was glad to see the unfavorable change take place in Pauline's appearance, he was not wholly selfish. He felt that after her beauty had worn off—the newness and primness—Little Lucy would take him back into her life and let him and Pauline share her attention. He did not ask to be THE ONE. He wished to be just HALF OF THE ONE.

But the weeks and months rolled by, with little change in the nursery, and Artie was about to resign himself to the corner for life, when something happened. Little Lucy had a tiny cousin come to pay her a visit. This tiny cousin at once conceived a great liking for Artie, whom she saw languishing in the cold corner. She had scarcely entered the nursery when she beheld the poor rag fellow lying there, face drawn and miserable. Besides the look of dejection on his face there were numerous stains of blackberry jam, for during his days of favoritism he had been indulged with many delicious dainties, such as jam and candy. Now he repined without so much as a smell of those delicious sweets.

"Oh, what a big boy-doll!" And the little visitor, whose name was Minnie, had Artie in her arms instantly, hugging him close to her heart.

"Oh, that's old Artie," said Lille Lucy. "You may have him if you want him. I don't care for him any more."

Oh, the fickle Lucy! It gave poor Artie's heart a twist to hear her speak so. But pretty soon his hurt was soothed by the tender solicitation of his new mistress, who had eagerly accepted Little Lucy's gift, never once resenting the fact that it was an old cast-off rag doll that had lost all favor in the nursery of her cousin.

"Oo needs our face washed, don't ee, pretty Artie?" And Minnie set to work to accomplish this feat, finding some water in a drinking glass and a kerchief in her pocket. She scrubbed and scrubbed the face of Artie, and although she succeeded merely in smearing the jam stains all over it, she was pleased with the result and put the poor fellow's head out at the window to dry in the sunshine and freezing wind. The cold atmosphere drew Artie's features into a funny pucker, holding them in an ice grip. And when, a little later Minnie went to bring him in she laughed merrily, saying: "Oh, just see how he is laughing! Isn't he too sweet for anything?"

And when Minnie went home that evening she carried in her arms Artie all wrapped in his overcoat and cap. And both Minnie and Artie were happy.

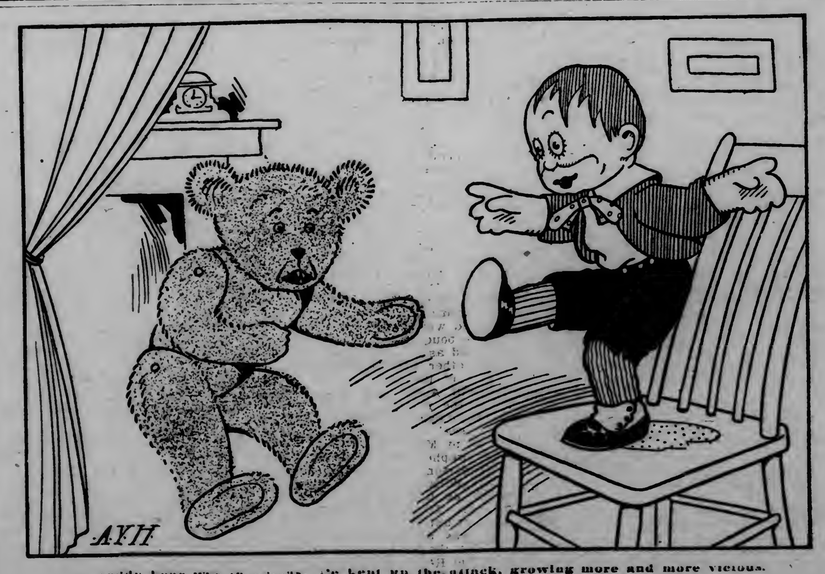

But Artie's first happiness in his new home was to be short-lived. Soon after his arrival there Minnie's mamma came into her little daughter's playroom one day and pulled from a huge box which she carried a great brown Teddy bear. Minnie was out calling on a friend at the time, and her mamma put the new toy just where her little girl would see it on coming in. That she might give Teddy Bear a most prominent place where the light from the window might fall upon him, she took poor Artie from a comfortable chair where Minnie had set him up in all his dignity and put Teddy Bear in his place. Once more Artie was to be eclipsed by a rival! In the corner where Minnie's mamma had put him Artie sat meditating gloomily. Then he chanced to look up at the great ugly animal that had his place by the window, and to his astonishment and anger Teddy grinned at him. Artie felt the sawdust in his heart stop short, and he shivered as with cold. How dared that impudent, insolent beast, that went on all fours, to grin triumphantly at him? Artie rose and went straight at the bear, his feelings so outraged that he forgot to be afraid. Before the bear knew what was happening Artie had him by the neck and was flinging him to the floor.

Teddy fell with a dull thud. It hurt him, too, for he gave vent to a grunt. Then he was up and at his antagonist, his teeth shining and his eyes full of rage. But Artie had got on the chair, a real stronghold. From his elevation he could thrust out his foot and kick Teddy Bear in the jaw every time he leaped at him. Ah, now it was Artie's turn to laugh. And he availed himself of the opportunity. He spread his face in a broad smile and threw his arms about wildly, clapping his hands. But Teddy Bear was tenacious. He kept up the attack, growing more and more vicious. Then, seeing by the clock that it was almost time for Minnie's return home, Artie warmed to the conflict, and soon had Ted laid low on the floor. With the smile of victory on his jam-stained face, he leaped from the chair, grabbed up his slain foe and hurried to the window with him. Succeeding in raising the sash Artie tossed his victim into the street below. A little street boy, with his bundle of newspapers under his arm, saw the furry fellow coming through the air, and instead of Teddy Bear falling on the hard pavement he dropped into the arms of the newsboy, who held welcoming arms for him.

"Gee, I've got a Teddy Bear at last," he muttered, his face radiant with happiness. "Ah, I guess not! Bears a-fallin' from third-story windows right into me mits!" And away went the new master of Teddy Bear, taking him home, where he would revive him in short order and make him as lively as ever.

And in the playroom Minnie was saying: "Hello, dear old Artie. How have you been since I went away? I do hope you were not lonely."

And Artie, still smiling from his place on the chair, knew that he was still his little mistress' favorite. As far as the fate of Teddy Bear was concerned—well, Artie did not bother his rag head about that.

Teddy Bear was tenacious. He kept up the attack, growing more and more vicious.

The Favorite.

Once there was a little fellow,
And his hair was brown.
He was loved by all the children
Living in the town.

Just one coat had this poor fellow;
Only one to wear.
Would you think him quite unlucky?
But—he was a bear.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Costs Nothing to Try.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant-tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

TWO BOYS ARRESTED

Stole Keys to Hardware Store and Helped Themselves.

Robbery Not Discovered Until Boy Was Found by Police.

Two boys 13 and 14 years of age are under arrest at police headquarters charged with planning and carrying out a burglary. The names of the boys are John Quackenbush and Forest McNabb. It is claimed that they deliberately planned to rob the hardware store of A. O. Giese at 10 West First street, and carried out their plans.

The robbery was not discovered until the McNabb boy was arrested by Patrolman Mahlan about 1 o'clock this morning. The officer saw the boy wandering about the streets, and picked him up on suspicion. His suspicions were confirmed when the lad was found to be armed with a loaded revolver and a belt of cartridges. He also had in his possession six new pocket knives.

The boy was taken to headquarters, and closely questioned. After some attempts at evasion, he told the tory of the robbery, and in his story implicated the Quackenbush boy. The latter, it is claimed, entered the store about a month ago and stole the keys from the pocket of an overcoat belonging to the proprietor. Last evening the boys using the keys, entered the store and helped themselves to the articles they wanted, securing some small change from the till, and a number of knives and revolvers. The boy told the police where they had stored the booty and it will be recovered today.

This is not the first trouble the Quackenbush boy has been implicated in, and he is already on parole. Both boys were taken before the juvenile court this morning, and if found guilty will probably be sent to the training school at Red Wing.

STEAL PIGS FROM CAR

Burglars Lay in Their Winter's Supply of Pork.

Broke Into Car During Night and Steal Meat.

At least two burglars in Duluth will have their winter's supply of pork.

A car standing behind the Armour Packing company's warehouse was broken open last evening, and two pigs stolen. There were forty or fifty carcases in the car, and the burglars evidently took all they could conveniently carry away.

How the robbery was effected is somewhat of a mystery. Two men, carrying the carcases of pigs along the streets at an early hour in the morning could not fail to attract attention, and even if they avoided suspicion, the load would be no light one. Unless they had a wagon waiting to carry away their booty, they could not have gone far away with it.

Other losses are said to have been reported on Michigan street, but the police are keeping quiet on the case.

MAN ENDS LIFE

arated for about four months and he visited her this morning for the first time in about two months. He had evidently been drinking of late, but was sober and rational this morning. He pleaded with her to allow him to return home, but she refused. He asked for money, but she said she didn't have any to give him. She gave him something to eat and he went out. Other tenants saw him standing in the hallway for several minutes. When he rushed into the kitchen after the short absence, his wife noticed the acid stains on his lips and realized what he had done. Before she could speak, he had gasped "Goodbye" and dropped to the floor.

Mrs. Bambard's screams called in the neighborhood tenants, and while some were telephoning for physicians, others gave the dying man simple antidotes. He was beyond aid, however, and died in a few minutes.

An empty carbolic acid bottle, from which Bambard had drunk the contents, was found in the hallway, and showed the method of suicide. The man had probably purchased the acid and carried it with him, to use in case his pleadings failed. After the fruitless result of his mission, he stepped out into the hall, despondency assailed him, and he employed the posion to end it all.

Bambard was 33 years old, and came to Duluth with his wife and two children last June from Bay City, Mich. He was a railroad man, but during the summer he worked at different places, and his domestic affairs went from bad to worse. The crisis came four months ago, when he left the house. Since that time his wife knows little of his actions. He had two or three different jobs, but lost them, and had been drifting downward all of the time. The woman had a number of boarders, and in that way comfortably supported herself and the children.

"I didn't treat Clarence harshly when he came this morning," she said, after her husband was dead. "He came to the door and I invited him in. He asked to be allowed to return, but I told him we wouldn't get along together and it was better to be separated. He then asked me for money, and I told him I didn't have any to give him. I asked him if he had eaten anything this morning, and learning that he had not, I gave him something to eat. He was perfectly rational and made no threats of suicide.

"He went out, and I went on with my work in the kitchen. He had been gone but a few minutes, when he came back, after drinking the acid."

Coroner McCuen was notified of the suicide, and the relatives at Bay City will also be informed. It is probable the remains will be returned there for burial.

"WANTS WHAT HE WANTS."

Senator Stephenson Has Hard Time in Getting Suitable Rooms.

Washington, Jan. 25.—"Uncle Ike" Stephenson of Wisconsin, who easily leads Guggenheim of Colorado, as the richest man in the United States senate, is looking for a boarding house where he can get a good room, with a southern exposure—the usual Saturday night turn at the bathroom to be included—and wholesome meals at Marinette, Wis., prices. He has been trying to stop at the New Willard and endow colleges out West, and the scheme doesn't work worth a cent. So yesterday he spent a large part of his time perusing the "want ad" columns of the Washington papers. He explained his predicament to a fellow senator, but the best he could get was:

"Why, you're the richest man in the senate, so what's the difference?"

"Probably I have got a leetle more saved up than some of the boys," replied Stephenson, "but, gosh ding it, I'm going to spend it in my own way or know the reason why."

JAP, CHIEF OF SLAVE TRADE, CAUGHT IN TRAP.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 25.—The firm grip of the law has tightened about Ben Tanaka, the Japanese merchant, head of a Japanese secret society and chief of the Japanese slave trade. Tanaka was implicated in the murder of Chikicki Yoke on March 30, 1906, by H. Hayashi, who was arrested in Sacramento last month. Now the police have corroborated the evidence of Hayashi by the statement of K. Nakayama, who is serving a thirty-year sentence for the crime in Walla Walla prison.

Nakayama declared that Tanaka ordered him and Hayashi to "get" Yoke, who had refused to pay for a slave girl. Tanaka furnished them the knives with which they killed the man, and Nakayama was present when Tanaka gave Hayashi $50 to get away.

This completes the chain of evidence against Tanaka, and it is believed that the death blow has been struck to the slave trade for some time.

PROFIT SHARING ON A BIG SCALE

Success of the "Steel Trust's," Scheme of Letting Employes Buy Into Its Business---Thousands of Workingmen Are Investors.

Five years of actual test by the largest corporation in the world has shown the plan of interesting employes in the success of a great industrial undertaking by permitting them to become part owners of the business in which they are engaged, has proved an unqualified success, according to George W. Perkins, chairman of the finance committee and one of the directors of the United States Steel corporation, who originated the plan.

Mr. Perkins, as is well known, is a partner of J. Pierpont Morgan, the organizer of the Steel corporation. Through his previous experience as head of the field force of one of the great life insurance companies, he was especially well fitted to solve the problem of the corporation's relations with the vast army of workers employed in its various plants scattered about the country. This problem was not a simple one. The huge corporation, with a capitalization of more than a billion dollars, and embracing widely separated plants of a large number of subsidiary companies, was managed by men on salaries, while its manual labor was done by men on wages. In other words, it was run entirely by hired men, and its ownership was so divided among thousands of security holders that it was even more impersonal than the ordinary corporation.

At the time of the organization of the so-called "steel trust," it was predicted that it would be impossible to secure as faithful and energetic services from its employes as were rendered to the smaller individual enterprises from which it was formed. To meet this difficulty, Mr. Perkins worked out a scheme of permitting employes to purchase stock in the corporation, on long time and easy terms. His theory was that the best way to secure the fidelity and intelligent interest of the employe was by giving him a stake in the business itself.

For five years this plan has been in operation. Its success is attested, not only by the fact that the Steel corporation has encountered no serious labor troubles, and has been remarkably prosperous, but also by the fact that 46,000 of its employes have become stockholders, and that $10,000,000 has been distributed by the company under its investment plan. Mr. Perkins tells the story of what he calls "Humanizing a Corporation," in the February number of Appleton's Magazine.

The plan, as put into effect at the beginning of 1903, included the offer on the part of the corporation to its employes of preferred stock at $82.50 a share, which was slightly below the market price at that time. The amount of stock any one man could purchase was proportioned to his salary, ranging from 5 to 20 per cent of the yearly amount paid him by the company. Each man was allowed three years in which to pay for his stock, and payments were to be made in small monthly installments, which were deducted from his monthly income, in such amounts as he agreed upon. Each employe holding stock received dividends upon it at the rate of 7 per cent, while he was charged 5 per cent interest on his deferred payments.

Thus, no expense was involved in carrying the stock; in fact there was a margin of income which could be applied to the payment of the principal. As soon as the stock was paid for, it became, of course, the absolute property of the subscriber, and he was at liberty to sell it if he so desired. As it was the purpose of the corporation, however, to maintain the interest of its employes, an additional inducement was made to the workman or clerk to retain his stock by an offer of a credit of $5 a year for each share for a period of five years, if the holder could exhibit the original certificate to the treasurer of his company in January of each year, and at the same time could show that he had been continuously in the employ of the company.

When this investment plan was put forward, the corporation also announced a profit-sharing plan, which provided that if its earnings were more than $80,000,000 for the year a certain proportion, increasing in amount with the increase of income from 1 to 2½ per cent, was to be set aside, one-half to be distributed in cash to its employes and the other half to be invested in preferred stock for their benefit. Half of this preferred stock was to be delivered immediately to the employe and the other half was to be held for him during a period of five years at the end of which time it was to become his sole property. If a man left the company's employ of his own accord during the five-year period, his stock reverted, not to the company, but to the other employes included in the profit-sharing plan.

In this way two powerful incentives were provided for the employes to exert their best efforts for the company and to remain in its employ. One of these was the opportunity to share in the profits of the business and the other was the opportunity to become an investor in it on easy terms. The employe was protected from loss on his investment by the guarantee of the corporation that at the end of the five year period the stock would at least be worth as much as the price at which he had bought it. As a matter of fact, in spite of the recent panic and the depression in the stock market at the close of 1907, United States Steel preferred was selling at between seven and eight points above the figure at which the employe investor had subscribed for it five years before.

About 10,000 of the men who were the original subscribers to the stock in 1903 had completed their payments and had become full-fledged owners of shares at the beginning of 1908. These men have received $5 a year on each share of stock, and in addition have received dividends of 7 per cent. Thus the stock has cost them less than one-half the amount they nominally paid for it, while the market value has increased several dollars a share, and with the general improvement of industry will, of course, advance to a much higher figure. Many of these men have made additional subscriptions each year, while the number of those becoming subscribers has increased from year to year, more than 14,000 subscriptions being taken out at the beginning of 1907, although the price at which the stock was then offered was $102 a share.

In addition to the profit which has come to the steel workers through their investments in the stock of the company, over $10,000,000 has been distributed under the profit-sharing plan, the amount rising with the growht of the company's earnings and profits from $1,250,000, in 1903, to over $3,000,000 in 1907. The best feature of the plan is that not only the employes, but the stockholders as well, feel that they have benefited by this arrangement. Mr. Perkins himself believes that it is the best means yet worked out for avoiding disputes between labor and capital, by its recognition of the mutual interest of workers and investors in large industrial enterprises.

"Very few of the employes have invested in more than five shares each in one year, while the majority of subscriptions have been for one or two shares each," says Mr. Perkins, in his Appleton article. "Some idea of the average holdings of thes mployes may be gained from the figures of 1905. In that year 3,000 men subscribed for one share each; 3,500 subscribed for two shares each; 1,583 subscribed for five shares each; 192 subscribed for from six to ten shares each, and sixty subscribed for more than ten shares each.

"It will be seen from this that the stock has been very largely taken by the workingmen in very small amounts. We have instances where such men have subscribed for one share in each of the years that the offer has been made, and all such men are now paying out of their monthly wage a certain sum on account of the five different shares.

"At the close of 1907 when this plan had been in force five years, over $10,000,000 had been actually distributed to the organization under the various provisions of the plan. That is a very large sum of money but it has gone to a very large number of men and has been one of the factors that has helped to form an organization which for loyalty and efficiency is perhaps unequalled in the industrial world today; an organization where the officers of Company A are only too glad to pass on to Company B any new ideas or better methods that they develop; an organization that has demonstrated that co-operation can win success and, best of all, success for everybody; an organization where in place of a mere handful of partners there are approximately 50,000 such partners, each one of whom is a worker in the cause.

"In these results is there not a form of socialism of the highest, best and most ideal sort—a socialism that makes real partners of employer and employe and yet preserves the right of private property—retaining the capitalist's incentive to enterprise, while giving the worker a new inspiration for effort—humanizing a vast organization—promoting good will and industrial peace."

LUMBERMEN REDUCE THE WASTE OF TREES

Changed Conditions Have Completely Revolutionized the Logging Methods of Several of the Largest Lumber Companies in the South.

Washington, Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The men of no industry recognize the importance of practicing economy in the utilization of product more than the lumbermen of this country. Such has not always been the case, but the rapid depletion of the forests during the past decade and the consequent advance in stumpage prices has made necessary the reduction of waste in order to insure the prosperity of the business. So far, aside from reducing waste in the woods, practically all efforts have been directed to better utilization of the log of the tree through the introduction of machinery which works up the product with less waste.

Lumbermen have for years been perfecting their machinery so as to reduce the waste in manufacturing logs into lumber. The old-fashioned, vertical, stiff-back saws which were operated by water power made a cut almost half an inch wide. Then came the circular saws, which greatly increased the speedof sawing, and reduced the waste in kerf. These have now been supplanted by modern band saws, which in some cases make a cut of not more than one-eighth of an inch wide, and revolves with tremendous speed. With the saw all of the other parts of the machinery have shown marked improvement.

This condition has been brought about by the ever-increasing demand for greater economy and cheaper and quicker methods of manufacture. Waste in lumbering has always been on account of the very rapid depletion of the forests. Competition has also greatly incerased until it is only those lumbermen who have kept pace with modern conditions that are able to operate with success.

These changed conditions have completely revolutionized the logging methods of several of the largest lumber companies in the South. Instead of felling the trees and sawing it into logs in the woods, they simply trim off the branches, and haul in the whole tree. It is then thrown into a log pond, picked up on endless chains, and sawed into logs of any desired length. One concern in the South with which the forest service has been co-operating, has built a separate mill for this pupose. The savings in the actual merchantable contents and cost of manufacture are considerable, and more than pay for the initial and upkeep costs of the mill.

Another feature of the business which is just beginning to be thoroughly appreciated is the manufacture of the logs of different sizes into definite products. Thus, where formerly boards were sawed from logs of any diameter, many lumbermen are now beginning to use only the larger logs for this purpose. The smaller logs are sawed into those commodities which require little handling and cost of manufacture, such as posts, poles, railroad ties, etc.

Railroad companies want heart longleaf pine for their cross-ties, and in the past have had little difficulty in getting them. Now, however, many lumbermen absolutely refuse to furnish them, but take the logs of this quality and saw them into more valuable grades of lumber. Heart longleaf pine ties are likely, therefore, to go out of use, and their place be taken by the ties sawed from small trees and surfaced on two sides only. Such ties are admirably adapted to preservative treatment, because they are entirely surrounded by sapwood, and this readily absorbs preservatives. Moreover, a tie cut from a small tree, when treated with a preservative, is far more durable than an untreated tie cut from heartwood, and although its initial cost is somewhat greater, its final cost is considerably less. Manufacture of logs of certain sizes into definite products is therefore getting to be of increasing importance.

While the principal advances in the closer utilization of the tree, so far, have been made in working up the log to better advantage, other reductions in waste will come through the use of every part of the tree, which can be handled with profit. Varied commercial interests over the country have made good success in the last few years in reducing the enormous waste of forest products by treating with preservatives woods which are of little value in their natural state, reducing the height of the stump, using the tree higher up into the top, and utilizing for various by-products many parts which were formerly wasted. The government, through the United States forest service, has taken a prominent part in these experiments, and the knowledge gained has been placed at the disposal of the business men of the country who are interested.

CAPITALISM AND SOCIALISM

Naturally the owning or ruling class have always made laws and founded social institutions calculated to strengthen their mastery over the oppressed class. The prevailing conceptions of good and bad have, on the whole, always followed in the wake of profit and loss. A savage would not think of living from the labors of helpless women and children, but our Christian capitalist moralists find ready excuses for those who grow rich on the labor of mothers and infants. Religion, codes of morals, legal systems all take their form from the prevailing system, not exactly might, but from the point that might is right. A good man under capitalistic ethics is one whose moral and economic views coincide not with the preservation of life and human happiness, but with the preservation of property in the hands of the ruling class and the continued exploitation of the workers by the shirkers. Our industrial masters and their retainers attempt to justify their brutally selfish course on the ground that confiscation of the wealth produced by the working class is their proper reward for exceptional ability in separating the workers from the fruits of their industry and skill. Our masters argue this way: "Suppose each worker does produce eight times more wealth today than he could produce fifty years ago, does he not have at least two times more comforts now than his grandfather had and who was just as poor? Why should not the capitalist take for his own the other six parts?" He says again: "What incentive would be left the workers for further exertion if the good capitalist refused to take from the worker the product of his labors and the profit derived from owning the means of distribution?" They say also: "To be sure it is a little hard on the workers to produce so much and enjoy so little." He thinks it is the decree of nature that to the shrewdest and strongest the prizes of the earth belong, in the case of the survival of the fittest and to them belong the spoils. If certain men have proved "brainy" and energetic enough to gain possession of land, machinery and even the government of the United States, they have but received the reward of their energy and enterprise.

These are the ethics of capitalism as applied to the captains of industry. These are some of the rules as laid down by the capitalists as fitting rules, which should govern society, but do these rules apply with equal force to the workingmen? Some of the members of the working class have educated themselves in history and economic science and the philosophy of Socialism, and have discovered that what keeps them propertyless an dpoor is their foolish support of an industrial system and political regime which is no longer adequate to serve the needs of the common people, the wage earner. They have discovered that capitalism has already served its purpose and that the collapse of the prevailing system is inevitable, we propose to unite with a view to the establishment of an industrial republic, wherein the ownership of the land and instruments of production and distribution shall be vested in the working class or common people, a system under which each worker would receive what he produced, and under which every able bodied citizen would be compelled to produce what he received. There would be no more dividing up with the owners of the land and machinery, as the owners and users would be one and the same. Productions would be carried on for use, and not for profit, or for the aurichment of the few, at the expense of the many.

NEW TIMBER IN THE SENATE

"Nelthtr talk scandal nor listen to it." His friends and acquaintances say that he always lives up to it, too. Perhaps this is one of the secrets of his wide popularity in his part of the new state.

Richardson of Delaware first came prominently before his state when the paying teller of the First National bank of Dover ran away with $107,000, or $7,000 more than the bank's capital. Richardson was president of the institution, and as soon as the defalcation was made known to him he pledged his own fortune to make good any losses to the depositors. The bank was on its feet again in a few years. Born in 1853, Richardson made a fortune in canning Delaware fruits before he was 40.

the mine, took charge of the property, four years ago, it had the appearance of a sack with nothing left but a few shakings. The long, expensive tunnel from Kellogg had been run to the vein, and hundreds of feet of drifting and cross-cutting done under the ground, where the main ore body, worked in the levels above, was expected to come down, without finding any commercial ore, and it seemed for a time as if the mine had been bottomed.

Since then, however, the vagaries of its mineral depositions have, in an important measure, been unravelled, and Mr. Easton has directed the development with such success that the mine contains today what is probably the largest and most profitable resource of lead-silver ore ever exposed in a single mine in the mining history of the world.

which in 500 feet is expected to tap the ore bodies under the sudface workings at least 330 feet below the bottom of the shaft. The tunnel is now in 350 feet. From its face a crosscut has been run to the right, cutting the vein. The hanging wall has not been reached, but adrift has been run which is all in quartz, some of it running 30 to 40 per cent copper, beside carrying fair silver values. The Scottish Chief company, which adjoins the Apex, is also running a tunnel to get under the ore bodies opened above, but its tunnel is deeper than that of the Apex and it will have further to go.

produce copper at a very much lower cost when it reaches mining than it has been doing in the past. A great amount of development work under way will have been completed and the new tramway shaft will be in commission. Before the shutdown it was costing the company about 13 cents per pound to produce copper.

The British-Butte company has an interesting proposition on hand in its placer ground, which it is developing west of Butte. A shaft was started to bedrock to demonstrate a theory that that part of the country is an old lake bed and that for ages the lake received the gold wash from the surrounding hills and mountains, and that there must be a rich deposit of placer gold on bedrock. The shaft has reached a depth of 600 feet, and from the bottom of that a drill hole has been made to a further depth of 330 feet, making the total exploration a depth of 900 feet. From every foot of the entire distance gold assays have been taken, running from about 75 cents to as high as $4 per cubic yard. The company has decided that the top of the deposit and the bottom of it can be mined and treated by the cyaniding process at a good profit, but it is now figuring on the possibility of making the whole placer bed pay for mining.

Recently G. H. Robinson, F. J. Chapman and B. F. Johnson arrived in Helena from New York and purchased all of the properties of the Tiger Gold & Copper Mining company in Avalanche gulch. On one of thec lains of the company there is a vein of gold, silver, lead and copper quartz having an average width of 20 feet. This ledge has been traced on the surface for more than 500 feet. The vein will be tapped by a tunnel at a depth of 300 feet and drifts run in both directions. The ore is of high grade in both lead and copper, $10 in gold and a smaller amount in silver.

The same party visited the Elkhorn district and examined the work on the Woodland Park property, which is owned by the General Mines company, in which they are directors. The shafts are all in about fifty feet and are all in ore of copper pyrites.

1,000 feet, but a permanent plant is contemplated before that depth is reached. The first drift has just been started at 165 feet.

South of No. 5 shaft is No. 6 shaft, the pioneer development in the new territory. It is 340 feet deep, where it has been bottomed for a long time, attention having been given to drifting. Recently work was started enlarging it to the standard size, providing two skipways. Both 4 and 5 are being developed standard size. No. 6 has been enlarged to the first level and will be finished by April 1 or sooner. Aggressive sinking and drifting will then be started. Two drills are used in each of the new shafts. About four cars of copper rock weekly are produced from the enlarging of No. 6, and these are shipped to the mill. All levels are 120 feet apart on the incline. The Isle Royale railroad extends to No. 6, passing the other new shafts, but a short spur must be built to No. 4. This is already graded in part

No. 6 is using its temporary equipment, but a very extensive surface plant is being installed. The boilerhouse superstructure is nearly finished and the enginehouse and stack foundations are in. Structural steel is used throughout, sheathed with corrugated iron. The stack will be of steel plate, lined with brick, of the self-supporting type, and 140 feet high.

A double conical drum hoisting engine will be installed this year, with drums having a maximum diameter of 18 feet, and with duplex cylinders. A six-top skip can be hoisted from a depth of a mile with this engine. Simultaneously a 5-drill air compressor will be installed. Room is allowed for an electrical plant, contemplated for later installation. A shaft rockhouse of structural steel is to be built this year, having a cylindrical steel plate bin 42 feet in diameter and 32 feet high. Twenty-five dwellings for miners have recently been built near the shaft.

Plants similar to that at No. 6 will be erected at No. 4 and No. 5 shafts probably in 1909, or as soon as the development is sufficiently advanced. Shipments from all of these shafts will begin gradually, and by next fall it is expected that two heads will be supplied, equivalent to 1,200 tons of rock daily, compared to 600 tons daily now.

One head in the mill is now equipped with steeple compound cylinders and a second is being similarly equipped. The third head will be altered to this type later. For this purpose the roof of the stamp mill has been raised. A double conical drum duplex cylinder hoisting engine and a thirty-five-drill air compressor are standing at the idle No. 1 shaft, available for removing to either of the new shafts if it is deemed advisable.

Atlantic's Section 16 shaft has reached a depth of 1,000 feet. This corresponds to the twelfth level of the Baltic mine adjoining on the south. At a depth of 800 feet, corresponding to the the Baltic's tenth level, an extensive crosscut has been finished to the westward and now work has started on a crosscut eastward. Three drills are in service, two sinking and one crosscutting. Between forty and fifty men are employed.

Fine looking pockets of vein rock with excellent copper value are frequently encountered both in the shaft and in the lateral workings, but they are unconnected and very limited in extent and the formation is completely broken up. The Baltic lode, as a distinctly defined formation, has not been located, although these pockets of vein rock are undoubtedly fragments of the lode. Exactly similar conditions were found in the Sixth level drift northward from the Baltic mine, which lost the lode seventy-five feet before passing out of Baltic territory and entering Atlantic ground, and which continued northward to where the shaft is now sinking.

The opinion prevails that greater depth must be attained. This is strengthened by the improvement found in the north drifts of Baltic as greater depth is reached. Balti's No. 5 shaft is at the thirteenth level, from which drifts are already driving. The twelfth level drift north is in a considerable distance with a very good showing. The distance from the closest of these points to the strike line of the Atlantic's shaft is nearly 1,000 feet, and averages considerably more than that, so Atlantic is sinking through throughly virgin territory, and has only its own results from which to draw reliable conclusions. During the last ten days the showing in the east crosscut has been much more favorable.

The confidence in ultimate success at Atlantic's Section 16 is shown by the permanency of the equipment. This is not elaborate but is designed for great depth and large hoisting capacity. Most of it is coming from the old Atlantic mine, with parts from the Central and elsewhere.

The boiler house, of frame sheathed with corrugated iron, has room for four boilers. Three are already installed with two in service. They are of locomotive firebox type, each 100-horse power. Under the same roof is the temporary hoisting engine and the compressor plant. One Ingersoll-Rand compressors, ten-drill, is in service, but much of its capacity is used for driving underground pumps. The foundation is laid for a duplex-cylinder Rand compressor, twenty-five drill. Part of the machinery is on the ground. The temporary hoisting engine, for two skipways, is capable of lifting from 1,500 feet depth.

The permanent hoisting plant is nearing completion. It has an Allis-Chalmers 26 by 48 duplex cylinder double conical drum engine, capable of lifting a 9-ton skip from a depth of approximately a mile. This engine was formerly used at shaft A of the old Atlantic mine. The drum has a diameter of 10 feet at either end and 15½ feet in the middle. The engine is all on the foundation and assembled except the segments of the drum, which are on the ground. The foundation is of concrete. The building is frame sheathened with corrugated iron.

The Atlantic & Lake Superior railroad owned by the mining company, has extened a spur from the line built to the Baltic mine nine years ago. The men are brought from the old Atlantic by train over this line and the company is thus relieved from building dwelling houses at Section 16.

It is expected that in a short time drifting will be started at three levels to determine if a more regular formation with concentrated copper values may be found away from the zone of the shaft. The shaft is sinking at an inclime of 70 degs., comparable to 72 degs. at Baltic. The old Atlantic, idle since May, 1906, because of the collapse of the workings, is largely filled with water. A few crosscut trenches as opened and exposed a number of lodes, some with minor copper showings, over a year ago. Among these was one known as the Calico lode, on account of its resemblance to the Calico lode of the Ontonagon county. There a shaft was sunk about 150 feet ramified by drifts, with indifferent copper showings.

Two diamond drills have been operating since last fall, jointly under the direction of the Atlantic Mining company and the Naumkeag Mining company, owned mainly by Thomas L. Chadbourne. These will furnish a cross section of Atlantic's ward from the surface trench. One of the drills is stationed within a few feet of the Calico lode shaft. The other is several hundred feet away in the same horizon. Any lodes exposed will underlie both the Atlantic and Naumkeag properties. The object of the exploration generally is to furnish a geological cross section of the lands, but specifically a search is being made for the Quincy lode, which has never been identified, carrying copper values south of Portage lake.

Atlantic's mill will continue handling Michigan's rock until the latter's mill at Keweenaw bay is ready for service. It is also hoped that within a reasonable time section 16 will be able to furnish rock for stamping, while it is probable that Winona will resume shipments to Atlantic's mill before it has one of its own ready for service, and there are unconfirmed rumors that Superior may seek milling facilities at Atlantic before long.

evident that ore has been found by the drills. The sliver adjoins the Sauntry-Alpena tract of the Steel corporation at Virginia, and has long been supposed to carry the combination of those deposits, which hold in the aggregate something like 35,000,000 tons of ore, assaying from 55 to 62 per cent in metallic iron. Stripping to the extent of 2,000,000 cubic yards is to be done this year at the LaRue mine, which it finally has been decided to transform from an underground producer to an open pit. This is a property of the Pittsburg Iron Ore company, at Nashwauk; it was opened in 1903, and has shipped to date upwards of 600,000 tons of ore.

It is an interesting story that has been current, to the effect that the iron ore properties of the Republic Iron & Steel company are to be taken over by the United States Steel corporation. However, if the deal has been made in the East, as reported, nothing is officially known in the Lake Superior region concerning the transaction. The Republic company has the Cambria and Lillie mines, on the Marquette range, and a string of more than a dozen on the Mesaba, in all containing many million tons of ore, much of it exceptionally good grade. Except for the Kinney mine at Buhl, which is operated in part by the open-cut system, all the properties are underground producers. Those on the Mesaba, aside from the Kinney, are the Bessemer, Franklin, Onondaga, Union and Victoria, at Virginia; the Fay, Mariska, and Pettit, at Sparta; the Monica, at Biwabik; the Wills, at McKinley, and two small properties at the western end of the range. Operations at the Franklin group were largely suspended recently, some 150 men being discharged, and except for development work in progress at the Bessemer shafts, nothing is now being done there. It is the understanding that the stripping of the Union and Franklin tracts is contemplated. Operations have been suspended at the Monica shaft at Biwabik for some time, it having been found impossible to get down to the ledge because of a layer of quicksand that overlies the ore body. The work will now be done by the Foundation company of New York, a shaft of concrete, reinforced with steel being put down as accomplished by the same concern at Pickands, Mather & Co.'s Bangor and Syracuse mines, in the same district, and at the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company's Smith property, on the Marquette range, the work at the latter now being practically completed. The Monica now holds an important deposit of very good ore.

The Steel corporation's big Stephens property, in Sections 25 and 26, 59-15, at Aurora, is to be operated vigorously this year. Little mining has been done here since the tract was opened in 1903, but judging from the preparations made the time lost will be regained during the approaching season. The Stephens deposit is estimated at 35,000,000 tons, and probably upwards of a fourth of this can be removed without further stripping. The corporation's McKinley mine, in Section 8, 58-16, also is slated to ship heavily this year. Stripping by both day and night crews is in progress. It is expected that a very large tonnage also will come from the Steel corporation's Gilbert pit, in Section 25 and 26, 58-17, at Sparta, where the deposit is said to agregate 40,000,000 tons. The Penobscot property, in the Hibbing district, is to be converted into an open-pit mine, but it is not likely the work will be undertaken this year. Underground development was abandoned some time ago.

It has not yet been decided just how much ore will come from the Steel corporation's new Canisteo and Holman mines, in the Coleraine district, on the Western Mesaba, this year. However, that a few hundred thousand tons will go forward is the general expectation. The erection of the permanent washing plant at which the sand is to be separated from the ore has not yet been started, but with a capacity of treating 700 tons daily the experimental plant is amply sufficient to meet all possible demands upon it. Next to the Hull-Rust, the Canisteo will eventually be the bigest iron mine on the globe. The overburden is something like eighty feet in thickness, and the shovels engaged in the huge task of stripping are now within a dozen feet of the ore. The expense of extending the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad considered, the development of the Western Mesaba has already cost the corporation more than $5,000,000, and not a pound of ore has yet been taken out. Comparatively little drilling is now being done west of the Mississippi river, more than two-thirds of the crews having been called in this winter. This is the case all over the range, in fact, and for the first time in a number of years expert drill runners are having a period of idleness. The retrenchment has extended to all departments of the mining industry.

Except for the installation of machinery in the power house, nothing is being done this winter at Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s St. James mine at Aurora. Its future operation will depend altogether upon the state of the ore market. The St. James is an underground property, with the first drifts barely opened into the deposit. Work continues at Pickands, Mather & Co.'s Mohawk, Jones & Laughlin's Meadow and the Pitt Mining company's Miller mines, but with reduced forces. The night shift has been laid off at Pickands, Mather & Co.'s Elba property at McKinley. Five-ton tram cars, to be operated by two electric motors, have been installed in No. 4 shaft of the Steel corporation's Fayal mine, at Eveleth. Mule power is displaced thereby. Stripping operations are not in progress at the Fayal this winter, but an early start on the work will be made in the spring.

To permit of necessary repairs, the Lake Superior corporation's Algoma steel plant, at the Canadian Sault, has been closed for the past ten days, but it now is in operation in full again. Every division of the works on St. Mary's river has been on the active list right along, and has been making money. The sole exception is the charcoal plant, at which work was suspended the first of the year, following the filling of existing contracts. The kilns and the chemical department will be restored to their former state of activity by April, it is expected. In the meantime the wood camps continue in commission, and 5,000 cords of hardwood, for use at the plant are being cut monthly. The cross-section, at the making charcoal, is 150 cords daily. The blast furnaces are being operated to capacity. They use from 900 to 1,000 tons of iron ore daily, and they have on hand ready for consumption upwards of 100,000 tons. The Gladstone (Mich.,) furnace of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company is to be relined, and it will go out of blast for that purpose shortly. The work will require six weeks or more. The stack has not been lined since the furnace was built, some seven years ago. Relining also is to be done at the plant of the Zenith Furnace company, at West Duluth. The suspension here will occur about the first of February.

A deal recently concluded has been the transfer from W. E. LaRue of Duluth to the United States Steel corporation of all his interests in the Baraboo district of Southwestern Wisconsin. Mr. LaRue was the pioneer explorer in the Baraboo district and his possessions totaled several hundred acres. The deal was made with understanding that the Steel corporation will engage actively in minin gthe ore, of which Mr. La Rue is confident that there is a large body on the property. Mr. LaRue is interested in a number of explorations on the Menominee range. One of these is in the Felch mountain distrtct, a second is in the Iron River field, and another is near Crystal Falls.

With a crew of nearly one hundred experienced woodsmen employed at that particulay camp, the Steel corporation's forestry department is getting out considerable mining timber in the vicinity of Ross Siding, Gogebic county, Mich. Similar operations are being carried on for the corporation at other points in the Lake Superior region, and in addition a number of jobbers are cutting timber for the big company.

Thomas B. McNamara has been appointed captain of the Steel corporation's Aurora mine at Ironwood. He succeeds the Capt. William Thomas, who was recently shot and killed by a foreigner, whom he had refused work. He has been a miner for many years, latterly holding the position of assistant geologist with the engineering department.

a depth of 1,000 feet, and the drift towards the west has been driven about 100 feet. Work at this point is being given a great deal of attention, it being the plan to keep drifting until the vein is cut, and then follow the ore. The drift on the 500-level cut the vein showing 19 feet of high grade ore. A new pump of 500 gallons capacity has been installed on the 1,200-level, and is in operation.

The Boston shaft has reached the 800 mark, and work is progressing on the drift in the direction of the Gem shaft, the breast is now about 260 feet from the shaft.

It is the intention to finally connect the drift from the Gem shaft with the one from the Boston, and when this is done all of the intervening veins will have been cut. A new 500-gallon pump has also been installed in the Boston and is working satisfactorily. Eight-inch water columns have been installed in each of the shafts, and four-inch steam lines.

Probably the most interesting recent development in the Globe mining district was the strike of ore in the Iron Cap mine of the National Mining Exploration company, which is interpreted by the majority of mining men in the district who are conversant with this section of it, as a sort of refutation of the conclusion of Prof. Ransom, who made the government geological surveys of the district, that the Old Dominion fault ended at the Copper Hill mine of the Arizona Commercial. Other than those who are interested in the National company believe that the strike in the Iron Cap demonstrates the fact that the Old Dominion fault extends to considerable distance beyond the Copper Hill, as has been contended for year by local mining men. The strike is the "farthest east" discovery made on the Old Dominion ore belt proper and it has brought considerable encouragement to other companies operating in the vicinity—among which are the Arizona Commercial and Globe Consolidated. President Amster and Supt. Snell of the former company view the strike as positively proving the Matamora and Winnebago claims of that company.

Bisbee, Ariz., Jan. 25.—The shafts now going down at the Superior & Pittsburg are all getting to a point where they should be deep enough to show fine ore lenses when drifting is done. For instance, the Hoatson is getting some of the fine ore bodies opened up some time ago by the Copper Queen. The formation in the Bisbee district is such that those familiar with it never expected much from the Superior & Pittsburg properties until a depth of more than 1,000 feet had been obtained. It has cost considerable money to continue operations at the property on the broad scale that has been pursued for several years past. The management has always felt certain of the ultimate result, and were reassured by the diamond drill borings made early in the development stage.

The plans for the winter call for sinking the Cole shaft to a depth of 1,500 feet when extensive lateral openings will be made. The drifting in this shaft is now being done at the 1,200-foot level and good ore is being obtained from this level. At the Hoatson shaft it is expected that a depth will have been attained of 1,300 feet by the first of next month. The 1,200-foot level has exposed some of the rich ore encountered by the Copper Queen and there are indications that the opening at this point are on top of a large lense. The junction continues to be pushed vigorously. As was stated several weeks ago the Briggs shaft has had work discontinued there for the present until it is well drained and crosscuts from the Hoatson and Junction reach it.

Development work on the Copper Gulf property in the Burro mountain district of New Mexico, lying about twelve miles southwest of Silver City, is tending to prove that there is an enormous deposit of concentrating ores located in that section. Mining is going ahead along conservative lines, and it is probable that within the next year the output from this district will show a very material increase. The ores in this section are of the concentrating class running about 3 per cent in copper. At the present time the shaft on the Copper Gulf has been sunk to a depth of about 300 feet and crosscutting is in progress on this level as well as on the 200. In the upper drift an ore bearing zone was encountered and penetrated being thirty feet in width. The drift is being run parallel with the ore zone and at intervals of one hundred feet crosscuts are driven through the ore. This was done in two places on the 200, and already at one point on the 300, which would indicate an ore body of very large dimensions.

The Sewing society of Meadowlands was started by Miss Arnold at White Face lodge on Saturday, Nov. 10, 1906, its object being to have the ladies become better acquainted and promote social intercourse. Living in a newly settled country is hard for the women to get around unless a certain day is set aside for that purpose, and one may be sure of not having a long walk or drive for nothing. It was arranged to meet at different homes every Saturday afternoon, choosing that day so the younger children could be left at home with the older ones, and there were to be only three articles allowed for refreshments. The meeting proved a great success, and the society continued to meet all winter. On Saturday, April 20, 1907, the society met again at White Face lodge and was organized into the Ladies Aid Society of Meadowlands, Minn., with the following officers: President, Mrs. William R. Orrine Destroys the Craving for Drink, Sold Under Positive Guarantee.

Excessive or continued use of alcoholic beverages always results in a diseased condition of the nervous system.

The drinking man is often heard to say, "I can stop of my own free will and when I wish," but the poor fellow is now devoid of the power to act at the proper time and in the right way, —it's too late, the craving has secured a firm hold and because of the diseased nervous system he has not the ability for sustained effort. The result we all know.

Drunkenness is no longer considered a crime; eminent scientists and physicians have agreed that it is a disease and must be treated as such.

The home treatment that has been used for a number of years, and is highly successful, is Orrine. It is sold under a positive guarantee that if it does not effect a cure your money will be refunded.

Eck was engaged with a crew in stacking ice in the big frame storage house of the company, on the south shore of Cedar lake. When the call was given for dinner, the usual custom was followed of a lively chase for the ladder which let the men down to the ground. About twenty feeet from the bottom, Eck missed his hold and fell. Falling, he struck a fellow laborer, named Le Beau, and swept him off the rungs. TRESPASS CASE ENDED.

Lumber Company Will Have to Pay Double Damages to State.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 25.—The supreme court yesterday reaffirmed its former decision in the case of the state against the Shevlin-Carpenter company brought to recover treble damages for an alleged trespass in the removal of timber from state lands. Chief Justice Start and Judge Brown dissented from the majority opinion and favored an affirmation of the judgment obtained by the state's district court of St. Louis county.

While the state loses several thousand dollars by this case, the decision is important principally by reason of the facts that many other cases, in which the facts are essentially similar, are pending and which in view of this decision probably will be dropped. About $150,000 is involved in all the cases.

The case against the Shevlin-Carpenter company was brought in St. Louis county and the state recovered judgment for treble the value of the timber removed, the jury finding that it was a case of wilful trespass. The company appealed and the supreme court reversed the case, Chief Justice Start dissenting. Attorney General Young moved for a rehearing, which was granted, and the decision handed down yesterday ends the case in favor of the company, which will now be required to pay only double damages according to the statutes covering trespass.

The pupils, young and old, responded readily to the orders of the teachers, formed in line and marched safely out of the burning building in a twinkling. The structure was completely destroyed. The school caught from the Canaba Lumber company's plant nearby, which was on fire. A spark from the waste burner at the lumber plant set fire to the yards and building, and before the flames were under control a large amount of property was destroyed. USE OF DRUGS IN FOODSTUFFS

An Injury to the Human System, Says Dr. Wiley.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, reported yesterday to the house committee of agriculture the results of experiments conducted by the bureau to determine the poisonous effect on the human system of such drugs as borax, benzoic acid, benzoate of soda, sulphate of copper, sulphur dioxide, formaldehyde and salicylic acid, when contained in foodstuffs.

Dr. Wiley said that the expulsion of those and kindred drugs from the body is performed almost entirely by the kidneys, and that he is satisfied the term of American life would be lengthened if the use of such drugs in foods were wholly discontinued. He said he was convinced that kidney diseases, so prevalent among Americans, is partly the result of constant introduction into the system of such preservative substances as benzoate of soda, carried in foods.

Discussing sulphur dioxide and its injurious effects, Dr. Wiley told the committee of a discovery just made that salt solution is a perfect substitute for sulphur in the whitening and drying of fruit. He exhibited samples of apples dried experimentally by the bureau. The sulphured fruit was not so white or as tender as salt cured.

The committee was informed by Dr. Wiley of plans to teach the farmers of the United States to make denatured alcohol. Next August he proposed to erect a still at the bureau of chemistry and operate it himself for two or three months, producing denatured alcohol daily from damaged fruit and vegetable substances, such as can be bought cheaply in the market.

He has invited the agricultural college of each state and territory to send a reporter to Washington to observe his still and master the process.

"The law permitting the free distillation of denatured alcohol," said he, "has not benefited the farmers of the country at all, for they do not know how to build a still or run one. I propose to teach them, through the agricultural college, if they want to learn. Denatured alcohol is an excellent fuel, and makes a fine light. As it can be manufactured from farm waste, the farmers ought to avail themselves of the new law permitting it to be made without imposition of revenue tax."

DAKOTAS

AMBITIOUS TURK MAY LOSE CLAIM

Denied Citizenship, Cannot Prove Up on North Dakota Land.

Jamestown, N. D., Jan. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—An unusual question has arisen in the case of Moustafa Malmond Mounnauar, a Turk, who has taken a claim ten miles from here. On July 3, 1905, he filed on a claim and on Sept. 9, 1907, made final proof. He paid $400 for the land and took a receipt therefor, the proof being sent to the general land office in the usual way. Several days ago he made application here for citizen's papers. From the Washington department an order now comes to resist the naturalization of the applicant, supposed to be a Turk.

Now the question as to what effect this will have on his claims to his homestead arises. If the effort to deny his naturalization is successful and he is denied citizenship and the issuance of his intention was unwarranted, it looks as though Mounnauar will be out his land. It is said that there are many such cases in North Dakota and the outcome will be watched with interest.

SAYS CANNON IS A DESPOT

Represenative Shackleford Attacks Power of Speaker.

Washington, Jan. 25.—An attack on the power of the speaker was made in the house yesterday by Mr. Shackleford of Missouri during the consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill. He said Speaker Cannon was the "abiest, boldest champion of autocracy of this age," and declared that the speaker exercised " a greater despotism than exists in any monarchy in Europe."

Speaker Cannon, at this juncture, entered the chamber and, amid applause, took a seat in front of Mr. Shackelford, who asserted that before any bill could pass, "you must bend your noble bodies forward in proper pose, fold your hands, and say, 'Oh, Lord Uncle Joe, thy will be done and not mine.'"

Speaker Cannon laughed.

Mr. Shackleford protested against the policy of "one man power as in violation of the law," and urged the members "to break down this autocracy and rules in order that the people's representatives may do the things they want done."

RICH AMERICAN WOMAN ELOPES

Great Stir in an English-Speaking Colony in France.

Hyeres, France, Jan. 25.—The simultaneous disappearance of Mrs. Henry Addison Alexander, daughter of the late Gen. Joseph T. Torrence of Chicago, and William Graham Blakeston, a London attorney, has caused a great stir in the English-speaking colony here. Mr. Alexander, who formerly was counsel for the American embassy at Paris, received his first notice of the elopement in a note which he found in his home on his return from a visit. The note was signed by his wife's name, and gave no explanation except the brief sentence: "I cannot live with you again. Goodbye."

Mr. Alexander declares that the only reason he could advance for the elopement was a desire on the part of the Englishman to secure possession of the fortune of Mrs. Alexander, a large part of which she inherited upon the death of her father, a wealthy railroad man.

Mr. Alexander declared his wife has not been mentally sound for several years past, as the result of a severe illness. She was easily influenced and Blakestone, he said, is seeking to take advantage of that to advance his own financial interests.

Mrs. Alexander was the only daughter of a picturesque and rich old Chicagoan, who is remembered for his interest in coaching. It was as Mrs. Kinsley Magoun that she was best known in Chicago. She was a dashing woman, fond of horses, rich clothes and late suppers. Kinsley Magoun died in 1898, and his widow received $1,000,000.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Many Manufacturers Resume and Money is More Abundant.

New York, Jan. 25.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Review of Trade says: More manufacturing plants have resumed, and money is abundant at easy terms, but business feels the weakened purchasing power of thousands still unemployed. Buyers have arrived in large numbers in the local jobbing dry goods market, placing fair orders at the lower prices named on some descriptions, and this forward business was also liberal at large centers. Mercantile collections continue to improve, although still backward at many points. Industrial news is slightly more encouraging on the whole, but there is much idle machinery, and the coal output has been curtailed on that account and with the tardiness of winter.

A little better demand is noted for products of iron and steel, and more plants have resumed, until it is probable that one-half the capacity is in operation. Results thus far have been accomplished without material concessions in prices. Building operations are resuming to some extent, and structural steel was also taken for railroad bridges. Irregularity in textile fabrics was caused by the reduction of certain prices by leading houses, stimulating the movement of merchandise at second-hand. Export trade has improved slightly. China's purchases have been resumed, and inquiries are coming from the Red sea. In woolen goods the only change is the increase in the number of lines opened, but actual sales are not improved, although buyers are more numerous.

Footwear buyers are still in the Boston market, but sales have fallen short of expectations, and jobbers are evidently disposed to operate conservatively. It is estimated that sales thus far are 25 per cent below normal, with Russian calf goods the most active. Improvement is shown in leather, one prominent New England shoe manufacturer placing a large contract for Hemlock sole, and another bid was rejected, although the order was large and the concession demanded only half a cent.

A better tone is recorded in the hide market, tanners exhibiting more interest, and a substantial volume of business was transacted.

EATEN BY ALLIGATORS ON THEIR BRIDAL TOUR.

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 25.—Two Americans, a young man and a young woman, apparently on their bridal tour, were eaten alive by alligators in the Balsas river, a stream forming the boundary between the state of Michoacan and Guerrerra, in Mexico. Nobody knows anything about their identity.

About a month ago, the couple hired a small boat and stocked it with provisions, arms, camp coulpage and, loading on a trunk filled with clothing, went down the river. A short ways down the trunk fell overboard and, although they stopped and paid the natives to dive for it, it was lost. The natives warned them not to continue the journey, as the stream is full of rapids and in the swampy places is inhabited by myriads of alligators.

The young couple continued and nothing more was heard of them until ten days ago, when the wrecked boat was found in one of the swampy regions torn and chewed by alligators, and near by was the body of the young man partially eaten by the reptiles.

CASTAWAYS LIVED EIGHT MONTHS ON DESERT ISLE.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 25.—Cast away for eight months on Disappointment island, fifteen survivors of the British bark, Dundonald lived for that time on sea food and birds and by banking the fires made six matches last them. The Dundonald was wrecked March 7, on Disappointment island, which is 200 miles south of New Zealand. Of the crew of twenty-eight only fifteen escaped.

The survivors by utilizing the sails and other articles saved from the wreck made rude huts, covering them with sods and stones. In one of these the fire was made and carefully banked and watched all that time. By unraveling the sails, fish lines were made, also snares for birds.

It was known that the government maintained a food depot on Auckland island, five miles away, and after four months a boat, rude and frail, was rigged up. The first trip was a disappointment. But after several trials, the depot was found and then the boat made several trips until all had been carried across the channel.

A passing steamer, the Hinemesa, saws the signals of distress and picked up the party. They had suffered severely from cold and lack of proper food.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITIES

this greater consideration from their employers, and he has stated that he proposes to urge this bill to a vote at the earliest feasible time. In discussing his bill, Senator Knox said:

"I have drawn this bill with a view to meeting the objections of the supreme court to the former law. Congress will be obliged to take up this question, for the men employed upon the railroads are entitled to a more humane law than that now in effect. The bill I have drawn will, I believe, prove effective, but I am not irrevocably committed to its phraseology. Personally I will welcome all suggestions bearing upon the subject, and I feel sure that from this and other bills that will be referred to, the judiciary committee, the committee will be able to report a bill entirely satisfactory and that will stand the test of the courts."

Edward A. Moseley, secretary of the interstate commerce commission, is very much in favor of the Knox bill. In discussing it he said:

"By lawyers who heard the decision of the supreme court this bill of Senator Knox is said to completely cure the fault found in the law that was declared unconstitutional. The Knox bill is in line with the senator's action heretofore. He has always been heartily in sympathy with efforts to ameliorate conditions surrounding labor. While attorney general, he introduced an innovation by which the United States was allowed to intervene in a private suit to sustain the validity of a statute. That case was what is known as the 'Johnson' case, and the action of the department of justice, of which Senator Knox was then the head, resulted in having the statute declared valid and practically revived. His action then resulted in the enforcement of the safety appliance act, and recent statistics show that thereby deaths and injury to employes engaged in train service, and in coupling and uncoupling cars, have not increased, while other accidents have largely increased."

WHEAT HAS SOFT TONE

Heavy Selling Puts the Prices Off in America.

Flax is Unchanged at the Close in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 25.—Wheat was soft at the close in the American markets today. Chicago and New York were selling wheat during all the session and the other markets could but follow suit.

Cables were higher and the Northwestern and Southwestern situations are looked upon as bullish, but those facts could not buoy up today's market.

There was slight support to the market at any stage and the bears had everything their own way.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments of wheat this week at 10,440,000 bushels, of which quantity Europe is expected to take about 9,200,00 bushels.

Liverpool closed ¾d higher. Paris unchanged to ¼c lower and Berlin and Budapest ¾c higher.

The May option closed 2¼c lower in Duluth, 2⅝-3c lower in Chicago, 1¾-2c lower in Minneapolis, 1¾c off in New York and 1½c lower in Winnipeg. The July option closed 2¾c lower in Duluth, 1¼-⅜c lower in Chicago, 1⅞c lower in Minneapolis, ¾c lower in New York and 1⅝c lower in Winnipeg.

May corn closed a shade higher in Chicago and ⅛@¼d higher in Liverpool. May oats closed ¾c lower in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"The undertone was steady in the speculative wheat market at the start, although values were unchanged. There was some disposition shown to realize and for a time offerings were larger, the late firmness in America yesterday being offset by the surprisingly heavy weekly exports from Australia. Following the opening and during the morning, the market became steady and prices advanced ¾d on the lighter Argentine offerings and the firmness of these offerings from first hands. Values at the close were ⅝d higher than Friday."

"Corn was steady and ¼d to ½d higher at the opening and continued unchanged during the trading. Support was the result of the firmness in America yesterday and the predictions of smaller American shipments to Liverpool. The market at the close was firm and ½d to ¾d up from Friday."

Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 491,000 bus.

Clearances of corn were 199,899 bus.

Wheat was rather quiet during the session in the Duluth market. May wheat opened ⅜c lower at $1.09¼, bid, went off to $1.09⅛ during the first hour, reacted to $1.10 and fell off to $1.09⅜, a loss of 2⅜c from yesterday. July wheat closed at $1.09¼, a loss of 2⅜c from yesterday.

Durum wheat closed 2c lower and cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was steady during the day, with trading fairly active at times. May flax opened ⅛c lower at $1.20, advanced to $1.21¼ and ranged between that and $1.20¼ during the rest of the session, closing at $1.20¾, unchanged from yesterday. July flax closed unchanged from yesterday at $1.22¾.

Oats closed ⅛c lower and other coarse grains were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Despite Firm Cables, Profit-Selling Causes Weakness in Wheat.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Despite firm cables, the wheat market was weak today because of selling by holders who were disposed to take profits. May wheat opened unchanged at $1.02¾ and sold at $1.01¾@⅞. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 339 cars against 389 cars last week and 217 cars one year ago.

The market weakened badly just before the close on continued liquidation. The close was weak with May 2⅜c lower, at $1.00¾.

The corn market was weak in sympathy with wheat and because of the continued cold weather throughout the Northwest. May corn opened ⅛c to ¼c lower to a shade higher at 51¼c to 51⅜c, and sold at 09¾c. Local receipts were 393 cars, with one of contract grade.

Prices sagged off in sympathy with wheat. The close was weak with May ⅝@⅞c to ⅞@1c lower, at 60¼@⅝c.

The oats market was weak in sympathy with wheat and corn. May oats opened ¼c lower at 54¾c, and sold at 54c. Local receipts were 126 cars.

The provisions market opened firm because of a 10c advance in the price of live hogs, but later weakened along with grain. May pork opened 7½c to 10c higher at $13.25 to $13.27½ and sold at $13.20. Lard was 2½@5c higher at $8.02½. Ribs were 5c higher at $7.05.

Close: Wheat, May, $1.00¾; July, 97¼@¾c; September, 94⅝c. Corn, May, 60½@⅝c; July, 59@59¾c; September, 58¾c. Oats, May, old, 53¾c; May, 51½c; July, old, 46¼c; July, 44½c; September, 38⅜c. Pork, January, $12.47½; May, $12.97½. Lard, January, $7.87½; May, $7.92½c. Ribs, January, $6.57½@6.60; May, $6.90@6.92½. Rye, cash, 83@85c. Barley, cash, 82@96c. Timothy, March, $4.80. Clover, March, $17.25. Cash wheat, No. 2 red, 98@99c; No. 3 red, 96@99c; No. 2 hard, 98c@$1.01¾; No. 3 hard, 96c@$1.02¾; No. 3 spring, $1@1.08; others, nothing doing. Corn, No. 2, nothing doing; No. 3, 54c.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Makes a Sharp Decline on the Heavy Selling of May.

Minneapolis, Jan. 25.—Wheat made a May. The big shipments from Australia although they had little effect in Europe, were bearish, and in connection with the Argentine shipments of yesterday, made it look as if Europe will get more wheat from competing countries than was figured on when the new year began, and that Northwest stocks will not be so heavily drawn upon for export. Minneapolis elevator stocks meanwhile are increasing. For the week the increase was 548,000 bushels, which brings the total just above the 8,000,000 line and with an increase of 75,000 bus for one day. Since making up the weekly report there is now 8,100,000 bus of wheat in Minneapolis storage. With receipts today of 273 cars against 173 a year ago, and the prediction of big receipts on Monday, the pit turned bearish, and especially when selling began here, that was found to come from Chicago. May wheat, having closed yesterday at $1.10 @1.10¼, sold down today to $1.08, closing at $1.08⅛. July closed at $1.09⅝@¾. May oats closed at 49c.

Cash wheat, the lower in price was firm, relative to the option and 1¼c over May for No. 1 northern, and ½@1c under for No. 2. The tendency is for No. 1 and No. 2 to sell closer together. Millers were buyers. No. 1 northern closed $1.09, sport or to arrive; No. 2 northern $1.06¾@1.07, spot and $1.07 to arrive; No. 3, $1.02@1.04.

Flour shipments were the largest for some time, 96,894 barrels. This reflects business done a week or so ago. Today there was a holding off tendency on the part of the buyers, on the weakness in wheat, but if flour quotations are reduced, or if wheat steadies on Monday and flour remains unchanged, millers expect orders to come freely, as there is considerable domestic business and a little foreign inquiry. First patents, $5.40@5.60; second patents, $5.35 @5.50; first clears, $4.30@4.40; second clears, $3.50@3.60.

Barley was dull and steady, with a little weaker demand for the reason that a big run is expected on Monday, and many buyers held off to wait for it. Values were about even with yesterday, quality considered. Range, 75@ 94c. Flax closed $1.17¾. Demand only fair. Bran in bulk, $20.00@20.25.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.08¾; July, $1.08⅝ @⅞; No. 1 hard, $1.12; No. 1 northern, $1.09; No. 2 northern, $1.06¾@1.07; No. 3 northern, $1.02@1.04.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The local market again broke away from the influence of Amalgamated, Old Dominion, Utah, Consolidated and Copper Range, showing good advances. North Butte was weak on selling by people who are putting the money into Amalgamated. Copper Range is scarce and advanced a point on 200 shares, and good buying comes from New York and would indicate higher prices.

• • •

Boston to Martin Rosendahl: Our market opened quiet and without feature, with prices holding steady. Activity was in North Butte, Butte Coalition and Isle Royale. Trading has dropped off quite a little in the last few days and on the decline offerings are very light ,showing there is no pressure to sell. We look for a trader's market to continue. Think coppers can be bought on all setbacks.

• • •

Gay & Sturgis: Today's market was rather reactionary and looks as though it will not resume its upward course just at present. In Boston, Old Dominion, Utah Consolidated and Isle Royale were features ,advancing materially. We hear that Wrenn Bros. bought about 4,000 Isle Royale today. The money market is gradually assuming normal conditions again. The bank statement made a very good showing. Considering the dullness in the New York market, Boston broadened out and looks as though it would break away from New York.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Jan. 25.—Cotton market opened steady at an advance of 10@14 points with active months showing a net gain of 12@15 points during the first few minutes, as a result of the Lancashire settlement, bullish week-end figures and covering. There was no sign of aggressive bull support, however, and the market later eased off to within 5@6 points of last night's finals, under realizing, with business quiet and the tone nervous.

FIRMNESS IN STOCKS

Market Was Dull, But Rather Fairly Strong Throughout.

Northern Pacific Was Again the Feature of Strength.

New York, Jan. 25.—Opening prices of stocks moved toward recovery today from yesterday's decline. Business was scanty and the gains generally were small. Reading, Delaware & Hudson, American Smelting, and Utah Copper rose 1 and Northern Pacific and Missouri Pacific large fractions. Tennessee Copper, International Paper preferred declined 1.

Some of the representative stocks were lifted sharply before the demand ran out and invited realizing which wiped out the major portion of the advances. These became exceeding dull when the market ran off, and increased when prices began to rise again. Delaware & Hudson gained 2⅝, American Sugar 2¼, American Smelting 1½, Northern Pacific 1¼ and Union Pacific and Great Northern preferred 1. International Paper preferred and American Telephone and Telegraph yielded 2.

The market closed steady. A reaction in Delaware & Hudson to 1½ below the low point last night started prices downwards, and a 2 point rise in Northern Pacific arrested the decline. Canadian Southern fell 3¾ and Minneapolis & St. Louis preferred, Mackay companies and Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred 1. Illinois Central rose 2. Mexican Central 1½. International Pump 1¼ and Great Northern Ore Certificates and Northwestern preferred 1.

Stock Gossip.

New York to Walter W. Carr: The stock market, today, has been dull, but ruled rather firm throughout, following the better tone abroad and the action of the Bank of Germany, together with the good bank statement. Northern Pacific was again the feature of strength, gaining about two points. In the industrial list, Smelters, Sugar and Coppers were firm and steel steady. The bank statement was really better than expected.

VERNICT FAVORS DEFENDANT

Jury Finds August Benson's Receipt Was for $150.

The jury in the civil action of Twohy-Elmon Mercantile company against August Benson and others returned a verdict late yesterday afternoon awarding damages in the amount of $29.06 to the plaintiff. The verdict was really a verdict for the defendants, who run a store on the range, in that the plaintiff company sued to recover $160 claimed to be owing it on a bill of goods. The question at issue was whether the defendants really paid one F. M. Monahan, formerly a salesman for the mercantile company, $150, for which they exhibited a receipt, or whether they paid Monahan only $50. Monahan claimed they paid him but $50, for which he gave a receipt. The defendants claim they paid Monahan $150 and exhibited the receipt for the same. The receipt showed that it had first been made for $50 and afterwards the word "One" and figure "1" had been inserted. The defendants claimed the changes were made by Monahan when he was paid $150, instead of $50.

FAMILIES BROKEN UP.

Three Mothers Are Separated From Children in Court.

In the juvenile court this morning there was a mournful scene when the court decreed the separation of three families of children from their mothers. The mother was the sole surviving parent in each case. The separations were deemed necessary for the good of all concerned, as the mothers were unable longer to support their children and give them the care that they needed. Most of the children will probably be sent to the state public school.

VICTORY IN HARD GAME

Duluth Y. M. C. A. Wins Basketball Game at Bemidji, 18 to 17.

Bemidji Players Claim a Tie Score With Little Foundation.

Stiff and sore after a hard game, but happy in victory, the members of the Duluth Y. M. C. A. basketball team returned this morning from Bemidji, where they defeated the Bemidji five last night by a score of 18 to 17 and won the championship of Northern Minnesota. Their right to the title is disputed, however, as Bemidji claimed a tie, but the claims of the Duluth boys are well supported by the rules and they have no fear that the Bemidji version of the game will take precedence over their own.

For the Bemidji players personally, off the floor, and the Bemidji people, they have nothing but words of praise, but they severely condemn the lack of discipline and management of the game, which severely handicapped them. The Duluth boys had no timekeeper or scorer with them and they say the officials, to whom those duties were intrusted, were incompetent. The Bemidji players, they say, do not follow the technical points of the game, but play a travesty of their own invention, in which they are given to illegal practices, which were countenanced by the Bemidji official. The Duluth boys say roughness is their principal asset and they resented the calling of fouls by the Duluth official.

The dispute arose over the failure of Bemidji to provide a competent scorer and the fact that the referee did not know a rule, which would give the game to Duluth, aside from all other considerations. With six minutes to play, the Duluth boys say the score was 14 to 12 in their favor, with Bemidji claiming 12 to 12. Before the call of time, McLean and Dinham threw baskets for Duluth and the Bemidji players secured one basket from the field and one from a free throw, giving a score of 18 to 17. Bemidji claimed it was 17 to 17.

However, in throwing the last basket, Dinham was grossly fouled by one of the Bemidji players, and A. J. Frey, the physical director of the Y. M. C. A., who acted as umpire, called it. Duluth claimed one point on the foul and the right to a free throw, but Heffron, the referee, manager of the Bemidji team, disallowed the contention. On being shown the rule, he agreed that the Duluth contention was right, but the Bemidji players still claimed the tie score of 17 to 17. As a matter of fact, the score was 19 to 17. The rule covering the point follows:

"If a player, while trying for goal, is fouled by an opponent, and it is called by either the referee or umpire, the referee shall ward one point to the team whose player was fouled, and if the player succeeds in making a goal, it shall also count. This shall not interfere with an additional free throw for goal from foul line," Sec. 32, Rule XI, Spalding's Official Basketball Guide.

The game itself was a hard fought contest. On a strange floor, with the crowd continually encroaching on the players' floor, and their opponents adopting roughing tactics never encountered before by the Duluth boys, the Y. M. C. A. team played great basketball, and fairly earned a victory. Every man played his part well, and Dinham was the bright star. With the exception of one basket thrown by McLean, he threw every goal, and his work in breaking up combinations was great.

Duluth took the lead at the first, and held one or two points to the good all through the game. The score at half time was 6 to 7 in favor of Duluth.

Outside of the differences of the game itself, the boys were treated royally by the Bemidji players and people. A dinner followed the game, and it was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. There were no hard feelings over the result of the game, and the respective players will push their contentions.

The teams lined up as follows:

Duluth.	Position.	Bemidji.
Ballou	forward	Markham
Briggs	forward	Gell
Dinham	center	Brown
Smith	guard	Collins
McLean	guard	Peterson

Officials—Heffron and Frey.

ARE FOLLOWING BURGLARY CLUES

Police Are After Men Who Broke in Hardware Store.

Chief Troyer and the detective force of the central station are busy running down clues in connection with the burglary of the Kelley Hardware company's store yesterday morning, when twenty-six revolvers were taken from a case in the front part of the store. There is little to work on and no arrests have yet been made.

Two or three bands of suspects, seen on the street yesterday morning about the time of the burglary, have been rounded up and every slender thread, which might lead to the apprehension of the guilty parties is being followed to the end. The burglary was one of the boldest in Duluth in a long while, and the burglars have shown skill in covering their tracks.

DELEGATES REFUSE TO SEAT PAT DOLAN.

Indianapolis, Jan. 25.—Delegates to the convention of the United Mine Workers of America, by unanimous vote today refused to seat Patrick Dolan of Reising, Pa., former president of the miners of the Pittsburg district. The report of the credentials committee made no recommendation and the whole matter was laid on the table without a dissenting vote. President Mitchell called for the report of the resolutions committee. Most of the resolutions reported on were of minor importance. The convention invited Secretary Treasurer Haywood of the Western Federation of Miners to address it Monday.

FOUR WITNESSES FOR THAW CASE

Arrive in New York on Steamship Adriatic From Europe.

New York, Jan. 25.—Four witnesses, who are expected to testify for the defense in the trial of Harry K. Thaw for the killing of Stanford White arrived here today on the steamer Adriatic from Europe. The big steamship had considerable difficulty in getting past Sandy Hook because of the heavy seas and it was on account of this and the storm of snow that the witnesses did not land yesterday. Three of the witnesses who came on the vessel are physicians and the fourth is a nurse, who it is asserted attended Thaw while he was ill in Europe. The identity of the Thaw witnesses had been a closely guarded secret and with one exception the names had not become known when the steamer arrived today. The known witness is Dr. Gauja of Switzerland, who treated Thaw in that country four years ago.

Good News.

A great manufacturing company is about to be incorporated to manufacture three great inventions, to employ a large number of carpenters, finishers, tinners, plumbers and painters. Mechanics, wanting to secure steady work and good pay, should at once register as stockholders in this new enterprise to become independent of any lockouts. For particulars see Jewell at once, the proposed managing director, 910½ West Fourth street, Duluth.

A "McClure" Window.

Ouelette & Co., 327 West Superior street, booksellers and stationers, have a very unique and attractive display in their east window. In the center is the good ship "McClure" and on the sides and back are the front covers of McClure magazine for February. The display is a very striking one and quite a little crowd was to be seen gathered around it all day.

AN ATTRACTIVE HOME IN DULUTH WHICH CAN BE BUILT FOR $3,700

Utility is the keynote of this simple design. Its unpretentious exterior, the low mullioned windows, dark finished wood work, and stucco walls, present a truly homelike appearance. It is of distinctly good style. As to interior the rooms are especially well proportioned in regard to each other, the principal object being to make all rooms of commodious size, and still keep the cost within moderate means. No space has been sacrificed by high ceilings, extensive hallways, spare rooms, and unnecessary stairs.

The living room is a wide, sunny apartment. An attractive feature of the room is the delightful ingle-nook with its brick fireplace and wide hearth, deep seats, book shelves, and narrow beaded casement windows.

An inviting little hall, while designed merely for entrance, gives desired access to all parts of the house without awkward steps and angles.

The long dining room is well proportioned for its use, allowing space for wall furniture at the ends. French casement windows opening ont to the veranda add interest to the room. The connection to the kitchen is direct. The kitchen is light and nicely arranged for kitchen equipment. A large pantry with refrigerator, cupboards, drawers, flour-bins, etc., is at the rear. The rear entry serves also as a cellar entrance, and contains the only stairway to the basement.

A neat and easy stairway ascends to the second story. Access to the deck over the front porch is gained from the stairway.

Three large pleasant bedrooms with large closets are planned in the second story. The bath room, of ample size, is conveniently accessible from every room. This is a good feature. The linen closet opens to the hallway. A clothes chute is provided from bath room to basement with opening also in kitchen. Stairs are arranged to attic which is left unfinished.

The basement is of stone with cement floors and is divided into laundry, heater room, fuel room, and cellar.

The floors throughout the first and second stories are of hardwood. The finish in first story is of Fir stained, and in second story of pine, painted.

Size of the building is 29 feet by 40 feet and the heights as follows: basement, 7 feet; first story, 9 feet; second story, 8½ feet.

In Duluth and vicinity, such a home would cost to build, including heating and plumbing, $3,700. Anthony Puck, architect, Duluth, Minn.

ARE NOT MAD.

But Politics Was Unexpected at Bethany Church Meeting.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The Evening Herald has had a good deal to say about the temperance meeting in our church at which W. S. Moore spoke, and in every article it has endeavored to give the impression that the pastor and people, in consequence of this speech, have become very angry with Mr. Moore and his party, and therefore stand ready to join the other party. But we pretend to know something about this ourselves, and, with your permission, I will tell you all about it. The fact is this, that I am very much interested in temperance, and therefore I advocated the meetings which were held, and helped to arrange for them. My intention was to discuss temperance without the mention of any name or party, but leave to the people to draw out the logical conclusions, which would, of course, lead them to vote for the right men. Now, I had not the time to see Mr. Moore myself in regard to the speaking, so another member of the committee did that, but failed, as I understand it, to make it clear to Mr. Moore that we wanted no men or parties mentioned, but simply the temperance cause presented from a business man's point of view. But Mr. Moore was interested more in results than in talk, and therefore went about the matter in dead earnest, as a business man should do. The whole congregation seemed to enjoy it, and I have not yet met a member of my church who has expressed any disapproval of what Mr. Moore said. This evening I have had a meeting of the trustees and deacons, among whom are both Republicans and Democrats, and every one of them declared that they were for Haven and Moe, whose records are clean in regard to temperance. We have many Democrats who are working hard to see these men elected. The church is a unit in this matter, as far as the pastor and council know. The "prominent member" of whom The Herald spoke Wednesday night must be some one who has not attended the church more than at one or two funerals for a period of some years, and who has now turned away from his party for fear of a tight lid, as he seems to have plenty of time for the saloon but none for the church of which he is "a prominent" member.

As for myself, I endorse all that Mr. Moore said, though I know he would not have said it just then if he had known about the idea and agreement in regard to the meeting.

Yours for temperance and the enforcement of law and order.

CARL G. OLSON.

Duluth, Jan. 24.

BRACKEN DECLARES RIGID QUARANTINE

Secretary of Board of Health Makes Good His Threat.

Says Council Ordinance Calls for "Shotgun" Restrictions.

In a letter to Health Commissioner D. D. Murray, Dr. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health, has declared the "shotgun" quarantine, which he promised the city council in the event of their passing an ordinance nullifying the action of the state board on the smallpox vaccination question.

Quoting the council ordinance to show that the council calls for quarantine under the old rules of the state board, he points out that the old rules provide for a quarantine of the strictest kind and he calls upon Dr. Murray to enforce it, even if the employment of guards for the purpose is necessary. In passing the ordinance, the council gave it to be understood that the quarantine was no more severe than that which Dr. Murray maintained previously, but Dr. Bracken holds that a "shotgun" quarantine is provided for in the ordinance, and he takes steps to have that severe variety maintained.

Following is the letter to Dr. Murray:

"Your city council not liking the new regulations of the state board of health relative to smallpox, has undertaken to pass an ordinance offsetting the action of said board. The revised statutes of 1905, which gives the state board of health authority to make rules and regulations, gives precedence to an ordinance of a city of the first class over a regulation of the state board of health upon the same subject. Your council passed an ordinance which reads in part as follows:

"'It being the intention of this ordinance to provide for the promulgation by the officers of the city of the same quarantine regulations as have existed in this state immediately prior to Jan. 1, 1908, under rules promulgated by the state board of health.'

"Whether this ordinance, which does not provide any specific method of dealing with smallpox can legally displace the new regulations of the state board of health is a question which the courts must decide should any one who thinks he is unjustly detained under this ordinance bring suit against the city.

The Old Regulations.

"If this ordinance says anything it is that the old regulations of the state board of health—viz., those in force prior to Jan. 1, 1908—are still to be enforced by you. These regulations are as follows:

"1—The local health officer having knowledge of or having reason to suspect the existence of smallpox shall investigate, if necessary, and shall at once place under quarantine all smallpox patients and those having the care of or coming in contact with such patients, except the attending physician, health officer, sanitary inspector, or, in case of death, a licensed embalmer.

"The quarantine period for smallpox shall not be less than four weeks and may be longer. Quarantine must not be released until the health officer has satisfied himself that there is no further danger of infection from the patient. The quarantine must not be raised until four weeks or more, as the case may be, after the appearance of the last case in such a family or household.

"12—The local health officer shall keep all unvaccinated people known to have been exposed to a case of smallpox under strict supervision for a period of three weeks from the date of last exposure. Non-vaccinated individuals in a house quarantined for smallpox shall be kept under quarantine for a period of two weeks beyond that required for the last smallpox case, and after the disinfection of the house.

"13—Individuals found in a house with a smallpox patient and who show evidence of a recent successful vaccination, or will submit to vaccination within forty-eight (48) hours after first exposure, may be released from quarantine after a thorough disinfection of their person and clothing. Such individuals must not be permitted to return to the quarantined house.

"14—The apartments occupied by a smallpox patient shall be deemed infected, and when vacated by death or removal of the patient from quarantine with their contents, be thoroughly disinfected under the supervision of the local health officer. All persons having occupied such apartments during the quarantine period must have their clothing disinfected and take a disinfecting bath before being released from quarantine. All disinfection prescribed in this regulation shall be a part of the control of the disease.

"15—No milk, butter or other dairy product shall be sold or given to any party, or delivered at any creamery or butter factory, from a house quarantined because of the presence of smallpox therein.

"16—Every physician shall immediately report to the local health officer, in writing, the name of every patient under his care having smallpox, the state of his or her disease, and his or her place of dwelling. A report must be made for each case as it occurs in a family or household.

"17—Every physician shall report, in writing, to the local health officer, the death of any smallpox patient under his care within twelve hours thereafter.

"18—The local health officer of any city, village or township must report immediately to the secretary of the Minnesota state board of health all cases of smallpox occurring within his jurisdiction.

"You will note that these regulations call for:

Employ Guards If Necessary.

"1. The quarantine of the patient and all those who have the care or come in contact with such patient. This, of course, includes the entire household. You must satisfy yourself that a quarantine established on an entire family or household is strictly maintained even if it becomes necessary to employ guards. Your council should support you in such action, for it was admitted to me by one of them on a recent visit to Duluth that a strict quarantine could not be maintained without guards.

"2. The minimum quarantine period for smallpox under these regulations is four weeks. You will therefore see to it that no case is released in less than four weeks.

"3. The final quarantine period dates from the appearance of the disease in the last case of the family or household.

"4. The unvaccinated people known to have been exposed to smallpox must be kept under strict supervision for a period of three weeks from the date of the last exposure.

"5. Non-vaccinated people in a house quarantined for smallpox must be kept under quarantine for a period of two weeks beyond that required for the last smallpox case and after the disinfection of the house.

"6. Persons found in a house with a smallpox patient may be released from quarantine if they submit to vaccination within forty-eight hours of first exposure.

"7. In the event of your removal of a smallpox patient from a house, the unvaccinated who have not been or cannot be vaccinated within forty-eight hours of first exposure must stay in quarantine two weeks.

"8. Disinfection must be carried out as directed in the regulations. It is not necessary for me to dwell upon this point.

"9. Should smallpox appear in the family of any one selling milk or butter the sale of such products must be discontinued as long as the place is under quarantine.

"I am sure the state board of health can depend upon you to carry out these regulations, thus conforming with the wishes of your city council. The state board of health considers these regulations unnecessarily severe but, as your city council has seen fit to pass an ordinance establishing this standard and has further stated even after their attention was drawn to the indefinite character of the ordinance that the ordinance was all right and should be supported, the state board of health will expect you to see that it is observed to the letter. Very truly,

"H. W. BRACKEN,
"Secretary and Executive Officer."

"NOTHING DOING" ON INTERVIEWS

Mrs. "Pat" Campbell Shuns the Spotlight of Publicity.

"Is Mrs. Campbell here?"

"She don't stay here," said the polite hotel man, who isn't crazy about having the number of the subjects and their verbs agree.

"Oh, yes, I'm sure, she is. Mrs. P. Campbell, you know."

"I don't know her," said the clerk with an exclusive emphasis upon the "I," and an inflection upon the whole statement that she might now descend into the realm of the unknown.

"Oh, yes, I'm sure you must know her. Mrs. Patrick Campbell."

"Oh, Mrs. Patrick Campbell?"

"Yes, Mrs. Patrick Campbell."

"Well, why didn't you say so?"

"Why I did say so."

"No, you didn't."

"Yes, I did."

"No, you——"

"Well, is she here?"

"Mrs. Patrick Campbell?"

"Yes, Mrs. Patrick Campbell."

"Naw, she isn't here."

"Well, where is she?"

"On her way."

"On her way, here?"

"Yes, on her way, here."

"Oh!"

The above is a good faithful interview with the great Mrs. Patrick Campbell and a Herald interviewer. It is hard to reach Mrs. Campbell. Her nerves are all worn out with dodging newspaper people since her encounter with the New York Herald. She is now surrounded with a group of silent, sphinxlike, looking retainers, who when you say "Paper, Mrs. Campbell, Interview," grab you by the forearm and hiss a "Ssh" in your ear and look stealthily around. By the time the would-be interviewer has recovered from that musical comedy by-play, the whole party has evaporated into thin air and then one finishes the interview with the hotel clerk.

Nice fellow, the hotel clerk!

VICTIM OF KNIFE LIKELY TO DIE

Assault Charge Against John Johnson May Become Manslaughter.

John Johnson, who is charged with assaulting and stabbing Sam Mattson with a knife, at White Lake, town of Biwabik, near McKinley, was brought to the county jail this morning by Deputy Sheriff Owen Gately, to await the action of the grand jury. Johnson was bound over by Justice of Peace L. N Keeler, on the charge of assault in the first degree, but it is probable that the charge will be changed to one of manslaughter before the grand jury meets and Mattson is said to be very low and the chances are against his recovery.

Johnson is claimed to have stabbed Mattson in the back as the latter was stooping over to fix the fire in his cabin. The stabbing affray is said to have followed a quarrel between the two men.

Deputy Sheriff Gately also brought down John Niemi from Virginia, who has been bound over to the grand jury on the charge of forgery. Niemi is claimed to have passed a forged check for $64 on John Stitinovich.

BURNS HANDICAP.

Fourteen Enteries for Feature at the Emeryville Track.

San Francisco, Jan. 25.—The fifteenth Burns handicap is to be decided this afternoon. Fourteen horses have been entered for this most important feature of the western turf, when the champion thoroughbred of the winter season will be proclaimed but it is expected that at least three and possibly four will decline to race. The track at Emeryville is in very bad condition. The heavy rain of the past two days has converted the track into a veritable sea of mud and the race will be a test of fitness and stamina.

A large crowd is expected at the track and lovers of the thoroughbred are arriving from all directions to see the best horses in training on the coast contest for the purse of $10,000, which will be divided among the trio in the lead at the close of the one and a quarter miles struggle.

Despite his impost of 128 pounds Montgomery promises to be a staunch favorite with Clamor and Sidney F., standing well with many backers.

POLICE ARE SUSPICIOUS

Of Dave Swenson's Honesty, So He is Arrested.

Suspicions of the police about the honesty of Dave Swenson led them to lock him up last night, after he had attempted to cash a check for $40.75 at a Superior street store. Swenson is being held pending an investigation of the worth of the check.

The check involved was drawn on the Old National Bank of Seattle, Wash., and signed for Porter Brothers, by C. B. Christopherson. It was in payment for labor, so Swenson said.

RAILROADS

START WORK ON BRIDGE

Connections With Winnipeg Will be Made in March.

Bridge Across Rainy Lake Will be Ready by That Time.

Local officials of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg road have received information to the effect that the contractor will begin work on the iron work of the bridge across the Rainy river, connecting the road with the Canadian Northern, next month. It is expected that operations in this direction will begin about Feb. 15. This means that the structure will be complete and ready for trains in March, and through trains to Winnipeg will doubtless be running in April.

Most of the bridge work already is completed, but the iron portions are not yet in place. It will take about thirty days to finish the placing of the iron parts. The Canadian Northern is now working on its extension to the river, to connect with the Rainy Lake road at the bridge, and this extension will be completed and ready for the operation of trains by the time the bridge is finished.

A BIG MEETING.

Northern Railway Club Has an Attendance of Over 200.

More than 200 men attended the meeting of the Northern Railway club, held in the Commercial club rooms, last evening. Twenty-five new applications for membership were received, and even a larger number than that is in sight for the next meeting.

E. L. Millar read a paper on the subject, "Did the Railroads Make This Country or Did This Country Make the Railroads?" He said each helped to make the other, that they have gone hand in hand. What helps the country helps the railroads, and what helps the railroads helps the country. It was a very interesting paper.

SCIENTIFIC METHODS CURE SURGICAL DISEASES WITHOUT KNIFE

DRUGGING THE SYSTEM SLOWLY KILLS THOUSANDS.

The human body is more complex than any machine or device ever invented, and if anything is going wrong with any of its parts, the ends of the nerves send the message by their numerous strings up to the brain and there the danger is manifesting itself in pain, because of the inflammation, pressure, or decay which impedes upon the nerves of the suffering parts. People make the greatest mistakes in constantly drugging and doping the body in order to rid themselves of the pain, and instead of going to doctors who know how to cure chronic diseases they go to the drug stores, buy some dope which deadens and poisons the nerves. Meanwhile the distructive work of the disease goes right on and the body slowly will be destructed; that is the reason why people lived longer in olden times when they didn't have so many drugs and pain killers. We are getting away too far from nature and that is the reason our young people are looking old and die young.

Science has made a greater advance in the last 50 years than it did in 2,000 years previously, and the method of dissolving chronic pathological lesions and diseased organs is one of the greatest achievements of medical specialists. In Duluth, the Progressive Medical Specialists on Superior street and Lake avenue are the only ones who practice this method. A man don't like to have steel, sharp and cutting, put into his abdomen to get rid of his gallstones or appendix. Nor does he like to have the knife or red hot iron put into his rectum to be relieved of piles or cancer or a sharp cutting instrument put into his bladder to cut a stricture or prostatic gland. That method of getting rid of diseases is old and barbarious. This process of dissolving is the most wonderful, though natural, process. There is no pain nor cutting nor blood shedding, and it never fails to get results in the hands of these Expert Specialists. You can be cured by this proces of Cancer, RUPTURE, kidney trouble, lung and throat disease, paralysis, skin diseases, syphylis, rheumatism, liver, varicocele, hydrocele, gleet, gonorrhoea, bladder trouble. Or if you are an unfortunate victim which forces you to practice that secret vice which leads you to ruin, loss of manhood and the insane asylum, you can be cured and made happy. Remember that these doctors are Experts in men's diseases and can cure you of your trouble, no matter how long you may have had it. You may consult them without any cost from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. and it would pay you to have their opinion and advice free of charge.

ALLEGED PENNSYLVANIA BOODLERS PUT ON TRIAL FOR LOOTING TREASURY

In Constructing and Furnishing the New State Capitol.

Great Interest Taken in Proceedings by the Public.

A Formidable Array of Legal Talent for Both Sides.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 27.—Not since the trial of United States Senator M. S. Quay ten years ago for conspiracy to wreck a Philadelphia bank has there been such interest in a trial as has been manifested throughout Pennsylvania in the proceedings begun today against the men charged with conspiracy to loot the state treasury in connection with the construction and furnishing of the big state capitol building. Since the revelations of nearly two years ago in which some of the foremost men of the state were involved, the imposing white marble structure on Capitol Hill, with its ornate furnishings and frescoes has been a point of great interest to curiosity seekers and citizens generally, excursionists have come from all over the state inspired by a desire to see the bronze chandeliers alleged to be loaded with tons of lead, the common place furniture paid for at a fabulous price "per foot" and the paintings and frescoeing for which there is said to have been an overcharge of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The trial of the alleged conspirators is being conducted in the dingy, old-fashioned county courthouse and its resources have been stretched to the limit to accommodate the defendants, attorneys and newspaper correspondents.

Jury Panel of Eighty Present.

A special jury panel of eighty is on hand and Judge George F. Kunkel, once a member of the legislature and a newcomer on the Pennsylvania bench is presiding. Judge Kunkel has expressed a determination to push the trial with the least possible delay and his manner in the preliminary proceedings incident to the great trial has led to the conclusion that he will not tolerate dilatory tactics.

The first of the five conspiracy cases listed for trial involves payments of $49,417.80 for sofas, tables and clothes trees. The items were paid for by the state at the rate of $18.40 "per foot." The commonwealth alleges that frauds to the amount of $19,308.40 were perpetrated. The defendants in these five cases are Chief Contractor John H. Sanderson and Architect Joseph M. Huston of Philadelphia; Former Auditor William P. Snyder of Spring City; Former State Treasurer William L. Mathues of Media and James M. Shumaker of Johnstown, former superintendent of grounds and buildings. Neither Congressman H. Burd Cassel of the Pennsylvania Construction company or the remaining eight defendants in the prosecutions figure in these conspiracy cases.

Able Counsel on Both Sides.

The prosecution is being conducted by Attorney General Todd, James Scarlet, chief counsel for the legislative investigation commission; Assistant Deputy Attorney General Jesse Cunningham; State Senator John E. Fox of Harrisburg, and District Attorney John F. Weiss. The defendants are represented by George S. Graham, A. S. L. Shields, P. F. Rothermal, Jr., ex-Judge A. M. Beitler, Samuel M. Clement, Jr., of Philadelphia; Former Attorney General William U. Hensel, Lancaster; William I. Schaffner, Media; Charles H. Bergner, Lyman D. Gilbert and State Representative Edward E. Beidleman of Harrisburg.

Sanderson supplied most of the furnishings of the capitol. His contract amounted to $5,487,899.45, and his profits in some instances are alleged to have been as much as 4,000 per cent. Huston designed the building and furnishings, his commissions amounting to $415,631.91.

Shumaker is accused of having failed to audit the bills of Sanderson, and is also charged with having accepted Huston's certification that the work was up to the specifications and contract.

Mathues is alleged to have paid the bills of the contractors without having them audited.

Snyder is charged with non-performance of duty in not auditing the bills.

The trial, which was scheduled to begin at 10 o'clock, was delayed slightly by the clearing up of other cases before the court.

THOUSANDS RESUME WORK

Rolling Mills and Collieries Start Up in Pennsylvania.

Pottsville, Pa., Jan. 27.—Two more big open hearth furnaces resumed work here today, while the 19-inch and 28-inch rolling mill departments, at the Eastern Steel company's mill, also started up full handed. Tomorrow the 12-inch mill will resume. Thirty-eight collieries of the Reading Coal & Iron company, employing 30,000 men, who have been idle since Jan. 23, also went to work today, while 1,000 men at the same company's repair shops resumed on reduced hours.

JAPANESE SUSPECTED

Of Attempting to Rob San Francisco Armory of Plans.

Sharpshooters Frustrate the Scheme by Deadly Bullets.

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—The Call todays, says: Bullets fired with deadly intent by National Guard sharpshooters early yesterday morning frustrated a second attempt to rob the armory of Companies K and M, Fifth infantry of the National Guard. In the building, which is located at Buchanan and Walker streets, are kept valuable military maps of San Francisco's coast defense and topographical plans of the peninsula.

That the attack on the building was not a burglar's ordinary operation seems apparent from the persistency of the mysterious visitors. Early Saturday morning and again in the darkness of Sunday morning two men tried to gain an entrance into the premises. Fearing that a third attempt might be made, the officers in command, ordered the guard of soldiers doubled last night. Armed men watched the premises from nightfall Sunday until dawn this morning.

From the descriptions of the trespassers furnished the officers of the regiment by the sentries the authorities are working on the theory that Japanese spies were seeking to gain entrance to the secrets of the armory.

SECOND COLD SPELL SHORT

Temperature Again Rising All Over the Northwest.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—According to the United States weather forecaster the temperature here today was 5 degs. below zero, with warmer weather to come. This is only the second time this winer that the mercury has dropped so low, and the weather officials say this has been a remarkably warm winter for this climate. The lowest temperature in the Northwest, reported today, was 18 degs. below at Port Arthur, Ont.; 8 below at Winnipeg. Last night it was 18 below at Winnipeg. The weather is moderating all through the Northwest, as temperatures ranging from 26 to 34 above zero are the rule. At Helena, Mont., it is 30, and at Havre it is 38 above. Usually at these places the temperature at this time of the year is extremely cold. Yesterday the mercury at this time of the year is extremely cold. Yesterday the mercury at eight points registered 40 above. The indications are that the present cold is but a temporary wave, and not very cold. It is snowing in St. Paul today, but there is not enough snow on the ground for sleighing.

MRS. McDONALD SANE.

The Prosecution Says That She is Shamming Insanity.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—As a counter to frequent statements that Millionaire M. C. McDonald's widow, Mrs. Dora McDonald is insane and incapable of appreciating that she is on trial for the murder of Webster S. Guerin, Assistant State's Attorney William A. Rittenhouse comes forward with the announcement that the prosecution is certain she is shamming.

"In addition to the experts who made a personal examination of her for the state prior to the trial," he said last night, "we have had five allenists in the courtroom ever sinec the trial began last Monday watching Mrs. McDonald and making careful notes with regard to her condition.

"Without exception, they declare that the defendant is sane."

MUST RESIGN.

Magistrate Accused of Laxity in Court and of Bribe-Giving.

New York, Jan. 27.— Mayor McClellan has asked for the resignation of Magistrate Otto H. Droege, following a scandal as to conditions in the court over which he presides. The magistrate admitted publicly that he had paid $250 to a newspaper man to suppress a story which, it is alleged, described lax methods in his court. After consulting with a lawyer, the newspaper man accepted the money through a third person, and then published the fact in addition, to the original expose of the court methods. Mayor McClellan in his letter to the magistrate, regrets that the law does not vest in him the power of removal, and states that the public interest demands the magistrate's immediate resignation. Magistrate Droege declines to discuss the letter or the action he will take.

WITNESSES FROM LONDON TELL OF HARRY K. THAW'S CONDITION IN THAT CITY

PRESIDENT IS PLEASED

With Progress in Philippines as Shown by Taft's Report.

Islanders Making Advancement Toward Self Government.

Washington, Jan. 27.—A special report by the secretary of war was sent to congress today, accompanied by the following message from President Roosevelt:

To the senate and house of representatives: I transmit herewith the report of Secretary Taft upon his recent trip to the Philippines. I heartily concur in the recommendations he makes, and I call especial attention to the admirable work of Governor Smith and his associates. It is a subject for just national gratification that such a report as this can be made. No great civilized power has ever managed with such wisdom and disinterestedness the affairs of a people committed by the accident of war to its hands. If we had followed the advice of the misguided persons who wished us to turn the islands loose and let them suffer whatever fate might befall them, they would have already passed through a period of complete and bloody chaos, and would now undoubtedly be the possession of some other power which, there is every reason to believe would not have done as we have done; that it would not have striven to teach them how to govern themselves or to have developed them, as we have developed them, primarily in their own interests.

> Save only our attitude toward Cuba, I question whether there is a brighter page in the annals of international dealing between the strong and the weak than the page which tells of our doings in the Philippines.

I call especial attention to the admirably clear showing made by Secretary Taft of the fact that it would have been equally ruinous if we had yielded to the desires of those who

DIES ON WIFE'S GRAVE.

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 27.—Grief stricken over the recent death of his wife, Conrad Erde, 60 years of age, of Springfield, Ohio, committed suicide at her grave in Woodlawn cemetery by drinking carbolic acid last night. His body was stretched across the grave when found today.

Dr. Wells Diagnosed Case as One of Mental Disturbance.

Professional Nurse Says That His Acts Were Irrational.

Bingaman of Pittsburg the First Witness of Day.

New York, Jan. 27.—Dr. Charles Francis Bingaman, the Thaw family physician of Pittsburg, was put on the witness stand when court resumed today the trial of Harry K. Thaw for the killing of Stanford White. Dr. Bingaman told of the early symptoms of nervousness in Harry Thaw, saying he was first called to attend the boy when he was three years old. At that time his nervousness often bordered on convulsions. The attacks usually followed various children's diseases. Thaw slept badly as a child, requiring a relay of nurses most of the time.

Dr. Bingaman said that in the fall of 1903 he was called to attend Harry Thaw in Pittsburg and treated him for nervousness and melancholia. This was after Thaw's first trip abroad with Evelyn Nesbit. The witness saw Thaw several times in the Tombs after his arrest and the defendant always referred to the Madison Square Garden tragedy as the "act of Providence."

Thaw's acts and appearance in the prison impressed the witness as irrational.

It was of Dr. Bingaman that District Attorney Jerome said at the last trial, when Thaw's mental condition was under investigation:

"I had rather have the testimony of an old practitioner like this than all the experts you could put upon the stand."

The prosecutor's cross-examination today was very brief and courteous.

First of Foreign Witnesses.

Following Dr. Bingaman came the first of the foreign witnesses, Dr. Sidney Russell Wells of London, who was called to attend Thaw in the English capital in the early part of 1899.

"Mr. Thaw was in a very nervous condition," said Dr. Wells. "His pulse was extremely rapid and he complained of pains in the head. I diagnosed his case as one of mental disturbance."

On one of his visits to the defendant, witness said, he found his patient in a highly excitable state, despite the fact that his temperature was only 99 degs. He feared Thaw might harm himself. Thaw did not respond to treatment, even opiates failing, and Dr. Wells said he decided to send the young man to the Devonshire Nursing Association's hospital. On another visit he

GLADYS M. VANDERBILT BECOMES A COUNTESS

GLADYS VANDERBILT.

COUNT SZECHENYI.

New York, Jan. 27.—The wedding of Miss Gladys Moore Vanderbilt, daughter of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, to Count Laszlo Szechenyi, member of the Hungarian nobility, lieutenant of Hussars, and hereditary member of the Austro-Hungarian parliament, took place at the Fifth avenue home of the bride's mother, soon after noon today. The ceremony was performed in the presence of about 350 guests in the salon on the Fifth avenue side of the Vanderbilt residence. At one end of the long room an altar was placed under a bower of bending palm trees, the tops of which came together, forming an arch, under which the bridal party proceeded to the altar. About the trunks of the palms were twined thousands of orchids.

Accompanied by Brother.

Miss Vanderbilt was accompanied to the altar her elder brother, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and the count was accompanied by his best man, Count Anton Sigrain. The wedding ceremony was performed by Mgr. M. J. Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's cathedral, wearing purple silk vestments and lace cope. He was assisted by the Rev. John J. Byrne. The wedding chorus from Gaul's cantata, "Ruth," was sung by thirty boys of the St. Patrick's chancel choir, attired in surplices and red cassocks, accompanied by the organ, and assisted by the cathedral's male quartet.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin, with embroidery, point lace and garlands of orange blossoms. Her veil was of point lace, caught with sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and gardenias.

The Bridesmaids.

The bridesmaids were Miss Ruth Vanderbilt Twombly, her cousin, and Miss Dorothy Whitney, daughter of William C. Whitney. The bride was also attended by her little niece, Miss Flora Payne Whitney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whiteny.

Among the ushers were Count Stefan and Count Paul Esterhazy. Among the guests were Baron Hengelmuller von Hengelbar, the Austrian ambassador to the United States, and his wife, and Alfred and Reginald Vanderbilt, brothers of the bride.

Many of the most prominent members of New York society were among the guests, while outside the Vanderbilt residence a great crowd of the curious public thronged the sidewalks and street.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served, the guests being distributed at various tables throughout the house. All the rooms were beautifully decorated with palms and orchids.

This afternoon the Count and Countess Szechenyi will go to Newport, to remain for a week at the home of Reginald Vanderbilt.

STANDARD LOSES $150,000 BY FIRE

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 27.—A disastrous fire occurred at the new paraffin works of the Standard Oil company at Canton, a suburb of Baltimore today. Two tanks were ablaze and assistance was sent from Baltimore to check the flames. The oil was drawn from the tanks as fast as possible. Michael Kennedy, an employe of the Oil company was struck on the head with an iron pipe and badly injured.

The loss is estimated at $150,000 with no insurance.

PORTLAND SCORCHED

Maine City Has Second Big Fire Within a Week.

Blaze in Wholesale District Does Damage of $900,000.

Portland, Me., Jan. 27.—Fire which several times threatened to wipe out the business district of this city and which caused damage estimated at over $900,000, was kept confined to the block in which it started this morning, after almost ten hours fighting by Portland's firemen, aided by men and apparatus from several outside cities.

The fire started in the wholesale dry goods house of Milliken, Cousens & Co., and it was in their half of the building that the greater part of the loss was sustained.

Later, when the fire was thought to be under control, the other half of the building occupied, by A. F. Toy & Sons, was invaded by the flames, which had made their way through the roof and a party wall simultaneously and the $250,000 stock of boots and shoes was ruined.

Were No Casualties.

A remarkable feature of the fire was the entire absence of casualties. One narrow escape is recorded, which, had sufficient warning not been given, might have resulted seriously for some eight or ten men. The crew of engine No. 5 were standing beneath a wall on the Market street side of the burned block, when an explosion was heard, followed by the fall of the wall. The explosion had warned the men, however, and all were out of the way when the debris fell.

The Parker-Thomas company sustained loss by water and smoke estimated at $100,000 and Cook, Everett and Pennell company, wholesale druggists; F. O. Bailey & Co., carriages; Lewis & Co., wholesale clothiers; A. H. Berry & Co., boots and shoes; M. A. Waterhouse Co., hardware dealers, and Russ, Eveleth & Ingalls, wholesale dry goods dealers, jointly suffer losses aggregating $100,000 The fire assumed such proportions that Mayor Leighton called for help from ten cities in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine.

STOLE TWO CHICKENS; LONG TERM AHEAD.

Clinton, Iowa, Jan. 27.—Dennis Maloney of this city was sent to the state penitentiary for an indeterminate sentence with a ten years' maximum for stealing two chickens. Maloney was convicted of the theft at a former term of court and sentence was deferred. Later he broke into a saloon and stole liquer. The former sentence was then enforced.

FIREMEN ARE HURT

In Thrilling Blaze in the Mayer Building, Chicago.

Hotel Florence Burns, But All the Guests Escape.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—More than a score of firemen were hurt and as many more escaped injuries or death after thrilling experiences in a fire which destroyed the Mayer building, a seven-story brick building, and the Hotel Florence, 163-167 Adams street, shortly after 3 o'clock this morning. The loss it is believed will amount to half a million dollars. One fireman is reported missing.

Fanned by a forty-mile gale, the fire scattered burning embers about the southern portion of the loop district, endangering a score of structures. Twenty guests of the hotel, which was a four-story structure, were roused from their beds by policemen and firemen. All of the inmates are believed to have escaped.

Adjoining the burning structure on the east is the partially completed sixteen-story building of the Corn Exchange National bank. The new sky scraper was given a severe test, but with the exception of some temporary woodwork, resisted the flames successfully. The members of the fire department were struck by boards which fell from a burning scaffolding on the fifteenth floor of the bank building. One of them, Edward Wakefield, a truckman, was knocked unconscious. Two others, Herbert Scanlon, a pipeman, escaped with slight bruises.

Bank Proved a Barrier.

The wind drove the flames directly against the bank structure, which formed a complete barrier to the spread of the fire, but at the same time acted as a chimney to carry burning brands, sparks and embers hundreds of feet into the air. During the fire a flaming cascade of sparks poured upon the Rookery building at La Salle and Adams streets, and upon the Board of Trade, Grand Pacific hotel, Illinois Trust & Savings bank, Western Union, Home Insurance and other big structures. Some of these buildings were erected so long ago that their fireproof qualities are a matter of doubt, and detachments of firemen were sent out to keep watch upon them. Some of the guests in the Grand Pacific hotel were awakened by the noise of the fire engines and the glare of the flames, but whatever fears they may have had were allayed by employes of the house.

Started in Hotel.

The fire started in the rear of the second story of the Hotel Florence. Before they were discovered they gained considerable headway and shortly after the firemen arrived the second and third floors and a portion of the rear wall fell. A six-story build-

MITCHELL DOES NOT WANT OFFICE

Stops Movement to Put Him on Advisory Board.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 27.—President Mitchell announced to the convention of the United Mine Workers of America today that he did not desire to hold any office in the organization after his retirement as president, April 1. This will stop a movement to have him placed at the head of an advisory board. He asked that his friends give their loyal and undivided support to his successor. "While I have been here," said he, "I have been president in fact as well as in name and my successor should have the same opportunity to carry out his policies."

W. D. Haywood, secretary-treasurer of the Western Federation of Miners, addressed the convention. He referred feelingly to the appreciation of Moyer, Pettibone and himself for the action of the labor element of the country, which had contributed $300,000 to their defense.

Haywood attributed all of the strikes and troubles in the western lead, coal and gold mines to the operators' failure to keep their contracts with the miners.

LIQUIDATION BEGINS.

Affairs of Bank of North America to be Wound Up.

New York, Jan. 27.—Liquidation of the National Bank of North America was begun today. Charles A. Hanna, national bank examiner of this district, who was appointed receiver yesterday, was in conference today with Comptroller Ridgely, William F. Havemeyer, president of the bank, and some of the bank's legal advisors. No authoritative statement was issued by any of the officials, but the opinion was expressed that the bank's depositors will be paid in full within sixty days.

The closing of the bank occasioned little surprise in financial circles and seemed to have only a slightly adverse stock market influence. A small crowd was gathered at the doors of the institution all the morning, but there was an absence of the excitement which marked the disturbance in the financial district last October and November. At the main entrance was a notice stating that the institution has been closed by order of Comptroller Ridgely. There were other notices stating that various other banks would accept and pay drafts on the National Bank of North America made by its out of town correspondents.

MAJORITY FOR TESSMAN

Democratic Candidate is Expected to Carry West Duluth.

Two Hot Aldermanic Fights Are Now in Progress.

That Emil Tessman would carry West Duluth at the approaching elections by a comfortable majority and that R. D. Haven would lose his own precinct in the Seventh ward, was the prediction made by a West Duluth Democrat this morning. The showing made by Mr. Tessman in the West end and West Duluth at the primaries was a most satisfactory one, and his friends expect him to do equally well in that part of the city at the February election.

The fight for the aldermanic honors in the two West Duluth wards also waxes hot. In the Eighth ward Rev. W. J. Lowrie is opposing J. E. Foubister, the Republican nominee. The ward is generally very equally divided between the Democrats and the Republicans, although it has, as a rule, gone Democratic in municipal affairs in recent years. Mr. Lowrie will doubtless gain some votes from his connection with the church, and on the other hand he may lose some for the same reason. It is difficult to pick a winner at this stage of the game.

The fight seems to be equally close in the Seventh ward, where Frank Schaffer and J. J. Moe are the opposing candidates. Both candidates have many friends in the ward, and they are putting up a great fight.

DIRTY CAMPAIGN OF COWARDLY INSINUATION

Haven Followers Are Resorting to Wholesale Innuendoes.

Conduct Campaign From Behind Their Barrels of Mud.

Ensconsced behind their little barrels of mud, flanked by some expert sharpshooters of political hot air, and with a rear guard of saloon workers who are supposed to keep strictly under cover in the battle, the little clique of Republican politicians which set up R. D. Haven as its straw candidate for mayor in the approaching municipal election, is making its last grim stand in the face of what begins to look like certain defeat.

In the center of the brave little band is the Tom Lawry-near Republican organ, the News Tribune, which froths under misleading headlines, and thunders in malicious, pettifogging editorials.

Some of the methods resorted to during the last week by the Haven camp followers would make a Tammany politician blush. Mr. Tessman, by innuendo only—for nobody dared go further—was accused of being a party to the illegal voting alleged to have been done at the recent primaries, and Mr. Haven in a public speech boasted that his supporters did not have to be brought back from the Mare Island navy yard. Meanwhile the first man who was indicted for the offense, is out on bail. He declares that he can prove his innocence beyond all question of a doubt, and demands an immediate trial.

Mr. Tessman is charged with being the representative of all the elements that are base and vile, and with being the candidate of the liquor interests whereas his platform, published before Mr. Haven's, could not be more forceful and clear upon the question of law enforcement.

Mr. Haven's friends turned a temperance gathering in the West end into a political meeting, and ignoring the fact that Mr. Tessman had friends among the other speakers on the program, one of the speakers publically assailed him from the pulpit of the church.

This morning the News Tribune evidently found that the ground had been pretty thoroughly scratched over, and that the supply of mud was running low. The only available slur it could find was the fact that Mr. Tessman is engaged in the business of manufacturing cigars and that the saloonmen sell cigars. By a series of innuendoes which contained no specific charges, it attempted to show that Mr. Tessman would therefore be the tool of the saloon interests.

Mr. Tessman's friends and Mr. Tessman himself have made no attempt to meet any of these innuendoes. The News Tribune has not dared make any specific charges which can be met, but has contented itself with casting what mud it can, in the hope that some of it will stick.

The required witnesses in the election fraud cases have now been secured and the cases should be promptly tried before election time, not prolonged for campaign purposes and dropped after election.

The News Tribune's hints about "men higher up" being connected with the election frauds, have also been passed unnoticed. The county prosecutor is a Republican officeholder, and if Mr. Haven has any of the information he claims to have, it is his duty to present it to the proper authorities before election time. He apparently finds better use for it in his campaign speeches, however, and the "men higher up" will probably go unmolested until they are allowed to sink into a peaceful oblivion when election is over. This is but a sample of the campaign methods that are being used by Mr. Haven and his friends. The cowardly insinuations, which do not go to the extent of definite charges, cannot be met by denials, but they are thrown out in wholesale quantities in the hope that they may influence a few voters who are not familiar with the situation.

These are but a sample of the methods that have been used publicly. Privately many other stories are being circulated regarding the Democratic candidate, and every means, fair and foul, is being resorted to to discredit him in the eyes of the people.

Outside newspapers are taking quite a little interest in the battle. Even the Republican papers evidently do not place much faith in the sincerity or the influence of the News Tribune. The Hibbing Mesaba Ore has the following to say editorially:

"Two years ago the Duluth News Tribune was against Mr. Haven and all that he stood for, with all of its force and might, and Mr. Haven and his party won out, handsomely. Now the News Tribune is with Mr. Haven, using the same brand of political pabulum, and it is a good bet that Mr. Haven wishes the News Tribune had remained on the side it occupied two years ago. If Mr. Haven is defeated for mayor of Duluth, and it looks very much as though that will be the result of the present contest, he can safely attribute it to the Duluth News Tribune's 'support,' which is enough to beat anybody.

"It would be interesting to know just where the Duluth News Tribune does stand in this Republican political question. As the matter now stands, the Republican that is guided by the News Tribune finds himself playing a kind of a 'holler-fer-the-dogs-wont-foller' game."

The enclosed is cut from the Cloquet Pine Knot and shows the opinion of Cloquet people who are interested in the mayoralty fight in Duluth:

"If Haven is defeated for mayor of Duluth, he can blame his fool friends."

THIEVES ARE ARRESTED

Police Quickly Run Down Several Petit Larceny Affairs.

Carl Von Schwedle Will Go Before Grand Jury.

Carl Von Schwedle, a young man, who had been employed at the St. James hotel for some time, was arraigned in municipal court this morning, charged with grand larceny in the first degree. He waived examination and was held to the grand jury, his bail being fixed at $250.

Von Schwedle is charged with taking a coat owned by H. B. Maine, from a hook in the barber shop in the St. James building. The coat, which was worth about $25, had just been purchased by Mr. Maine, and the fact that it was worth its original price makes the charge grand larceny.

Von Schwedle was suspected of the crime immdiately, and a search was made for him. He was arrested in Superior yesterday and is said to have attempted to sell the coat.

* * *

Barnard Cohn, a tailor, was arrested this morning on a larceny charge, and will be arraigned this afternoon. He is said to have stolen a quantity of clothes from a tailoring and pressing establishment at 202 Lake avenue south.

* * *

Louis Hanson was arrested this morning by Detectives Schulte and Irvine, on a charge of grand larceny. He is said to have stolen a watch from a friend several days ago, and has practically admitted the theft. The watch was recovered.

William Hughes, a young man, who was employed at the Duluth Public market, on East Superior street, will have sixty days in which to come to a realization of the fact that appropriating the money of an employer to his own purposes is poor policy.

Hughes was arrested Saturday on a warrant, charging petit larceny. He had failed to turn in $1.60 collected for the firm, and when arraigned in court pleaded guilty to the charge. The case was deferred for sentence until this morning, when he was given a sentence of $50 and costs, or sixty days. He was unable to pay and must go to jail for two months.

DRUNKS IN COURT.

Several People Find Leak in Lid and Are Arrested.

A crowd of thirsty individuals found a dripping knot-hole in the lid somewhere yesterday and absorbed enough essence of exhilaration to make them objects of attention for the police. Last night the patrol wagon was kept on the run for about an hour, without a letup and eight drunks were steered into the cell room to allow their load to evaporate.

Frank O'Brien, William Kelly and Perry Hall were second offense men, but aside from them there were just plain, ordinary drunks in the lineup. Ten of them pleaded guilty to the charge and drew $1 and costs or three days. Alfred Anderson seemed deserving of leniency and he was given a suspended sentence. Four paid their fines and the others will go up on the hill for three days.

O'Brien, Kelly and Hall were given $10 or ten days and they also go up on the hill.

THOUSANDS FOR RELIEF

Substantial Balance in the Funds of Firemen's Association.

The annual report of the Firemen's Relief association, which will be presented to the council tonight, will show the remarkable balance of $117,354.81 in the general and special funds of the association, Jan. 1, 1908. The sum is greater than ever before reported by the association and indicates that it is now on a substantial financial basis and able to amply take care of any calls, which may be made on it for relief.

The balance in the general fund Jan. 1, 1907, was $67,876.90. The appropriation Aug. 1, was $12,385.23, and other receipts brought the total to $80,271.15. Relief and expenses paid totaled $1,628.93, leaving $78,642.22 in the fund Jan. 1, 1908.

The special fund balance Jan. 1, 1907, was $32,884.34 and interest, dues and initiation fees totaled $5,829.78, giving $38,714.12. An interest refund of $1.53 was the only draft upon it, leaving $38,712.50 in the fund Jan. 1, 1908.

The money of the association is well invested. United States bonds are held in the sum of $6,087.50 and the mortgage loans held by the association aggregate $108,060.89. There was a balance in the American Exchange bank of $3,206.42 Jan. 1, 1908.

The funds of the relief association come mostly from the state. The insurance companies doing business in the state are required to pay a certain percentage of their premiums into the state treasury. The sum received is apportioned to the relief associations for firemen. The Duluth association has done good work in the past, in relieving members of the fire department, who were in need of aid and the solidity of its finances now puts it in a position to do good work in the future.

FEATHERMAKER'S DEVICES.

London Chronicle: There is an unprecedented demand for wings and feathers this winter, and with few exceptions every hat is decorated with plumes, which flutter in the slightest breeze.

Composite plumes are the most fashionable, and wings are of such remarkable size and hue that it is obvious that no bird could have supplied the plumage. In consequence the ingenuity of Paris, Vienna and London manufacturers has been taxed to the utmost to meet the need.

It will interest those who have humanitarian scruples to know that the gayest plumage nowadays comes from the humble barnyard, the poulterer's shop and sportsmen's guns. The feathery products from these sources are dyed to magnificent colors, conjured into the vast erections that decorate the newest shapes and are softened to the needs of the picture hat.

"We have agents all over the world," said a feather maker, "who buy up poultry and game feathers and send them to the great centers, where they are distributted for manufacture. Here is an excellent instance—these military feathers, that are the most fashionable, are contributed by the farmyard cnanticleer. They are dyed to almost every color and then mounted by hand.

"This—" and the manufacturer held up some exquisite plumage—"is hand made entirely and is from the neck feathers of the duck. Turkey feathers are used the same way and dyed the required color. Pheasant tails are preferred in their natural color, while other 'game' plumage is made entirely by hand on mounts, each feather being attached by adhesive gum. Sometimes indeed plumage from six different birds is used to secure a desired effect.

"Here again," and a beautiful fluttering feather was shown somewhat resembling seaweed. "This is made from the least valuable parts of the ostrich feather, twisted and mounted.

"Many devices are used, too, to secure unique color effects. This"—and a rare feather was lifted for inspection—"has had the color extracted, while these"—and a vivid box of plumes was opened—"show the latest triumph in artistic dyeing.

"There is no need for cruelty or extermination. The birds that grace our tables can supply the plumage, the dyer the necessary color and the nimble fingers of English and French workgirls will weave them into deft shapes.

"While ladies demand exotic plumage the manufacturers must supply it. It is impossible to imitate the natural beauties of the osprey or the bird of paradise or of any of the exquisite little birds that come from purely tropical climates. Birds, however, are not fashionable this year, but a stock must always be kept in hand.

"The popularity of the ostrich feather grows each season, and there is no cruelty used in securing this plumage. The onutitput from the South African farms this year is enormous, upwards of a milliton plumes being exported. These are now used in their natural state, as well as curled, and are, of course, dyed nearly every color."

WU'S WITHERING WIT.

Kansas City Times: Minister Wu is receiving ample warning that his sharp tongue may be curbed to the advantage of his country. The Chinese minister left many enemies behind when he quit his post here, and his return will find most of them implacable. More than one American statesman found that he could not have fun with Wu and escape unharmed. A diplomat is supposed to smooth things over, but Wu could not resist a challenge to a verbal passage at arms. Once att a little poker fiesta at the home of a senator, in which Wu sat, a certain representative from the West, known for his incurable habit of "busting out" with observations that were better suppressed, leaned over to Wu and said something to about the following effect:

"Mr. Wu, I hear that there's a movement in China looking to the abolition of the pigtails you fellows wear. What do you wear the fool things, for, anyway?"

"Why," inquired Wu, peering at the margins of the cards that had just been served to him, "do you wear your fool mustache?"

"Oh," replied the representative, "I've got an impossible mouth."

"Er—so I should suppose, from some of your remarks," observed Wu, calmly, tossing some chips to the center to open the jackpot.

SUBMARINE CABLE'S ENEMY.

Magazine of Commerce: The vicissitudes of a submarine cable are many. It may be torn by an anchor, crushed by a rock or seriously damaged by a coral reef such as abound in the tropics. Some of the growths often found on a cable tend gradually to decay the iron sheathing wires. Then, again, a cable is sometimes severed by a seaquake. It may be fatally attacked by the snout of a sawfish or by the spike of a swordfish.

But perhaps the little animal that makes itself most objectionable from the cable engineer's standpoint is the insignificant looking teredo navalis. This little beast is intensely greedy where gutta percha is concerned, working its way there between the iron wires and between the serving yarns. The silica in the outer cable compound tends to defeat the teredo's efforts at making a meal off the core, and this defeat is further effected by the core being enveloped in a thin taping of brass.

But where the bottom is known to be badly infected with these little monsters of the deep, the insulator is often composed of india rubber, which has no attraction for the teredo, and possesses a toughness, moreover, which is less suited for its boring tool than the comparatively cheese-like gutta percha.

From one cause or another faults occur in most cables from time to time. These require to be electrically located from the cable-testing hut, and a ship sent out to the supposed position to grapple for the line, pick it up and effect the necessary repairs. When the cable has really been hooked and picked up—an operation which may entail several weeks or even months, if only in waiting for favorable weather—the bight is secured at the bows and afterward cut. Each end is then brought on board alternately and tested electrically. If found to be sound, the necessary repairs are then effected.

ETHEL ROOSEVELT IS "HORSEY."

The coming debutante of the White House is in every sense a true daughter of her father, says the Delineator.

It is not often that the White House has the good fortune to harbor two charming debutantes in a single presidency. Alice Roosevelt is "wooed and married and a'," but here comes her sister, Ethel, to make her first formal bow next year. Ethel Roosevelt is extremely popular with her friends of her own age as well as with the older people.

The former like her for her good temper and high spirits, the latter, for her womanly ways and her extreme devotion to her mother. Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter are thorough "chums."

Of course she loves horses—her father's daughter could not help it. Theodore, at home from Harvard for his vacation, remarked in a superior manner, after listening to a long account of the virtues of Montauk, her own horse, "I hate a horsey woman, Ethel!" "Well," retorted the girl, unabashed, "I'd rather be talking about an almost human horse than about a lot of college fellows!"

She is an "all-round girl." In the last year or two she has shot up amazingly, and the shy, awkward little girl who went to the White House will leave it a stately young woman, with a frank charm of manner that is sure to carry her to brilliant social success.

A NEW DEFINITION.

A rather cynical joke has been recently credited to Senator Platt.

The senator on his last visit to the Manhattan Beach hotel allowed a pretty little girl, a Western millionaire's daughter, to be present with him.

The little girl, in the course of one of her many delightful chats with the aged statesman, said:

"Tell me, won't you, senator, what political economy is?"

"Political economy, my dear child," Senator Platt replied, "is the art of never buying more votes than you actually need."

ON THE IRON RANGES

NEW TRIAL FOR ANGELO

Convicted of Manslaughter, Giangarello Will Again Face Jury.

Was Accused of the Murder of Basil Romano.

Angelo Giangarello, the Italian miner from Eveleth, who was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree a few months ago has secured a new trial.

Judge Dibell, this morning, filed an order for the new trial, based on the motion of William Marx, attorney for Giangarello since his former trial.

The motion was based, among other things, on a claim by Mr. Marx that the county attorney brought out matters at the trial that had no place in the same and which, the attorney, alleged, should have been excepted to by the defendant. It is also understood that there has been some new evidence discovered calmed to be favorable to Giangarello's side of the case.

The defendant was accused of shooting and killing Basilo Romano, a fellow countryman in a saloon quarrel at Eveleth in the early morning hours of July 4, 1906.

Immediately following the shooting Giangarello disappeared. He was captured in Spokane, Wash., a year later and brought back to Duluth to stand trial on the charge of murder in the second degree.

Giangarello made a hard fight for his liberty on the ground that the shot that killed Romano was fired in self defense. He has a family living on the range.

FIND DYNAMITE UNDER HIS HOME

Dastardly Attenpt to Blow Up Home of Foreman.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Last Tuesday Matt Kronic, foreman of the track gang at the Mahoning mine, reported to the police he had found five sticks of dynamite fastened in a bundle with a partly burned fuse attached under his house in the French location. There were also some matches unburnt near. The police watched the house all that night but no one put in an appearance to complete the plot. Suspicion was directed to Nick Brickirch, who had formerly worked under Kronic, but had been discharged and had been heard to express himself bitterly against his former boss. It is said there are several suspicious circumstances against the accused and Assistant County Attorney Porier is making a thorough investigation.

The dynamite was under the bedroom occupied by Kronic and his wife and this leads to the belief it was a deliberate attempt to murder the couple. Some say that there has been jealousy among certain Austrians of the recent promotion of Kronic, a fellow countryman, to the foremanship and this may have inspired the awful attempt to kill Kronic and his wife.

JONES POSING AS SORT OF MARTYR

Refuses to Accept Bail and Threatens to Sue Village.

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The village jail here has become a meeting place for members of the Socialist party, who gather at the window to talk with Jones, the man arrested Wednesday in connection with the Mohawk dynamite case. Jones still maintains that he will sue the village for false imprisonment, and that he will not accept bail. While at the jail in Grand Rapids, last August, on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, Jones worked the same stunt, but after serving thirty-seven days, he decided to take advantage of the bail offered in his behalf. Jones at one time held an office in the Western Federation of Miners, with offices at Hibbing, but through Petriella was ousted and his membership taken away. Then he became a member of the Industrial Workers of the World. It is understood he was caused to leave Hibbing by his violent Socialist talk. He then located in Bovey, but during the strike, last summer, was arrested and later practically made to leave there.

SUPERIOR MAN GAMEY.

Harris Put Up Good Wrestling Bout With Gunner Gronland.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The entertainment and dance given Saturday by the Eveleth Independence Athletic club was a success.

The chief event of the evening was the wrestling match between Moritz Harris of Superior, Wis., and Gunner Grondand, the middle-weight champion of the city. Mr. Harris, although thirty-four pounds lighter than his opponent gave an excellent exhibition of wrestling.

The match was for the best two out of three falls mixed style. The Greco-Roman contest put on first went for one hour to a draw. The Greco-Roman style was the favorite style. The catch-as-catch-can style was then given and after a half hour's exhibition the contest was decided on as a draw.

The local man and the Superior wrestler were well received by the large crowd present.

In the preliminaries Mr. Constantine of Chicago and Ed Burns of the city fought a four-round draw. "Young Sandow" of Chicago did some heavy weight lifting. Martin Finnean, an old-time wrestler, refereed the matches.

SPECIAL ELECTION

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A meeting of the citizens of Aurora has been called for tonight, at the club rooms, to consider the advisability of calling off the special election to be held Jan. 29. The mines are not being worked very extensively at present and a postponement of the sewer question would be acceptable to the companies.

HIGHWAYMEN FOILED.

Sought to Rob Deliveryman Near Aurora, But Fell Down.

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—An attempt of two men to work a holdup game near here a few nights ago came to naught, owing to the nerve of their intended victim. Hjalmar Lundgren, who is employed by John West & Son, grocers, as deliveryman, started for the Syracuse mine with a load of provisions. When about a mile from town two men sprang into the middle of the road, one catching the horse by the bit and the other uttering a command to halt. Lundgren was made of different stuff, however, and gave the horse a cut with the whip, the horse running rapidly down the road, knocking one of the men into the ditch.

The animal had just been shot, and frenzied with pain, turned upon the two men. Anderson sought refuge in a convenient pine tree, but Feiring was less lucky. Before he could get out of harm's way, he says, the animal knocked him down and might have killed him had not its wound proved fatal. As it was attacking the man it fell over dead. Feiring was more or less bruised, but not seriously hurt.

FINE HOSPITAL IS COMING HERE

Swedish Lutherans to Erect Such Building in Duluth.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the chief matters considered by the annual meeting of the Swedish-Lutheran church in the Lake Superior district at the three days' meeting here last week, was the unanimous decision to build a hospital at Duluth. A committee or directorate to investigate the feasibility of the plan had been appointed at last year's meeting. This directorate was composed of six members of the clergy and six of the laity as follows: Rev. C. G. Olson of Duluth, Rev. J. E. Linner of Superior, Rev. J. A. Arantz of West Duluth, Rev. Magney of Carlton, Rev. Dr. Albert Oberstrom of Hibbing, Rev. C. Solomonsen of Duluth, E. J. Spoonberg of Hibbing, H. Iverson of Carlton, Dr. J. J. Ecklund of Duluth, T. M. Oberstrom of Fort Wing, Wiss., H. T. Lofgren of Superior, Otto Johnson of Duluth. The hospital will be one worthy of the district and of Duluth.

Aid for struggling churches was apportioned by the meeting as follows: Soudan, $200; Port Wing, Wis. $200; Washburn, Wis., $300 Poplar and East End, Wis., $100; Atkinson, Minn., $150; Moose Lake, $300; Grand Rapids, $400; Miaway, $200; West Duluth, $100. Eveleth, Hibbing and Virginia, which received aid last year, have reached the stage where it is no longer necessary and will now be on their own resources.

The time, but not the place of the next annual meeting, was decided upon. It will be Jan. 25 to Jan. 27, 1909. A regular meeting for the transaction of business will be held at Two Harbors in March.

The district will be represented at the general synodical meeting at Chicago, in June, by Rev. P. O. Hanson of Virginia, Rev. C. A. Carlstedt of Ashland, Axel Person of Duluth and H. Iverson of Cloquet. In both spiritual and material affairs the church is progressing and becoming stronger.

The annual meeting was attended by thirty-five clerical and lay delegates from the range towns, Duluth, Superior, Two Harbors, Carlton, Cloquet, Grand Rapids and Ashland, Wis. The district includes forty congregations in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The first action of the meeting was the election of officers, with the following results: President, Rev. J. D. Nelsenius of Two Harbors; vice president, Rev. J. E. Linner of Superior; secretary, Rev. M. Martinson of Duluth; statistician, Rev. Carl Solomonson of Duluth.

FIREMEN ARE HURT

ing adjoining the hotel on the west caught fire and was partly gutted. It was occupied by six printing and two tailoring concerns, most of which suffered heavy damage. In three of the printing offices night shifts of employes were at work and these men were driven to the street so hurriedly that many were forced to face the blizzard clad in the sleeveless garments of the stereotyping room. Many of the guests of the hotel were also scantily clad when they reached the street. The refugees were cared for by the police.

Confined to Two Structures.

Despite the threatening nature of the fire, hard work by the firemen confined it to the two structures. The fight called for the complete fire department forces of the downtown and wholesale district and the men swarmed upon the roofs and fire escapes of adjoining structures, pouring tons of water upon the flames from these vantage points. Two hours after the first alarm had sounded the flames were under control.

W. P. Dunn & Co., printers, occupied four floors of the Mayer building. Their damage will amount to more than $150,000. Other occupants of the Mayer building were Diamond, Page & Co., electrotypers; Johnson, Koch & Quinn, bookbinders, and Kann Brothers, dry goods specialties.

STAYS AT HOME WITH HIS WIFE

Grayling Man Decides Not to Join Army With Her.

The young man at Grayling, who wrote to the recruiting office asking if a place would be provided for his wife in the event he joined the army, has decided that it is too great a responsibility for a man to shoulder and has written to the office informing the officers that he will not join the army.

In his letter of inquiry the young man asked if money would be sent in advance to him and whether any objection would be found to his taking his wife to the regiment. He was told that no money would be paid in advance and that it would be necessary to secure the permission of the colonel to bring his wife with him.

As the woman in the case was opposed to her husband joining the army unless she went along as guardian, it is thought probable that the would-be soldier has failed to overcome the objections of his wife.

SOCIALISM INEVITABLE

Says J. S. Ingalls in Speech at the Armory.

Four Hundred Persons Hear the Minneapolis Man Talk.

"The Justice of Socialism" was expounded to about 400 persons at the Armory last night by J. S. Ingalls of Minneapolis.

The speech given by Mr. Ingalls was practically the reply made by him to Secretary Taft, and issued in pamphlet form as a part of the literature of Socialism. Some of Secretary Taft's utterances at a speech delivered in Columbus, Ohio, inspired this particular talk.

Last night's audience heard Mr. Ingalls with interest. The keynote of his address was the bringing out of the idea that the world has changed since one man made everything for himself with his own hands. Now, man is obliged to work with many other men, and the machines of today make the working capacity of the men much greater when grouped than when working alone. This extra product, Mr. Ingalls said, should be divided among the toilers themselves. He said that Socialism was inevitable, and that some day the entire world will accept it.

Mr. Ingalls said in part:

"The world is free, no doubt, to choose either an individualistic system, or a social system; but it must become all the one or all the other. It cannot permanently remain part individualistic and part social, any more than a nation can remain part slave and part free; and the reason for this is, that 'In union there is strength.' Social methods are the more productive and consequently the more powerful, and wherever the two come into competition individualistic methods must ultimately retire from the field in utter defeat. While we are free to choose an individualistic system, it could only be done with the concurrence of the whole world. But, the world has not only failed to agree on an individualistic system, but it has with one voice chosen a social system, or, what is the same thing, it has chosen industrial methods that render a social order absolutely inevitable, and the surprising part of the situation is that all opponents of socialism concur in the choice of social methods and still claim to be 'individualists.' They are like the man who was said to be a Christian, 'but he was not working at it.' One thing only regarding the future is at all debatable—whether the social order that is coming shall be for the benefit of a few trust magnates, or for all the people.

"There are two kinds of monopoly. private and public—monopoly for the benefit of a few and monopoly for the benefit of all. There are two possible kinds of social industry, social industry under an industrial despotism as at present, and social industry under an industrial democracy. One or the other of these we shall be compelled to choose—there is and can be no middle ground.

"We are now in a position to understand what socialism is and what are its purposes. It is not, as many have believed, a hair-brained scheme, invented by impractical men, to turn the world upside down. Nor is it merely a 'beautiful theory,' impossible of fulfillment. Socialists are not 'idle dreamers,' but the most practical of men. They insist on looking conditions squarely in the face, in order that we may rightly understand the real trend of modern development. They know that the world has departed from its former course and, like a prudent mariner sailing an unknown sea, they have made use of their instruments, taken account of the stars and calculated the course of events, and their observations have convinced them that the world is headed for the port called Social Industry, and they think it folly to deny that such is our destiny, so long as the rudder and all the sails are so set that every passing wind that blows wafts us nearer to its shores. It would be idle for the egg, during the period of incubation, to protest that it has always been an egg and, therefore, can never become a chick. Never before were the conditions present that would transform it into a chick and, so long as those conditions continue, every passing hour makes it more a chick and, when in the course of time the shell is broken, it is no more an egg, but all a chick.

"But if it be contended that our trust magnates are not yet actually stronger than the government, it may at least be said that such they are rapidly becoming. It has been said that during the past ninety years the wealth of the Rothschilds of Frankfort has increased 10,000 fold, or at the rate of about 12 per cent compounded annually. It has therefore doubled every six years and forty days. Does any one imagine that our despots extort less tribute? If the Standard Oil despots now presume to dictate who shall be the candidates and what the policy of the two great parties, who can appoint the bounds of their ambition twenty years hence when their holdings will have increased probably eight fold? President Roosevelt has rendered one most valuable service—he has revealed their present purpose to dictate to both parties. Yet, the best remedy he can suggest is to regulate despotism without dethroning the despot!

"Socialism will not abolish private property, any more than do the corporations of today. It will abolish private ownership in the means of life, but each citizen will hold as his private property while he lives one equal, undivided share in the public plant of production, and, because a shareholder, he will participate in dividends in proportion to services rendered, and his dividends will be his private property to use and enjoy precisely as he does now, except that he will find it impossible to so invest it as to secure an income from the labor of others. If he would have an income, he must render service—a parasite he cannot be. This will no doubt disappoint those who, like vampires, would fatten from the toil of others; but for the first time in history it will banish the blight of servitude from the world and make it possible for every human soul to grow into the God-like as naturally as the lily grows.

"Socialism will not destroy our independence, for the simple reason that the greater part of it is gone already, and the little that remains will disappear with the last of individualistic industry.

"If we would have independence, we must dispense with power machinery and social methods and go back to the simple tools and methods of former ages. We cannot retain a social order with the greater abundance and advantages that go with it without paying the price, and the price is the loss of independence. We may have interdependence, an equality of rights, under an industrial democracy; or we shall have dependence—slavery—under an industrial despotism. One or the other we must choose, for independence is gone forever, unless we shall abandon social tools and methods in industry."

WITNESSES FROM LONDON

found Thaw dancing about the room like a madman. He reported his case at the hospital as acute mania.

"Mr. Thaw at the hospital had a perfectly enormous room," continued Dr. Wells, "but he complained that he did not have room to breathe. He also complained of the terrific heat and demanded that twenty tons of ice be placed in the room. He did not like the nurse assigned to him and wanted me to employ a whole staff of nurses so he might find one he liked. When he was in the bed the patient's eyes glared into vacancy. The acute attack at the hospital continued six days. He had no fever at any time. His talk was largely incoherent. There was no evidence of alcoholism.

Acute Recurrent Insanity.

"During your entire attendance on Mr. Thaw in 1899, doctor, what conclusion did you reach?" asked Mr. Littleton.

"I diagnosed his case as acute recurrent insanity."

Dr. Wells said he saw Thaw in 1901, 1902 and in 1903 or 1904. He treated him at these times, but there were no acute symptoms as in 1899.

On cross-examination by District Attorney Jerome, Dr. Wells said that at the time he treated Thaw in 1899 he had made no particular study of mental diseases and had had but little experience along that line. The witness said "Thaw remembered some of the things that happened during his outbreak and was anxious to apologize, especially to a nurse whom he felt he had offended."

London Nurse Testifies.

Miss Lillian T. MacBride of London, a professional nurse, as she described herself, followed Dr. Wells. She was called in to attend Thaw as nurse in his rooms in London in July, 1899. Thaw was very restless and excited and his talk was incoherent, the expression of his face was wild and although he had no temperature he continually complained of the frightful heat. There was no evidence of alcoholism. His acts and appearance impressed the witness as irrational.

The third of the foreign witnesses to be called was Dr. Frederick J. Burton-Browne of London, formerly of the India medical service, and for a time a practicing physician in Rome. Dr. Burton-Browne constantly referred to himself as a "medical man" rather than a doctor. It was in March, 1902, that the witness was called to attend Thaw in Rome. He diagnosed the case as one of simple or mild mania. There was no evidence of alcoholism.

District Attorney Jerome, on cross-examination, asked:

"How long did Thaw's mania last?"

About thirty-six hours.

"That's all."

Frenchman Testifies.

Next came Dr. Maurice Gaujao of Paris, who gave his testimony through the official court interpreter. He attended Thaw in Paris in the spring of 1904, when he attempted suicide by swallowing laudanum.

Dr. Gauja described Thaw's condition but said he had not diagnosed it as laudanum poisoning. At first he thought it was ptomaine poisoning.

Mr. Littleton here announced that with the exception of the testimony of the foreign witnesses who had just testified the hypothetical question for the experts was complete.

Dr. Smith-Ely Jelliffe of Columbia university was sworn, and it was agreed that the question should be read to him and Drs. Charles G. Wagner of Binghampton, N. Y., and Britton D. Evans of Morris Plains, N. J., at the same time.

Mr. Littleton began to read the question to the experts and to the jury at 12:30 p. m. He had read for about ten minutes only when the luncheon recess was ordered.

DRINK ENDS HIS EXISTENCE

Former Shoemaker Dies a Wreck in the City Jail.

Milo A. Hudson, once a respectable shoemaker, of late years an outcast, whose one interest in life was drink, died Saturday night shortly before midnight, on a hard bench in the cell room of the police station, surrounded only by leering drunks and attentive officers of the law.

Hudson collapsed while he was being led to the cell room, about 6 o'clock Saturday evening. The police had picked him up on the street in West Duluth, suffering from cold and want. He was placed on a street car and told to go to the police station, where he would be cared for. As he left the car at First avenue east he collapsed. Somebody lifted him up and carried him to the station, where he died six hours later. Medical attendance was given him, but he was past all human assistance.

Want and exposure probably caused death. The old man was only scantily clad, and the cold winds and biting frost had ravaged his wasted frame during the recent cold snap.

Little is known of Hudson except the fact that he was a shoemaker by trade, and once worked in a shop on East Superior street. He drank occasionally at that time, but went steadily downward. His sprees became more frequent, until he finally gave up work altogether and gave himself over to booze entirely.

About a month ago he was arrested on a vagrancy charge, pleaded guilty and was given ten days in the county jail. He was in pretty bad shape, physically, at that time, and his return to the police station in a dying condition did not excite much surprise among the station attendants.

DIES OF INJURIES.

Joseph Trudeau Passes Away After Accident at Shipyard.

Joseph Trudeau, who was injured by a fall at Grignon's shipyards Saturday morning, died at St. Mary's hospital in the afternoon.

Deceased was an old resident, having lived here for the past thirty years. For fifteen years he was general foreman for the Ohio Fuel company. Mr. Trudeau at his death was 55 years old and leaves besides a wife the following children: Joseph M, Henry J. Napoleon, Mrs. A. Richards, Miss Florence and Zella Trudeau. He also has five brothers and one sister in Michigan and a sister here, Mrs. John LeClair.

The funeral will be from the family residence, at 2304 West Huron street, and the body will be escorted by the Catholic Order of Foresters, of which lodge deceased was a charter member, to the St. Jean De Baptiste church, where services will be held at 9 a. m. Tuesday morning.

Epilepsy, Fits

Convulsions, or Spasms and St. Vitus' Dance are Nervous Diseases. Most cases can be cured by strengthening and building up the nervous system. To do this a nerve medicine is needed. Dr. Miles' Nervine will be found efficacious and satisfactory. It has cured many cases of these diseases and we believe it will cure you. We can give you names of many who have been cured through its use. Write for advice.

"My son John had epilepsy for years, and after having him treated by specialists for over two years he still continued to have spells. I had almost given up in despair, but knowing the virtue of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for sick headache, I concluded to try the Nervine. During June, 1906, I gave him a teaspoonful three times a day, then in July I gave it as directed, and he has not had a spell since August 28, 1906, and has taken no medicine since January, 1907. I am writing the case just as it is, hoping it will induce others to try it.

OUTLOOK IS VERY BLUE

Some Employment Agencies Have No Orders at All.

Demand for Labor is Smaller Than for Many Years.

At no time in the last ten years have the local employment offices been so short of orders for men as at present. None of the agencies has more than two or three orders, it is claimed, and some of them have none at all. There are plenty of men looking for work, but the labor market is not flooded sufficiently to result in any special hardship.

Conditions would not be so bad if there was more snow in the woods. Numerous camps have been employing just as many men as they would have employed if the sleighing had been good, but others have found it necessary to cut down their crews on account of the fact that there is no snow for hauling. So far as the employer in the woods is concerned, he is well pleased with the labor market conditions. He has a good selection of men to pick from at low wages, and when the lumberjacks do get a place this winter they are wise enough to work hard and hold on to it, well knowing that they may meet with a good deal of trouble in getting another place, should they lose the one at which they are employed.

Things were different a year ago. The woodsmen were independent, for the demand for men greatly exceeded the supply, and they knew that if they lost one job they could secure another, at a fancy scale of wages. While the lumbermen were paying nearly three times the present scale of wags in many instances, they were unable to get as good work out of the men as they are now under the reduced scale, and on top of this they suffered great inconvenience through the custom of lumberjacks of switching from one camp to another whenever their work grew a little monotonous.

The completion of the construction work on the Wisconsin Central extension to the Head of the Lakes will throw a large number of men out of employment, and unless conditions better before that time arrives there is liable to be some suffering among men who do work of this description, unless those now working on the line have profited by the experience of others, and have saved their money during the last three or four months. In this event they will be tided over until spring, when it is expected there will be enough work for all.

SENT TO JAIL.

Negro Tried Here for Murder Gets Stiff Sentence in St. Paul.

John Johnston, the colored man, who was recently acquitted of the charge of murder in this city, was given a sentence of ninety days in jail in St. Paul, Saturday, for cutting his wife with a razor.

Johnston, according to the evidence, went home and demanded 25 cents from his wife, which she had earned washing. He said he wanted the money to go to Minneapolis with, but she refused to give it to him, saying that she needed it to pay on the room rent. Johnston is then claimed to have slashed at her with a razor, the weapon doing but slight harm, as it was deflected by the metallic stiffeners in her corset.

BARBER AND GAMBLER

Elope With Daughter of a Wealthy Stockman.

Aurelia, Iowa, Jan. 27.—Lloyd Wilson, a well known barber and gambler of this place, and Miss Gertrude Waddell, the 20-year-old daughter of O. D. Waddell, a wealthy land owner and stock buyer of Aurelia, have eloped, and their whereabouts are unknown.

They left Aurelia by team, driving to Storm Lake, where they were last seen. Both parties leave good homes. Wilson deserted his wife and 5-year-old son. He has lived here nine years, conducting a barber business and devoting his nights to gambling. The day of his departure he sold the barber shop. The past month he has endeavored to borrow money from many to get a stake for his sensational trip. He succeeded to some extent in getting money from his friends. He was a popular character in town, seeming well to do and spent money right and left.

His debts at Aurelia stores and among old friends will foot up $1,000. He left his family penniless.

He has been keeping company secretly with the girl for several months. Mr. Waddell has sworn out warrants for their arrest. He has also offered a reward of $200 for their apprehension. It is thought they may have gone to St. Paul.

HAITIEN REVOLT OVER.

Execution of Rebel Leader Ends Insurrection on Island.

Port au Prince, Haiti, Jan. 27.—It is announced at the president's palace that the revolution which started Jan. 15 with the landing of an expedition near Gonaives, has been quelled.

Loyal troops today defeated the rebels with havy loss in a pitched battle at Dessalines, close to Gonaives.

Gen. Jean Juneau, credited with being leader of the party, was taken prisoner and after being convicted of treason by a drumhead courtmartial, was shot to death.

All the rebels are in retreat and so badly demoralized it is not expected they will be able to make a further stand. The failure of Gen. Firmin, formerly Maitien minister to Paris, to land as expected, disheartened the rebels, as did the failure of needed arms, ammunition and stores to arrive from New York and they did not make their expected determined stand.

wished us to go faster in the direction of giving the Filipinos self-government, and if we had followed the policy advocated by others, who desired us simply to rule the islands without any thought at all of fitting them for self-government. The islanders have made real advances in a hopeful direction, and they have opened well with the new Philippine assembly; they have yet a long way to travel before they will be fit for complete self-government, and for deciding, as it will then be their duty to do, whether this self-government shall be accompanied by complete independence. It will probably be a generation, it may even be longer, before this point is reached; but it is most gratifying that such substantial progress toward this as a goal has already been acomplished. We desire that it be reached at as early a date as possible for the sake of the Filipinos and for our own sake. But improperly to endeavor to hurry the time will probably mean that the goal will not be attained at all.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Secretary Taft's Report.

In his report, Secretary Taft says: Shortly stated, the national policy is to govern the Philippine islands for the benefit and welfare and uplifting of the people of the islands, and gradually to extend to them, as they shall show themselves fit to exercise it, a greater and greater measure of popular self-government. One of the corollaries to this proposition is that the United States, in its government of the islands, will use every effort to increase the capacity of the Filipinos to exercise political power, both by general education of the densely ignorant masses and by actual practice, in partial self-government, of those whose political capacity is such that practice can benefit it without too great injury to the efficiency of government.

> What should be emphasized in the statement of our national policy is that we wish to prepare the Filipinos for popular self-government.

This is plain from Mr. McKinley's letter of instructions and all of his utterances. It was not at all within his purpose, or that of the congress which made his letter part of the law of the land, that we were merely to await the organization of a Philippine oligarchy, or aristocracy, competent to administer government, and then turn the islands over to it. On the contrary, it is plain, from all of Mr. McKinley's utterances and your own, in interpretation of our national purpose, that we are the trustees and guardians of the whole Filipino people, and peculiarly of the ignorant masses, and that our trust is not discharged until those masses are given education sufficient to know their civil rights and maintain them against a more powerful class, and safely to exercise the political franchise. This is important, in view of the claim, to which I shall hereafter refer, made by certain Filipino advocates of immediate independence, under the auspices of the Boston anti-imperialists, that a satisfactory independent Philippine government could be established under a governing class of 10 per cent, and a serving an obedient class of 90 per cent.

Secretary Taft gives a historical summary of conditions in the islands when the United States assumed responsibility for their government and a review of measures adopted by the present Philippine government to improve conditions and the results considering the subject under the following heads: The conditions as to law and order; the political apacity and intellectual development of the Filipinos under Spain and the steps taken by the Philippine government for their general and political education; conditions of health under Spain; the material and business conditions; the future of the Philippines; the cost of the Philippine government to the United States. He says that the total annual expenditure from the United States treasury on account of the Philippines does not exceed $5,000,000.

Recommendations.

In closing his report, Secretary Taft makes the following recommendations:

First. That legislation be adopted by congress admitting the products of the Philippine Islands to the markets of the United States, with such reasonable limitations as may remove fear of interference with the tobacco and sugar interests in the United States;

Second. That the present restrictions be removed as to the acquisition of mining claims and the holding of lands by corporations in the Philippines;

Third. That further legislation be passed authorizing the Philippine government, if it chooses, to open and conduct an agricultural bank, with a capital not exceeding $2,000,000; and Fourth. That the coastwise laws of the United States be made permanently inapplicable to the trade between the ports of the islands and the ports of the United States.

FIRE DANGERS FROM MATCHES

They Cause Ten Per Cent of Annual Fire Waste.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 27.—Edward Peterson, state fire marshal, says in his bulletin for January: Reports made to this office show that 10 per cent of our $6,000,000 annual fire waste and the loss of several lives is due to carelessness with matches. Six hundred thousand dollars a year is too much to pay for the privilege of using a poor match instead of a good one.

Nearly all fires caused by careless use of matches are due either to the explosive qualities of the head of the match, or to the fact that the wood in the stick continues to glow for an average interval of forty-eight seconds after the flame is out. In igniting, the head often explodes or the stick breaks; flaming chemicals fly and ignite waste paper, sweepings, lace curtains and clothing. After using the match a twirl or a toss given to it without looking to see if it is still glowing will often place it where it may start a fire. And a large proportion of match fires result from one of these hot sticks being thrown upon inflammable substance. Matches lying loose in drawers or on desks or on the floor or walk are liable to take fire from rubbing or from a blow. On the mantel piece they are often ignited by heat from the grate or stove. In each one hundred matches-fires, forty-one are from flying match-heads or glowing sticks thrown in to rubbish, which fact says "clean up the place."

The name "Parlor" is given to all matches except the "Safety." They are made without sulphur, thereby avoiding the odor given out by the "Lucifer" match. Its head contains phosphorus, chloride of potash, rosin, whiting and powdered flint, held together by glue. Phosphorus ignites at 140 degrees Fahrenheit. The heat produced by the friction of the particles of flint in the head when it is struck ignites the phosphorus. The chloride gives up the 30 per cent of oxygen it contains, with explosive splutterings and intense heat which fires the rosin and they together fire the paraffin, with which the stick is saturated, and the stick itself. By substituting either saltpetre or sulphur for chloride a silent and slow match is made which does not snap and fly.

The use of the "Parlor" match, and in fact all other matches except the "Safety," should be discontinued and prohibited by law. This would be no hardship to the users or to manufacturers because the "Safety" matches, which can be lighted only by rubbing them on the box or a special place prepared for that purpose, are made on the same machine and at practically the same price as other matches. The exclusive use of the "Safety" match would not only lessen the fire loss and reduce fire insurance, premium rates about 10 per cent, but it would also serve to keep door casings, windows and furniture all around the house free from the ugly-looking scratch stains of the ordinary match. And no match should be used the wood of which is not impregnated or saturated with a saline acid or other solution to prevent the formation of a glowing coal following combustion.

The legislatures now in session in several states are considering the advisability of prohibiting the use of any other but the "Safety" matches. Any manufacturer can make them without changing his machine and the increased cost to the consumer would be too small for consideration.

SUPERIOR NEWS

WAS FOULLY MURDERED

Frozen Body of John Esmond Found in Old Superior.

Believed Terrible Crime Was Committed Several Weeks Ago.

The finding, yesterday, of the frozen body of John Esmond, a Polish laborer, in an old vacant building at 305 West Fifth street, Old Superior, brought to light what the police say was the most brutal murder in the history of Superior. The man's face and head were horribly gashed and battered with an ax, and a knife also had been used with terrible effect. It is believed the crime was committed three or four weeks ago.

The awful find was made accidentally. William R. Dittmanson, a Superior boy, was playing near the old building, when his dog started in pursuit of a cat, which sought shelter in the deserted structure. Dittmanson followed into the building, and blood spattered over the floor and walls led him to believe that a crime had been committed there. He drew back a blanket which covered something in a bunk, and discovered the gory body of a man lying there. The police were immediately notified and Chief McKinnon and Sergeant O'Brien took charge of the investigation.

Esmond's face and head were horribly cut by a double-bitted ax and a huge jackknife that were found, smeared with blood, lying across the foot of the bunk. In addition to two deep gashes on the left cheek, there were numerous smaller cuts on the head, face and body. The nose was crushed in and the right eye blackened. A strip of cloth was tied around the neck sufficiently tight to alone have caused death. Evidently Esmond gave up only after a hard struggle, for there were traces of a fight in the room, and blood was spattered over everything. His pockets were turned inside out, and other clothing in the room cut with a knife and evidently searched. The police believe robbery was only one motive for the crime.

The room in which the murdered man lay was one of a number fitted up by Jake Ericsson for the state will sleeping quarters for men employed by him on the Northern Pacific bay front improvements. The bunk was in the northeast corner of a small room located on the west side of the building. On the south wall of the room are seven dents in the plaster, apparently made by Esmond's head having been thrust against it with great force. Two show but little blood, but the others are well marked with it. The police believe Esmond was unconscious before being thrown on the bunk. The blows that caused his death were, it is believed, struck after his murderer or murderers had tied the cloth around his neck and thrown him on the bunk.

So far as can be learned, the murdered man was last seen around the streets during the holidays. John Mireski, who owns a butcher shop near the scene of the crime, says he saw the man about Christmas time. A number of Montenegrans occupied the building with Esmond, but most of them left Superior early in December. One of their number, Mike Jehich, caused Esmond's arrest, on Dec. 4, charging him with the theft of a purse containing $2 cash and $43 in checks. He was dismissed Dec. 7, the charge not being sustained.

Esmond was 44 years old, and at the time of his arrest told the police that he had a family in his native land.

BUILDERS' EXCHANGE.

An Open Shop Fight May be Started in Superior.

The master builders and contratcors in Superior have organized a Builders' exchange, along the lines of the Duluth exchange, and are said to be preparing for an open shop fight. The membership is forty-five at present. Headquarters will be opened in the Wisconsin block.

John Wick is president of the exchange and Alexander McKenzie is treasurer. A secretary will soon be elected. An office in the Wisconsin block is now being fitted up, and a secretary will be placed in charge of it when arrangements are completed. Several of the contractors have had a sort of an organization for several months, and the real reason for branching out more extensively is said to be the fear that labor troubles are impending, and will soon come to a head. The contractors have not said, however, that they will start a fight for the open shop.

FAREWELL BANQUET.

W. D. Dwyer Honored by the Douglas County Bar Association.

W. D. Dwyer, who has accepted a position at the head of the legal department of the Twin City Rapid Transit company in St. Paul, was tendered a farewell banquet at the Gitchinadji club, Saturday evening, by members of the Douglas county bar. Thirty men were in attendance. J. A. Murphy acted as toastmaster.

Among those responding to toasts were: C. D. O'Brien of St. Paul, Prof. Monoghan, S. L. Perrin, Judge Smith, F. A. Ross, H. H. Grace, Judge Vinje and Judge L. K. Luse.

NUMISMATICAL THIEVES.

Take Valuable Coin Collection From Tower Avenue Saloon.

Numismatical thieves entered the Bodega saloon, 724 Tower avenue, early yesterday morning and carted away a collection of old and rare coins valued at something like $200, and the property of N. C. Drew, who formerly conducted the establishment.

In the collection were several coins worth considerable money, and which are now very scarce. The outfit was much prized by Mr. Drew. So far as is known, only the old coins were taken from the Bodega.

However, on the same morning, the Bank saloon at Tower and Fourth street, was entered and burglars took a quantity of the last two stocks mentioned on the concern's business cards, the same reading: "Wines, Liquors and Cigars."

The burglars gained entrance to both establishments by rear windows.

The police are holding George Dear, as one knowing something of the occurrences, although he protests his innocence.

Although he was an officer of the Wisconsin Grain & Stock company, which is undergoing a thorough investigation at the hands of the federal authorities at St. Paul, H. P. Ernsberger was given assurances of friendship by his fellow members at the morning service yesterday in the First Baptist church.

The pastor, Rev. G. H. Young, had advertised in the papers that there was to be something out of the ordinary at the church and a large number of the faithful turned out. The minister asked all those present who believed in Mr. Ernsberger's honesty and integrity, despite the cloud hanging over a business enterprise with which he was identified, to stand up, and nearly everyone in the congregation arose. Mr. Ernsberger is a prominent member of the First Baptist congregation.

Will Vote by Proxy.

Although Douglas county is entitled to five delegates at the Democratic state convention to be held in Milwaukee, Feb. 13, interest in the matter hardly seems keen enough at this time to predict the actual appearance at the gathering of a delegation from the Head of the Lakes. Superior Democrats will probably express their wishes by means of proxies, a method that has prevailed several times in the past.

Will Talk Ward Division.

The amalgamation of the Third and Fifth wards and a division of the combination so made, will probably be thoroughly talked over at a mass meeting of citizens to be held Wednesday evening in the city council chambers. The city fathers want to get the sentiment of the people on the proposition.

Youth's Companion: The rich young man who was trying to learn to work had fallen in love with the daughter of his employer, but he found that his path was by no means clear of obstacles.

"You tell me your father objects to your marrying me," he said, in a crestfallen tone: "Is it because I am in his employ? I can leave it and go back to a life of idleness if he prefers."

"Oh, no, that isn't what he wants," said the object of his choice. "He says I may marry you just as soon as you're valuable enough to have your salary raised."

Nearly every woman would feel better for a Cascaret every day. Women exercise less than men. That's why they need help most.

A woman moved into a new flat with a bath room, and she said to a visitor: "You don't know how anxious I am for Saturday night. I want to take a bath."

That's what some of us do with our bowels.

We get into the habit of periodical cleansing. And we never realize how much better it is to give a little help every day.

That's the reason for Cascarets.

To give you a convenient vest-pocket laxative, the action of which is as natural and gentle as the action of laxative foods.

They are not like the old-time physics—castor oil, salts and cathartics.

We took them only when we were forced to.

We let matters run until the bowels were clogged, and we were miserable.

Today we keep at our best.

The way is to take one Cascaret just as soon as you know that you need it. The results are as pleasant as the dose.

Those who exercise enough, and eat coarse food and plenty of fruit, don't need them.

All others do need them. Cascarets do just what Nature does for those who live in a natural way.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure you get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The price is 50 cents, 25 cents and

CONCERNING WOMAN.

A meeting of the executive board of the Twentieth Century club was held at the library this morning, with Mrs. F. L. Barrows, president of the club, presiding. Arrangements were made at this meeting for several extra lectures for the club members during the year. Following the course of lectures by Rev. J. W. Powell, there will be an extra lecture by the same speaker on the writings of Sidney Lanier. The date of the lecture will be Feb. 14, and will be given at the club room of the library.

Arrangements will also be made for a lecture by Dr. Jackola of this city, entitled "The Reign of Terror in Finland." Dr. Jackola has presented this same lecture before the Women's club of Chicago, and it has been published in the Review of Reviews and the Forum. It is said to be a talk of great interest. Although the date has not been definitely settled, Dr. Jackola will probably present his lecture Friday morning, Feb. 21.

Plans will also be made for a lecture before the club members by Prof. Marfa Sandord of the department of literature of the Minnesota university. The date and subject will be announced later.

ANNUAL BANQUET.

Interesting Group of Speakers for Y. W. C. A. Affair.

The annual Primrose banquet of the Young Women's Christian association, which will be given Wednesday evening of next week at the association rooms is always one of the most important of the social events of the year. At this function many of the men and women of the city who are interested in the work but who do not come in active contact with the association during the year are the guests and the affair is always one of especial interest. Those who will respond to toasts at this year's banquet will be Mrs. John Macleod, who will have as her subject, "The World's Work." Albert Baldwin will speak of "The Power of the Ideal," and Rev. S. B. Mitchell wil respond to the toast, "The Deed and the Doer."

BIENNIAL PLANS.

Federation Women Arrange For Meeting in June.

Many Duluth club women are interested in the biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's clubs and the last announced plans will be of interest here.

The directors of the General Federation of Women's clubs arranged part of the program for the biennial convention in Boston last week in their meeting at the Chicago Beach hotel, the chief feature being the decision to open the convention on the evening of June 22, instead of the afternoon of June 23, as was originally planned. Visitors will be received at the opening ceremonies in Symphony hall by Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., of Massachusetts and by Mayor George A. Hibbard of Boston. The convention will be formally in session by the afternoon of the following day. It is planned to continue in session for eight days. It was decided that each standing committee should have one hour in which to make reports before the convention. Special vesper services in Trinity church will be arranged for the visitors the Sunday following their arrival. The evening of June 27 will be set aside for the Rhode Island delegates who wish to entertain the visitors. They will either give a clambake or some similar form of entertainment. It was decided to adjourn the convention on the evening of June 30.

An informal reception was held at the Chicago Beach hotel for the directors. All the officers of the federation and seven of the eight directors were present. They are: Mrs. Sarah S. Platt Decker of Denver, president of the federation; Mrs. Philip N. Moore of St. Louis, and Mrs. May Alden Ward of Boston, vice presidents; Mrs. John D. Sherman of Chicago, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles A. Perkins of Knoxville, Tenn., corresponding secretary; Mrs. Josiah E. Cowles of Los Angeles, treasurer, and Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Austin, Tex., auditor. Mrs. Sarah A. Evans of Portland, Or., is the one director who was not at the conference.

Club Luncheon.

Mrs. Florence Ames Draper was hostess at luncheon today at the Kichi Gammi club, in compliment to Miss Maud White. The table decorations were in white hyacinths, and covers were laid for six.

Card Parties.

Mrs. George P. Stillman will be hostess at cards Wednesday and Thursday afternoons of this week at her home, 222 East Third street.

Events of Interest.

The regular meeting of the Matinee Musicale was held this afternoon at Steinway hall. The program was arranged by Miss Ruth Alta Rogers and Miss Berenice Crowley. The piano numbers were presented by Miss Faith Rogers and Miss Gertrude Logan, and a group of songs by Peter Cornelius was sung by Mrs. Stower.

* * *

The speaker at the devotional service yesterday afternoon at the Young Women's Christian association was Rev. James A. Roberts of the Garfield Missions. Mr. Robinson gave an interesting talk on the "Missionary Conditions in India, Africa and the Philippine Islands." The meeting was followed by an informal Sunday evening tea.

Personal Mention.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Williams of Cleveland are the guests of Mrs. Williams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ross, of 1428 East First street.

Mrs. R. F. Fitzgerald is visiting friends at St. Paul for a few days.

What Retail Markets Offer.

One frozen cabbage.
Egg plant, 25 cents each.
New carrots, 10 cents a bunch.
New beets, 10 cents a bunch.
Pie plant, 15 cents a lb.
Grape fruit, 15 cents each.
Veal steak, 20 and 25 cents a lb.
Pork chops.
Mince meat, 20 cents a lb.

The first frozen cabbage of the season is in the market. Not that there is any clamarous or insistent demand for frozen cabbages as a table delicacy, but it just happens that along in the last week in January there comes for the first time of the season winter weather enough to freeze a cabbage that is just ordinarily well protected.

The nip in the air is of the kind that makes pork chops and mince pie the most satisfying articles of diet that one can get.

DIRECTORY OF AMUSEMENTS

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT.

LYCEUM—Mack-Leone players, in "Blue Jeans."
METROPOLITAN—Burlesque.

MRS. CAMPBELL.

Entirely Satisfactory If You Like That Kind of a Play.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell appeared at the Lyceum, Saturday, in the most brilliant of the theatrical events of the Duluth season in two of Pinero's plays, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" and "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith." They are of the kind of play that is insistently called—problem. In the first named the "problem" is that a past is a most inconvenient thing for a lady to have around when she seriously enters a marriage of the most approved and conventional kind. Surely Pinero need not have written a play to bring home that truth. Everybody knows it.

In "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith" the "problem" is that a woman of serious intent, devoted to theories is more than likely, in fact, is sure, to have a very unpleasant half hour when her theories are forgotten completely when she comes to love a man who is supremely selfish. Most anybody will believe that without going to the theater.

But when a master hand takes a group of characters and a given set of circumstances and then developes a character of absorbing interest and that same character is recreated for the audience in a masterly way, in a manner so minute and artistically complete that you feel that poor Paula is one of the people you never can forget and you keep hoping that some day you will get Mrs. Ebbsmith's marriage announcements well—nobody but will agree that a great piece of art has been presented.

That the thing "doesn't leave a good taste in your mouth" nor that it isn't musical comedy is beside the mark. For those who want musical comedy there is enough, dear knows, and if one wants his plays to end with the ringing of marriage bells rather than have them begin after they have stopped chiming, that's a matter of taste also.

In the afternoon Mrs. Campbell delineated the brilliant, fascinating luxury loving, Paula in a most compelling way. From the Paula of the first act who loves fruit—when it is expensive—and who will be glad to be really married—at last—to the Paula of the last act pitiably conscious of the irrevocable past and unable to face the future which she is sure is but a path leading to the past, she was completely satisfying.

As Mrs. Ebbsmith, there was seriousness and depth and quiet force that made the suffering of the sensitive and earnest woman quite vital. From the hope of a purely intellectual companionship with a man—who has a wife with whom she hopes to work for the betterment of society, that is the society who has no automobiles to do the morning shopping with, she is forced by her love and his demand to give up all hope of her own work and to even wear extremely decollete dinner gowns. He asks everything of her without anything but the most utterly selfish motives and when she leaves him, although there is a world of suffering in her silence, everybody heaves a sigh of relief.

Mrs. Campbell is ably supported by Ben Webster and an English company. Edgar Kent as Gayley Drummie in the afternoon and as the duke of St. Olpherts in the evening did exceptionally able work. With the exception of a little habit prevalent in the company of going off to the side of the stage and enjoying little private conversations in which nobody past the second orchestra row has a part, the company was satisfying. It might be said in passing that those moments were the only comfortable ones for the young lady who was there with her best young man. She wished there were more of them.

The Mack-Leones.

The Burlesquers.

Offering the original moving pictures of the Burns-Moir prize fight as a special attraction, the Brigadiers come to the Metropolitan this week with a large chorus, a goodly bunch of principals, some vaudevillist and a full complement of scenic and property embellishments. Tim Healey, Frank H. White and William Lester are the principal comedians of the organization. There will be a bargain matinee tomorrow.

THE EVENING STORY

THE LOVE OF CELIA

By Harriet Caryl Cox.

"No, Celia never got married, and I don't see why, either.

"She was pretty good looking when she was young, Celia was, but good looks ain't everything now, I tell you. There was them Jacobs girls, all three of them as homely as they could be, and every one of 'em married before they was 17. And they do say that eldest one, Julia, has got a real smart husband, and lives in fine style up to Boston; but I ain't seen her for seven years, ever since she came home to her father's funeral.

"I didn't speak to her then, but I noticed her black silk because I was thinking of buying a new one about that time, and I wanted to see whether they was wearing them dull or lustrous. Hers was dull and heavy, and had lots of jet dangling down the front, a-hittin' against everything as she walked. She took on awful and had a handkerchief with a black border as much as two inches wide. I think that looks all put on, just as if you was a-trying to show off. Plain white is good enough for me.

"But to go back to Celia. She was real pretty and no mistake, and after Letty got married and Celia finished school, I expected to see her get married in no time, for she had great, big blue eyes and yellow hair and smiled real sweet.

"But, dear me, you never can tell what men are going to do, they're such curious creatures. One time we thought Tom Watson was really after her. He came quite regular and used to walk home from church with her Sunday evenings and come in and sit in the parlor talking to her.

"John and I used to leave 'em alone so's he'd have a chance to speak his mind. But somehow he never did, and next thing we knew he was a-courting Susie Curtis. Celia, she didn't mind any; we couldn't even tease her one bit.

"Then there was a young doctor who was studying with old Dr. Mace. She used to seem awful fond of him and would go riding 'round the country with him till I said she really ought to be engaged, or else folks would talk dreadful. She only laughed and said they was just good friends, and always would be. They wasn't going to spoil it all by being lovers.

"By-and-bye he went away, and at first there were lots of letters. She used to go to the postoffice every morning, and I could always tell when she had one from him, because there would be a sparkle in her eye. But this didn't last long. Pretty soon they didn't come so often, and she looked kind of pale. Once I teased her, but she said out real frank that he was going to be married, and she had known it a long time.

"That's why they had been such good friends.

"That's her story; but I must say I have my suspects.

"A girl don't usually look so happy when she gets a letter from another girl's fellow.

"But there, I never said nothing after that 'cause she seemed to be bright and happy, and was real helpful about the house. She had lots of nice little ways, such as putting ferns on the table hot days, and fixing strawberries in glass dishes with the leaves all around the edge.

"Brad used to say things tasted better when she fixed them. You don't remember Brad? Well, no, I suppose not. He went West before you came to town.

"He wasn't no blood relation, though he always seemed just like a brother, and I'm sure we thought just as much of him as if he had been. Why, he and Celia grew up together, and they used to think they was real brother and sister till they was pretty old.

"He was a real good, steady fellow, and just took hold and managed the farm after father died, and we never had no trouble at all.

"Folks used to think he belonged to us 'cause he took father's name when he first came, and I shall never forget how he and Celia acted when they found they really wasn't no relation. She was a-kissing him goodnight real loving, and he drew her down onto his knee—for he was awful fond of her—and said something about his little sister being the sweetest girl to kiss he ever knew.

"Somehow that nettled Mary, who was only two years older, and she just up and told them the whole story, how Brad wasn't really any relation, and Celia'd got so big she ought to stop kissing him like that.

"'Twas awful mean, and only because she was jealous because Brad didn't like her so well, and had teased her about Nat Fowler; but she needn't have been so spiteful about it.

"Celia, she just cried and cried, and wouldn't let any one come near her, only just buried her head on Brad's shoulder till she grew quiet, and I thought she was going to faint. By-and-bye when she got up, she just turned and looked at Mary and said 'You have just took away my best friend, and I hate you,' then marched off to bed without another word.

"But she came round all right, and used to laugh when we told her about that night, yet somehow, she didn't use to kiss Brad any more, and once when he teased her about it she looked solemn and said: 'No, you ain't my brother any more.'

"This was all before the doctor came, you know. Well, after his marriage card came, I sent and invited a cousin of ours to visit us. She was a pretty, dashing little thing, and I thought 'twould take up Celia's mind. Such a gay time as the young folks had. Daisy was always planning picnics and straw rides, and all that, and I just smiled to see 'em enjoy it.

"'Twas a night they was later than usual in getting home and I thought they must have gone over to Palmer Center, when I heard the wagon coming real slow. I thought something must have broken down, and so went out to meet them. There was only Daisy, Celia and Brad, and Celia was lying down with her head in Daisy's lap.

"Brad took her in his arms and brought her in and put her on the bed, then raced off for the doctor. Daisy told how one of the poles had come out of the side of the hay rigging, and Celia, who had been leaning agahist it, fell out.

"She was all white and limp, and expected to see her die any minute.

"But she got well slowly. She had to lie still a long while, and we used to sit in her room to keep her company. It was nursing Celia, I expect, that made Daisy and Brad fall in love with each other. Anyway they did. The first time I knew anything about it I saw him with his arm around Daisy standing at the window—but they didn't see me.

"One night when I came home from meeting I went in and found 'em both looking happy, and Brad told me all about it while Daisy took my shawl off for me.

"I wondered if he'd asked before Celia, but they said she'd been quiet for a long time and they thought she must be asleep. I went over to speak to her, but she was breathing regularly, so I sent them out and sat down to think about the wedding.

"Once I thought I heard a sob, but I must have been mistaken, for when I went to bed Celia lay very quiet, with her face turned toward the wall.

"They were married in our house in the fall, and we had a real nice wedding.

"Celia was up then, and made all the the wedding cake, and I told her to save a piece to dream on, but she never did.

"She looked extra pretty that night, and it seemed like old times when she kissed Brad good-bye real hearty and said: 'Now you're really some relation, Brad.'

"Seems like only yesterday, but 'tis 'most thirty years.

"Brad went West after that, and after a while we didn't hear from him, but it didn't fret me none, 'cause when a man has got a family he can't be expected to keep writing to dad and friends at home.

"The young doctor's wife died and he came back and tried to get Celia, but she wouldn't have him.

"I was really disappointed, because it seemed a pity she wouldn't marry. One old maid in the family was enough, and I was past the marrying age.

"I'd feel awful bad if she did marry, though; so would all the folks here, too. She's real good in case of sickness. She's gone off now to see a sick man at the hotel. Doctor drove up in a hurry, and said she must come because the man couldn't live nohow, and she was just the one to help him.

"Something catching, I'm afraid, but she wouldn't mind.

"Oh, no, she won't come back yet—you needn't hurry. Well, I'll tell you about it tomorrow."

In the small, bare room of the dismal hotel a woman's figure knelt. The eyes that were raised to the silent figure on the bed were full of unshed tears.

Her face was worn, yet full of peace. Her cheek rested lovingly upon the cold hand, as white as the coverlet upon which it lay. The lines of pain on the dead face had relaxed—it was again the face of old. Long she searched it with her eyes, then slowly arose, bent over the figure and pressed a long kiss on the white brow.

It was morning now. Her loving vigil was over. Softly she closed the door, as if in fear of waking the sleeper, then out into the fresh, chilly air she went; walked slowly home through the changing gray of the young June day.

The sun was just beginning to touch the eastern sky with a rose tinge. She saw it, and turned away, as if the sight hurt her.

Up the narrow path she went, lifted the latch and shut the door, leaving outside the glow of the morning.

Inside, the house was cold and damp. There was no one astir. Mechanically she lighted the fire in the stove and listened to the rush and roar of the flames as they danced up the broad chimney.

The clock struck 5. With a start she went to the sink and began to pare potatoes. There was plenty of milk in the house—she would cream them. Brad had liked them that way—poor Brad!

And a tear rolled down the weary face and dropped on the thin, even slices as they fell from her hands.

VENOM AND ITS CAUSE.

The spectacle of the News Tribune trying to find consolation for itself in the communication from Rev. Carl G. Olson of Bethany church published in The Herald Saturday evening is lugubriously funny.

The Haven employment agency organ professes to discover in that communication that its own wretched course in regard to the temperance meetings of a week ago is condoned, and that The Herald's attitude toward them is rebuked. As a matter of fact, Mr. Olson did not attack in any way The Herald's stand, and he does not find excuse for the shameful misrepresentations of the morning paper.

To be candid, The Herald has been rather shocked at the manner in which the News Tribune shifted its affections, suddenly as any painted Cyprian, from Mayor Cullum to Mr. Haven, but since it is so evident, from the malice and venom it shows toward Mr. Tessman, that its heat is due to Mr. Tessman's temerity in opposing and defeating the present mayor, rather than to its own admiration for Mr. Haven, The Herald will be patient, and will try to set forth the situation again plainly and in words of few syllables, so that even the News Tribune may understand.

There were three temperance meetings a week ago Sunday night in West end churches. In each a somewhat similar program was prepared. One speaker was to talk on temperance from a religious viewpoint, another from a medical viewpoint, another from a legal viewpoint, another from a business man's viewpoint, etc. In only one of these three meetings, and in that by only one man—Alderman Moore—were politics or personalities touched upon. Rev. Mr. Olson is the pastor of the church in which this ocurred, and after Mr. Moore had shattered the proprieties in this manner, Mr. Olson expressed his regret to his congregation that it had occurred. In his communication Saturday night, in a paragraph which the News Tribune brazenly heads "Meetings Were Political," Mr. Olson said: "My intention was to discuss temperance without the mention of any name or party, but leave the people to draw the logical conclusions, which would, of course, lead them to vote for the right men. I had not the time to see Mr. Moore myself, so another member of the committee did that, but failed, as I understand it, to make it clear to Mr. Moore that we wanted no men or parties mentioned, but simply the temperance cause presented from a business man's point of view. * * * I know he would not have said it just then if he had known about the idea and agreement in regard to the meeting."

Mr. Olson, who agrees politically with Mr. Moore, graciously forgives his breach of the proprieties on account of his ignorance of the agreement, yet Mr. Moore knew in what place he stood and on what day he spoke, and better things should have been expected of him. Mr. Olson's forgiveness shows a charitable spirit that all must admire.

Yet there is no forgiveness anywhere for the News Tribune, which next morning, in broad, shrieking headlines, proclaimed that at all three meetings the people declared for Haven and denounced Tessman, when only one speaker out of a dozen, at only one meeting out of three, touched upon partisan politics. This venomous deceit is from the same piece as this morning's shrewish slander to the effect that Mr. Tessman could not possibly enforce the law, because he sells cigars, and saloon men buy cigars.

PAY OF DEPARTMENT CLERKS.

The Washington newspapers are beseeching congress to raise the pay of the government clerks employed at Washington, which is a proper thing for the Washington papers to do, since the government employes form a large element in the population of the capital, and a large increase in their pay would increase the volume of government money floating in that city.

The impression throughout the country is that the government employes are pretty well paid already. It would be very small indeed for anybody to oppose increasing their pay if they are not being fairly remunerated, and no doubt there are instances where the pay is not large enough; notably in the cases of scientific, professional and technical employes.

But the ordinary government clerks, from chiefs of divisions down the line, are paid on the average better salaries than workers at similar tasks receive in private employ.

The Keep commission, which has been exploring the various circumlocution offices of the capital to see if order cannot be brought out of chaos, will propose a general increase in clerical salaries, according to the following schedule:

Chief clerks and division chiefs, $2,100 to $4,200.
Senior clerks, $2,100, $1,980, $1,860.
Clerks, $1,740, $1,620, $1,500.
Junior clerks, $1,380, $1,320, $1,260, $1,200.
Under clerks, $1,080, $1,020, $960, $900.
Subclerical grade, $840 down to $240.

The subclerical grades include messengers, pages, office boys, etc., so that the lowest salary proposed for clerical positions is $900, or $75 per month. From this the schedule ascends, without counting in the chief clerks and chiefs of divisions, to $2,100.

Are there any private enterprises in which clerks are paid as well as this schedule proposes? In ordinary mercantile establishments clerks start in at $50 or less, and when they get up to $1,800 a year they consider that they are doing pretty well. And they work, too, which is more than can be said of the average Washington department clerk who gets to the office at 9 o'clock and leaves at 4:30 in the afternoon, after having had half an hour for lunch. Many of the department clerks work faithfully, no doubt, but the general atmosphere of sloth and dilatoriness that hovers over the Washington departments prevents the ambitious from working too hard, and gradually forces them down to the common level of sluggardly postponement. An active, ambitious clerk, new to a department, who cleaned up his desk in short order, would have to rest most of the day because those surrounding him would not keep the pace going so he could be continuously supplied with work.

The government faces a deficit. If the estimates already made go through, that deficit will be $100,000,000. Besides, with the army dwindling because of the poor pay allowance, and the scientific departments losing their best experts because they are offered better pay in private employ, it would seem that there are worthier objects of government consideration than the department clerk.

THE CURSE OF GAMBLING.

It may surprise you to learn that there is serious thought, in a Republican congress, of passing a law to prohibit the buying or selling of commodities on margin.

But while the danger that any such law will be allowed to get through congress at this session is very remote, it is nevertheless a fact that the agricultural committee of the house of representatives is considering such a measure, and that most of the committee members favor it.

The great curse of industry in this country is the complicated superstructure of speculation that has grown up on the solid foundation of the nation's prosperity. Speculation means exploitation; it means extravagant manipulation of prices to inordinate heights, to be followed, as the night follows the day, by disastrous slumps to inordinate depths.

The peril of Wall street's speculations, which concern every industry in the land, is far greater than the danger from speculation upon the grain, cotton and provision exchanges; yet the latter are dangerous and mischievous also.

To prohibit margin dealing would not abolish any commercial exchange in the country, but it would, if it could be enforced, stop gambling. Dealings in futures on grain exchanges, for instance, when done with a view to maintaining a stable market, as for instance when millers hedge their trades, are legitimate enough.

But when a man, possessed solely of the gambling spirit, buys stock, grain, cotton or provisions that he does not expect to get and does not actually want, putting up a "margin" to bind the trade and settling later on the difference in price, it is gambling, pure and simple, and a law prohibiting it would be most wholesome, if it could be made effective.

It is this practice, whether it is encouraged in grain market or stock exchange, that does most mischief to the people. It encourages the gambling spirit, leads to capitalization of the future, disturbs legitimate business, and feeds a host of useless parasites out of the toil-won earnings of the people. Worse than that, its operations absorb the greater part of the nation's supply of money and credit, paying for accommodations more than legitimate enterprises can pay, and thus, in the frenzy of speculation that often results, bring on disastrous panics in which every individual in the land suffers.

The exchanges on which grain, stocks and provisions are traded in are legitimate and necessary. Yet the temptation to gamble in these sources and evidences of wealth has been irresistible, and it has grown to such a height that it overshadows real industry, and by its sins creates conditions that compel every citizen to pay, however innocent he may be.

There is little likelihood that it will come immediately, but a law absolutely forbidding margin-dealing, either in stocks, grain or provisions, would be a blessing to the nation.

PLAYTHINGS FOR BOSSES.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is one of those old-fashioned party organs that still crook the pregnant hinges of the knee before the party bosses; that believe that the proper aim of partisanship is the good of the party and the party's bosses, not the good of the people unless by chance both party and people can be helped by the same measure; that still harp upon the glorious accomplishments of the Grand Old Party but say little of the country, seeing nothing but good in their own party and nothing but bad in the opposing party.

So it is not at all astonishing to find in the Globe-Democrat such sentiments as these: "If the Republicans of the different states will review the history of the party they will find a decisive array of facts against the tieing up of delegates in the face of an uncertain situation. * * * To attempt to forestall the action of a national convention by fettering delegates when no candidate is positively in the lead, and months in advance of the great gathering of the party that comes once in four years, is wholly unjustifiable, a danger to the party, a burden upon its principles, and a possibly fatal obstacle to its success."

Instructed delegations to national conventions come burdened with obligations to the people. The instructions, as a rule, reflect public sentiment in the districts furnishing the delegations. If in the Eighth congressional district of Minnesota, for instance, it is clear that the rank and file of the party strongly favors Taft or Hughes or Roosevelt, an instruction to work for the candidate thus favored reflects public sentiment, and carries the will of the party members of the district to the national convention.

But when an uninstructed delegation, chosen by the party bosses, is sent from state district, it means that the small bosses will take that delegation to the national convention and turn it over to the big bosses to do with as they please. The big bosses are reactionaries, every one, and if they are given enough uninstructed delegations to do business with, they will surely foist upon the Republican party some such reactionary as Cannon, Fairbanks or Foraker.

The people are not reactionary this year; they are distinctly progressive. It is the desire of every patriotic citizen, therefore, without regard to partisanship, that both parties shall nominate progressive candidates. It will be a menace to the people if either party nominates a reactionary. It will mean that that candidate will have the greatest corruption fund ever provided in this country.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that no uninstructed delegations will go to the national conventions from Minnesota this year. Minnesota people want no Cannons, Fairbankses or Forakers at the head of the Republican ticket, nor do they want any Parkers at the head of the Democratic ticket.

If the Republicans nominate such men as Taft, La Follette or Hughes, and the Democrats have either Johnson or Bryan, the people's interests will be in small danger. But none of these men will gain any support from uninstructed delegations picked and controlled by party bosses.

Winter wakes up and gets serious every few days.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Produce raisers get up early. One reached the Lenox hotel at a few minutes after 4, Saturday morning. After he had delivered the stuff he had brought in from the farm he started to talk a spell with the night clerk. It seems that most of these St. Louis county small farmers and owners of dairies are doing very well. This man has a dairy and ten cows, for instance. Everything is as neat and spick as ma and the gal can make it. You can see your reflection in every one of those pans. The butter and the rich cream that comes out of the dairy would make you sigh for the life of the country. The women folks can't resist "nick-nacks," though, says the farmer. The other day some fellow from the city came out to the farm with some fancy dishes and like stuff. One dish that had birds and flowers painted on it took the fancy of ma. It would sure look fine on the center table, ma told him afterwards, when she was explaining the sale. The dish cost $4.68, marked down from $5. There was just $4.23 in a vase on the mantle behind the clock. It was intended to buy horse blankets with, but it seems that ma couldn't resist those birds and flowers and that entwining effect of the creepling bushes, so she just went and got that money and was dismayed to find that there was not enough. She told the fellow from the city how sorry she was. He seemed to be a sympathetic fellow, for he seemed to feel sorry also. Then he did a fine thing. He just offered to overlook the absence of a few cents and give the dish to ma for $4.25, and the produce dealer confided to the clerk that he thought this was pretty nice of the salesman. He probably lost money just to accommodate ma. The clerk was not so confident of the gallantry of the seller of the dish, but the opinion of the small farmer remained unshaken. These women folks can get around any man if they use the right kind of persuasion. Ma was tickled to death over that dish with the birds and bright red flowers, and when she explained about the money that was going for the horse blankets—is art to be crushed for sordid, aromic horse blankets—why it was all right. Those birds and flowers did kind of brighten up the appearance of the room, too, so ma got the dish that her artistic ideas had been longing for, and even if the horses had to wait a while for the blankets a domestic clash was avoided and the women folks were satisfied. Then ma unconsciously drove a bargain—kind of did up the salesmen. After relating the history of the transaction of the dish with the twining flowers and nestling birds, the small farmer slowly buttoned up his coat, as if he were loath to terminate the gasping spell, informed the clerk that women folks were darned peculiar and that you had to humor them, gave a final twist to his neck scarf, and disappeared through the door. So passeth the history of the dish with the twining flowers and nestling birds.

Paul Elliott, who hails from the Windy City, and is stopping at the St. Louis, brings the assurance that the unemployed in Chicago are not so many as the accounts of the effort of Dr. Reitman to make a Socialistic demonstration would indicate. The march of the unemployed was a joke, according to Mr. Elliott. They never had more than 200 men in the ranks of the marchers, he says, although the mingling of bystanders and pedestrains with the laborers gave the impression that there was a large throng of men in the procession. The clash with the police was also highly humorous. Mr. Elliott says that the first blows struck by a policeman's billy in the ranks of the marchers became decimated. They ran into public buildings and every available avenue of escape was sought by the cohorts of Dr. Reitman. After they were chased by the police the marchers attempted to form in another part of the city. They were again routed and disbanded. Dr. Reitman was arrested and several of the holder members of the army were also arrested with the Socialistic leader. Mr. Elliott says that Dr. Ben Reitman has posed as the friend of the tramp and hobo. He has done his share of rail riding and bunper beating. He takes a strange view of life and seeks notoriety and sensational effects by highly impracticable methods. The men that marched in the procession were idle because they did not desire to work, says Mr. Elliott. They were professional tramps and hoboes. They were willing to march to the city hall and ask the mayor for work, but Mr. Elliott doubts very much if they did not consider the whole affair a huge joke. Some of them will have to laugh out of cracked mouths and aching heads, though, for the clubs of the police collided with many of the matted manes of the Reitman following. Mr. Elliott says that men can secure work in Chicago and that the demonstration of Dr. Reitman's motley bunch of near-Socialists does not represent in any true sense the situation in Chicago.

Getting Hardened.

Washington Post: Mr. Roosevelt having been blamed for the recent panic, he will not mind if the ice trust now blames him for the mild winter.

The Necessary.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: John Bull is looking over his Japanese assets and he finds them disappointing. There will be no yellow peril until there is a yellow treasury.

THE WEATHER.

A snow storm slipped up unheralded Saturday night, and if there had been a little more of it, it would have been a blizzard. Yesterday it turned cold and windy, and last night the thermometer got down to 12 degs. below zero. It was warmer today, and the weather man expects it to moderate further tonight, with probably snow flurries, to be followed by colder weather again tomorrow afternoon.

A year ago today it was "nippy," the highest temperature being 2 degs above zero.

The sun rose this morning at 7:39 and sets tonight at 5:03, making 9 hours and 24 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "Much colder weather prevails throughout the lake region, Ohio and Upper Mississippi valleys this morning because of a sharp rise in pressure over those districts. Zero temperature prevails over the Red River valley, Minnesota, Northern Wisconsin and Lake Superior. The storm central Sunday morning over Lake Michigan has moved its center to Upper New England states. During the past twenty-four hours it caused snow throughout the Northwest, lake region and Eastern states. Another disturbance has appeared over Saskatchewan which is causing warmer weather in Western Canada. The barometer is highest over the Lower Mississippi valley and the plateau region. Conditions indicate moderating temperatures in this locality this afternoon and tonight followed by colder again Tuesday afternoon and night."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures:

Hymen's Happy Hour.

Chisholm Tribune: Miss Blanche Ward and B. C. Parry were united in the holy bonds of matrimony in this village Tuesday evening, Jan. 7. Mr. Parry was formerly musical instructor at the Star theater.

By the time preliminaries had been arranged the sun had gone down and night had spread its shadowy mantle o'er the snow-clad earth. When a suitable place had been selected for the happy occasion, the contracting parties took their respective positions, and there 'mid the enchanted surroundings of a parlor, laden with the sweet fragrance of cut flowers, etc., the venerable municipal judge, as spotlessly white as newly fallen snow, pronounced the solemn words that bound two minds into a single thought and made two hearts beat as one.

Abraham Lincoln's Curiosity.

The February American Magazine includes a complete account of Lincoln's boyhood, as related to Mrs. Eleanor Atkinson of Chicago by Dennis Hanks, Lincoln's playmate and cousin. On the point of Lincoln's curiosity the following story by Hanks has bearing:

"You bet he was too smart to think everything was in books. Sometimes, a preacher 'r a circuit-ridin' judge 'r lyyer 'r school teacher'd come along. When one o' them rode up, Tom'd go out an' say: 'Light, stranger,' like it was polite to do. Then Abe'd come lopin' out on his long legs, throw one over the top rail an' begin firin' questions. Tom'd tell him to quit, but it didn't do no good, so Tom'd have to bang him on the side o' the head with his hat. Abe'd go off a spell an' fire sticks at the snow-birds an' whistle like he didn't keer.

"'Pap thinks it ain't polite to ask folks so many questions,' he'd say. 'I reckon I wasn't born to be polite. There's so darned many things I want to know. An' how else am I going to git to know 'em?'"

A Favorite Sonnet.

"For this true nobleness I seek in vain.
In woman and in man I find it not.
I almost weary of my earthly lot.
My life-strings are dried up with burning pain."

Thou find'st it not? I pray thee look again,
Look inward through the depths of thine own soul;
How is it with thee? Art thou sound and whole?
Doth narrow search show thee no earthly stain?

Be noble! And the nobleness that lies
In other men, sleeping but never dead,
Will rise in majesty to meet thine own;
Then wilt thou see it gleam in many eyes.
Then will pure light around thy path be shed,
And thou wilt never more be sad and lone.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Stillwater Gazette: Harmony will be restored in the Republican party by candidates for governor abusing and raking over the political history of his opponent. Yes? No?

Royalton Banner: Sherm Smith is not the first politician of that caliber to be produced in Minneapolis.

Little Falls Transcript: We hope the Minneapolis Republicans will save the rest of the state the trouble of keeping Tom Lowry and Tom Shevlin out of the Republican national convention.

Anoka Herald: This district should send a man to the national convention who has an infinite capacity for champagne and an utter disregard for real pain the next morning.

Lake Crystal Union: It takes a Republican president to enforce a Democratic platform. A Democratic platform promises everything good, but it ends there.

Austin Transcript: There is a strong effort being made to have a delegation from this First congressional district sent to the national Republican convention in the interests of Speaker Cannon. If the people were all to turn out and vote directly on the proposition, not one in twenty would favor it.

Le Sueur News: There is a story chasing around the lobby of the hotels to the effect that Bob Dunn and Jake Jacobsen have wept tears on the shoulders of each other and repented for past differences. Maybe, but there is a suspicion also that if they did meet and cry, it was because neither had his knife with him.

Willmar Journal: The party bosses are crying aloud for a united Republican party; for the Republicans to agree to stand by the ticket. A united Republican party is easy to gain. Just name good honest men who will stand by the people instead of the mercenary politicians, and that thing is accomplished.

Appleton Press: A pessimist is a fellow whose flea bites with both ends.

Anoka Union: Unless the Republicans nominate a man for governor with little friction, he will not be elected.

Albert Lea Standard: Nearly eighty millions of people would derive great and immediate benefits from a parcels post system, and only a few—mainly the express companies—would be injured by it. What is government mostly for—the many or the few?

Oh, splendid, joyful winter days!
Everywhere we hear,
People gibly give thee praise—
Best days of the year.
Glad old winter, they declare,
Brings us strength and health,
Braces trade up everywhere,
Adds to people's wealth;
Bronchitis, grip, pneumonia,
Is it not sublime?
Tonsilitis, diphtheria—
Glorious wintertime!

—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Colonel at the Inn.

The colonel got to the ancient inn,
And he heaved a restful sigh:
"Ho, landlord! Give me a mighty bowl
Of the stuff that cheers and warms the soul,
And we'll let the world and the winter roll!"
But the landlord said: "Gone dry!"

"A flagon old of the Three-X brand,
That'll raise the spirits high,
And send a man to the promised land
To the music glad of a 'Dixie' band;
Fill full! fill full, with a lavish hand!"
But the landlord said: "Gone dry!"

Then the scheming colonel spake apace,
And winked a knowing eye;
"Just leave it there, in a private place,
If the world was ever a friend to grace!"
But light dawned not in the landlord's face,
And the landlord said: "Gone dry!"

Then the colonel said: "Excuse these tears!"
And saddled his horse with a sigh,
And went where the tall blue grass appears
And the quaffing colonels have no fears;
Where the world's been wet for a thousand years
And they never say: "Gone dry!"

T-T-Two of a K-K-Kind.

Everybody's Magazine: A tall man, impatiently pacing the platform of a wayside station, accosted a red-haired boy of about 12.

"S-s-say," he said, "d-d-do y-you know ha-ha-how late this train is?"

The boy grinned but made no reply. The man stuttered out something about red-headed kids in general and passed into the station.

A stranger, overhearing the onesided conversation, asked the boy why he hadn't answered the big man.

"D-d-d'ye wanter see mu g-g-get me fa-face punched?" stammered the boy. "D-d-dat big g-g-guy'd tink I was mo-mo-mocking him."

SMILING REMARKS.

Baltimore American: "Has your employer any degree of perspicacity?"

"He has some queer kind of fits, but I dunno what the doctor calls it."

Baltimore American: "That forward Miss Flip openly advocates kissing games. Hasn't she nerve?"

"Well, encouraging osculation is a thing which does require cheek."

Cleveland Leader: Atlanta Majah—Col. Okorn is a discerning epicure and bon vivant, I understand?

Atlanta General—Yes suh. He's the best judge of lemonade in the city, suh!

Chicago Tribune: Mrs. Upsome—So you took a tour through Switzerland, did you? What did you think of the Matterhorn?

Mr. Pneurich—To tell the truth, I didn't try it. I don't think much of these foreign beverages, anyhow.

Washington Star: "You wrong me," said Plodding Pete, "when you say I ain't willing to work. I'm jes' dyin' to work."

"Then what's the trouble?"

"I'm too conscientious. Whenever I get a job I'm so anxious to fill it well dat I gits stage fright."

Philadelphia Ledger: "My friends," said the campaign orator, "beware of the unscrupulous heeler. (Applause.)

"There are men so lost to shame that they will offer you a dollar for your vote. (Hisses.) Do not listen to them. Spurn them. Be on your dignity. Demand more." (Continued applause.)

Chicago Tribune: "You see that swartly, undersized man talking to the hostess? He's the celebrated foreigner, Gen. Kallxiwix, who visited the United States several years ago."

"What is he celebrated for?"

"Why, when he went back home he didn't write a book about America, roasting the country and making fun of the people that had entertained him."

The Stringed Jap.

Los Angeles Times: Really the most objectionable thing about the Japanese, from an American point of view, is that they come to this country with strings on them. They are an industrious people, willing and eager to work, and, under certain restrictions, they fill a want when they come here. Those who go into business and compete with merchants already established are not so welcome as are the coolies who hire out as house servants or as field laborers. Still, the right to enter mercantile channels would not be gainsaid if other things were equal.

The objection to the Japanese—coolies, merchants, professional men and all alike—is that they come here to make money, to live and thrive, but are ready at the mikado's call to return and take up arms against the United States. This point of view is intolerable. No man, no family and no nation wants to warm a snake that may some day strike. The feeling that the Jap can never be made into anything but an alien is and must be distasteful to the American people when they take him into consideration. It is this feeling more than any other which causes the Japanese man to be considered an unwelcome visitor to these shores.

It is the strength of the United States that its population is composed of the people of all nations. Those who come here to live from distant lands and away from other governments make good and patriotic citizens. They turn out to be as warm in their devotion to the flag and nation as are the native born themselves. We have had no battlefield that was not dyed with the blood of men of foreign birth who gave up their lives gladly and heroically for the land of their adoption. From Lexington down to Appomattox there are lying in the trenches American soldiers whose first breath was drawn in the British Isles, in Germany, Russia, France and nearly all the countries of the world.

But, if Japan and the United States were to go to war tomorrow, or at any time beyond, almost every man Jap in the land would hie himself away to Nippon to shoulder a gun against us. Everybody knows this to be true; there is no denial of it from any source. It is not a pleasant thing to think of, and it really explains why the Jap is not liked.

Couldn't Be Anything Fairer.

Lincoln State Journal: It is predicted by an influential Minnesota newspaper of the Democratic faith that the North Star state will send a delegation of Johnsonites to Denver with instructions to give Mr. Bryan their votes in case their favorite son is unable to make it. That's fair enough.

A Great Physiologist

Once Said the Way to Keep the Stomach Healthy Is To Exercise It.

But He Did Not Tell How to Make It Healthy.

The muscles of the body can be developed by exercise until their strength has increased manifold, and a proper amount of training each day will accomplish this result, but it is somewhat doubtful whether you can increase the digestive powers of the stomach by eating indigestible food in order to force it to work.

Nature has furnished us all with a perfect set of organs, and if they are not abused they will attend to the business required of them. They need no abnormal strength.

There is a limit to the weight a man can lift, and there is also a limit to what the stomach can do.

The cause of dyspepsia, indigestion and many affiliated diseases is that the stomach has been exercised too much and it is tired or worn out. Not exercise but rest is what it needs.

To take something into the stomach that will relieve it from its work for a short time—something to digest the food—will give it a rest and allow it time to regain its strength.

The proper aid to the digestive organs is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets which cure dyspepsia, indigestion, gas on the stomach and bowels, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, and all stomach diseases.

Rest and invigoration is what the stomach gets when you use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, for one grain of the active principle in them is sufficient to digest 3,000 grains of food.

The Tablets increase the flow of gastric juice, and prevent fermentation, acidity and sour eructations.

Do not attempt to starve out dyspepsia. You need all your strength.

The common sense method is to digest the food for the stomach and give it a rest.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do not make the cure, but enable the organs to throw off unhealthy conditions.

Perfect digestion means perfect health, for under these conditons only do the different organs of the body work, right and receive the building-up material found in pure blood.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a natural remedy and are a specific for stomach troubles. The ablest physicians prescribe them.

The Tablets are pleasant to the taste, and are composed of fruit and vegetable extracts, golden seal and pepsin.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

MUNN GETS GOOD NEWS

Life Sentence Instead of Gallows is Fate of Accused.

Sheriff About to Build Scaffold When State Board Acted.

Bemidji, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—At St. Paul, late Saturday afternoon, the state board of pardons commuted the sentence of Merton S. Munn, who was to be executed here, Feb. 7, for the murder of August Franklin, at Baudette, last spring, to life imprisonment.

The action was due largely to the untiring efforts of G. M. Torrance of Bemidji, who took up Munn's case after pardon had been refused him on petition of his former attorney. Peter Mathieson, who was sentenced at the same time as Munn, had his sentence commuted by the board of pardons last Tuesday, much to the surprise of the majority of citizens of Bemidji. The action of the board in refusing a like favor to Munn caused considerable surprise, as he was thought to be the much more deserving of the two in view of all the facts known. The action of the board was determined largely by Judge McClenahan of Brainerd, who presided in the cases, and who telegraphed to Governor Johnson that he thought Munn was much more deserving of a commuted sentence than Mathieson.

Since last Tuesday, when the petition of Munn's attorney was refused by the board, he has been in a state of collapse. The news, however, received Saturday evening has cheered him wonderfully, and he acts like a new man. Sheriff Bailey was just getting ready to erect the scaffold on which Munn was to hang when the news of the board's action was received. Needless to say operations along that line were suspended forthwith, and the sheriff is now awaiting notification as to the commutation of sentence, after which the two men will be taken to the state penitentiary.

Sentiment in this city has been divided in these two famous cases, and though many thought Mathieson's act, if the evidence was true, one of the most brutal ever recorded, while it was conceded by all that Munn had at least some justification.

LABOR LIENS ON COPPER CROWN CO.

Nearly Four Thousand Dollars Worth Have Been Filed.

Ontonagon, Mich., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A labor lien of nearly $4,000 on the personal property and real estate of the Copper Crown Mining company has been filed in the county clerk's office. There are twenty-eight claims for labor performed between Oct. 1st and Dec. 24, and the amounts range from $8 to $430.

In the list of personal property scheduled are six barrels of copper.

The Copper Crown has its headquarters at St. Louis. Reports are to the effect that negotiations are being perfected whereby the company expects soon to not only be able to meet the claims against it but to continue work on quite a large scale.

The company has been operating the old Norwich and Hamilton properties for the past four or five years.

MINISTER RESIGNS.

Presumably Because He Objects to Church "Pillar."

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 27.—Rev. R. N. Martin, pastor of the Woodland Park Baptist church, has resigned his charge as a result, it is said, of the Wood trial, which is now pending in the federal court in this city. L. A. Wood, one of the Wood Bros., who has been indicted by the federal grand jury on a charge of using the mails to defraud, and whose trial has attracted wide-spread attention, is a trustee and one of the "pillars" of the Woodland Park Baptist church.

The Wood case stirred up considerable feeling in the church and, it is said, that some of the members favored striking Mr. Wood's name from the membership list.

Rev. Mr. Martin would not give any reason for resigning save that the work for which he came here had been accomplished. It is said, however, that he objected to L. A. Wood being the "whole thing" in the church and that is given as the reason for his resignation.

Mr. Martin came to St. Paul from Newport, N. Y., three years ago.

DRUNKEN MAN KILLED.

Walking Milwaukee Tracks and Passenger Train Hits Him.

Crystal Falls, Mich., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Isaac Matson, a Finn woodchopper, was killed two night ago by the Milwaukee passenger train while walking on the tracks near Amasa.

Matson was employed at the camp of Ader & Gray and was returning from Amasa under the influence of liquor.

The deceased man was about 35 years of age and had worked at Conlin's camp at Balsam until about a month ago. He leaves a wife at Calumet.

SCHOOL GIRL'S SUICIDE.

Seventeen-Year-Old Eleanor Priebe Takes Her Live.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Eleanor Priebe, 17 years old a sophomore in the North high school, shot herself through the head in her room at the Priebe home, 2727 Girard avenue south, Saturday night, and died before medical aid could be summoned. The girl had been suffering with influenza for the last week and, it is believed, that her mind was deranged.

Eleanor Priebe was popular in the North high school, and no other cause than insanity can be assigned for her deed. She had just reached her eighteenth year and was the youngest of four children. She was idolized by her parents. Her father, Henry J. Priebe, is a pipeman in the city fire department.

The theory that the girl was insane is born out by the stories told by members of her family. Mrs. Priebe noticed at the supper table that the girl ate nothing and that she talked irrationally. She attributed her actions to her illness, for she had been ill for a week and had not been at school.

CASS LAKE REDS HAD GREAT TIME

Loaded With Firewater, They Nearly Ran Passenger Train.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The next time a Great Northern passenger train picks up a party of Indians at Cass Lake bound for North Dakota, the train crew will probably ascertain first whether the members of a rapidly vanishing race are intoxicated, and if so, deny them passage. A party of redskins considerably the worse for liquor boarded the westbound passenger at Cass Lake two days ago en route to Fort Totten, N. D., for a visit with their kin.

A few miles out of Cass Lake one big Indian with a name sounding something like "Kick-a-hole-in-the-sky," undertook to navigate from the coach to the smoker while the train was going at full speed. A man looking out of the sleeper window in the rear saw him light and pulled the bell cord. The train backed up after him, the crew fully expecting to pick him up piecemeal, but "Kick-a-hole-in-the-sky" arose as chipper as any of them. When the train reached Grand Forks the Indians occupied most of the space in the aisles of the smoker, and the train crew had come to the conclusion it was better to let them "sleep it off."

One big buck was a gory looking sight after attempting to go from one end of the car to another and coming in sharp contact with the corner of a seat. His face looked like that of a whipped prize fighter.

NORWEGIAN CELEBRATION

Great Time Planned at Grand Forks May 17.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 27.)—Special to The Herald.)—According to plans being perfected, Grand Forks will have the greatest celebration of May 17 in the history of this city. It will be a record-breaker for the Northwest. H. Bendeke, consul of Norway in Grand Forks, has been making the arrangements in the East, and Judge L. K. Hassell has been looking after the local end of it. Mr. Bendeke writes that he has engaged Capt. Raold Amundsen, the Arctic explorer and discoverer of the Northwest passage; Consul Garde of Chicago and Consul Hobe of St. Paul as speakers. This trio should attract people from all over the Northwest.

There will be good musical talent secured for the occasion, including the Bjorne chorus. It will be a big affair and will probably be held in the city park, if the weather is favorable. May 17 falls on Sunday this year, and so the celebration will be on Monday.

FOOTPAD IS FLOORED.

Crystal Falls Man Turns Tables on Would-be Highwayman.

Crystal Falls, Mich., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fred Floodstrand fooled a footpad that attempted to hold him up a few night ago on the iron bridge. His assailant grabbed Floodstrand by the arm and the back of the neck and the two men fought for a moment when Mr. Floodstrand got in a swinging blow and felled the would-be robber to the ground. Mr. Floodstrand was so scared, however, that he took to his heels instead of sticking to his man, so the fellow got away.

HIS POCKETS PICKED

In Prize Fight Crowd and Large Sum Taken.

Racine, Wis., Jan. 27.—Frank J. Cameron, a lumber dealer of Milwaukee, was robbed here, Friday night, of $340 in money and bonds, stock certificates and other valuable papers worth from $5,000 to $6,000.

Mr. Cameron came here with a party of Milwaukee friends to attend a boxing match. When he left the street car at the Hotel Racine, several men jostled against him and extracted a long pocket book from his hip pocket, containing the valuables. He reboarded the car and searched for the pocketbook, but failed to find it. The matter was reported to the police and Chief Baker is making an investigation. Mr. Cameron offers a large reward.

WILLIAM MARTYN BURIED.

Old Resident of Ishpeming Who Died Friday at Sauk Center.

Ishpeming, Mich., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.—The funeral of William Martyn, one of the old and highly respected residents of this city, who died last Friday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James Ingram, at Sauk Center, Minn., was held this afternoon from the First Methodist church, under the auspices of the Odd Fellows, of which Mr. Martyn had been a member for thirty-six years.

Mr. Martyn was 72 years of age. He came to this country from England in 1865 and resided in Hancock until 1880, when he removed to this city. Besides Mrs. Ingram, the daughter, and James H. Martyn, the son, who resides in this city, Mr. Martyn is survived by W. E. Martyn, another son, who lives at Akeley, Minn.

BRAKEMAN INJURED.

Foot Caught in Frog and Leg Was Badly Mangled.

Spooner, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Alfred Page, a brakeman on the Canadian Northern railway, met with a severe accident recently at Rainy River. While opening a switch at the yard his foot became wedged in a frog and before he could extricate it, the engine bore down upon him. His leg was terribly mangled. It was found necessary to remove Page to the hospital at St. Boniface. Word has just been received that he is doing nicely and it is possible the foot will be saved.

HANCOCK'S POSTOFFICE.

Several Candidates for Position Are Coming to Front.

Hancock, Mich., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Since the announcement by ex-Mayor Thomas Coughlin that he is a candidate for the office of postmaster of this city when the term of Mrs. Emery expires, there have been three other declarations. Thomas J. Prince of the Evening Journal would like the place, and so would C. F. Rogers, a veteran newspaper man attached to the Houghton Gazette. William C. Kauth, a retired liquor dealer, is another seeker. All of these aspirants make known their wishes because of the fact that Mrs. Emery does not seek the office again. She took the office three years ago on the death of her husband, Warren Emery, who was postmaster at the time.

RIP-RAPPING BEGINS

By Government Along Missouri River Bank at Bismarck.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The work of rip-rapping 2,000 feet on the east bank of the Missouri river has been begun by Engineer Anderson and a crew of men under the direction of the government. The purpose of the work is to prevent the water cutting into the banks and washing them away. The upper point of beginning is just south of the river warehouse, and the work will extend 2,000 feet south.

It is intended to have the work completed, if possible, before the breaking up of the river.

Willows, stone and sand are the principle materials to be used, and the work will be interesting enough to draw a large number of curiosity-seekers to the place.

WIDOW IS FORTUNATE.

In Hard Circumstances, Receives Husband's Life Insurance.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 27—(Special to The Herald.)—Remembrance of the mysterious death of Gust M. Thorne, whose body was found floating in Red river, near the county hospital, last May, has been revived by the Continental Casualty company settling with the widow almost the full amount of her husband's $2,000 life insurance policy.

Thorne had last been seen alive on May 10. It will never be known whether he was murdered, committed suicide, or was accidentally drowned.

Thorne was a machinist at the Northern Pacific shops. Shortly before his death he had brought his wife and two children here from Clinton, Iowa. His death placed them in the most destitute circumstances.

Mrs. Thorne would never have known her husband had a life insurance policy had not the company, not letter asking him to pay his premiums. Mrs. Thorne did not realize what this letter meant, and came near throwing it away.

By the advice of a friend, however, she took it to local attorneys. After a long correspondence they procured the facts in the case, and instituted a case in the district court. Not caring to try the matter, the company offered a compromise, which was satisfactory to everyone.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

BORROWED, BUT NOT RETURNED

Some One Thinks Brokers Conduct a Circulating Library.

Will C. Brown, manager of Paine, Webber & Co.'s local office, is angry.

Outwardly, he is the same urbane smiling business man as of yore, but inwardly he is much perturbed, the condition having been brought about by the disappearance of some valuable books from Paine, Webber & Co.'s library, to which all customers and hangers-on have access.

Two copper books have disappeared and it is their whereabouts and the identity of the taker that is disturbing the broker. When at first they disappeared, Mr. Brown opined that some jovial friend, wishing to read up on the copper situation, had borrowed them for an evening or so, but when in the course of several days they did not resume their places on the office table, his opinion of the joviality of the miscreant soured.

The latest development is the posting of this naive note in the brokerage office:

"We wish the gentleman who borrowed Steven's Copper Handbook for 1906 and the Manual of Statistics for 1906-07, from our table, would return them, as we are desirous of keeping our records complete."

So far, the "gentleman" has failed to comply with the polite request.

IMMIGRANTS ARRIVE AFTER HARD PASSAGE.

St. John N. B., Jan. 27.—After nearly fifty days on the ocean, the 300 immigrants who left Antwerp on Dec. 7, for St. John, by the Canadian Pacific steamer Mount Royal, to make homes in Western Canada and the United States, arrived here yesterday on the Canadian Pacific steamer Montrose. The Mount Royal was buffeted about the Atlantic for a month, given up for lost and finally reached Queenstown. There the passengers were transferred to the Montrose, and on Jan. 11, left again for St. John. The Montrose should have reached here Wednesday last, but rough weather delayed her.

CAR WHEELS ARE "FLAT"

Local Conditions Are Hard on Street Railway Equipment.

Conditions in Duluth are said to be the worst of any city in the country for the producing of "flat wheels" on the street railway vehicles. Street railway men claim that the lines in this city, with their steep gradees, and weather conditions that produce a slippery track so many months during the year, have more than the average number of flat wheels caused in the car operations, as compared with cities where the lines are without grades and where the weather conditions rarely ever make the track slippery.

Referring to a recent complaint about flat wheels on a Woodland car, and the statement that the local street railway company is using old worn-out wheels on its cars, a motorman who has been with the company for years, and who has operated cars over all the lines in the city, says:

"The average person when riding on a car that has a flat wheel, or when disturbed at night by the pounding of a flat wheel on the rail, has the idea that it must necessarily be a worn out wheel, out of which the company is attempting to take as much wear as possible before consigning it to the scrap pile.

"This idea is entirely wrong. Flat wheels are caused by the wheels sliding on slippery rails with the brakes set. When a motorman suddenly applies his brakes to avaid running over somee careless driver, or pedestrian, who crosses in front of his car, he is very likely to flatten one or more of the wheels on his car.

"While, undoubtedly, many flat wheels are caused by the careless application of the brakes, the tracks are sometimes in such condition that it is almost impossible for a motorman to avoid 'skidding' his wheels occasionally. Duluth is, probably, one of the worst cities in the country for conditions that produce flat wheels, both on account of the steep grades and the sort of weather that produces a slippery track. While snow sometimes makes the track slippery the dirt from the street which is carried over the rail by vehicles when it is muddy also makes a very slippety condition. The worst rail by far that the motormen have to contend with in Duluth is the 'gummy' rail that results when the weather is cloudy and damp and the temperature is about the freezing point. At such times the rail seems to be covered with a thick black coating that makes it extremely slippery. At such times the sand seems to do very little good for, after the wheels have passed over it and ground it fine, it becomes mixed with the gummy substance on the top of the rail. Unless the rail is cleaned off and fresh sand constantly applied, the rail is in worse condition than if the sand were not used.

"After a wheel has been 'skidded' a very slight flat spot is produced, hardly detected by the eye, but which with every revolution of the wheel becomes larger. A flat spot the size of a dime and the depth of a thick piece of paper will make a terrible thumping of the wheel of a car that is going ten or twelve miles an hour.

"Formerly when a wheel was flattened it had to be thrown in the scrap pile. There was then, perhaps, some temptation for the company to continue the wheel in service as long as possible, particularly if it was a new wheel and was good in every other particular. Some years ago, however, the street railway company procured a special machine for grinding out the flat spots, and it is now the practice to remove the wheels as quickly as possible after a flat spot has started and true them up again in order to save them before the damage spreads too far. If the wheel is very bad, it requires from eight to ten hours grinding to take out the flat spot as the thread of the wheel, that is the outside of the rim or part that runs on the track, is chilled on and almost as hard as glass.

"With a few hours of slippery rail more wheels are flattened than can be ground out in a week, but the company keeps constantly on hand a number of perfect wheels mounted on axles ready to be put under cars. For some time past five or six pair of wheels have been changed on an average in a day on account of flat spots. It often happens that a car will go out in the morning with eight perfect wheels, and the very next day it has to be taken to the shop and one or more wheels are removed and replaced.

"While, sometimes, it may be impossible, after a slippery rail for a day or two, to get all of the wheels that may have been flattened replaced with perfect wheels, over night, and a car with a flat wheel may go out in the morning, this does not happen very often.

"If anyone is observing, he may notice that there are many more flat wheels towards evening than in the morning, and the flat wheels that disturb people at night are very likely to have been developed during the day. Several times lately the same car has been taken into the shop on two successive days to have the wheels changed."

S.S.S. FOR RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter which the natural avenues of bodily waste have failed to carry off. This waste or refuse matter ferments and sours and generates uric acid which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism, with its torturing pains and aches, inflammation and other disagreeable symptoms, gets possession of the system. The aches and pains may be relieved and the inflammation temporarily reduced by the application of a good plaster, penetrating liniment or some other simple home remedy, but the disease can never be cured while the blood remains saturated with the irritating, pain-producing uric acid poison. The cause should be driven from the blood before the trouble reaches the chronic or helpless stage. S. S. S., a purely vegeteble remedy, cures Rheumatism by thoroughly cleansing the blood of every particle of the uric acid poison, and making this vital fluid pure, fresh and health-sustaining. It filters out from the circulation the remotest particle of the poison, and when S. S. S. has renovated the blood, Rheumatism is thoroughly and permanently cured. SPORTS OF THE DAY

FINALS TO BE PLAYED

Bonspiel Brought to End in Duluth Saturday Night.

St. Paul, Winnipeg and Duluth to Play Off for Trophies.

The fifteenth annual bonspiel of the Northwestern Curling association, which opened two days late and continued under adverse conditions, was brought to a close Saturday night, with two finals still to be played and one event still in the semi-finals. Although when the late start was made the curlers feared they would be compelled to wait over Sunday to complete some of the events, the manner of conducting the meet and the results of some of the events, allowed the close Saturday night.

In the Minneapolis event, Dunbar of St. Paul and W. D. Stewart, also of St. Paul, were left in the finals, and they will play off the final game in the event at St. Paul. The same system will be followed in the finals of the St. Paul Jobbers' event, in which Rochon and Braden of Winnipeg remain. In the International, Stocking, Oidham, Brewer and Hurdon, all of Duluth, played their way into the simefinals, and the remaining matches will be played in Duluth.

All of the other events were completed before midnight Saturday night. Sam Cleveland of Duluth won the Duluth Merchants' event, Dunbar defeated Stocking in the last game of the Duluth event and the Canadian Soo trophy went to Braden of Winnipeg, who won from Rees, 10 to 9, in the final game.

The following officers of the association were elected during the year: President, W. C. Read, St. Paul; first vice president, J. Catlin, Duluth; secretary and treasurer, A. H. Smith, Duluth; assistant secretary and treasurer, William Craig, Duluth; executive committee, L. Delfiel, St. Paul; A. G. MacAuley, West Duluth; A. S. Chase, Superior; George Labatt, Minneapolis, and Harry Hurdon, Duluth.

Despite the handicap under which the curlers were placed by the weather and the long tiring sessions, which were necessary in order that the bonspiel might be completed, the big event was one of the best in the history of the association. The entries were large in number and of better quality than ordinary. In every event, the rinks were well matched and some of the best games ever seen in Duluth resulted from the keen competition. The curlers worked with the managers of the bonspiel to complete it before midnight Saturday night and everybody was satisfied with the termination.

The entertainment afforded the visitors in Duluth this year, is very likely to bring the bonspiel back again next year. St. Paul would like to entertain the curlers, but it is doubtful if they will be able to accommodate the bonspiel and give room for spectators. The selection of the place for the next 'spiel has been postponed until next October, when St. Paul will be able to say whether or not the bonspiel can be accommodated there.

The winner of the grand average cannot be decided until the last games are played. Braden and Dunbar are both strong contenders for the average prize and the results of their matches in the finals of the respective events, which they have yet to finish, will decide the question.

DULUTH WINS GAME.

The Superior Commercial Travelers Lose at Indoor Ball.

Duluth won the indoor ball game at the Armory Saturday evening. The contesting team were Zenith council, No. 40, United Commercial Travelers of America, and the Superior council, No. 333. The score at the end of the eighth inning stood 15 to 9 in favor of the drummers from this side of the bay. Only eight innings were played, and following the game there was a dance. Both the game and the dance were largely attended, and the affair was a financial and social success. Following was the lineup:

WANT PAINE APPOINTED.

Duluth Veterans Would See Him at Head of Soldiers' Home.

Members of the J. B. Culver post, Grand Army of the Republic, and other friends of Capt. Franklin Paine are urging his appointment by the governor to the position of commandant of the State Soldiers' home, made vacant by the death of Capt. Compton.

A resolution was passed by the Culver post Saturday evening asking Governor Johnson to appoint Capt. Paine. Capt. Paine has been manager of the clearing house of the Duluth board of trade for the past ten or twelve years, and still holds that position. He has lived in Duluth a much longer time than that.

At the outbreak of the war, Capt. Paine was mustered in as a sergeant in the First Minnesota volunteers and was later made a captain in the Eleventh Minnesota infantry. His Duluth friends are urging his service in Minnesota regiments and long residence in the state as an argument in favor of his appointment as the head of the soldiers' home.

THE BURNS BANQUET.

Annuaal Affair Will be Given at St. Louis Hotel.

The banquet will be honored with the presence of John Hill of St. Louis, royal chief of the order of Scottish Clans of the United States. Dr. Alex Milne will be toastmaster and Rev. Campbell Coyle will speak on the life of the poet. The banquet will begin at 7:30 and will be followed by dancing.

WIN GAME AT SUPERIOR

Duluth Hockey Players Show Superiority Over the Columbias.

Amateurs Play a Good Game in Face of a Chill Wind.

About 300 spectators endured the blasts of a chill wind in the open yesterday at Superior, while the Northern hockey team of Duluth defeated the Columbias of Superior by a score of 4 to 2. The game was one of a series for the championship of the Head of the Lakes, the series to be the best two out of three games.

From the start the play was fast yesterday and the pace didn't let down until the final whistle. It was a good, clean, fast game, both teams doing their best and keeping the puck on the move all of the time. Duluth showed a better form of combination play, better stick handling and a stronger defense, and the victory was well earned.

Duluth scored first, shortly after the opening of the first half and Superior tied the score a few minutes later, the half ending with the score 1 to 1. The second Superior score came from a face-off near the Duluth goal, after the puck had gone into the crowd. The score gave Superior the lead and the Duluth boys took it as an incentive. In quick succession, Deetz and Winters worked the puck down the ice from the face-off twice and scored two goals. The final score came near the end of the half, Horn scoring.

Deetz and Dunlap furnished the only unpleasant incident of the game, when they had a set-to back on the Duluth goal in the last half. Before they had done any damage they were separated, and after the crowd was backed off of the ice, the game went on with the two boys on the fence. There were a few other penalties for minor offenses.

The teams lined up as follows:

Superior.	Position.	Duluth.
Helmer	Goal	Fenton
Olson	Point	Furni
Childs	Cover	Horn
Johnson	Center	Deetz
Greener	Rover	Winters
Randall	Left wing	E. Cummings
Dunlap	Right wing	Steinback

Every bonspiel is, of course, the "biggest and the best ever." This year, however, the curlers do not have to stretch the truth when they say that the 1908 bonspiel was the best in the history of the association. The two days thaw at the opening threatened to make it a fiasco, but the weather man made good just in time, and the spiel was run off in record time and without a hitch.

Never before has there been such a gathering of crack curlers in Duluth. Practically every outside rink entered in the spiel was a rink with a reputation among curlers all over the Northwest, and many an old rivalry was fought out in Duluth this year.

The Duluth rinks did better than was expected. The Duluth curlers have had little opportunity to practice this season on account of the warm weather, and they were not in bonspiel shape. In addition to this fact, no more than one or two really strong rinks were entered from the Duluth club.

The promoters of the Duluth City Bowling league hit on the right idea for the booming of bowling in Duluth this year when they inaugurated the handicap system. Every match played sees the good results of it, for there are fewer backsliders and much more enthusiasm.

Under the old scratch system it was hard to balance the different teams in the league. There weren't expert bowlers enough to fill out the teams, and the ordinary bowlers didn't like to go into competition on even terms with the experts. The result was a lack of interest in league bowling matters, dropping out of individuals and teams, and a lack of the enthusiasm so necessary to the success of any such venture.

But this season it is different. The experts have been started on the scratch and the ordinary players given an advantage of 5 to 30 points, according to their ability. The handicaps are arranged so as to put everybody as near to a common basis as possible. The bowlers are turning out in greater numbers, they take more interest in the league, and even the spectators are showing more enthusiasm.

As the season advances the handicaps will be cut down as the efficiency of the bowler increases, and by this process, in time, no handicaps will be necessary, but there will be enough bowlers to fill out all teams and start from scratch.

SHEPHERD SUSPENDED.

A. A. U. to Take Up Case of Famous New York Runner.

New York, Jan. 27.—The suspension of Malvin W. Shepherd, the Irish-American Athletic club runner in Philadelphia for his action in the race on Friday, when he struck one of his opponents, robs the Pastime Athletic club games at Madison Square Garden tonight of one of the stars who was expected to take part. The Amateur Athletic union will doubtless take up the matter of the suspension, many athletes and others up on the rules contending that the action of the Philadelphia committee in allowing Shepherd to run on Saturday night after the act which caused his suspension yesterday makes that suspension illegal.

LOWE FOR COACH.

Detroit Infielder May be Engaged by W. U. of Pennsylvania.

Pittsburg, Jan. 27.—It was reported here last night that a deal has been practically completed which will eliminate Robert L. Love, the infielder of the Detroit American league from the major leagues. If the athletic committee of the Western University of Pennsylvania approves of the terms agreed upon, it is said, Love will coach the Western University of Pennsylvania team during the coming season. Contingent upon the contract being closed, Love is to become manager of the team representing his home town, New Castle, Pa., in the Ohio and Pennsylvania league.

Engagement Extended.

The crowd which saw John Davidson, the fancy and trick roller skater, at the Temple rink Saturday night, taxed the capacity of the rink, and thoroughly enjoyed the exhibition. Davidson's engagement was to have closed Saturday night, but Manager Shea prevailed upon him to remain over until Wednesday night and he will give four more performances. Davidson is a graceful fancy skater, but his jumping is the feature of the exhibition. In both high jumping and broad jumping over chairs, he claims the championship, and his exhibition substantiates his claim to the title.

Heavyweights Agree.

Andrew Danielson of the West end and W. E. Beaulieu of Duluth, heavyweight wrestlers, have finally agreed to meet, and they will get together next Friday night at the Metropolitan opera house. The men have put up money and each is confident of his ability to defeat the other.

C. O. F. ATTENTION

All members of the St. Louis Court, No. 177, are requested to meet at 2801 West Huron street, at 8:30 a. m., Tuesday morning, to attend the funeral of late brother Joseph Trudeau.

UOIDA DIES IN ITALIAN HOVEL

Rome, Jan. 27.—After having amassed and spent a fortune during her long career as a writer, and, through her popularity with the reading public, been hailed often as the foremost woman novelist of her age, Miss Louisa de la Ramee ("Ouida") died Saturday in comparative poverty at the little Tuscan village of Massarosa.

Here she had made her home in a milkman's cottage for nearly a year. At the age of 78 the sight of one eye had been destroyed, her hearing had almost failed and other infirmities had added their affliction. For the last five years her life had been passed in seclusion, and much of that time in dire want.

Absolute inability to reckon the value of the money earned by more than forty of her novels which became the "rage" brought her to this unhappy pass. Her once large fortune was squandered in giving to others.

Nearly a year ago attention was called to her unfortunate condition through the granting of a pension of $750 to her. Friends were willing to assist her, but the proud woman would have none of their help.

Ouida's career as a novelist began when she was 20, when she went from Bury St. Edmunds, where she was born, to London.

Some of her best known works were "Under Two Flags," "Two Little Wooden Shoes," "In Maremma," "Strathmore," "Chandos" and "Tricotrin."

JACK LONDON SAFE.

Returned to Frisco to Attend to Business Matters.

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—Jack London, the author, who left here last May on a seven-year trip around the world to procure material for literary works, and for whose safety grave fears have been entertained, returned to this city Saturday on the steamship Mariposa from Tahiti.

London is accompanied by his wife, and says that he has come back to attend to some business matters. He will leave again on the Mariposa on Feb. 1. The Stark, the fifty-foot boat in which London is making his trip, was left at Tahiti for repairs to her gas engine.

BANK TO LIQUIDATE.

New York, Jan. 27.—Comptroller William B. Ridgeley yesterday ordered the National Bank of North American closed for liquidation, and appointed Charles Hanna, national bank examiner, receiver.

The aftermath of the financial storm of last October, in its effect on the bank which will close its doors, has been in the shape of heavy and persistent withdrawals, the result, according to President Havemeyer, of insistent rumors respeting the bank's condition. Membership in the Clearing House association enabled the bank to weather the gale for a time, but the aid extended by this association, in the form of loan certificates finally became the means of bringing about the decision to go into liquidation, when the call for their redemption was intimated to the directors on Saturday last. The bank's indebtedness to the Clearing House association is $2,200,000.

President Havemeyer, in a statement given out last night, laid the blame for the trouble upon the persistent rumors which, he declared, were the cause of withdrawals, which on Saturday became so heavy that it was thought the bank would not be able to meet obligations on Monday.

MRS. MARY B. EDDY MOVES

Head of Christian Science Church to Reside in Brookline.

Boston, Jan. 27.—Guarded with the utmost secrecy, Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder and head of the Christian Science church, was removed by special train yesterday with all her household attendants, from Pleasant View, in Concord, N. H., where she has lived for nineteen years, to a new house in the fashionable Chestnut Hill section of Brookline.

The coming was unheralded and only a few of the leaders of the Christian Science church had been aware of the contemplated changes. Even the train crew, which early yesterday took the private car of the vice president of the Boston & Maine railroad to Concord were commanded to maintain absolute secrecy as to the trip they were to make, and the best men in the service of the road were assigned to the duty.

Preceded by a pilot engine to clear the way, the special train of three cars left Concord at 3 o'clock and proceeded over the route to the Chestnut Hill station. In the rear of the train, to guard against collision, trailed a third engine.

Arrive at Brookline.

Arriving in Brookline at 5 o'clock the party was taken to the late Emory A. Lawrence estate, one of the most beautiful in all Brookline, even before $100,000 had been spent in the last four months to remodel it, and here Mrs. Eddy was settled in her new home.

The most unusual scene attended the arrival of the special train at Chestnut Hill station. There were seven closed carriages to convey the party to the Lawrence estate, the fifth carriage in line being occupied by Mrs. Eddy, Calvin A. Frye, her secretary, and another man, apparently a groom. When the carriage of Mrs. Eddy drove up to the porch, Calvin A. Frye was the first to leave it, and following him came another man. Leaning back into the carriage, the big man, powerful of limb, gathered up the frail form of Mrs. Eddy. She was carried gently up the steps in the big man's arms.

Calvin A. Frye remained behind and was closely pressed for information. Absolutely refusing to give any names of those in the party or to make any statement, he turned to six tall powerful men, who stood near him, and ordered that every person at once be put off the grounds. Then he turned and entered the house. His orders were obeyed without delay.

Guard of Twelve Men.

Six men remained on guard through the night, and today six others took their places for the day guard. Permits have been issued by the Brookline police for the men to carry arms, and it is believed the watch of six at night and six by day will be continued for some time.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 27.—Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder and head of the First Christian Science church, yesterday left her home, Pleasant View, in this city, and by circuitous route went in a special train to Chestnut Hill, Brookline, to a house recently purchased by the Christian Science denomination.

Accompanied by Friends.

Mrs. Eddy was accompanied by her secretary, Calvin A. Frye; Archibald McLennan, one of the trustees for Mrs. Eddy's property; Rev. Irving C. Tomlinson, a Christian Science "reader," and a dozen other men and women of the Christian Science faith.

Mrs. Eddy will reside in Brookline permanently.

The following statement was given out last night from the office of Alfred Farlow, head of the Christian Science publishing bureau:

"The Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, discoverer and founder of Christian Science, has moved from Concord, N. H., to Brookline, a suburb of Boston. The Lawrence estate, which has been remodeled, has been quietly furnished for Mrs. Eddy and her household, and she occupied it at about 4:45 this afternoon. Only a very few of Mrs. Eddy's friends knew of her contemplated move.

"While there has been much speculation about the Brookline house no one has guessed aright concerning its future occupant.

A Dozen in Party.

"Mrs. Eddy and her household, including Calvin A. Frye, her secretary, with Archibald McLellan, constituted the party. They left Concord at 2 p. m., on a special train carrying three coaches. The train had been held in the yard at Concord until a very few minutes before the time scheduled for leaving. It was then run under the shed of the Boston side of the depot and was quietly boarded by the party, ten or twelve in number.

"The train was transferred to the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at Lowell, Mass., whence it was run to South Framingham, where it was transferred to the Boston & Albany road, and proceeded to Chestnut Hill station, where carriages awaited the party and carried them to their new home on Beacon and Hammond streets. Here everything was found in full equipment and supper was served at the usual hour. Except for the three hours required to make the trip there was no break in the usual routine of the family.

"This move was not prompted by any sudden decision. It is known to some of Mrs. Eddy's friends that she has for some years been considering the advisability of returning to this city. Her purpose is to be more convenient to the mother church of the denomination, nearer to its headquarters.

"The whole affair, including the preparation of the house, was in keeping with Mrs. Eddy's usual way of doing things. She weighs matter deliberately and carefully, then acts quickly."

TO VALIDATE MINERAL CLAIMS

Located by Deputy Surveyors, Object of New Senate Bill.

Washington, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Senator Heyburn reported to the senate today a very important measure from the committee on mines and mining, validating the location of mineral claims heretofore made by the deputy mineral surveyor of the interior department, holding that the deputy mineral surveyors, although not officers of the government, are prohibited from locating claims on public lands, a rule phich properly applies to employes of the general land office. There is a conflict of opinion between some of the courts and the secretary of the interior as to whether or not the deputy mineral surveyors come within the prohibition of section 452 of the revised statutes, applying to officers and employes of the general land office. The statute provides for forfeiture of his commission by an officer or employe, but says nothing about the effect of the law upon the validity of locations made by such officer or employe, hence the importance of legislation on this point, and it is eminently proper that congress should set at rest the question as to such locations and titles passed theron.

The committees on miners and mining today had under consideration a bill, introduced by Senator Heyburn, providing for the establishment here of a department of mines, which has the support of the United States mining congress. Hearings have been given to the director of the geological survey and the presidents of the mining colleges. Senator Heyburn believes there will be a favorable report on this bill.

DULUTH A REAL CITY

John Hill Sees Wonderful Changes in Past Fifteen Years.

Chief of Scottish Clans Compliments City on Rapid Growth.

"I was in Duluth just fifteen years ago and could hardly believe my eyes that such a change could be wrought in a city's growth and development," said John Hill at the St. Louis this morning. Mr. Hill is the royal chief of the order of Scottish clans, which places him at the head of the order both in the United States and Canada.

"Down in St. Louis we have begun to forget about the money trouble," said Mr. Hill. Business has begun to pick up and everything looks as we were coming out of the financial depression in good shape. Business throughout the South is showing splendid recuperative power and things are shaping themselves toward a good beginning for the new year.

"Down in Missouri we are having a great political contest between Senator Stone and Governor Folk for United States senator. It looks to me as if Governor Folk would triumph. Folk is one of the strongest characters in public life. He is beloved by the people of Missouri, for whom he has done so much and it looks as if he will receive the office he is striving for.

"When I was here before," said Mr. Hill, returning to the subject of Duluth, "you had quite a crude place. It was at a convention of the Scottish clans and the town looked far different than it did today when I got off the train. You didn't have sufficient hotel accommodations and the city didn't boast of the modern conveniences that it does at the present time. I called it a big town then. Now I think you have a charming city."

HADLY SUSTAINED.

Many people marvel at the effects of leaving off coffee and using Postum in its place, but there is nothing marvelous about it—only common sense.

Coffee contains a drug—Caffeine—which is a destroyer of digestion and the nervous system.

Postum is a rebuilder—made of wheat (no drug or medication) which contains the "vital phosphates" that repair the damage done by coffee.

What's the use to keep sick and miserable when a simple change of diet will bring back health and happiness. "There's a Reason."

RAILROADS ASK FOR A TEST CASE

On Commodity Amendment to Go to Supreme Court.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The operating vice presidents of many of the large railroads of the country were received by President Roosevelt today and presented a request, that in executing what is known as the commodity amendment of the railroad law, but one case be brought against the railroads by the government, this case to be finally disposed of by the supreme court of the United States. This, if agreed to by the government, would mean that the roads owning coal-producing properties would not sell them by May 1 next, as required by the law, but could operate them as hetofore until the disposal of the test case. The law in question is regarded by the roads as unconstitutional in that it requires the disposal of property at what would be necessarily a sacrifice. The law also is questioned on other grounds.

The president referred the railroad men to the interstate commerc commission, where it is understood the question will be fully discussed and a report made to the president as to the legal possibility of carrying out the suggestion made.

Those who participated in the conference beside the president were C. R. Gray of th 'Frisco road, who acted as the chairman of the conferees on the part of the railroads; I. G. Rawn, Illinois Central; E. G. Buckland, New York, New Haven & Hartford; H. U. Mudge, Rock Island; D. Willard, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy; W. A. Garrett, Sea Board Air Line; C. E. Schaff, New York Central; W. A. Gardner, Chicago & Northwestern; C. H. Ackert, Southern and G. L. Potter, Baltimore & Ohio.

If it is absurd to ask you whether you ever receive a telegram and forget to open it; and equally as absurd to ask you whether you read The Herald want ads., why, you'll do!

THE NEW RULERS OF SWEDEN.

Review of Reviews: King Gustavus V., who took the oath of office within a few hours of his father's death, on Dec. 8, has suffered something resembling his father's fate as crown prince. Overshadowed by the more brilliant gifts and more attractive personality of the parent, he has for years been spoken of in a rather disparaging manner in Sweden, while in Norway he harvested outright hatred in return for his determined upholding of the union. On frequent occasions during the last decade he has acted as vice regent while his father was sick or traveling, and in this way he has found chance to display qualities that have gradually changed the popular regard of him from one of suspicion to one of hearty respect. His nearsightedness, his reserve of manner, his very sincerity and serious mindedness have militated against him, but it seems probable that he will prove the very best ruler Sweden could desire at the present juncture. He is slow to make up his mind, and will not do so until he has searched every phase and detail of the problem before him, but once he has come to a conclusion he pursues his path without looking to right or left.

The new queen was the Princess Victoria of Baden, through whom, by a strange play of circumstances, the claims of the extinct house of Vasa—the last direct descendant of which passed away a few days after King Oscar, in the person of Carola, dowager queen of Saxony, and daughter of the deposed King Gustavus Adolphus IV of Sweden—may be said to have become joined with those of the reigning house of Bernadotte, and through her, her son, the present crown prince, is a descendant of both those houses.

MONARCHS' SHOOTING GROUNDS.

Recreation: Most monarchs own vast estates on which there is plenty of room and opportunity for the preservation of big game.

King Edward of England has great moors in Scotland on which the grouse and the deer live in peace and multiply extraordinarily under the fostering care of experienced gamekeepers. The German emperor has great forests in which bears and wild boars roam at large. The czar of Russia has many miles of forests devoted to game and the French republic maintains for the use of its president a fine park at Rambouillet, where the game is well preserved.

King Victor Emmanuel III of Italy has splendid preserves at Castel Porziano, half an hour by motor from Rome. The Spanish kin, Alfonso XIII, one of the youngest of Europe's rulers, does his shooting at El Pardo, his preserves near Madrid. His neighbor, King Carlos of Portugal, is also one of the most famous shots with rifle and revolver in all Europe.

INSECTS ARE HYPNOTISTS.

New Orleans Times-Democrat: "Did you ever know," said the hypnotist as he played with a curious glittering hypnotizing machine of crystal and silver, "did you ever know tthe hypnotism is practiced among insects?

"Well, it is a fact. A queen bee can hypnotize her whole hive whenever she wants to. She makes a curious humming sound, and within a moment or two every bee in the colony falls into a hypnotic trance.

"The death's head hawk moth is also a hypnotist of great power. This creature, indeed, makes its living out of hypnotism. Entering a hive, it makes a sound not unlike the queen bee's note, and, the bees immediately sinking into slumber, the moth proceeds to plunder at its leisure."

BOUND TO RAIN.

Washington Star: A Washington man, who spent last summer in the White mountains, tells of a characteristic encounter with a New Hampshire farmer. It was late in September, and it was almost time for the equinox, or "line storm" as the natives call it. The city man was planning a certain trip on his motor cycle, but the morning on which he had been intending to start was so gray and overcast that he felt some hesitation about setting out. He was trying to persuade himself of this feeling, even though his better judgment was against him. The mountains were veiled in wreaths of mist and cloud that had settled down almost to their bases. He was getting his wheel ready, when one of the nearby farmers came up and watched him.

"I s'pose ye don't mind gettin' some wet," he finally insinuated.

"Oh, I don't believe it's going to rain," answered the optimist, jauntily. "It looks a bit threatening, but I think it will clear up by noon, so I'm going to start."

The farmer was silent a moment, then he pointed solemnly toward the clouds, which had entirely shut out from view the mighty mountain four miles away.

"Young man," he said impressively as he pointed, "Look thar. When the cloud settles down over Kearsarge God Almighty couldn't stop the rain!"

WHEAT HAS FIRM TONE

Market is Stronger During All of the Session.

Flax Takes Slump During the Session in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 27.—Wheat was stronger during the entire session today and the closing prices were up more than a point over Saturday in Duluth, while the other American markets showed good gains.

The buying demand was very firm, although there were one or two bear raids during the session, which gave the market a temporary setback. The buying seemed to be on the general bullish situation in the United States.

Outside news was rather bearish.

The visible supply of wheat decreased 9,000 bus.

World's shipments were about as expected.

Liverpool closed ¾d to ½d lower, Paris ½c to ¾c lower, Berlin 1½c lower and Budapest ½c higher.

The May option closed 1¼c higher in Duluth, ⅝-¾c higher in Chicago, ⅞-1c higher in Minneapolis, ¼c lower in New York and ½c higher in Winnipeg. The July option closed 1½c higher in Duluth, ¾c higher in Chicago, ⅞c up in Minneapolis, ⅝c higher in New York and ¼c higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ¼c lower in Chicago.

World's shipment of wheat were 10,448,000 bus, as follows: American, 4,440,000, Russian, 656,000; Danubian, 240,000; Indian, 112,000; Argentine, 3,352,000; Australian, 1,408,000; Austria-Hungary, 16,000; Chili, North Africa, 224,000.

Car receipts at Duluth were 49 against 7 last year, and at Minneapolis 366 against 284 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 409 against 291 last year. Winnipeg received 353 against 60last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 951,000 bus, last year 533,000 bus. Shipments 362,000 bus, last year 174,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 470,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 1,077,000 bus, last year 915,000 bus. Shipments 360,000 bus, last year 377,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 163,000 bus.

Wheat was fairly well traded in during the session in the Duluth market. May wheat opened ⅝c higher at $1.09⅛, declined to $1.08⅞, rallied to $1.09⅜, went off to $1.08½-⅝, rallied to $1.09⅝-¾ and closed at $1.09⅝, a gain of 1⅜c over Saturday. July wheat was inactive and closed 1¼c higher than Saturday.

Durum wheat closed 2¼c higher and cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was easier. May flax opened unchanged at $1.20¾, sold as low as $1.18¾, rallied to $1.19¾ and closed at $1.19½, a loss of ¾c from Saturday. July flax closed ¾c lower at $1.21½.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Becomes Weak After Firm Opening Under Heavy Pressure.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—The wheat market was under heavy selling pressure today, and became weak after a firm opening. The early prices showed an advance which was caused by firm markets at Liverpool in the face of Saturday's decline here. May opened ⅝@⅞c higher, at $1.00¾@1.00⅞, and sold off to $1.00@¼. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 441 cars against 732 cars last week and 321 cars one year ago.

The market became unsettled in the latter part of the session. The closing decline at Liverpool was followed by a sharp break on the local board, May declining to 99⅝c. From this point prices rallied until May sold at $1.01. The close was strong with May ⅝c higher at $1.00⅝.

The corn market was steady, a good demand offsetting the continued cold weather. May opened a shade to ⅛c higher, at 60⅝ to 60⅝@⅜c and sold at 60½@⅝c. Local receipts were 510 cars, with 6 of contract grade.

Prices ruled firm for the greater part of the day. The high point for May was 61¼@¼c. The close was strong with May ½@⅝c higher at 61½c.

The oats market was easy in sympathy with wheat. May opened ⅛c lower, at 53⅝c and sold at 53½c. Local receipts were 274 cars.

The provisions market opened firm, but eased off on realizing sales. May pork opened 12½@15c higher, at $13.10@13.12½ and sold at $13.05. Lard was 5c higher, at $7.97½ and sold at $7.95. Ribs were 5@7½c higher at $6.97½ and sold at $6.92½.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.00⅝; July, 97⅝c; September, 95@⅝c. Corn—May, 61¾c July, 58⅝@⅝c; September, 59½@¾c. Oats—May, old, 53⅝c; May, 51⅜c; July, old, 46½c; July, 44⅜c; September, 38⅛c. Pork—February, $12.55; May, $13.05. Lard—January, $7.75; May, $8.00. Ribs—January, $6.62½; May, $6.95@6.97½. Rye—Cash, 82@84c. Barley—Cash, 80@95c. Timothy—March, $4.80. Clover—March, $17.75. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, 99⅜@$1.00⅝; No. 3 red, 96⅜@98c; No. 2 hard, 98⅜@$1.02⅝; No. 3 hard, 94⅜@$1.07; No. 3 spring, $1.01@1.09; others, nothing doing. Corn—No. 2, nothing doing; No. 3, 53½@54½c.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Sold Up a Cent, Then Fell, But Rallied Later.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 27.—Wheat was erratic. It sold up early a cent above Saturday's close, then fell a cent, rallying again later. May ranged between $1.07⅝@1.08 and $1.09¼ for the day. Receipts at 360 against 284 last year. Local elevators stocks increased 125,000 bushels for two days. As trade was light, price changes were not so much a question of statistics as of the momentary mood of the crowd in the pit. The market was weak at two places, but Duluth reported the sale of 50 loads of durum wheat at the seaboard, which turned the price up, again.

May closed at $1.09@1.09⅛; July, $1.09 ¼@⅜.

Cash wheat was in good demand at ⅞c over May for choice No. 1 northern and 1c under for No. 2 northern.

Millers and elevators bought and there was some outside demand. No. 2 northern, $1.07⅜; No. 3 wheat, $1.02⅜@1.04⅜.

Flour—Sales to Europe were reported. Millers verified the reports, but sa d the business in patents for export consisted only of occasional sales of small lots. Quotations unchanged. First patents, $5.45@5.60; second patents, $5.35@5.50; first clears, $4.30@4.40; second clears, $3.50@3.60. Shipments, 48,200 barrels.

Corn—Receipts were the largest for a long time, 104 cars. The market weakened for all cash lots.

Barley brought disappointment to traders who had looked for a big run for only 71 cars were received. On the other hand it did not advance but was about even with Saturday to a little easier. Early sales were firm, but later the less desirable grades were off 1@1½. Range, 75@90 per cent. Flax crushers cleared up the 78 cars received on the first round at 2½ under May. Bran in bulk slightly easier at $20. Close: Wheat—May, $1.09 ⅝; July, $1.09¼@⅜; No. 1 hard, $1.12¾; No. 1 northern, $1.09¼; No. 2 northern, $1.07¾; No. 3 northern, $1.02¾@1.04¾.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Walter W. Carr: We have had a strong, active copper market today with advances throughout the list, with activity in North Butte, Old Dominion, Greene-Cananea, Isle Royale and Butte Coalition. Offerings in our market continues very light and we look for higher prices, barring reactions from time to time.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co: Our market was again strong and active and even Amalgamated showed a little strength. The situation is the same and stocks show no sign of liquidation, Utah Consolidated was very strong on New York buying and Old Dominion and Isle Royale were leaders. The news on Shannon is better and the stock rallies easy and it will go to 15. Atlantic has been absorbed this week around 13 and will move quickly on any further news.

• • •

Boston to Gay & Sturgis: Contrary to almost every one's expectations, the markets today opened strong, notwithstanding the news of another bank failure and the announcement of the government's suit against the Harriman roads. A market that refuses to go down on adverse news is a rising one on its main movement, without any doubt.

The gathering of railroad presidents announced in Washington to discuss the railroad situation with the administration may develop into something good for the market. At the close a profit taking movement by traders caused prices to sag somewhat. There does not seem much indication of weakness shown anywhere.

New York Money.

New York, Jan. 27.—Close: Money on call, 1½@2 per cent; ruling rate, 1¾ per cent; closing mibd, 1½ per cent; offered at 1¾ per cent. Time loans, weak; twenty-six days four and ninety days, 4½ per cent; six months, 4½ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 5½@6½ per cent. Sterling exchange, strong, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87.15@4.87.2 for demand, and at $4.83.80@4.83.85 for sixty-day bills. Commercial bills, $4.83.50 Bar silver, 55⅞c. Mexican dollars, 44¼c Government bonds, easy. Railroad bonds buoyant.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

But Profit-Taking in Final Hour Caused a Reaction.

When Pressure to Realize Abated, Slight Rallies Occurred.

New York, Jan. 27.—A sluggish movement of prices was in evidence at the opening of the stock market, which was mostly downward, although there were a few small gains. Mexican Central rose ⅝. Transactions generally were on a small scale, but the first sale of United States steel was of a block of 7,000 shares at a decline of ⅜.

The tone of the market underwent an immediate change after the opening, the distribution of moderate purchasing orders, Northwestern railroads and a few of the specialties causing a general sharp advance. Reading, St. Paul and American Smelting were the most heavily bought and reflected the greatest strength. St. Paul and American Tobacco preferred gained 2, American Smelting 1⅝ and Reading and Northwestern 1½. The market broadened materially and prices were lifted comprehensively. TELLING THE BEES.

Notes and Queries: The practice of "telling the bees" of a death—probably of other important happenings also—exists to this day in some parts of England.

A year or two ago a retired village blacksmith in Norfolk told Mr. Cox that he had made a point of telling his bees of his wife's death. Asked how he told them, he said that he had rapped on the boarding supporting the hives with the words, "The mistress of this house is dead." Asked what would have happened if he had not told them, he said they would have died.

A few days ago a Bedfordshire rector's gardener told Mr. Cox that his bees had actually died upon his failure to inform them of his master's decease.

PATIENT ESCAPES FROM HOSPITAL

Delirious With Fever, He Runs Six Blocks in Night Clothing.

Delirious with fever, Thomas Fastwith, a pneumonia patient at St. Mary's hospital, Sunday morning, dropped from the window of his ward, on the second floor, and ran blocks through the snow and cold of midwinter before he was captured by Patrolman Grandmason, at the corner of First avenue and Fourth street.

It was 4 o'clock in the morning when the exciting episode occurred. The patient had been delirious for some hours. Taking advantage of the absence of an attendant, the crazed man raised the sash of the window, sprang from the room, and made off as fast as he could run. His feet were bare, and he was only clothed in a thin night robe.

Attendants at the hospital gave chase, but the delirious patient outran them. The exposure to the elements, it is believed, will result in the man's death. Physicians hold little hope for his recovery.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Is Law Prohibiting Railroads From Discriminating Against Unionists.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The constitutionality of the act of congress of June 1, 1898, prohibiting railroad companies engaged in interstate commerce from discriminating against members of labor organizations in the matter of employment which was called into question by the case of William Adair vs. the United States, was decided by the supreme court of the United States today favorably to Adair. The opinion was by Justice Harlan and held the law to be repugnant to the constitution."

PASSING OF A SLANG WORD.

New York Sun: "Curious how ready we Americans are to adopt slang words," said the man who had finished reading a Boston paper. "And we drop them quite as suddenly after they have penetrated into remote sections of the country and seemingly become a part of our daily speech.

"I was reminded of this while coming through on the train from Boston this morning. For a number of years I have traveled back and forth at regular intervals between New York and Boston and have become more or less familiar with the country along the route.

"At one point the train passes close by a large rubber manufacturing plant. Abutting on the railroad is a long stretch of neatly kept grounds and in the center, in full view of passing trains, is erected a sign bearing the single word:

RUBBER.

"A few years ago every time we would pass that sign there would be a mild commotion in the car. Some would turn on their fellow passengers expansive grins, as though they had just accomplished a huge joke; others would be convulsed with suppressed laughter, and once as we passed the place a man behind me poked a long bony finger into the small of my back and then chuckled gleefully.

"I was thinking of this as we approached that town this morning and took pains to note what effect the sign would have. Most the passengers were looking out of the windows, and saw the sign.

"There was no indication, however, that it received more than a passing glance and I doubt if any of the passengers thought of the vogue this word, in its slang sense, had several years ago.

"Strange, isn't it? They all have their day and then oblivion. I am waiting as patiently as possible for the same fate to overtake the 'lemon' joke."

CASTING A BRONZE STATUE.

Cassell's Journal: "Immense pains and immense labor attend the production of a bronze statue of any size, even after the artist has done his work," remarks a sculptor.

"To begin with, the plaster model has to be completely covered with small lumps of a special kind of sand, sometimes as many as 1,500 or 2,000 of these pieces being required. After these blocks of sand are dry they are taken off the cast one at a time and carefully put together to form the mould. The latter is then filled with clay, an dthe same operation is again gone through, a facsimile of the plaster cast being thus obtained.

"Then comes the most delicate part of the whole work. The clay model or 'core,' as it is technically called, has to have a quarter of an inch taken off its entire surface, which is anything but easy, especially if the subject is at all crante.

"The core is then again put into the mould—which has, of course, to be reconstruct

REGISTRATION HEAVIEST UNDER PRESENT LAWS

More Than 11,000 Voters Registered for Municipal Election.

Every Ward in the City Runs Over the 1,000 Mark.

Public interest in the municipal election Tuesday of next week is reflected in the registration of 11,142 voters in the city, the figures in the city clerk's office this morning showing that that number of people will be entitled to vote. Not since the general registration rules of the primary law were put into effect has the city had such a registration and in very few cases in the time prior to that has the registration run over 10,000. In 1906, there were 12,000 names on the books, but that was when first paper men were voted and the new names were merely added to those already on the books, so the comparison is not a fair one.

The efforts of the political workers and the deep interest being taken in the election by the citizens at large are responsible for the heavy registration. The figures at the close of the second day of registration last Tuesday were unprecedented. Estimates of 10,000 were freely made at that time, but few expected Saturday's figures to run as heavy as they did. In all wards of the city, 1,781 names were added Saturday to those already on the books.

Political workers sought out almost every person in the city, who had not registered. Party ties were not regarded. Everybody was urged to get out and register, regardless of which way he might vote, and the hard work had good results.

As a result of the registration this year, the Seventh ward, which had formerly stood next to the Second in point of voting strength, leaped into the lead, with 1,759. The second is next to the Seventh with 1,645; the Fifth has 1,528, and the First, 1,519. Not a ward in the city has under 1,000, even the Sixth, which had only 790 at the last mayoralty election, going to 1,090.

The Fourth precinct of the First ward is the banner precinct, with 504 and the third precinct of the same ward follows with 475. The third of the Second has 450; fourth of the Second, 477; first of the Fifth, 429, and third of the Seventh, 424.

If all, who were out to register, are also brought out to vote on election day, the vote will easily be the largest the city has ever had at a municipal election. The vote at the last mayoralty election, on 1906, was only 8,641, and at the last general election, in November, 1906, it was 8,999.

Following is the registration for each day in the separate precincts and a comparison with the vote at the last mayoralty election in 1906:

DRINK WAS THE CAUSE

Fred Taylor Lays His Troubles to Love for Liquor.

Claims He Was Too Drunk to Realize His Act.

The trial of Fred Taylor, for grand larceny, which was begun Friday afternoon, will probably be finished in Judge Cant's room today.

Taylor is accused of stealing $78 from a West end saloon where he was employed as a bartender.

The state claims that Taylor, with a companion, went back to the saloon after it was closed for the night, Jan. 4, broke open the door with an ax and stole the money that the proprietor "planted" under the floor in lieu of another hiding place for the receipts of the till.

One of the features of the trial this morning was the testimony of James Taylor, a brother of the accused, who testified that Fred confessed to the taking of the money and told the witness where to find what was left of it.

Under cross-examination by Judge Martin, for the defense, James Taylor stated that his brother was drunk when the officers arrested him and that he was not sober enough to talk coherently until the evening of Jan. 5.

Fred Taylor, according to the defense outlined, will claim that he has always had the reputation of being honest and hard working. He claims that after he began attending bar he acquired a liking for liquor that led to his undoing and that he was so drunk the night of the alleged theft that he did not know what he was doing at times. He claims that he had no intention of stealing the money, but after going back to the building for liquor conceived the idea of borrowing some of the money from the till to spend, and then took it all for safe keeping when he realized that he had exposed the hiding place to his companion, an outsider named Dean.

Taylor claims that when he made the alleged confession he was not in a condition to fully realize what he was accused of doing.

RAILROADS WILL BOOM NEW RESORT

Railroads Will Advertise Beauties of the Rainy Lake Region.

Believed It Will Develop Into Popular Summer Resort.

It is understood that the railroads which are opening up the Rainy river and Rainy lake region intend doing what they can to make it into a popular summer resort. Minnesota is the land of summer resorts, but it is claimed that no section of the state is quite so beautiful, and so rich in natural scenery, as the region along Rainy river and Rainy lake.

One advantage is that the climate generally is quite cool in the summer time. There are plenty of forests, and in addition to the other attractions there is good fishing and hunting, and unlimited opportunities for boating. The lake and river offer chances for long and attractive trips on well-appointed steamers, and the strings of smaller rivers and lakes afford unexcelled opportunities for taking trips in canoes and row boats.

The attractions of the Rainy river country are not very well known to the public at large, owing to the fact that it has been so difficult to get there up to the present time. Now that there are two lines of railroad running to the border, with one or two other lines in prospect, it will be an easy matter to reach this district, and it is believed, that plenty of judicious advertising will bring it into great favor as a summer resort. If it does develop into such a resort, Duluth will be greatly benefited, for most of the people going there will travel via Duluth, and the outsiders may be expected to spend a few days here either going or coming.

A large summer hotel is a possibility of the near future for Rainy lake, and summer camps of the kind that have been built by individuals on Isle Royale may be started. These would be for rent. There are hundreds of beautiful little wooded islands in Rainy lake that make ideal camping spots, and there are numerous good camping and hotel spots along the shores of the lake and river.

Suit Against Town.

Marion, Ill., Jan. 27.—It was learned here, yesterday, that the Illinois Central Railway company has entered suit against the town of Perrin, this county, for $700,000 on the ground of interfering with traffic. A Perrin police magistrate recently assessed a fine against the railroad for shipping in to the place, beer and whisky after the town had become anti-saloon.

GOOD PROGRESS.

Plans of the Twin City & Lake Superior Railway Company.

The Twin City & Lake Superior Railway company, which is building a direct line between Duluth and the Twin Cities, has made excellent progress during 1907, and this year expects to make even better progress. If is said activities will be transferred to this end of the line, where clearing will be done, and where a considerable force will be employed getting out ties, piling and timbers and delivering them along the right-of-way.

As soon after April 1 as the season will permit, grading will begin again and will be pushed vigorously with a large force all along the line to the townsite of Montgomery on Clam river, which it is planned to reach by July 4. Officials of the line say that by the end of the year steel will be laid well up into Pine county. The stock in the company is still said to be selling at a rapid rate, and the people behind the deal claim to have plenty of money in sight to carry it through.

MUST ASSIST THE MILITIA

Regular Officers Called Upon to Aid the Volunteers.

In a notice of an order sent out by the secretary of war, which was received at the recruiting office this morning, rules and regulations covering the encampments of the regulars and the militia are given. One of the rules prescribes that all officers of the army shall, when they can possibly do so, assist the militia in its field maneuvers. The order is signed by Chief of Staff Gen. Franklin Bell, and after prescribing the drill and maneuvers to be followed by the army and militia, makes it binding upon army officers to assist in the summer encampments and to endeavor to bring the tactics of the militia up to a high point.

WAGES AND THE OPEN SHOP

Discussed From the Standpoint of the Working Class.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The facts in connection with local unions and contractors are gradually becoming known. No doubt the two parties concerned, who at first were playing the main part in the present battle are the biggest losers. If the people as a nation would realize that the rights of all men are alike, and that God never created the sun only to shine upon one particular class of people, the world as a home for us all would appear different, even to those who at the present time are using their best power and ability to get the working man below the bread line.

I can refer the reader to men in this town who ten years ago when they sat down to eat one meal, scarcely knew where they would be able to buy another one, and were, of course, under the obligation of taking the wage-earners' standpoint in society, but have since then been fortunate, and today are able to see a clear pathway clear through to the grave without turning as much as a stick on the way. Now then, is it proper for such individuals to entirely neglect the working man's rights to organize when we have unions and organizations and corporations controlled by the money power, which probably will, if we give the matter a single thought, appear more tyrannical than any labor organization yet created? It at least appears difficult to understand how God's envoys can honestly devote their time to support such a mission.

It has been said time and again that organized labor (regardless of trade) is a hindrance to the betterment and further increase of our city, making the money power hesitate whether to invest here or not, but in my opinion, what the so-called moneyed men have placed in the hands of some local grafters were properly handled, it would undoubtedly go a long way to uphold local interests as far as the welfare of the city is concerned. I think any man who is laboring under fair minded impressions must admit that the wage-earner is a main support in building up a city, and if he is not paid in proportion to living expenses there will be nothing but distress around his home, which, of course, under such conditions will not belong to him but to some outside parties, with the real estate exchange in charge, demanding high rents and doing little or no repairs.

We all know that sometimes misleading statements are made, which lead to trouble, but in most cases the matter could easily be adjusted were it not for "subtraders," and I think the present trouble would have been settled weeks ago and every one concerned would have been money ahead, if the contractors' union had been manly enough to handle their own business and not realizing the serious situation, have turned the matter over to others. Before I proceed to close my remarks, I wish to ask, Can it be true that broad minded citizens and intellectual people are willing to spend their time and use their power to support such a movement, which undoubtedly will bring distress into the homes of the working class? Business men and citizens should remember that when they assist the contractors in getting the open shop system (as they term it) they are most surely laying a dead trap for their own business, because when all have money business is good and when just a few have it business is contrary.

SARELL GETS $1,500 DAMAGES

Jury Awards Him That Amount Against W. T. Bailey Lumber Co.

Konstu R. Sarell was awarded damages in the sum of $1,500 against the W. T. Bailey Lumber company, in a sealed verdict opened in Judge Dibell's room this morning.

Sarell, who was formerly employed by the company in its sawmill on the range, sued for $2,000 for injuries to his leg, received by the limb being caught between a rapidly revolving pulley and a post. The wheel tore and burned the flesh badly before Sarell was rescued.

The case was on trial about three days and was hard fought from start to finish. Heino & Hollister represented the plaintiff, Sarell, and Howard T. Abbott represented the lumber company.

STIR IN GOTHAM HOTEL

Caused by Arrival of Moffat, the Denver Banker.

New York, Jan. 27.—David H. Moffat, the Denver banker, mining promoter and railroad man yesterday created much excitement in the Hotel Belmont. Walters, figuratively speaking, fell over one another to execute his orders, and miniature feuds started over who should take the ice water to the multimillionaire's apartments.

All the furore started becauseMoffat had twice taken Head Waiter Tom Gay of the Fifth Avenue hotel on trips to London and Paris and Berlin, and had wound up by presenting him with land now worth $200,000. Moffat for thirty years has come to this city annually and put up at the Fifth Avenue.

He registered at the Belmont and the waiters in the Fifth Avenue were astounded when they learned of it and promptly tipped off their fortunate brethren in the newer hostelry. These took deep interest in Moffat.

MEANING OF HANDSHAKES.

New York Sun: They had been talking about various ways of shaking hands and had pretty well gone over the ground covered by all the philosophic writings on handshakes, when one of the men in the group said:

"The most expressive handshake I ever saw was given by one man to another. There was no kinship between them.

"Each was about 40. Both were in perfect health. One had the prospects of many years of life. The other was to die within a minute, and the man whose hand he held was to kill him.

"It seemed to me then that I could read the meaning of the handshake given by the man about to die to the man about to kill him. It seemed to say: 'You are a good man, and I like you. I thank you for many acts of kindness, and especially for this final friendly grasp.'

"Then, with a gently lingering cling, he let the other man's hand slip from his own. There was a volume of meaning bound up in that motion.

"It seemed to say that there were the morrow's sunrise and many more for the man whose hand he was releasing, but for him a few moments more of life, and then—. It seemed to say that there was an age of human companionship in every instant while the hands touched.

"It seemed to say that when the clasp was broken he was forever cut off from the living and was as one dead. And many other things it seemed to say that I cannot translate into words.

"Within a few seconds one of the men had given the signal that ended the life of the other.

"It was a case," the story teller continued, "of the hanging of a man in Connecticut for murder. While under the influence of liquor with other men he had dealt one of them a blow that resulted in his death.

"The condemned man was not by nature or inclination a criminal. He had never been arrested before he was taken into custody for murder.

"The sheriff who shook hands with him on the gallows just before the drop fell had a genuine liking for him. He offered the condemned man the usual merciful portion of liquor before the execution, but the man refused it.

"By the way, I have seen several persons hanged, and I think this man was the only one I ever saw go to the scaffold without being 'doped' with liquor, and he was the steadiest in nerve of them all. His only betrayal of weakness, if it was such, was his noticeable clinging to the sheriff's hand before releasing it."

PROBLEMS OF GREAT CITIES.

Any good housekeeper could grant the sudden request of three hungry children for a "piece" with ease, and to the entire satisfaction of the petitioners. But if the hungry ones attracted by her bounty should be increased to thirty next day she would be worried t osupply their wants. If on the third day the demand should be presented by three hundred clamorous appetites she would probably shut herself up to have a good cry, and there would be an of the matter.

The only difference between this imaginary incident and the parallel situation actually fronting the governments of the rapidly growing cities of the twentieth century is that the municipal governments can't give up. So swift is the pace of progress that the village of today becomes the city of tomorrow, and the metropolis of the day after. Each stage of development presents a new set of problems pressing for immediate solution, each of which is more complex than any which preceded it. Population grows in arithmetical progression, while the problems it thereby creates increase in geometrical progression. Chiefly these problems concern the fundamental necessities of existence, for which the strugle in great cities tends to become so fierce that even the fittest scarcely survive to the end of life's allotted span.

While it is a relatively simple matter to manage acceptably the affairs of a village of a thousand inhabitants, to direct the destinies of a municipality of a million or more of people requires statesmanship of the highest order. Indeed, to administer the public business of a large city so as to secure the greatest good for the greatest number would seem to call for the prescience of a prophet rather than the plodding drudgery of the engineer.

With this introduction, Charles Frederick Carter discusses at length the new problems of great cities in the Technical World Magazine.

ATTEMPT TO BRIBE

Cannon Once Approached With Offer Equivalent to $250,000.

Promptly Showed the Man Out of His Committee Room.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Uncle Joe" Cannon's carefully prepared speech at the national board of trade banquet, in this city, last Wednesday evening, upon the growth of the commerce of the United States was accorded a most enthusiastic reception at the hands of the commercial interests represented there. Speaker Cannon, who, according to his own statement, has seen the United States grow from 18,000,000 to nearly 90,000,000, was largely reminiscent in his address, which was a masterly presentations of conditions existing at present, and intensely optimistic as to the future.

Personally "Uncle Joe" Cannon is of the rough diamond order. Of stalwart frame and rugged features, he goes plowing along through the world much as a lumbering horse would do. Blunt of speech in most things, he can at times become confidential. When he wants to get right down under the skin of a fellowman, he has a fashion of poking the butt end of a half-consumed cigar into the ear of the man he is talking to, but barring that little mannerism, he is all right. Those with whom "Uncle Joe" is on terms of friendship (and the number is legion), like him immensely. He is loaded to the guards with a quality known as "horse sense," and is approachable to an unusual degree. If he lived 1,000 years he would not get a swelled head or grow exclusive. He is not built that way. More than any other man in public life, Speaker Cannon reminds one of Abraham Lincoln. He is full of homely phrases, and his head is crowded with information.

"In all your experience," said The Herald correspondent to Speaker Cannon, the other day, "did anybody ever make a cold-blooded proposition to bribe you for a cash consideration, or its equivalent?"

"To be honest, I will say that in my nearly twenty years on the committee on appropriations, I never had but one experience of the sort you suggest," was the reply. And then the veteran remarked: "I will not say that I do not like money, or that I would not make money by any legitimate means, but it is my pride and glory that no man lives who can truthfully say that he owns Joe Cannon. The representative of a very powerful institution once came to me with an offer that was equivalent to possibly $250,000. He wanted to buy me for that sum. I showed him out of my committee room, and I will say that the concern he represented did well in withdrawing him from the Washington field. Not that I do not want $250,000, or $100,000, or $50,000, but I figured that if I took a bribe I would have to live ever afterward with a thief and a scoundrel. Now I only have one life to live, and I do not want to spend the remainder of my days in the society of a thief. Neither will I permit myself the punishment of association with a man who is the slave of another man, and the official who sells himself to another is owned, body and soul, by that man. Selfish motives alone would keep me honest."

Alonzo H. Stewart, son of Col. Gordon A. Stewart, formerly of Des Moines, Iowa, has elebrated his thirty-first year in continuous service of the senate of the United States. Thirty-one years in the employ of the senate is a long time, particularly when one recalls the changes that have taken place in the personnel of that body in thirty years. Stewart is ante-dated by only two men—Col. R. B. Nixon, the financial clerk of the senate, and Mr. Richards, in charge of the stationery room of the senate, these men having served nearly or quite forty years.

Beginning as a page, "Lon" Stewart, as he is known throughout the capitol, gradually worked himself into the good graces of the senators until he now holds the position of deputy sergeant-at-arms and the Republican "whip." He enjoys the confidence of the leaders and has demonstrated admirable fitness for the responsible position he now holds. Under the advice of his uncle, Col. C. H. Gatch, for a long time a leading member of the bar of Des Moines, he studied law and graduated from the law department of the George Washington university. Stewart is an Iowa boy, intensely proud of the commonwealth; proud of her great statesmen and proud of her history. His ambition is to own a little farm in Iowa, where he hopes to end his days among the scenes of his boyhood.

Edwin Sefton, the assistant secretary of the national Democratic commitee has taken occasion to hunt up the records of the last five meetings of the national committees to select the time and place for holding national conventions. These meetings were held in Washington and it is interesting, if not instructive, to note how the attendance of members of the committee have fallen off. On Jan. 21, 1892, the national Democratic committee, composed of forty-nine members, met at the Arlington. Of this number thirty-four members were present and fifteen were represented by proxy. In 1896 the committee met in Washington with thirty-three members present, one absentee and sventeen proxies.

The campaign of 1900 was inaugurated by the meeting of the national Democratic committee in February of that year to select the time and place for the national convention. This meeting was attended by thirty-eight members and twelve proxies. In 1904 there were thirty-five out of fifty-two members present, with sixten proxies and one vacancy, that of Hawaii. But the meeting in December last reached the high water mark for absenteeism, there being but twenty-two members of the committee present, twenty-three proxies being voted.

In conjunction with the meeting of the national Democratic committee it is an interesting coincidence that in 1896 the Republican convention was held June 16 of that year and the Democratic convention July 7. This year the Republican and Democratic conventions will be held on the same dates as in 1896.

BIG CLAIM IS ALLOWED

The Government Will Pay Porter Bros. $10,000 for Extras.

Work Performed on Portage Lake Ship Canal Contract.

Word was received in Duluth this morning that the United States war department has granted the claim of Porter Bros., of this city for $10,000 alleged to be due as extras on the firm's contract for the construction of the Portage Lake ship canal in Northern Michigan.

The notice of the allowance of the claim came from Washington to County Attorney John H. Norton, who was the legal representative of Porter Bros. in pushing the claim.

ANGUS GUNN DEAD.

Twenty-Three Years Resident of Sandstone, Once Postmaster.

Sandstone, Minn., Jan. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Angus Gunn, for many years a well known citizen of Sandstone, died last evening in St. Mary's hospital at Rochester, Minn., where about a week ago he underwent an operation at the hands of the Mayo brothers for an internal trouble.

Mr. Gunn came to Sandstone from Nova Scotia in 1885 and has been a continuous resident up to the present time. PLAN OF THE DEFENSE IN PENNSYLVANIA BOODLE CASE SUDDENLY CHANGED

Architect Huston of Philadelphia Secures a Separate Trial.

Thought to Have Made Agreement With the Commonwealth.

Attorney Scarlet Opens Case by Explaining Construction of Capitol.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 28.—The plan of defense in the capitol prosecutions has been changed completely by the action of Architect Joseph M. Huston of Philadelphia, in securing a separate trial, with the consent of the commonwealth. Huston's action would seem to indicate that he has an agreement with the commonwealth, and will be one of its principal witnesses. The attorneys on both sides will not discuss this phase of the case, except to say that Huston has been subpoenaed as a witness for his co-defendants, Contractor John H. Sanderson, Former Auditor General William P. Snyder, Former State Treasurer William L. Mathues and James M. Shumaker, former superintendent of grounds and buildings.

Huston has been in Harrisburg since Saturday, with his attorneys, but has not appeared in court.

Should Huston be called as a witness for the commonwealth, the defense will try to break down his testimony by attempting to show that he certified to the quantity and quality of the furnishings supplied by Sanderson, and that the bills were approved by Shumaker and Snyder, and paid by Mathues, on the strength of the architect's certificate and that if there was anything wrong he is responsible. Huston's action has intensified public interest in the trial, and the court room was crowded with lawyers and spectators today.

The case now on trial involves payments by the state of $49,417.80 to Sanderson for sofas, tables and clothes trees. These articles were paid for at the rate of $18.40 per foot, and it is alleged by the commonwealth that frauds to the amount of $19,308.40 were perpetrated. James Scarlet, in opening for the prosecution today, outlined the commonwealth's case and what it expected to prove.

Has Negro Attendant.

Shumaker came into court with a negro attendant and took his seat at the defendant's counsel table, while Mr. Scarlet was speaking. Mr. Scarlet recited the history of the construction and equipment of the capitol, and explained the official duties of the auditor general, state treasurer and superintendent of grounds and buildings. He also explained the system of contracting for state supplies upon the

STEAMER DODGES TEN WATERSPOUTS

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.—Ten waterspouts encountered in the gulf stream impeded the progress of the Norwegian steamship Cecilia, which has arrived here from Cartagena by way of Turks Island. The Cecilia was off the Carolinas last Friday when the hurricane which brought death and destruction swept up the coast. For twelve hours the vessel was buffeted about, receiving no more damage than the loss of a few deck movables.

In the wake of the hurricane came the waterspouts. The first was seen on the starboard and its large size brought terror to the crew. The captain evaded the spout only to find the vessel apparently getting in the track of another. From port to starboard, over a course extending five miles, the Cecilia was steered until ten huge spouts were eluded.

CONVENTION OF BREEDERS

The American Association Opens Its Fourth Annual Meeting.

Washington, Jan. 28.—A large number of delegates assembled here today in attendance upon the fourth annual convention of the American Breeders association. The association will be in session three days.

The object of the association, whose membership embraces scientific and practical breeders to the number of about 1,100, is a rather unique one. Its aim is improvement of the human race, as well as animal and plant life. The animal breeders are endeavoring to breed a better class of horses; cows that will yield more milk and butter, meat animals that will yield steaks and chops more tender and better flavored; while the plant breeders are working for wheat that will yield finer flour and more of it, corn that will contain more protein, plants that will resist blight and the attacks of rust and smut, cereals that will flourish in spite of drought; fruits that will grow far north and flowers that will bloom all summer.

The convention was called to order by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, president of the association, who made an address. At this morning's session reports of committees on the subjects of "Animal and Plant Introduction," "Animal Hybridicing," "Breeding for Dairy Production," "Breeding for Meat Production," "Co-operative Work on Animal Breeding," "Co-operative Work in Plant Breeding" were made. What probably will prove to be one of the most interesting reports will be that by Dr. David Starr Jordan on "Eugenics" or the science of improving stock, whether human or animal.

RAINY RIVER DAM.

Water Power Company Wants Extension of One Year.

Washington, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Bede, at the request of the company constructing the dam at International Falls, Rainy River, is preparing a bill to extend the time for completion of the project one year. This company expects when the dam is completed, to develop a horse power of some 30,000.

LOUISIANA DEMOCRATS

Will Nominate Governor at the Primary Election Being Held.

Lieut. Gov. Sanders and Theodore Wilkinson Are Candidates.

New Orleans, Jan. 28.—The next governor of Louisiana will be selected today in the Democratic primary election. There are two candidates, J. Y. Sanders, at present lieutenant governor, and Theodore S. Wilkinson, a sugar planter. The state election occurs next April.

The primary campaign has been the cause of a special session of the legislature, and of two personal controversies btween prominent men, in which the preliminary steps of the duelling code were resorted to before settlement was reached.

The special session of the legislature was confronted with rival reform proclamations by Governor Blanchard and by Lieutenant Governor Sanders. The combined result of these proclamations on the eve of election was to place Louisiana well up among the leaders of Southern states in corporation reform legislation, and to save the state many thousands of dollars annually by great reductions in the revenues of certain political offices, principally in the tax department.

Prohibition, the continuance of horse racing, and more stringent laws regulating dealing in cotton futures are among the problems with which this campaign has dealt, without, however, the drawing of sharply defined lines for or against such reforms. The weather was partly cloudy.

WANT PATENTS IN FEE SIMPLE

Fond du Lac Indians Send Petition to Congressman Bede.

Washington, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Congressman Bede yesterday received a long petition from the Indians of the Fond du Lac tribe urging that a bill be drawn and pushed to passage, granting them patents in fee simple to their lands, so that they may control their affairs the same as their white brethren. Mr. Bede has taken the matter up with Indian committee of the house and senate and also with the interior department.

It appears that there is now on the statute books an act which enables the secretary of interior to grant the privilege of holding their lands in fee simple upon being able to prove to the satisfaction of the secretary their competency to administer their own affairs.

JAPS AND CANADIANS

Have Come to an Agreement on Emigration Question.

Negotiations With the United States Are Still Pending.

Tokio, Jan. 28.—Replying, to interpellations in the lower house of the diet this evening, Foreign Minister Viscount Hayashi spoke at length on the foreign policy of the government, including the negotiations with America and Canada.

He announced that the Canadian question has been definitely settled and read the correspondence with Rodolph Lemieux, the Canadian minister of labor, wherein Japan has agreed to restrict emigration to Canada within reasonable limits. He said that a memorandum attached thereto defined what was considered reasonable limits, but insisted that Japan had not conceded any of her treaty rights, nor had her prestige suffered.

He said that the negotiations with America were continuing and he was unable to give any details, but was able to announce that a satisfactory settlement was within sight.

Negotiations With China.

Viscount Hayashi said further that certain negotiations with China were unsettled, pertaining to the Simmintun Fakuoin railroad, regarding which a protest had been presented by China.

Regarding the Kantao boundary dispute in Korea, he said that Japan occupied the position of arbitrar and would decide according to the merits of the evidence.

Viscount Hayashi, continuing, said it was the duty of the central government to conserve the interests of Japan subjects resident in other countries, by preventing a further exodis of their countrymen, which might be prejudicial to those already residing abroad, and the restrictions

WOULD RATHER RAISE DOGS THAN PREACH

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 28.—Because a portion of his congregation objected to his breeding dogs, Rev. L. Moore Smith, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, has resigned his charge. Mr. Smith has been a lover of dogs all his life, and when he took charge of the Scotch Plains church he established a kennel and devoted considerable time to the raising of fancy dogs, which have won him many prizes at bench shows. A portion of the congregation, however, decided that it was unbecoming in a minister to run a kennel, and dissension arose resulting in the resignation.

HOLDS ELECTION LAW TO BE VALID

Ohio Supreme Court Decides Call for State Primaries Regular.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 28.—The supreme court today affirmed the decisions of the common pleas court of Franklin county and Allen county, in the two cases brought to test the validity of the Bronson primary election law. The substance of this is that the court holds the law to be valid.

The cases are not to be reported, nor does the court state in announcing its decision the ground upon which the decision is based.

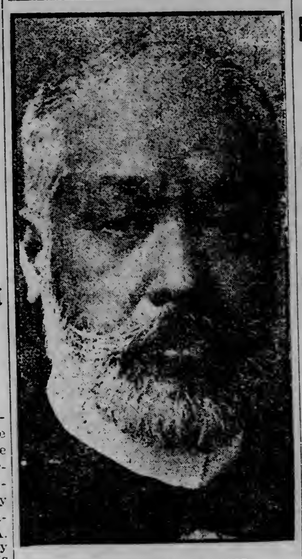

It has been presumed that attorneys supposed to represent Senator Foraker will carry the question now to the federal courts upon the questions raised by Prosecutor Welty of Allen county, but the attorneys for that side of the case today declined to state whether that would be done or not.

Prosecutor Welty said in the clerk's office after the decision was rendered that he proposed to carry the case to the supreme court of the United States at once and had secured from the courts the right to prepare the entry in the case with that end in view. The decision makes the call for state primaries on Feb. 11 regular.

HAVEN: "LOOK OUT WHAT YOU'RE DOING."

PRESIDENT MITCHELL IS VOTED SIX MONTHS' PAY BY THE MINE WORKERS

VISCOUNT HAYASHI,
Foreign Minister of Japan, Who Says the Emigration Question Has Been Settled With Canada and Is Progressing With the United States.

Includes All Expenses and Also Medical Attendance.

Refuses to Accept Any Positions Proposed by the Miners.

Will Take Long Vacation to Try to Recover Health.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 28.—The convention of the United Mine Workers of America today unanimously voted President Mitchell six months' pay, with all expenses, including medical attendance. Propositions sent to the resolutions committee to employ Mr. Mitchell after his retirement as president, April 1, as counsel, at a salary of $5,000, to place him at the head of a national educational board, to work in connection with the national executive board, and to levy a per capita tax of from 10 cents to 50 cents, were reported unfavorably, after Mr. Mitchell had been consulted and had refused to accept any of them. Mr. Mitchell has announced that he intends to take a long vacation, to endeavor to recover his health. Resolutions presented by the Socialists were promptly voted down today. They were similar to those presented to the convention each year.

A resolution to give the Western Federation of Miners jurisdiction over all metalliferous mines, and the United Mine Workers jurisdiction over all coal mines, was favorably commented upon and referred to a commission, to be named later, to bring the matter before the national convention of the Western Federation. A resolution, opposing government by injunction, was discussed by Secretary Wilson and several Socialist delegates, including John Walker, president of the Illinois miners.

UNEMPLOYED SWOOP DOWN ON TARRYTOWN

Tarrytown, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Following the announcement that John D. Rockefeller had directed the superintendent of his estate at Pocantico Hills to give work on the estate to the Tarrytown men who are out of employment, an army of the unemployed, the largest ever seen in this part of the state, marched down on the estate yesterday. Many of them were from New York city and other places within a short distance. The superintendent declines to furnish work for any of the applicants except those who live in Tarrytown or in the immediate vicinity of the estate, saying that it was necessary to take care of them first and that there was not work enough to take care of the unemployed from a distance.

RAILROAD POOLING

Advocated in Resolutions by Recent Conference on Trusts.

Are Presented to President and Both Houses of Congress.

Washington, Jan. 28.—In accordance with the action of the national conference on combinations and trusts held in Chicago last October, resolutions in advocacy of reform legislation were today presented to President Roosevelt and to the two houses of congress by Seth Low of New York, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and James O'Connell, president of the International Association of Machinists.

Mr. Low stated that the resolutions expressed the desire of the trust conference for legislation and efforts would be made to have congress take up the several subjects dealt with at the present session. In brief, the recommendations are for a law permitting pooling arrangements among railroads subject to the approval and supervision of the interstate commerce commission; for the creation of a commission to consider the entire subject of business and industrial combinations and to report its recommendations to congress; to amend and broaden the Sherman anti-trust law and to provide for the examination, inspection and supervision of great producing and manufacturing associations.

It is understood that the president made no expression of his views on the subject dealt with.

Later in the day the committee visited the capitol and made arrangements for hearings before the proper committees of the two houses. No date was set for the committee's appearance before either house, but it is probable that they will be given an opportunity to present their views some time in the latter part of February.

CARDINAL RICHARD OF PARIS IS DEAD.

Paris, Jan. 28.—Francois Marie Benjamin Richard, cardinal and archbishop of Paris, died here today of congestion of the lungs, after a short illness.

Cardinal Richard was born at Nantes March 1, 1819, and was made a cardinal in 1889.

THE RAVAGES OF TUBERCULOSIS

To be Dealt With in a Systematic Campaign.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Dr Eugene H. Porter, state commissioner of health and his advisory board, named recently, to aid the department in dealing with the ravages of tuberculosis, have agreed upon a plan of campaign. The advisory board is made up of experts on tuberculosis.

Dr. Porter announced that a bill will be introduced in the legislature making mandatory registration and ratification of all cases of tuberculosis throughout the state. The state department of health, Dr. Porter said, "must insist upon the registration of all cases of tuberculosis. It is absolutely essential that the location and distribution of these cases be known in order that proper measures may be taken for their instruction and relief.

"The department should investigate the conditions existing in any given part or parts of the state, should provide for the wide distribution of circulars, pamphlets and other literature bearing on the prevention of the disease; should enlist the press, the clergy, the school teachers, the farmers' institutes, the grange meetings, and furnish them with literature and speakers; should instruct health officers and health boards as to their specific duties; should ascertain how the various towns and localities in the state were performing each its part, and should do these things constantly."

Dr. Porter made an appeal to the legislature for sufficient funds to meet the needs of the campaign.

THE TAKING OF EVIDENCE

Against the Tobacco Trust is Transferred to Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 28.—The taking of evidence by the government against the American Tobacco company in an effort to prove the company an unlawful combination in restraint of trade, was transferred to Louisville today from New York, where the case has been going on for two months.

The evidence so far presented by the government bears principally on the policy and the methods of the trust in its control and management of its subsidiary corporations, and of manufacturing firms, whose business, output or product it is alleged the trust has been able to control, to the disadvantage and financial injury of independent manufacturers.

Today's hearing was before A. G. Ronalds, clerk of the United States court. C. J. McReynolds of the department of justice represented the government; W. W. Miller, the Imperial Tobacco company, and Junius Parker of New York, the American Tobacco company.

WHO ARE LEGAL SCHOOL OFFICERS

In Mille Lacs County—Attorney General to Find Out.

St. Paul, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attorney General Young has begun quo-warranto proceedings in the supreme court for the purpose of finding out who are the legal school officers of District No. 17, located in Mille Lacs county. The order issued calls for A. C. Ladeen, clerk; Charles Brandt, treasurer, and C. J. Sandberg, director, to come forward and show cause why they should not be removed from office. The hearing will be held Feb. 17.

The district has been torn up for months because of the presence of two school boards, one of which refused to give way to the other. Because of this fact no teachers could be secured, they being afraid of not being able to secure their pay, and the schools have been closed in consequence. Recently, by agreement, the two boards came together and agreed on a teacher. Now Mr. Young is determined to find out who is who in the matter, and the supreme court has been called upon to solve the problem.

RAILROAD NEWS

GREAT NORTHERN ROAD BEING GIVEN HEARING

Is Charged With Discrimination in Lumber Rates.

Claimed That It Forces Sales of Ties to Itself.

Ira B. Mills, G. F. Staples and F. E. Young, members of the state railway and warehouse commission, are today conducting a hearing in Duluth, at the Spalding hotel, on the complaint against the Great Northern railroad, brought by shippers of forest products out of Northern Minnesota, charging that the road discriminates in shipping rates on ties and certain other products against producers in favor of brokers, that it forces sales by producers to the road by charging them excessive freight rates, and that it charges prohibitive freight rates on cord wood.

The hearing began at 10 o'clock this morning and ran until nearly 12:30 o'clock, when a recess was taken until 2 o'clock this afternoon. Considerable testimony was taken at the morning session, and more is being taken this afternoon. This will be carefully considered, and it may be some little time before a decision in regard to the matter is rendered. J. W. Reynolds acted as attorney for the complainants, and was principal witness for them. The railroad company was represented by H. A. Kimball, assistant general freight agent, who testified as to freight rates; C. E. Eveleth, chief fuel and timber inspector, who gave testimoney regarding the cost of ties and methods employed in purchasing them, and Attorney Armstrong. Several interesting facts were brought out in the examination of these witnesses.

Brokers Get Better Price.

It was admitted that in many instances the brokers who have contracts for furnishing ties to the Great Northern were paid higher prices than individuals who delivered ties along the line independent of brokers, and sold them direct to the railroad company. Different reasons were assigned for this. One was that in the case of the contractor all risk from chattel mortgages, labor liens and trespass claims is assumed by the contractor, while in the other case the railroad company takes a risk, and another was that contracts with brokers are made early in the season, at prices above what may be paid later on. Prices vary according to the location of the ties, and according to the market demands in any particular section, it was explained.

Mr. Reynolds contended that a different classification of rates should be provided for lumber, ties, posts, poles, pulpwood, etc., instead of having all come under one rate. Under the present system all these come under what is known as the commodity lumber, lath and shingle tariff, the same relative rates being charged for all.

Mr. Reynolds argued that because of a difference in values there should be a difference in rates, and said that ties, posts, poles, etc., should be shipped at about one-half the lumber rate, while cordwood should not be more than one-quarter of the lumber rate. He claimed that all forest product rates should be regulated with a fair lumber rate established as a basis, the other timber products having freight charges placed on them according to their value as compared with lumber.

Mr. Kimball, when called to the witness stand, testified to the effect that a carload of lumber had about the same value as a carload of ties, posts, poles or cordwood, the values ranging from $250 to $340 a car, according to the quality of the product shipped.

Mr. Eveleth said that Duluth contractors, or brokers, were being paid at the rate of 60 and 65 cents a tie, following out the terms of contracts made early in the season, before the money stringency caused a fall in prices of ties. He contended that this is above the present market price, but it has to be paid in order to live up to the contract. This price is f. o. b. Duluth. Prices for line delivery are lower. In the cases of the contractor, they are 45 and 50 cents, and individuals with whom no season contracts are made, he said, are sometimes paid less than this. He testified that in the Duluth district the Great Northern has purchased no ties from other than the brokers for more than a year past. The trouble arose over rates on shipments out of the district tributary to the Cass Lake and range lines, which is included in the Duluth district.

Mr. Eveleth said instructions were that no ties or other products should be piled along the right-of-way, except for immediate shipment, or in the cases of a contract, where a special permit had been issued. He said no tie contracts were made for less than 500,000 ties, and that the contractors sometimes pay more for line ties than the railroad itself. He asserted that the company preferred dealing direct with the contractor, for in this way it was assured against loss from trespass claims, labor liens and chattel mortgages, and also escaped the inconvenience of dealing with scores of small producers by letting the contractor do all that, and dealing with him alone. He thought the purchase of ties piled along the right-of-way by individual producers, and purchased direct by the railroad, would not amount to more than 10 per cent of the total annual purchases of the road.

Mr. Eveleth Explains.

Mr. Eveleth also said that contractors, or anyone else, were at liberty to cut ties along the Great Northern, and ship them to foreign lines over the Great Northern. He explained a difference of 13 cents a tie between the price paid contractors for line ties, delivered f. o. b., Duluth, by saying the freight rate and cost of loading was included in the latter. The higher rate applies to ties coming off connecting lines.

Mr. Kimball said tie shipments amounted to only about one-fourth of 1 per cent of the lumber shipments, and said it was much more dangerous from every standpoint for the railroads to handle ties, posts and poles, than to handle lumber, all of which, he claimed, should have some bearing on the rate situation. He thought it entirely reasonable that ties, posts and poles should be charged a freight rate as high as lumber.

The complainant's charge that the railroads pay a market price on ties to brokers, and a line price of about 25 per cent less to producers, charging a freight rate so excessive that the producers must sell to the line, or its brokers, at whatever price the road or its agents chose to pay.

EXTENDING BRANCH.

Milwaukee Road is Building Into the Gogebic Range Country.

Ontonagon, Mich., Jan. 28.—The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway company is extending its Star Lake branch from Wisconsin into Gogebic county, Michigan. Grading contractors are now at work as far north as Pomeroy lake. The present terminus of the Star Lake branch is at High lake, in Vilas county, Wis., and construction work is being rushed on the new line between that point and Pomeroy lake.

The St. Paul's survey crosses the Chicago & Northwestern company's Watersmeet branch about half way between Wellington and Gogebic station, and only a short distance east of Mud lake. The contracts now in hand will take the tracks as far north as the Northwestern branch. The line eventually will be extended northward through Marenisco township and across the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway, finally meeting the St. Paul's new line, the construction of which has been started through the country southwest of Ontonagon. It is understood that the St. Paul company intends to close up the intervening gap during the next twelve months.

The extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul line through Gogebic county is a matter of considerable moment to that region, although it is regretted that the railway will not touch any of the larger settlements of the district. Primarily the company seems to have an eye on the timber traffic. About the biggest tracts of wooded lands remaining in the upper peninsula will be tapped by the new line.

TRAINS TOO FEW.

Road Must Answer to Commission for Reductions in Service.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 28.—The officials of the southern division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, who are located here, were today summoned to appear before the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission at Albert Lea, Minn., on Friday next, to answer a demand for sweeping reforms in the service. The complaints allege that the railway does not run enough trains on the Southern Minnesota division, extending 300 miles from La Crosse to South Dakota, that the cars are not numerous enough and of an inferior kind. Fifty stations and a large section of Southern Minnesota depend exclusively upon the service of this line.

DIPHTHERIA IS DISAPPEARING

Will Become as Rare as Leprosy, Says Commissioner Evans.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—That diphtheria would become as rare as leprosy in Chicago in the course of the next decade was the assertion of Health Commissioner Evans, at the Normal Park Presbyterian church, Sunday night.

Dr. Evans first compared the health statistics of last year with those of 1881, showing the state of affairs which was considered a dangerous epidemic last year was the normal condition of the city's health, and was taken as a matter of course twenty-six years ago. He then told of new plans which are being made by the health department to fight diphtheria.

"Next year we expect to be able to do away with diphtheria for a time. Then, owing to the fact that the diphetheria bacilli can live for as long as a year in the throat of a healthy child, we will have a recurrence of the disease. We will fight this off, but with discouraging persistence it will come back. After several years of this see-saw fight, however, we certainly will vanquish the disease and it no longer will be a menace to the community."

Dr. Evans contrasted the situation in Chicago with that in Minnesota, which, without any compulsory vaccination laws, has had 50,000 cases of smallpox in the last seven years. He suggested that if the state of Minnesota chooses to enjoy the luxury of smallpox the other states of the Union should leave her to enjoy it alone and refuse to trade with her.

CUBS' FOOD.

They Thrive on Grape-Nuts.

Healthy babies don't cry and the well nourished baby that is fed on Grape-Nuts is never a crying baby. Many babies who cannot take any other food relish the perfect food, Grape-Nuts and get well.

"My little baby was given up by three doctors who said that the condensed milk on which I had fed her had ruined the child's stomach. One of the doctors told me that the only thing to do would be to try Grape-Nuts, so I got some and prepared it as follows: I soaked 1½ tablespoonfuls in one pint of cold water for half an hour, then I strained off the liquid and mixed twelve teaspoonfuls of this strained Grape-Nuts juice with six teaspoonfuls of rich milk, put in a pinch of salt and a little sugar, warmed it and gave it to baby every two hours.

"In this simple, easy way I saved baby's life and have built her up to a strong healthy child, rosy and laughing. The food must certainly be perfect to have such a wonderful effect as this. I can truthfully say I think it is the best food in the world to raise delicate babies on and is also a delicious healthful food for grown-ups as we have discovered in our family."

Grape-Nuts is equally valuable to the strong, healthy man or woman. It stands for the true theory of health. "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Goods Wet By The Artificial Shower Are Going like 'Hot Cakes'

Sensible mothers, who appreciate real value, and who are not finicky about having a garment laundered before it is worn, are enthusiastic buyers. The prices are much lower than the reasons of slight damages demand. But we must get these goods out of the way in the shortest possible time. Therefore, to us, price loses all significance, and in many instances, garments are going at a fraction of the wholesale cost. The lion's share of the water-damaged goods belong to misses and children, but some kimonas, corsets and other women's wearables are also included.

LEAP YEAR OFFER.

Woman Editor Proposes and Bachelor Scribe Promptly Accepts.

Sac City, Iowa, Jan. 28.—Having lost the county printing, to which she was justly entitled, and feeling that she needs a man to fight for her, Miss Elizabeth Sohm, editor of the Storm Lake Vidette, has taken advantage of leap year and proposed through her newspaper. She says:

"A constant fight for what belongs rightfully is a wear and tear on the nerves of any woman, and we have come to the belief that in order to stay in the newspaper business and maintain our health we will have to marry some good printer who can do the fighting and swearing for us. This is leap year, and may be considered as a proposal by anyone qualified to fill the vacancy so evident in the Vidette office."

G. A. Craig, the bachelor editor of the Lytton Star, believing that a proposal of marriage, coming from such a talented woman, could not be turned down, has written his acceptance. In the last issue of his paper he says:

"We believe we are eligible to fill the vacancy which Sister Sohm feels exists in her print shop. We're considered a good printer; and as for our fighting qualities, suffice it to say we came from a family that kills. On the swearing proposition, our pressfeeder says we'd be there with the goods."

CAUSTIC REMARKS

By Representative McGavin on Heiresses Marrying Noblemen.

Washington, Jan. 28.—In the house today Representative McGavin of Illinois, attacked the custom of American heiresses marrying European noblemen, declaring that he had no particular person in view, but he asserted that "women are sacrificing their souls and their honor on the altar of snobbery and vice." He asserted that almost every day there is a bargain day in New York, "where you can buy anything from a yard of ribbon to a pound of flesh."

PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED

England and America Must Settle Asiatic Immigration Question.

England Having Trouble in Other Colonies Beside Canada.

L. R. McEalthon of Victoria, B. C., says that the troubles between Canada and Japan over the Japanese immigration question will in the long run hinder the settlement between the United States and Japan of the exclusion act and other important questions bearing on the relations of the two countries, because of the kindling of prejudice in this country against the Japanese.

Mr. McEalthon says that Canada is not the only place where England is having trouble at the present time. In the Transvaal she is having trouble with the native Indians and the Chinese. Several thousands of these natives and Chinese are given the alternative of registering or being imprisoned or expelled from the colony. At the present time, says Mr. McEalthon, the colonial government is being defied by the Chinese and natives, and has taken no action in quelling the small sized revolution.

The immigration of Asiatics to the white colonies of England is being attended with grave race problems, says Mr. McEalthon. In Canada Mr. McEalthon points out the trouble arising out of the immigration of the Japanese and the Hindus. England can take no action in the case of the latter, as they are British subjects.

In the case of the Japanese, England is almost equally embarrassed, as she is bound by a treaty with Japan, and Canada has no right to act independently in the matter.

The Indians are complaining, says Mr. McEalthon, that they are receiving worse treatment than the Japanese, who have the protection of their government. Whether this be true or not, the visitor says that the immigration to America of Asiatics is stirring up race problems that are extremely difficult to solve.

BABY GIRL CRIED AND SCRATCHED

All the Time—Torturing Eczema Covered Her Body—Could Not Sleep—Doctor Said Sores Would Last for Years—Skin Now Clear.

CURED IN THREE MONTHS BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I take great pleasure in telling you what a great help it was for me to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for my baby niece. She was suffering from that terrible torture, eczema. It was all over her body but the worst was on her face and hands. Her hands were so bad that she could not hold anything. She cried and scratched all the time and could not sleep night or day from the scratching. I had her under the doctor's care for a year and a half and he seemed to do her no good. I took her to the best doctor in the city and he said that she would have the sores until she was six years old. But if I had depended on the doctor my baby would have lost her mind and died from the want of aid.

"I used all the remedies that everybody told me about and I tortured the child almost to death. Then I saw in the paper how Cuticura was the thing for irritating skin. I bathed her with warm water and Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. She was cured in three months. Now her skin is as clear and smooth as it could be. I shall recommend the use of Cuticura wherever I see the skin in bad condition. Alice L. Dowell, 4769 Easton Ave., St. Louis, Mo., May 2 and 20, 1907."

CONCERNING WOMAN.

The door lock had become disarranged. It was working all right one minute, and the next time they went to shut the door it had simply stopped. They turned the knob, and nothing turned. It was very annoying. It necessitated somebody coming to the door and unlocking it from the inside whenever anybody wanted to come in. The janitor was sent for. He shuffled into the flat and looked wisely at the door. He put his hand on the knob and turned it, and nothing turned. The lady of the house was hovering around, and she said it was very annoying. The janitor allowed that it might be. He shuffled away.

And several days elapsed.

The lady of the house telephoned to the agent, and explained the dire calamity that had befallen the premises. The agent was very sympathetic. She said it was most annoying, and he said that he thought it might be, and, of course, he'd be glad to see that it was attended to at once.

And several days elapsed.

The man of the house stood outside in the cold while somebody hurried to open the door for him. He blew in. "It seems to me," he said with more vigor than tenderness, "that if I had nothing to do but sit around the house all day that I could see to it that somebody fixed that door, even if I had to do it myself."

"Nothing to do," echoed his wife, but he heard her not, for his last phrase had made a deep impression on his mind. "Even if I had to do it myself," he murmured over again to himself.

"Nothing to do!" said his wife, and lapsed into silence.

"Even if I had to do it myself," repeated the man, partly to himself. He became oblivious to everything about him. He ate his dinner in a concentrated silence, and before his mind's eye he saw the internal working of the door lock arrayed in neat little piles before him while he, with glasses astride his nose and a screw driver in his hand, was the genius at whose command the little piles of internal workings went back into their places, and the result would be that something would turn when the knob was turned.

It fascinated him.

He arose from the dinner table, determination in every feature. "Where is that screw driver?" he inquired.

"What for?" inquired his wife, simply temporizing.

"I'm going to fix the door," he announced, with rigid determination.

"Oh, yes, of course," she agreed. "Did you know that the new magazine came today. And there's a letter from your aunt in on the table. I shouldn't wonder but that she tells what became of that Christmas present we sent and never heard a word about. I'm just crazy to find out——"

"Where did you say the screw driver was?" he inquired, with a sternness there was no gainsaying.

"Oh, John! Please don't go at that door, because we won't be able even to lock it when you are through and somebody will have to sit up all night to hold it shut. Please, don't. I'll get somebody to do it tomorrow. Do sit down and be comfortable."

But long ere this she had found the screw driver, for the red flush of wounded vanity and reformed determination had mantled his brow and he would fix the lock and show this woman that simply because a man did not choose to fix locks to gain a livelihood, that was no reason he couldn't do this. Visions of the clocks that had been "fixed" and the ice cream freezer that had also been "fixed" and the nonringing door bells that had been "fixed" passed through the mind of his wife, but she obediently went to hold a hand light for him. Everybody knows the rule of procedure in such cases. You first take the lock carefully off and separate it into its diverse parts. Then you sit down at the table with the parts spread before you and work long and lovingly on the fascinating puzzle of where in thunder they all came from. And then your wife picks up a few more off the floor where you have dropped them and silently lays them down and silently steals away, for she knows just how exasperating it is to have another piece given you when you already have fourteen too many. Eight, nine and ten o'clock passed away never to be recalled. His wife went off to sleep the sleep of those who don't care how door locks are made. At 12 o'clock the door knob was back in place and with the right kind of pressure would respond gaspingly to such efforts as were intelligently expended.

And weary but triumphant the man retired to rest.

His wife opened the door for him the next morning as he went forth to combat the world and she said as she held the knob in her hand, "It's so nice to have the door fixed again, dear."

Of such is the kingdom of wives.

WELCOMED BY ARGENTINES

American Officers Entertained by Citizens of Republic.

Buenos Ayres, Jan. 28.—The officers of the American torpedo boat flotilla, who arrived here Sunday from Rio Janeiro, were received today by President Alcorta and the ministers of war, marine and foreign affairs, Gen. Fraga, Admiral Beteder and Senor Zeballos, respectively. President Alcorta spoke pleasantly to each one of the officers, and to Lieut. Cone, who is in command of the flotilla, he expressed his great pleasure and satisfaction in the visit to Argentina of the American warships. To these words of welcome Lieut. Cone made a suitable reply.

No word has been received here as yet of the meeting on the high seas between the American fleet of battleships and the Argentine squadron that put out to welcome them. This is because the point fixed for the exchange of greetings is beyond the limit at which the Radiograph signalling system can be used. After the meeting the Argentine vessels will accompany the American fleet for two hours and then return to Cape Corrientes, whence a detailed account of the greetings exchanged will be signalled into this city.

THE COLD SNAP HAS ARRIVED

Thermometer Will Reach 20 Below Zero During Night.

"A regular old-fashioned rip-snorter."

That's the way the weather man sized up the situation this morning.

The mercury was flirting with the bottom of the tube last night. The coldest reached during the night was 5 degs. below, shortly before 7 o'clock this morning.

Instead of moderating when the sun rose, however, the temperature dropped lower, and at 10 o'clock this morning it was between 6 and 7 degs. below zero by the government thermometer.

As there was a playful little 36-mile zephyr blowing at the time, this was cold enough for all practical purposes.

But that's not the worst of it. Tonight the weather man rather expects to see the mercury sink about ten or fifteen degrees farther, and tomorrow the plumbers will come into their own.

LYCEUM—The Mack-Leone players in "Blue Jeans."
METROPOLITAN—Burlesque.

"BLUE JEANS."

Mack-Leone Company is Seen in Famous Rustic Drama.

"Blue Jeans" was the bill presented by the new Mack-Leone company last evening at the Lyceum.

The scene of the story is placed in Indiana and practically all of the characters in the play are rustics. Miss Leone is always seen at her best in an ingenue role, and she has splendid opportunities to show her talents along this line in the present bill. Mr. Mack is also seen to splendid advantage in his role.

"Blue Jeans" is one of the old favorites among the rural dramas and will live along with "Way Down East" and other classics.

The new members of the Mack-Leone company are making good in Duluth, and the company is stronger and better than it has been at any time since it opened its first engagement in Duluth last summer.

"Blue Jeans" will be the bill all this week with the usual matinees.

CAPACITY HOUSES.

Two Big Audiences Delighted With Bill at the Bijou.

Bad weather doesn't worry the management of the Bijou any, for the attractions at the theater are so popular that the people go anyway. It was stormy and disagreeable last night, but two capacity audiences witnessed the shows. There is a great diversity of acts, and all of them took well with the audience. The program is a good one all the way through.

As a curtain raiser the Gillette sisters, black-face comedians, go through with a whirlwind stunt that is a top-liner of its kind. Mr. and Mrs. W. W. O'Brien, in a funny little playlet called "The Bachelor and the Maid," demonstrate their right to appear as public entertainers, and "The Trolley Car Trio," with an Italian, a tramp and a monkey as leading characters, have an act that is a laugh all the way through. Isadore Silver made a hit with his new illustrated song, "There's Another Picture in Mamma's Frame."

Sam Brooks and Rose Jeanette appear in "Fluffy Ruffles and Spoony Sam on Main Street." They are entertainers of the first order. Some wonderful feats of marksmanship are performed by young Buffalo, America's sensational marksman. He is assisted by Mlle. Vera and a trained dog. Buffalo is considered as one of the best shots in the world.

THE BURLESQUERS.

The Brigadiers Have English Fight Pictures as Side Attraction.

Many things about the entertainment given at the Metropolitan this week by the Brigadiers commends it to the auditor and not the least of these is the extra attraction, the moving pictures of the Burns-Moir fight. Although it did not turn out to be as even a proposition as anticipated, the battle between the American boy and the English gunner attracted widespread attention.

"Married by Telephone" is the title of the burlesque, which is in two acts. Tim Healey, Frank White, William Lester, Lester Pike, Ed Rogers, Minne Harrison, Alice Warren, Emma Krause, Marie Moure and a whole string of less important persons take part, including a lively, good-looking chorus. F. White's impersonation of a negro is the best black-faced comedy creation that has come over the circuit.

Minnie Harrison opens the olio with her singing and dancing act. She seems to have her heart in her work and her stunt went well last evening. Ed Rogers and Alice Warren have an amusing little wheeze called "The Little Joker." Miss Warren wears some lovely gowns.

Lester and Moure's act, "A Day at the Beach," has been seen here before, but it is still laughable. A plantation act, with colored people and colored lights, concludes the olio. Emma Krause and Lester Pike are the moving spirits in the skit, but the ensembles bring out nearly the entire strength of the company.

COLD WAVE IS COMING FAST

Temperature Expected to Fall Until Wednesday Morning.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The warm wave scheduled to follow the cold spell which struck St. Paul yesterday has passed and according to United States Weather Observer Williams, the coldest wave of the season is due here today from the northwest. It was 12 degs. above zero last night and the mercury continued upward to 23 above until midnight when a cold wind came from the north and the temperature dropped rapidly. At 7 a. m., it was 4 degs. above zero. At 9:30 o'clock today Mr. Williams reported a temperature of 2 degs. below with a steady decline. He says there is a high barometer over Assiniboine, Can., which is coming this way very fast bringing extreme cold. West of the Dakotas there are warm temperatures ranging from 4 to 12 degs. above zero. In the Northwest, however, the temperature is very cold, the lowest point being 30 below at Prince Albert, 28 below at Winnipeg, 18 below at Q'Appelle, 20 at Devils Lake, N. D., 10 below at Moorhead, Minn., and 8 below at Bismarck, N. D.

This wave will last until tomorrow morning when the weather will again moderate.

MINER FIRES SHOTGUN INTO CROWD OF BOARDERS.

Saginaw, Mich., Jan. 28.—William Menzenkoch, a miner, was brought here under arrest last night from Swan Creek mining settlement, near here, charged with attempted murder. Menzenkoch is alleged to have discharged a shotgun in a boarding house assembly room when the place was crowded with boarders, four of whom were injured by the shot. It is said some of the men had been drinking heavily and that Menzenkoch became enraged at being made the butt of their teasing.

FIRE IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Fire in the wholesale machinery district last night caused damages of $75,000. The flames were confined to a five-story structure, which housed half a dozen firms. While driving at full speed to the fire the horses of an engine and truck company collided. The drivers escaped injury by jumping, but the engine apparatus was so badly damaged that it had to be returned to quarters.

ONE TUG TO TOW ANOTHER TO CARRY ENOUGH FUEL.

Philadelphia, Jan. 28.—A novel method has been adopted to get the new tugs Hercules and Goliah built at Camden, N. J., to San Francisco without having to stop on the way for fuel. They are oil burners and as there are no fuel oil supplies to be had after leaving the Atlantic coast until the vessels reach California the question of having a sufficient amount of oil on hand was one of the highest importances.

Consequently it was decided that when the tugs leave Camden tomorrow for San Francisco, the Hercules shall tow the Goliah. The latter has been converted into a bulk barge temporarily and has been filled with fuel oil. This will supply the Hercules when her own supply becomes exhausted.

The tugs were built for the Ship Owners and Merchants' Tug Boat company of San Francisco and are each 134 feet long.

For they're beauties, brought out by unexpected touches of equisite taste, which don't sound well in words. Handsome imported Worsteds in delicate pastel stripes, new of cut and some of the skirts opened down the front. That's quite unexpected, surely, and a decided innovation. Of the skirts, some are circular gored, and some are plaited.

THE BURNS BANQUET

Annual Celebration Held Under Auspices of Clan Stewart.

Lights Go Out During Progress of the Dinner.

The one hundred and forty-ninth anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, under the auspices of Clan Stewart, No. 50, O. S. C., was held last evening in the spacious new cafe of the St. Louis hotel, and in point of attendance was the largest yet given by that organization. It was a double function, marking the opening of the renovated St. Louis hotel and the "Bobby" Burns celebration, and like all other first nights there were a few hitches here and there. It was 8:40 o'clock when Chairman James McGhie called on Rev. J. C. Faries of Glen Avon church, to give the invocation.

The banquet had not proceeded very far when the electric lights went out, leaving the 350 guests in total darkness. The chairman called on the Arion quartet, and they caused the time to pass pleasantly enough until the lights were again turned on.

The clansmen were lucky in securing Rev. Alexander Milne of the Congregational church for toastmaster, and from the moment that Chief James McGhie introduced him to the audience, he kept them in good humor with his many stories and happy jibes.

Owing to the lateness of the hour in starting the banquet, the addresses were curtailed, and Mr. Milne requested the guests to refrain from demanding encores of the various artists, who helped make the evening a pleasant one.

Philip Gordon Brown was heard with good effect in "The Star of Bobbie Burns," and received deserved applause. Mrs. N. B. Morrison, who will be heard in Duluth's musical circles with pleasure, sang a very difficult song, "My Ain Folk," with feeling and brought an appreciative burst of applause. She was accompanied by Mr. Reyner. The Arion quartet was heard in several numbers during the evening, and their singing was much appreciated.

The principal address of the evening was delivered by Rev. Campbell Coyle of the First Presbyterian church, in response to the toast, "Robert Burns." It was quite lengthy, and was full of brilliant word pictures of the life of the famous Scotch poet.

Miss Mae Wylie gave two recitations, but the first one, "Burns," by Whittier, was the one that pleased the audience most. She rendered it with great feeling.

Miss Blanch Fleming sang a beautiful number, "Angus McDonald," and Miss Veitch gave a violin solo.

Royal Chief of Clans John Hill of St. Louis was present and responded to the toast, "The Order of Scottish Clans." W. S. McCormick took care of the toast "The Ladies." Henry Taylor also responded tot he toast, "Scotland and the Land of Our Adoption."

Following is a list of the committees in charge:

Committee on arrangements—Simon Clark, Alexander G. McKnight, Henry Taylor, John G. Ross, W. B. Henderson, Alexander Macrae, Don McLennan, John Christie.

PATIENT DIES.

Woodsman Who Escaped From St. Mary's Hospital, Passes Away.

Thomas Fastwith, the delirious patient, who escaped from St. Mary' hospital Sunday morning, and fled along the street in his night clothing died yesterday at the hospital.

Fastwith was in a critical condition when he made his escape from his room by dropping from a second story window, and there is little doubt that the exposure hastened his death.

He was a woodsman, and the hospital authorities know nothing of his relatives.

Disturbed the Congregation.

The person who disturbed the congregation last Sunday by continually coughing is requested to buy a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. "Sold by all druggists."

SISTERS

Would Not Allow Coffee Used.

It doesn't take very long, only long enough to get well away from the bad effects of caffeine—the drug in coffee—and a little while for Postum to commence toning up the nerves and your reformed coffe drinker will begin to put on flesh and show an improved condition generally.

An Indiana man says:

"I knew for a long time that coffee was running my system down. For the last five years I have been troubled with my stomach but didn't seem able to quit coffee. Finally I took down sick and my doctor told me to stop coffee.

"I tried milk and hot water but got tired of both. About that time while on a visit to my cousin she recommended Postum, claiming that it had done so much for her.

"She was looking stouter and was not at all nervous, while I was shaking at the leats excitement. Her husband told me that the sisters at the hospital where he worked used Postum and wouldn't allow any coffee to be used.

"I came home and began using Postum and in a few days noticed improvement which continued, until now, I must say, that I am feeling fine. The more I drink Postum the better I like it. I make it according to directions on the packages which gives it its good rich taste.

"I have thanked my cousin many times for telling me about Postum, for it has done great good to my nerves and whole system. Before I quit coffee and began to use Postum I was troubled with toothache and headache, besides the steady old grind of stomach troubles. Now I have none of them." "There's a Reason."

TAYLOR IS FOUND GUILTY OF THEFT

Court Sentences Bartender to Term in State Reformatory.

Fred J. Taylor, formerly employed as a bartender in a West end saloon, was convicted of grand larceny in the third degree yesterday afternoon and was sentenced to the state reformatory.

Taylor was accused of breaking into the saloon after hours and stealing $78 that the proprietor had "planted" in a secret place known only to himself and his bartenders.

Taylor admitted getting the money, but claimed that he did not break into the building and that he intended to return the money the following day. He claimed that he was too drunk at the time of the occurrence to realize what he was doing. Several West end citizens testified as to his former reputation for honesty. Taylor was defended by Judge John M. Martin.

The crime for which Taylor was convicted is punishable by a term in the penitentiary or the reformatory and the court, taking all the facts into consideration, decided that the reformatory term would be best for the young man.

BEDE ASKS FOR QUICK ACTION

Duluth Should Make Wants Known in Public Buildings Bill.

N. F. Hugo, who returned yesterday from Baltimore, Washington and New York, says that Duluth people should take immediate steps to inform Congressman Bede what they want in the way of an apropriation for this city in the public building bill that is now being prepared in Washington.

Mr. Hugo saw the congressman in Washington and says the latter is anxious to hear from Duluth as to the amount needed for this city. He claims to be in a position to get anything Duluth wants that is within reason in the line of an appropriation for public buildings, and asks that prompt steps be taken in furnishing him with the necessary information.

Mr. Hugo says that the evidences of a money stringency have disappeared in the East, and that a general hopeful feeling prevails.

GRIP GERMS, HE SAYS, COME FROM PLANET MARS.

Waterloo, Iowa, Jan. 28.—Interpolated in his predictions for February, John C. Busby, a weather prophet of Independence, advances a theory to explain the presence of the grip germ. The native habitat of the germ, he says, is the planet Mars, which is now very near to the earth, and the germs have leaped through the intervening space. He believes that Mars is inhabited by human beings like ourselves, who, he would infer, have suffered recurrent attacks of the prevailing malady for years.

Mr. Busby draws a gloomy picture for February, but one which will sheer the iceman's heart. He says the position of the planets augurs much cold and stormy weather.

Mr. Busby is the man to whom was imputed the movement last summer to form a weather prophets' organization to regulate the price of sunny days.

ABSCONDER IS SUED BY CZAR

Former Treasurer in Turkestan Who Fled to Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 28.—One of the most extraordinary lawsuits that has been instituted in Manitoba has begun in the prothonotary's office in Winnipeg. The plaintiff is a man at whose frown 140,000,000 persons tremble, for he is no less a personage than the czar of Russia, and he is suing in his Uncle Edward's courts of this province for an immense sum of money taken from his faraway province of Turkestan by the erstwhile treasurer of the department of the interior of Turkestan.

The alleged faithless steward of the czar is Stefan Proskurekoff, and with him is a woman of high degree, Anna Zeman by name. The two hail from Tashkend, the largest city of Central Asia.

The erring couple have, since their arrival here, been jitting themselves out sumptuously, and Nicholas, at the conclusion of his statement of claims, humbly requests that all these lands, goods and chattels be vested in his name and converted to his own use.

Referring to the absconder, the statement says:

"The defendant, Proskurekoff, who passes under the assumed name of Stefan Ludkofski, was formerly treasurer for the department of the interior of the Russian government in the province of Turkestan. During his tenure of office he received sums amounting to 340,000 roubles and over, or over $160,000, and stole or embezzled and appropriated the money for his own use."

Demands Financial Settlement From Thaws Before Divorce is Sought.

Pittsburg, Jan. 28.—The Thaws have been notified by attorneys for the earl of Yarmouth that the earl will demand a settlement financially before submitting to a divorce, and that he holds a paper, signed by Alice Thaw before her marriage, which will give him the right to collect heavily of her fortune. The paper is an agreement that all her fortune pass to the house of Hertford in the event of her dying childless. One of the detectives who have been working on this case admitted the Thaw connections expected to be held up for $1,000,000 on the part of the earl, but were ready for it.

JOY FOR LUMBERJACKS.

Recent Snow Giving Many Employment Around Cloquet.

Cloquet, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Logging operations on the reservation and in the Cloquet companies' camps north of this city had progressed about as far as they could without snow. Serious complaints had been made that unless a good fall of snow and colder weather came in short order, the output of the camps would be curtailed even beyond the calculations of the lumbermen. Last month brought very little weather that could be called cold and last week it thawed considerably every day, so that the ice roads put in at many places, and especially the long stretch of winter road iced by the Cloquet Tie & Post company, were almost put out of business.

The heavy snow fall during the last few days has put all these disadvantages out of the way, and the lumberjacks, as well as their employers, are rejoicing over the timely arrival of snow and freezing weather, which has been their earnest desire for some time past. Additional men are being sent to the woods from here daily.

He was born in Alsace eighty-three years ago, and is survived by his widow, two sons, Emmanuel of South St. Paul and Louis of Seattle, and Miss Paulin Bernheim of St. Paul.

WEST END

WILL CALL FOR BIDS

For the Erection of West End Police Station.

Council Authorizes Board of Public Works to Advertise.

The West end's police station seems nearer realization than ever before.

At the session of the city council last evening, Alderman Mork introduced a resolution, which prevailed, instructing the board of public works to advertise for bids for the erection of the new lockup.

Alderman Mork, it was also who last week proposed the issuance of the certificates and urged immediate action. Residents of the West end are anxious to see their police station take shape.

Last year, when a site for the lockup was being sought, the West end was stirred to its depths over the matter. There was a great difference of opinion as to where the lockup should be located. Some made a big cry to have the station located on First street or even farther up the hill but the residents of those thoroughfares did not fancy a police station in their front yards and maintained that Superior street was the proper place for the institution.

As nearly everyone with the exception of disgruntled landholders finally agreed that Superior street was the logical place to install the station, the city finally purchased a site there. It lies on the lower side of Superior street, between Nineteenth and Twentieth avenues west.

ELEVATOR BOY KILLED.

Falls Three Stories in Fargo Hotel to His Death.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Oscar Bradison, aged 24, a native of Barnesville, Minn., day elevator boy at the Waldorf hotel, fell down the elevator shaft fully three stories, and was fatally injured, dying a couple of hours later at St. John's hospital, where he was conveyed shortly after the accident.

No one saw the young man fall, but it is known that he fell from the third floor to the foot of the shaft. He was picked up a few seconds later by the janitor, who was working near the elevator. Dr. Callander was called at once, and the boy was taken immediately to the hospital. However, he was beyond medical aid, and succumbed in two hours without regaining consciousness. Dr. Callander stated that no bones were broken, but the young man was injured internally. It was not deemed necessary to make an autopsy, and Coroner Mitchell stated last evening an inquest would not be held.

RED WING BANKER DEAD.

Red Wing, Minn., Jan. 28.—Frederick Busch, one of the wealthiest men in this city, and long a prominent banker here, died Monday at the age of 69. At the time of his death he was president of the Goodhue County Savings bank and of the Lagrange mills, and also a director in many other corporations. He first went to Red Wing in 1859. He is survived by a widow and nine children.

"Free Riot" Laws

How would you like to be pointed out as a tough, bully, law-breaker and criminal, because you are a member of a Labor Union, and ruled tyrannically by the leaders who are known to be men of "violent tendencies" (as the Goldfield Committee reported)—who make a business of stirring up trouble, strikes, picketing, boycotting, slugging, dynamiting, destruction of property and who stop industries and force their own union members to go without wages until the leaders can assert their right to dictate and rule?

All of this with fat and sure salaries for the leaders and more or less poverty for their working members.

The writer of this has a little money to spend in telling the public the workman's story. Take one as an example (there are several thousand).

He was born in the town he calls "home," had a school education and by chance slipped thru the "union" restrictions which kept several of his mates from learning a trade, by securing an apprenticeship. After serving, he became a mechanic, owned a home, was a highly respected neighbor and citizen and prosperous.

Finally a paid "organizer" appeared in the town, a union was formed and he induced to join under threat of being called a "scab." He knew the organizer got a commission on him and each other new member, and while he thought a union of workingmen would be a good thing on some accounts, he didn't exactly like the looks of things, but couldn't help himself.

Then he was ordered to strike to force the discharge of all independent men.

So he lost much by idleness and saw violence and destruction of property in the name of the "union," he of course being charged as one of the law-breakers although he stayed at home and kept out of trouble and didn't need any injunction to prevent him from committing crime.

He lost his wages and had to bear much odium in order to help fill the pockets of the labor leaders and give them more power.

He was further humiliated by observing that the rank and file of the union men were absolutely controlled by a few leaders who ran things to suit themselves and forced the public to class all union men as indorsing the lawless and despicable acts of these leaders and their bullies.

In a strike, the public had learned by experience to look for lawlessness and violence. Men were followed and bull-dozed, attacked and at times murdered.

Horses were maimed, harness cut and wagons and goods destroyed. Women followed and insulted and sometimes stripped naked. Mines were dynamited and flooded, men shot from ambush and homes blown up. Industries were stopped and thousands thrown out of work.

Every time a murder or any lawless act was committed he saw these "Leaders" rush into print to deny, and take union money to defend those whom the union men knew to be criminals.

Every act of these Union Leaders seemed to show their sympathy with and desire for lawlessness and violence. They would protest against the presence of police, soldiers or any other peace officer hired by the people.

They would employ all forms of hidden and mean acts to harm other men.

All of these things caused the common people to look upon union men as possible law-breakers and enemies to the peace of the community.

This was further added to by the leaders taking the money of the union members to hire lawyers and lobbyists in Congress to change the penal laws so the real toughs in the unions could commit acts of violence and not be punished.

Also to enact an anti-injunction law so that the people's courts could not issue injunctions which would prevent violence and loss of property.

These things plainly showed that these leaders wanted to be free to commit violence, attack their fellow men, stop industries and destroy property in the name of union labor and yet go free.

If a union man don't want to riot or commit violence an injunction to prevent it won't hurt him.

This work makes honest, peaceable union workmen disgusted for they are being classed as anarchists.

It is most unfair to reputable union men that they be subject to such leaders and unable either to correct them or escape their anger if not obeyed.

Organizations of Labor or Capital may exist and operate peacefully and legally, but most of the paid leaders of the unions plainly seek to break the law and commit acts of voilence to increase their power, force all men to join and pay increased fees.

It is a dangerous condition demanding attention from every lover of his country.

When workingmen are fined and forced to pay from $25.00 to $1.000.00 for some "disobedience" of "orders" from the leaders, some idea of the extent of the slavery may be understood.

A few designing men have gained control of "organized labor" and are shrewdly scheming to rivet the shackles on their own members and on all citizens. Give them the "free riot" laws and they can enforce obedience.

Take a careful look at the work of these Labor leaders now before Congress.

They demand a revision of the "penal code" so that rioters and toughs directed by Labor Union managers may commit various acts of lawlessness and go free.

They demand an anti-injunction law, so that the hands of the people's courts shall be tied and they cannot issue restraining orders to prevent acts, sure to result in riot, assaulting of other workmen, dynamiting and destruction of property. This is known as the "Free Riot Act."

They demand that no free American who fails to pay fees to the union leaders, be allowed to work in certain gov't departments.

They demand the defeat of public men who vote against these measures of anarchy.

The "union" man's money is used to work these measures through.

It is a most dangerous condition confronting the people, but our workingmen and other citizens can preserve their freedom by acting, and acting promptly.

President Roosevelt is quoted as saying, "The worst foes of America are the foes of that orderly liberty without which our Republic must speedily perish. The reckless labor agitator who arouses the mob to riot and bloodshed is in the last analysis the most dangerous of the workingmen's enemies. This man is a real peril, and so is his sympathizer, who, to catch votes, denounces the judiciary and military because they put down mobs."

"The men who have done us harm are those who preach the doctrine of anarchy, but refrain from action that will bring them within the pale of the law; for these men lead thousands astray by the fact that they go unpunished or even rewarded for their misdeeds."

The constitution seeks to guarantee to every American, freedom and the right to the pursuit of happiness in his own way. It is not intended that a select few gain control of an organization and by absolute power and violence, rule all other men and force them to pay monthly fees, as planned by these leaders.

We don't want new laws that make Violence, Dynamiting, Boycotting and general mob rule safe to the tough element. That would destroy industries and commerce and put work-people into poverty, with every man's hand raised against his neighbor.

Men of America must take a stand against these insidious attacks on their God-given personal liberty.

The way to help yourself is to write now, and again later, to the members of Congress, whose names you can get and tell them your wishes.

They will understand readily if your letter asks them to "vote for the measures that are clearly in the interest of the masses." "Vote against any bill, whether presented by Labor or Capital, if it is a "class" measure and intended to benefit a few and injure the many. Demand more good laws against criminals, not less.

Tell them we don't want this country filled up with criminals, made so by cowardly legislation in the interests of Labor Union Bosses, grafters, frenzied financiers or anarchists.

Then watch how they vote. Past history shows that the people defeat public men who forget the great majority of their free constituents and work for measures introduced, solely to put more power into the hands of designing labor leaders.

When the people speak, things are done.

There are brave members of Congress who stand up for the law-abiding citizens and refuse to vote for the anarchy of these labor leaders, but such Congressmen want words of encouragement from the people.

A few members of Congress think they can continue to hold office by bowing to the shouts and demands of these organized labor leaders in whom anarchy and disorder is ingrained. Such public men (there are but few) are willing to prostitute their own ideas of right and justice to curry favor with an organization thought to be strong enough to keep them in office. That is a fatal mistake.

Look at the members of Congress who have been opposed at the polls by all the forces the leaders of organized labor could bring to bear.

Every Congressman who has stood up fearlessly for the rights of the common people and refused to vote for "free riot" and such bills, has been returned by increased majorities.

What the great mass of newspaper readers and voters want to know is, Does he stand for all the people and not alone for the few, and does he stand for absolute freedom and justice. The reason is plain.

"Organized labor" is a name abused by the "Violent men" who have gained control. They use that name to mask their anarchy and scheme to keep workmen paying fees to them.

Organized labor itself represents only about one citizen in every 40 Americans, or say 2 million out of 80 million. Great numbers of the 2 million members are upright peace-loving, reputable citizens and in many cases forced to join unions against their will. Such men absolutely will not support or vote in favor of the "free riot" plans of the "Men of Violent Tendencies" in control.

Then the great peace-loving patriotic majority, the 80 millions have at least some regard for the law of the people and their own safety thereunder.

A public man can only be safe in office when labor leaders demand that he vote for laws protecting "free riot" and the like, by replying that he "stands for any measure introduced by either Labor or Capital provided that measure be clearly in the interest of all the people and not in the interest of a class alone."

If he tries to curry favor by supporting any of these lawless acts of organized labor, his position will be known and he will go down to defeat and carry with him the denunciation of a people who demand peace and know how to maintain it.

There are about 500 local organizations of liberty-loving people in as many cities in the U. S., variously known as Citizens Ass'ns, Industrial Ass'ns and Citizens Industrial Ass'ns. Their affiliations and support represents several million people.

They are watching this legislation and their voices will be heard in no uncertain manner in support of peace and law.

It shall be my privilege and pleasure to pay for the publication, in practically every prominent paper in America, of the names of Members of Congress who support or pander to this "free riot" sort of legislation.

Again, in trying to carry out this work for the perpetuation of the freedom of the people it will be necessary to supply advertisers and other enquirers with the names of newspapers who are so much in fear of the "Violent Men" that they dare not publish this article, although I offer it to them and pay for its publication.

It has at times been hard to get a word for the common man to the public eye, but there is a way and "There's a Reason."

If you want to know the papers dominated by labor union leaders buy various papers of January 28th. If you don't find this article write such papers and equire "why?" A very few have no contract with us, the majority have. They will give a variety of excuses, but never the real one, that they are afraid to speak out for the rights of the common men, fearing punishment by labor unions. Isn't that a dangerous state of affairs? Don't you think the great mass of readers have a right to know what papers submit to having their utterance colored and censored by the labor union leaders, before they dare to present the "news" to their readers? There are quite a few such papers and I am out to tell the facts and give them a fair test.

Above all it is of the greatest importance that the readers, one and all, write quickly to members of Congress, asking them to vote only for measures for the safety of the people and not for any measure of the "free riot" sort.

Our forefathers fought for freedom for themselves and their children and we must be alert, for oppressors arise from time to time and would rob us of it.

Patrick Henry once said "The most valuable end of government is the liberty of the inhabitants. No possible advantages can compensate for the loss of this privilege." Don't let any man or set of men rob you of it. Write to members of Congress. Just for the people.

STATEMENT BY BRYAN

Concerning the Financial Situation and Other Matters.

Holds Impromptu Reception in Rooms of House Committee.

Washington, Jan. 28.—W. J. Bryan yesterday held an impromptu reception in the rooms of the house committee on ways and means, where a number of Democratic representatives and many outsiders shook him by the hand and chatted with him.

Asked by someone to name his choice for a running mate in the event of his nomination at Denver, Mr. Bryan laughingly replied:

"I shan't tell. That is too bold a question."

To the newspaper men he said:

"You may say that my coming to Washington was not to consult any men nor set of men as to whether or not I ought to be a candidate for the nomination. I have not put that question to any man, nor shall I. The people, not individuals, have the sole right to decide that point. I am not here to solicit support for myself as a possible presidential candidate. I never ask any man to vote for me. In the past when I was before the people as a candidate, my efforts to obtain votes have been confined to statements of my views."

Asked about the story published in some quarters that Former United States Senator Jones, Oliver P. Belmont and others came to him a day or so ago and told him he was not the logical candidate for the Democratic nomination, urged him not to run and promised to oppose him if their advice was disregarded, Mr. Bryan said:

No Truth in Story.

"There is not a shred of truth in that story. No one has advised me not to be a candidate. I saw Senator Jones, and we did talk politics, but nothing of the sort reported occurred.

"I have as yet had no 'formal conference' since my arrival in Washington. Tonight at a dinner at the home of Senator Newlands I shall meet and confer with the first one-half of the Democratic senators on the alphabetical list. Tomorrow night I shall meet the second half. Then I go direct to Roanoke, where my daughter is at school."

Mr. Bryan, before leaving the capitol dictated, in response to a request, the following interview setting forth briefly his views on the financial situation:

Views on Financial Situation.

"Lack of public confidence is what drives money out of circulation. Restore public confidence, and money returns to its accustomed channels. For lack of confidence the best remedy is insurance of bank deposits, and I have urged upon the various states and congress the passage of some measure similar to the law adopted by Oklahoma. This provides for the creation of a guarantee fund by assessments upon banks in proportion to their deposits, and authorizes the banking board to make such assessments from time to time as made necessary to the guarantee fund when it is lowered by the payment of money to depositors of failed banks.

"This permits the resources of all the banks to be the resources of each bank, and insures each depositor against loss. The Oklahoma statute permits national banks to take advantage of the state law and a national law should permit state banks to come under the provisions of the law to guarantee them.

An Emergency Currency.

"As to an elastic currency, I think provision could be made for sufficient elasticity in times of emergency by a law providing for the issue of United States notes, such notes to be loaned by the government to the banks upon adequate security and at a rate of interest which would compel the retirement of the notes when the emergency is over. I suppose nearly all members of congress and senators favor some provision for an emergency currency. The Democrats as a rule favor a system under which the government will issue and control the value of emergency currency, while most Republicans favor some system under which it would be issued and controlled by the banks. The high financiers have been largely responsible for the present panic by reason of their reckless methods; and I am satisfied that a majority of the people would prefer to risk the government rather than risk these men. Somebody must decide upon the needs of the people and so far as I am concerned, I prefer that the concessions be with the public officers responsible to the public, rather than with private individuals who would be guided by their own interests instead of by the interests of the public."

Mr. Bryan spent three-quarters of an hour closeted with Speaker Cannon in the speaker's room. Afterwards he said that they had not seriously discussed politics.

Senator Newlands of Nevada gave a dinner last night in honor of William J. Bryan, who is a guest of the senator at his country residence. Those invited to the dinner were one-half of the Democratic members of the senate according to the alphabetical list of names in the congressional directory. Senator Newlands has arranged for a similar dinner this evening when the other half of the Democratic senators will be invited. The invited guests tonight were Senators Bacon, Bailey, Bankhead, Bryan, Clarke, Clay, Culberson, Daniels, Jeff Davis, Foster, Frazier, Johnstone, Latimer and McCreary. Senator Bailey of Texas was not present.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

John M. Dickson, president of the First National bank of Fulda, Minn., was struck by a passenger train on the Southern Minnesota division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway at La Crosse Monday and instantly killed. He was walking on the track, and being slightly deaf did not hear the approaching train.

A tornado swept through the northeast portion of Etowah county, Alabama, late Sunday night, and while no lives were lost, much damage was done to property.

Avowedly to petition the city for work for unemployed, and with strips of red ribbon in their button holes, 2,000 men gathered in the public square at Cleveland Monday, coming in procession from all part of the city.

By the will of Morris K. Jesup, the financier and philanthrophist, who died last week, $1,000,000 is left to the American Museum of Natural History, and $100,000 to the Birck Presbyterian church of New York.

Among the bills introduced in the house Monday was one by Mr. Carey of Wisconsin, prohibiting the giving or receiving by federal officials of free franks transmission of telegraph or telephone message; to prevent discrimination in interstate telegraph and telephone rates; fixing requirements governing the receipts and preservation of such messages.

The oil tank and engine room adjoining the plant of the Pacific Light & Power company at Redendo, Cal., were destroyed by an explosion early Monday evening and large quantities of oil are on fire in dangerous proximity to the plant, which was recently completed at a cost of over $1,000,000. Five persons are reported injured.

As a result of a clash between newspaper reporters and photographers on one side, and followers of the Former Chief Whitaker police regime on the other at New Orleans, Monday, several men were assaulted, one arrested and affidavits made against others.

SLAVERY IN PHILIPPINES

Secretary Taft Charged With Knowledge That It Exists.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Greatly to the surprise of every one, the subject of slavery was introduced in the senate yesterday. Secretary Taft was directly charged with having a knowledge of slavery in the islands. The debate was made pertinent by the sections of the bill revising the criminal code of the United States, which provides penalties for dealing in slaves.

Mr. Hale asserted that such provisions should be stricken out, as he regarded slavery as obsolete in the United States and he could see no reason for referring to it.

Senator Heyburn, in charge of the bill, declared that not only is there immoral traffic in white slaves, but that coolie labor in the form of practical slavery does exist, and added that actual human slavery is still maintained in the Philippine islands.

Mr. Lodge made a statement to disprove the charges of slavery in the islands. At 4:50 p. m., the senate adjourned.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The street railway system of the District of Columbia and the financial question occupied the time of the house yesterday. The latter subject was discussed by Mr. Fowler, chairman of the committee on banking and currency, in an exhaustive speech, in which he opposed bond secured currency and the proposition looking to the establishment of a central bank. Mr. Fowler used for his text the bill introduced by him early in the present month, providing, among other things, for bank redemption districts, which he argued would meet national emergencies.

TO AMEND THE ALDRICH BILL

Before It is Finally Submitted to the Senate.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The complete text of the Aldrich financial bill, which will be submitted to the full committee after a meeting has been held to go over the data from the treasury department, will contain the amendments that have been tentatively agreed to at the various meetings of the committee on finance. There will also be a series of small resolutions added to the bill devised to make it work smoothly as an emergency measure.

It will be made mandatory upon the secretary of the treasury to make and keep on hand a supply of notes which can be quickly issued upon call. The secretary of the treasury will be required to proceed immediately upon the law taking effect to gather data concerning the new class of securities provided in the measure. The bonds of every city in the country will be inspected, and their worth stated in this department, as will be done with all securities any time liable to come within the working of any emergency currency law. It has been settled that the distribution of the currency will be by state instead of districts, as formerly proposed. The financial data requested of the treasury department is expected to arrive at the senate on Wednesday, according to a statement of Senator Aldrich. He is confident his measure will be reported before the end of the week. The Democratic members of the finance committee will prepare their substitute for the Aldrich bill as soon as the data arrives from the treasury department. The proposition of Senator Bailey that the government make emergency deposits in designated depositories will probably be the main feature of the bill.

LAW ENFORCEMENT.

At one of last week's Haven meetings Chairman C. E. Adams of the Haven campaign committee gave utterance to these interesting words:

> Mr. Haven favors enforcing the law with reasonable strictness.

The Herald has been waiting anxiously ever since these words were uttered for a more particular definition of the term "reasonable strictness." Attention was called to the term in a local article which invited explanation, but none has been forthcoming. In view of the reports that Haven campaigners had been flirting with the saloon interests on the quiet, these words had particular significance at that time.

Can there be any qualification of law enforcement, Mr. Haven and Mr. Adams? Unless The Herald misreads the intentions of those who favor law enforcement in this city, they mean law enforcement in all that the words imply; not "reasonable" enforcement, not "liberal" enforcement, not any kind of qualified enforcement, but just plain enforcement.

Mr. Tessman in his platform applied no qualifying adjective to the term "law enforcement." There was no quibbling or trimming about his declaration on that subject. He said:

> I shall enforce the laws of state and city without fear or favor. I believe that laws are made to enforce; that neglect of small laws leads to neglect of large ones; that small lawlessness breeds large lawlessness; that contempt for one law leads to contempt for all laws, and therefore to disorder, bad government and oppression of the people. Without bitterness, therefore, without malice, but without compromise and without favoritism, I shall stand for the strict enforcement of the law.

Nothing here about "reasonable strictness." Just plan "strict enforcement of the law." Not a loophole anywhere; not a single attempt to trim or to please both sides; just a plain, straightforward, manly, conscientious statement of a plain man who means what he says and says what he means.

Yet as The Herald has repeatedly said, there is no lid issue in this state. It has gone out of the hands of the cities, and it is now the attorney general of the state who applies the lid and keeps it in place. Mr. Haven's "reasonable strictness" is meaningless, if it was intended to reassure the saloon interests and the lawless elements. If Mr. Haven were elected, and tried to adjust to the lid a system of "reasonable strictness" of law enforcement, he would discover that fact very promptly. Any attempt to qualify the term "enforcement" means laxity. Any laxity in law enforcement means that the offending mayor will be deposed and punished.

The issue in this campaign is not the lid, but the comparative fitness of the two candidates to hold the position they seek. Mr. Tessman has an honorable and upright business record to vouch for him; Mr. Haven has no business record at all. Mr. Tessman is assailed because, in the hard times of the '90s, adversity overcame him as it overcame many others, and his firm failed; yet he paid out of a salary many debts that he was not legally bound to pay, and soon stood upon his feet again. Mr. Haven, on the other hand, has never risked bankruptcy because he has never gone into business.

"UNCONSTITUTIONAL."

Once more has the supreme court of the United States hurled down the awful word "unconstitutional" and destroyed a law which was intended, rightly or wrongly, to help the cause of the plain people. This time it is the law prohibiting railroads from discriminating against employes because they belong to unions.

One Adair, master mechanic of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, threatened to discharge a locomotive engineer because he belonged to a union. The law of 1898, which rose out of the great American Railway union strike of 1894, was invoked in behalf of the engineer. The district court fined Adair $100, and he appealed on the ground that the low violates the Constitution. In the supreme court this contention has now been upheld, the court holding that the railroad has a right to discharge an employe because of his union membership, just as the employe has the right to quit his work because of that membership. Such a course might be unwise, said the court, but as a matter of right there could be no doubt. Congress could not, under the Constitution, authorize a violation of a contract under the guise of protecting interstate commerce.

The decision was not unanimous, Justice McKenna dissenting and in an opinion favorable to the law remarking that the majority decision proceeded along very narrow lines.

The decision is a severe blow to labor, as it opens the way for the "black list" which it was designed to eliminate. A railroad worker, discharged for activity in behalf of his union, may find his occupation closed against him forever.

AN ENGLISH VIEW.

It is entirely natural that foreign investors should have a clearer view of what is going on in this country than those at home, and that explains why it is that while many stock market parasites in this country say that the campaign that the people are making is against industry and prosperity, European investors see quite clearly that it is a campaign against corrupt manipulations of industry for the benefit of a few and at the expense of the many. A better perspective makes for clearer vision.

An English banker, speaking to an American newspaper writer and referring to financial scandals in this country, made this emphatic declaration: "We will no longer buy your securities. You seem to have one law for the small thief and quite another for the big thief. Your simple scoundrels ride in prison vans; your big, sagacious scoundrels ride in automobiles."

Now this English banker has no political ax to grind. He is no demagogue seeking office or power. He is simply a banker, a business man, looking at American securities from a business viewpoint, and he condemns them because our laws do not reach out to cover the big rascals who fatten on these securities at the expense of the people and the real owners of the industries they represent.

Given an American industry, regularly incorporated and its stock divided up among a multitude of holders, with a board of directors associated with the "system" of Wall street, and an investor thinking of putting his money into the stock of that corporation will want to know how it is managed. He will want to know whether the directors consider first the interests of the stockholders, or their own. He will want to know whether the industry is managed in the interests of the people that own it, or in the interests of a syndicate of directors. If he finds that it is merely the plaything of a band of Wall street conspirators, who skim off the cream and give the blue milk to the stockholders, he is certain to refuse to invest.

Nor is that all. If he finds that these directors are so arrogant in their power, so secure that they are contemptuous of the people whose patronage supplies the earnings of the corporation; if he finds that the people are aware of this arrogance, and are growing so restive under it that revolt is certain; if he finds these things, he is not likely to regard that corporation as a secure investment, and he will look otherwhere.

That is the position of the corporations that control many American industries, and that is the attitude of the English banker. He finds corporations controlled by syndicates of investors who rob both people and stockholders; he finds the law impotent, too busy with wretched small offenders or too fearful of great and powerful thieves to do its duty; he finds the people restive and discontented, likely to break out in open revolt at any moment and to join hands with the stockholders in cleaning out the thieving director-maggots in the industrial cheese. So he says: "We will no longer buy your securities." No wonder.

FIGHTING CONSUMPTION.

A great audence assembled in Albany, N. Y., last night to hear the fight against tuberculosis discussed, and the size and interest of the crowd, as well as the eminence of the speakers, testify to the manner in which the country is beginning to appreciate that here is a cause in which all can and should join hands, because there is a work to do that will count enormously for humanity.

Among the speakers were Governor Hughes and Lieutenant Governor Chanler of New York, Hon. Joseph H. Choate and Prof. William Welch of John Hopkins university, president of the board of trustees of the Rockefeller institute of medical research. Dr. Welch spoke on the general movement throughout the country, and of the coming international congress on tuberculosis to be held in Washington next fall, when forty-six nations will be represented.

The fight against consumption is one in which it should be a pleasure to join, because it will be a winning fight, in which results will be very prompt and noticeable. If every individual in the country does his exact duty in this fight, consumption could be wiped out absolutely in ten years. Science has opened the way for the fight by providing that tuberculosis is contagious, preventable and curable. The knowledge that it is contagious points the way to prevent contagion; the knowledge that it is preventable points the way to head it off, by obliterating the dark, foul and noisome spots in which it breeds; the knowledge that it is curable points the way to cure it, by sunlight, fresh air, nourishing food and normal living.

LAX FIRE REGULATIONS.

Duluth, in common with many other cities, found matters of interest in the reports of the fire insurance experts on the conditions in which these cities are today in regard to danger from fire. It must be remembered that as a rule these reports are preludes to wholesale raises in insurance rates, and that with that in view the experts would not be likely to minimize the dangerous conditions. Yet there is a great deal of truth in the reports generally, and that is the case with the one covering Duluth. Improvements in fire protection were suggested that the city will probably not be able to take up all at once, but the suggestions should be kept in mind with a view to carrying most of them out as soon as possible.

According to the reports covering the country generally, conditions are appalling, and the danger from fire is so great that the only wonder is that the losses are not greater than they actually are. The experts found that in general the building laws are of slight value from a fire-protection viewpoint; that they provide no limitations for height, areas or occupancies of different classes of buildings; that they do not require proper protection for openings in floors, etc. The fire limits do not include sufficient territory in the congested value districts, and their restrictions are frequently nullified by the councils. Fire escapes are lacking, especially on the older buildings, and many buildings show serious defects that could easily be remedied, such as open stairs and elevator wells, windows unprotected by wire glass, etc.

There is absolutely no doubt that there is a grave laxity in building construction and maintenance in this country, and that there is a vast work to do before any city is even reasonably assured against great disasters and loss of property and life by fire.

The recent fire in the Parker building in New York furnished proof of the fact that fireproof materials do not make a fireproof building by themselves. It is said that all of the materials used in that building were of excellent quality and, when properly combined, such as go to make up an ideally fireproof building. But they were not properly put together, for in no case was the steel properly protected, or at all protected by the necessary fireproofing tile. The stairs and elevators were not enclosed, nor were the windows protected with wire glass. Experts in their reports upon this building point out that while it was made of the best of materials it could not possibly be termed fireproof because the very first principles of fireproof construction has been ignored in the assembling of these materials. Yet the building was classed as fireproof, and probably was subject to a low rate of insurance.

We have built very carelessly in this country, with a view to quick and large profits rather than to long use and safety. There is every evidence of the need of a thorough revolution in building conditions and in the laws of state and city tending to protect lives and property from fire.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Recently a guest of the St. Louis hotel brought a tightly sealed can of cheese up to his room. Unthinkingly he deposited the can near the steam radiator. It was a cold and stormy night—one particularly fit for a tragedy—and the steam was sizling through the pipes at full blast. Seeking the downy comfort of the covers the guest failed to turn off the steam register or to remove the agitated cheese from its place near the heated radiator.

Second part—Then the traveling man went to sleep and lo and behold dreamed of war and heroes bold. He was among his men, leading them to glorious victory. His short military career was crowded with events of valor and deeds of heroism. Just as he began to accomplish great and lasting deeds the pot of cheese began to boil.

Part third—It was at the battle of Snaky river. Suddenly there was a report that would make a small sized cannon sound like a submerged fire cracker in comparison. Terrified, our hero leaped out of bed and wildly yelled that he was shot. The cohorts of Snaky river were scattered to the four winds. Then the racy and nauseous odor of the villainous and parboiled cheese bore in upon the bewildered and frightened senses of our hero and he speedily realized that often in a gilded room a smelling cheese you find. Recovering his nonchalance, he acted with fortitude and removed the cheese, though it required courage. Returning to his slumbers he slept peacefully on, dreaming not of war nor deeds of valor.

Wouldn't it be a nice pleasant little surprise to be informed that a certain young man who was assisting you at a reception had the small pox? Wouldn't you feel nice and elated at the discovery of the news that you might have been expected to have heard before? Well, Fred Owens, at the McKay, was on the committee of a club and was assisting at serving the cigars and other refreshments, with the help of the steward, when that worthy suddenly informed Mr. Owens that he was ill. There was such an urgent need at that particular time for his services that he was persuaded to stick around for a brief spell. He stuck alright, but all the time he kept getting worse. Suddenly he went down into one of the parlors of the club and laid down. Then he began to feel as if he was going to die. A doctor, happened to be present, and after giving the patient a cursory examination—that was all that was necessary—informed the members of the committee in a voice that suggested that possibilities growing out of the situation, that the man had a nice developed case of small pox. There was a wholesale vaccination, says Mr. Owens. All of the members of the club escaped catching the disease, but for a while there were worried looks on the brows of the club members.

When the new uniforms for the bell boys at the Lenox arrive some of the hops may be disappointed to learn that they will be expected to conform to the coat—not that the clothes will be made to conform with the shape of the bell boy. It's easier sometimes to keep blue-braided suits than it is to keep bell boys—hence the shifting and changing of the boy to meet the requirements of his clothes.

Now that they have introduced the canine police in New York city, says O. V. Flotten at the Lenox, the citizens can reasonably expect that at last some honest work will be done. With the men of the district attorney's office "tailing" the men from Commissioner Bingham's office, and vice versa, what can the citizens of New York expect from the police department of the city, asks Mr. Flotten. Dogs learn awfully quick at that, he suggests, and the head of the department should be very careful in choosing the men who are to train the dogs. The system of tracking thieves and suspects with dogs has been tried successfully in European cities, and should the experiment in New York prove equally successful, it is probable that the police will be aided materially in their tracking of criminals by the efforts of the police dogs.

The dogs, says Mr. Flotten, are taught to watch and follow any suspicious-looking character. They watch and follow him, and is their canine suspicions are verified, they are supposed to pounce upon him and hold him until the arrival of one of the human sleuths. Fine! If the system works out all right, the human intelligence will in the end be superceded by canine sagacity. Policemen can accompany the dogs and render any little service that is needed. All a policeman or hard-working sleuth will be expected to do is to keep within hailing distance of the dog, and when he brings down the quarry, he can do the strong act, and hold the victim of canine vigilance until the arrival of the roller.

If they had some of these sagacious dogs in Duluth, the violation of the Sunday closing bill would become an offense that was fraught with some danger. Most of the dogs, according to Mr. Flotten, are German dasch-hounds, and therefore it is to be presumed that they would be especially fitted to the task of running down lid lifters. Anyway, the presence of a really bright dog wouldn't lower the standard of the police force.

THE WEATHER.

It was only 5 degs. below zero last night, but this morning a keen northerly wind accented the temperature until it seemed like 20 below. The weather man says it will be about 20 degs. below tonight, without any limitation at all, and that it will not be quite so cold tomorrow afternoon. Winter appears to have arrived at last.

A year ago today it was sharply cold, the thermometer the night before having been down to 24 degs. below zero.

The sun rose this morning at 7:38 and sets tonight at 5:05, making 9 hours and 27 minutes of sunlight.

Says Mr. Richardson of conditions: "The Saskatchewan low pressure area has advanced to the lake region. During the past twenty-four hours it caused higher temperatures throughout the lake region and Central valleys and light snow in Northern states and rain in the extreme Southwest. A strong high pressure area has appeared over Saskatchewan attended by decidedly colder weather in the Northwest, the coldest being 30 degs. below zero at Prince Albert, zero weather prevailing in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Western Canada. It is much colder this morning in Atlantic states due to a high pressure area over that locality. Severe cold weather is indicated for this locality tonight."

The Old High Hat.

Oh, ye needn't be so sly,
All ye lads, when I go by,
Wid your winkin' o' the eye
An' your smirkin' and' all that.
Shure, I'm wise enough, to see
That the cause of all your glee
Is the ancient cut o' me
An' me ould high hat.

Arrah! lads must have their play,
So I've naught a word to say;
'Tis mesel' that wance was gay
As the gayest wan o' you.
Shure, there wasn't many men
That would joke about me then,
When me blood was young an' when
This ould hat was new.

It was wid me an' me bride
When the blessed knot was tied;
An' it followed, when she died,
Where they soon will lay me, too.
It has served me all these years,
Shared me laughter an' me tears,
An' it mocks me now the jeers,
O' the like o' you.

* * * * * * *

Now we're worn an' ould an' sick,
But there's joy to think, avic,
That ye niver held a brick,
An' there's some that can't say that,
So they needn't be so sly
When they smile an' cock their eye,
All shlim lads, when we go by,
You an' me, ould hat.

Incomes.

Life: Incomes may be roughly divided into three classes: Respectable incomes, disreputable incomes and impossible incomes. Impossible incomes are, as yet, relatively, few. You may, perhaps, count them on the fingers of your two hands. Disreputable incomes, on the other hand, are rather many. There are at least enough of them to constitute a real society in about all the larger cities. Respectable incomes are, of course, too numerous, as well as too insignificant, to mention.

To a Stenographer.

Lady typist, blonde and fair,
Pray forgive me if I dare
Sitting so serenely there—
To ask a favor.
I, who am your humble slave,
Tremble as this boon I crave,
Feeling (usually brave)
My courage waver.

For, tomorrow morn at half-
Past eleven (do not laugh)
I expect my better half
And her dear mother,
Who are curious to see
What my office life may be—
So, your scorn for them and me
Please try to smother.

And, although you've naught to do,
It were best for me and you,
If you, lady, made a few
Attempts to hustle;
It will please them, I confess,
If you wear a simpler dress
Try to look a little less
Like Lillian Russell.

Be prepared your part to play;
Don't appear too smart or gay;
Work as if you earned the pay
For which you're hired.
Show a more subservient air;
Shake your haughty languid stare—
Or, by the pencils in your hair,
They'll have you fired!

—Puck.

No Respector.

Winter's not a pleasant time
For Gotrocks or for me—
I am poor while he is rich
As rich as he can be;
He goes South and has to pay
One long continuous tip;
As for me I stay at home
And rassle with the grip.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Anoka Free Press: What is a "logical candidate," anyhow, about which or whom we hear so much? Is it one of whom it can be said: He was a candidate last time, and the time before, therefore he will be the candidate next time, and the next, and so on? If that is the kind of logic that makes a candidate a "logical" one, it isn't much of a recommendation, and the less heard of "logical" candidates the better all around.

Fertile Journal: An Eastern contemporary says, "Keep your eye on Hughes," while a Western editor's advice is, "Keep your eye on Johnson," and from Pennsylvania comes the word, "Keep your eye on Knox." Now, what is a man to do when he has only two eyes?

Ortonville Herald Star: Nearly all the suggestions for delegates to the national convention seem to be based upon the theory that only those men who have heretofore been repeatedly honored by their party are eligible. Why not select a delegate from the ranks once in a while?

Pine River Sentinel: This is the season of discontent with many of the state press. Th' confounded county printing didn't work out as they thought it would.

Sauk Center Herald: Now that Ed Young has come out in the open with the announcement of his candidacy for the governorship, there are many surmises as to what the result will be. Both parties in Minnesota are rent with internal dissension and it will take a wise prophet to foretell the outcome. Ed had sense enough not to pose in his martyr role when he announced his candidacy, or to refer to his legislative record on the gross earnings bill. That ought to help some.

Little Falls Herald: The White Earth Tomahawk is losing its intellectual sharpness. It thinks Bryan is "utopian." So was Washington when he saw American independence ahead; so was Jefferson when he wrote the Declaration; so was Jackson when he crushed the money trust of his time; and so was Lincoln when he issued the Emancipation proclamation. In that sense Bryan is utopian, for he believes in the ultimate triumph of the people over plutocracy.

Anoka Union: The Republicans of Minnesota are like the old woman who lived in a shoe; they don't know what to do.

Bemidji Sentinel: Men counterfeit money because money has its value; they counterfeit Christianity for the same reason. Is a $20 bank note worth any less because a few counterfeits are in circulation? Is Christianity undesirable, the church to be avoided, because a few evil men or a few weak men have assumed the cloak of religion?

Bemidji Pioneer: In a letter to the Pioneer, Attorney General Young admits he is a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination and is desirous of harmonizing the "grand old party." He has assumed no small task.

The Peaceable Race.

"Who says that the Irish are fighters be birth?"
Says little Dan Crone.
"Faix, there's not a more peaceable race on th' earth.
If ye l'ave 'em alone.

"Tim O'Toole? Well, I grant ye now, there is a lad
That's best wid the curse o' pugnacity bad.
But he's jisht th' ixciption that's provin' the rule;
An' what else could ye ask from a lad like O'Toole?
Shure, he's sich a big mountain o' muscle and bone,
Sizin' up to the heft o' some siventeen stone,
That he fair aggravates iv'ry other bould buck
To be wishful to hand him a couple for luck,
An' to prove that there's others as clever as him.
Now, I ask ye, suppose ye was husky as Tim,
Don't ye think 'twould be right ye should take a delight
In defindin' yer title an' testin' yer might?"
Says little Dan Crone.

"Is it me? Arrah! now it is jokin' ye are.
But I bid ye be careful an' not go too far.
Shure, it's true I'm no more nor the height o' yer waist,
But there's manny a bigger has sampled a taste
O' the knuckles that's bunched in this little ould fisht.
Where's the dog wouldn't fight whin his tail gets a twisht?
Do I hunt fur the throuble? Mayhap, now, it's thrue
Upon certain occasions that's jisht what I do.
Shure, how else would they know—I'm that stunted an' small—
I'd the heart of a man in me body at all?"
Says little Dan Crone.

"Well, thin, keep yer opinion. 'Tis little it's worth."
Says little Dan Crone.
"Faix, we're jisht the most peaceable race on th' earth.
If ye l'ave us alone."

Would Do It.

Hartford Times: The Washington Star advises the Kentucky Democrats to break the deadlock over a United States senator by electing Editor Henry Watterson. This looks like a studied attempt to make the Congressional Record interesting.

Not Looking That Way.

Jacksonville Times Union: That man who offers to bet $5,000 that Governor John A. Johnson will be elected president, if nominated, is no friend of Governor Johnson's. The Denver convention, as it is forecasted, is not looking for a man who can be elected.

LINES TO A LAUGH.

Philadelphia Press: "You don't seem to be very particular about your appearance these days," remarked the owl. "Don't you go into society any more?"

"O, no," replied the stork. "We don't supply pet dogs, you know."

Baltimore American: Ho—Did you see where a judge somewhere said that the bad cooking of woman drives men to drink?

She—Yes, but even with that excuse, the men needn't break their necks trying to exceed the speed limit.

Washington Star: "Lady," said Meandering Mike, "have you any more of that hot mince pie?"

"Hot mince pie!"

"Yes, lady. I've joined a suicide club and we want to use it in givin' the first degree."

Philadelphia Press: "Yes," said the bachelor, "a fellow may think he's having a high old time at night, but something will surely tell him next morning that he simply made a fool of himself."

"Yes," replied the married man, "or somebody."

Washington Herald: "Here!" growled Mr. Kadley, "what do you mean by waking me out of a sound sleep?"

"Because," replied his wife, "it was such a distressing sound."

Philadelphia Press: "Sailors are awful forgetful, ain't they, pa?" said little Elsie.

"What makes you think so, dear?" asked her kind papa.

"Because," said she, "they have to weigh the anchor every time they leave port."

Houston Post: The Girl—Oh! And is that beautiful ring for me?
The Man—I'll sell it to you.
The Girl—What? For how much?
The Man—For a kiss. Is it a bargain?
The Girl—Well—do you give green trading stamps?

Chicabo Tribune: Intimate friends of Hamlet, the prince of Denmark, had just told him that he was suspected of being insane.

"Bosh!" he exclaimed. "I'm not really insane. It's only a mild case of stupor-ous melancholia—if anybody should ask you."

In proof whereof he struck an attitude of the deepest gloom and recited his famous soliloquay without a break.

Recovering From Panic.

New York Journal of Commerce: Capital destroyed or wasted cannot be replaced at once. It must be saved out of a slackened production. Credit impaired must be restored, not by a mere revival of hope, but by repairing and strengthening its foundations. There will have to be hard work, close calculation, economy, and prudence in this process of recovering ground, but we see no reason why there should be prolonged depression, or a period of "hard times." There is not likely to be any issue in the presidential campaign of the year that need disturb calculations or deter from steady effect in business recovery. Money will be abundant, though capital is scarce, and rates will be low for some time. While production and trading must proceed more slowly and cautiously for a time, and credit and capital must be nursed and saved, there will be a gradual accumulation to repair the waste of the past, and normal conditions will be restored with perhaps some substantial gain from the lessons of experience. If good crops come again this year, and conservatism prevails in business, there is no reason to apprehend that the process of recovery will be painful or protracted.

ON THE IRON RANGES

SHOTS ARE FIRED DURING TROUBLE

In Virginia Saloon, But No One is Hit.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 28. — (Special to The Herald.)—Late Sunday night an impromptu shooting affair was pulled off in the saloon of I. E. Grann, in the opera house block. Three shots were fired from a revolver, but all went wide of their intended mark and landed in the ceiling and walls of the saloon. At the time of the shooting the doors were locked and the police had to break in the door in order to gain entrance. The shooting was done by Paul Saari, a bartender from a saloon across the street. A number of men were in the place and several of them show evidence of hard usage. Yesterday the proprietor of the saloon pleaded guilty to violating the Sunday closing law and paid a fine of $50 and costs in municipal court. The hearing of Saari, who did the shooting, will be held today. It appears that the row started over a check, owned by one of the men in the saloon that somebody else was trying to get away from him, and it is claimed that the proprietor of the place handed Saari the gun and told him to shoot, which he proceeded to do.

J. A. JONES HAS BEEN RELEASED

From Aurora Jail on Orders of Assistant County Attorney.

Aurora, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. A. Jones, the so-called agitator, has been released from jail, not enough evidence being collected to hold him. He was released on orders from the assistant county attorney.

Jones was arrested last week in connection with the Nicholas dynamite case. His reputed wife, Elizabeth Flynn, has not put in an appearance yet, and it is supposed she will not, as she is scheduled to give a series of Socialistic addresses in Pittsburg.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Capt. T. J. Nicholas, who has charge of the Mohawk mine at Aurora, owned by Pickands, Mather & Co., was in the city yesterday. The captain is naturally very much wrought up over the blowing up of his home at the Mohawk location by dynamite. Although he has sent his family to a place of safety, he remains steadily at his post and refuses even to have guards placed around his place of residence. Capt. Nicholas was formerly for several years in charge of a property at Sparta for the same company with which he is now employed. He has always borne an excellent reputation both as a mining man and as being just and humane to the men under him, and it is naturally inexplicable to both himself and friends that any member of the working class or any other class should have been guilty of the outrage perpetrated upon him. His former neighbors at Sparta held him in the highest esteem, and it was they who first offered himself and family assistance and neighborly attention after the outrage.

Strong efforts are being made to discover the perpetrators of the outrage, and it is the general hope of the citizens of the range that they may be discovered and brought to justice.

LEFT LAUNDRY OPEN.

Manager Found Job for Plumber---Other Eveleth Notes.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—As a result of the recent cold spell the Eveleth steam laundry was out of working order Monday. Saturday night some one forgot to close the door and when Mr. Hall came to open up, he was surprised to find himself in an icehouse, the pipes having frozen. Plumbers were hurriedly summoned and commenced to set things in order.

The Western Federation of Miners in Eveleth is in a very prsperous condition and their membership is increasing very steadily.

Louis Porcely and Miss Angelina Sterle of this city were married by Judge Prince on Saturday.

Harry Levant, until recently a student at the Eveleth high school, left Monday morning for Duluth to attend the business college.

Mr. Weinberg of Aurora is in town. He is visiting his many friends here.

L. H. Dawley, Mrs. W. H. Wood and Mrs. Keenan, all of Minneapolis, were in Eveleth Monday.

H. Rudawsky of St. Paul is here on a business trip.

William Osborne and J. Mullen of Duluth were here yesterday. The latter as representative of F. A. Patrick, is visiting his trade.

TO BOND FLOODWOOD

For Fifteen Thousand Dollars to Provide Modern School Building.

Floodwood, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The voters of this school district, by a vote of 64 to 26, have decided to bond the district for $15,000 for the purpose of raising funds for erecting a modern school building. It is claimed that but for misstatements relative to the needs of the district, the vote upon the proposition would have been more decisive in its favor.

The board will at once make application to the state for a loan, and every effort will be made to expedite matters so that the work of erecting the building may be commenced at as early a date as possible. It is hoped to have the new structure ready for use by the opening of the next school year.

MISSABE AGENT SAVES WOMAN FROM INJURY.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special td The Herald.)—Local Agent Childs of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern depot yesterday noon probably saved the life of an aged woman, who attempted to board the outgoing train, after it had started. She had several parcels in her arms and made an effort to board the train. Mr. Childs, thinking quickly, jumped and caught her, preventing her from getting on. The train was stopped and she was then allowed to get aboard.

DIES SUDDENLY.

Chisholm, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—While sitting in a chair in Fred Helanis' saloon on Central avenue, Sunday evening, Victor Olson, a photographer, fell over dead of apoplexy. He was about 48 years of age, single, and had lived here only about three months.

HOME FROM MESABA.

Ishpeming, Mich., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thomas Coughlin is down from the Mesaba range, having come home to see his mother and brother, Edward, both of whom are ill. The latter is suffering from pluerisy.

STAPLES' NEW CHURCH

Fittingly Decorated Sunday, Dr. Forbes Speaking Twice.

Staples, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Methodist Episcopal church of this city, which has been in course of construction since September last, was dedicated Sunday. Dr. Lafayette Dodd, D. D., secured Dr. Forbes of Philadelphia to conduct the services of the day and he delivered two very forceful and instructive lectures, one in the morning and one in the evening, both of which were received with appreciation. Presiding elder E. K. Copper, Rev. T. J. B. Smith of Akeley, and pastors of various local churches were in attendance, and the church was filled to its utmost capacity at all the services, and the afternoon service. About $1,500 was due to be paid on the construction of the edifice and this was quickly subscribed, over $800 being raised at the morning service and the balance in the afternoon and evening. Dr. Forbes expressed his delight at being able to be present at the dedication, and pronounced the church the best he has seen in his travels throughout this section, considering the cost, saying that its acoustic properties are perfect.

A beautiful Vocallon organ has been purchased, but could not be installed in time to be used in the dedicatory service.

WATER WORKS SYSTEM

Promised Pine River, Which Will Mean Less Insurance Rates.

Pine River, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.) — A new system of water works and an elevated water tank will be installed by the village, next summer, if present plans mature. At the spring election the question of withdrawal from the township of Walden will be voted upon and it is thought will carry easily. The village will then vote not less than $10,000 worth of bonds for the installation of the water works and tank. This will be a great boon to the village as the rate of fire insurance now is very exhorbitant and many property owners cannot afford to carry any amount.

REPORTS EXAGGERATED

Of Recent Fire at Masonville, Mich., Loss Being Small.

Rapid River, Mich., Jan. 28. — (Special to The Herald.) — Reports sent out from Gladstone concerning the fire at Masonville, Delta county, late last week, were grossly exaggerated. Contrary to the statement that $50,000 damage was done, the total loss was scarcely $10,000. Three piles of lumber were burned, not the plant and the yards of the Escanaba Lumber company, which it was said "were completely consumed."

Neither was "the large city school building nearby" destroyed. A school house did burn, but it was a small structure, in keeping with the size of the town, and had been erected at a cost of only $2,000. The 900 children rescued with difficulty were much less than that in number, and at no time were they in danger. They had been dismissed before the building caught.

NORTH DAKOTA NATIONAL GUARD IS FLOURISHING.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—According to Adjt. Gen. Poole, the North Dakota National Guard is in better shape than since statehood. Rigid inspection and the enforcement of the requirements have weeded out the malcontents and the fellows who were in the organization merely for fun. The officers and the enlisted men are all up to a higher standard and greater enthusiasm and interest is shown. Last year, for the first time, a team was sent to the national rifle shoot and this year a larger number will attend. New equipment, including new rifles, is expected at an early date.

GOING TO COAST.

Negaunee, Mich., Jan. 28. — (Special to The Herald.)—Having finished cutting its Upper Michigan timber, the Bohemia Lumber company of Greenland, Ontonagon county, plans to transfer its operations to the Pacific coast region. It has an option on a sawmill and a large tract of timber in Plumas county, Cal., and is negotiating for the purchase of the property. The company's manufacturing plant at Francis has been disposed of, together with its logging equipment.

ECZEMA NOW CURABLE.

All Itching Skin Diseases Which are Not Hereditary Instantly Relieved by Oil of Wintergreen.

Can Eczema be cured?
Some physicians say "Yes."
Some say "No."
The real question is, "What is meant by Eczema?" If you mean those scaly eruptions, those diseases which make their first appearance, not at birth, but years afterward, and perhaps not until middle age—then there can no longer be any question that these forms of Eczema are curable.

Simple vegetable oil of wintergreen, mixed with other vegetable ingredients, will kill the germs that infest the skin. Apply this prescription to the skin, and instantly that awful itch is gone. The very moment the liquid is applied, that agonizing, tantalizing itch disappears, and continued applications of this external remedy soon cure the disease.

We carry in stock this oil of wintergreen properly compounded into D. D. D. Prescription. While we are not sure that it will cure all those cases of skin trouble which are inherited, we positively know that this D. D. D. Prescription, whenever rightly used, will cure every last case of genuine Eczema or other skin trouble, which did not exist at birth.

We know this. Anyway you, yourself, will know that D. D. D. Prescription instantly takes away the itch the moment it is applied to the skin. Lyceum Pharmacy, Duluth, Minn. Stop that itch today—instantly. Just call at our store and try this refreshing and soothing liquid; also ask about D. D. D. Soap.

PLAN OF THE DEFENSE

schedule adopted annually by the board of public grounds and buildings, composed of the governor, auditor general and state treasurer. He explained, further, that the regular schedule of 1904 contained a special capitol furnishing schedule, upon which Sanderson was given the contract for all the items in this special schedule, under the "per foot" and "per pound" system. At the time this contract was awarded, the board was composed of Snyder, Mathues and Governor Pennypacker. Shumaker was superintendent of grounds and buildings and executive officer of the board.

After Sanderson was given this contract the board, on June 10, 1904, adopted a resolution, authorizing payment of all bills under this special schedule, upon the certification of Huston, who designed the furnishings and was the board's agent.

Paid Under Different Items.

Taking up the payments involved in the case, Mr. Scarlet explained that Sanderson contracted to supply the furniture, under one item, in the special schedule, and was paid for under another item, which enabled Sanderson to collect $19,308.40 more than he was entitled to on a bill of $49,417.80, assuming that the measurements were correct.

Mr. Scarlet said the commonwealth expected to prove that the defendants deliberately conspired to defraud the state, and that this special schedule was prepared by Huston, so as to enable Sanderson to get the contract without competition.

George D. Thorne, chief clerk of the state department, the first witness called by the commonwealth, produced the records of the department, showing the election by the people of Mathues as state treasurer and Snyder as auditor general.

NO EXPERTS IN INSANITY

would do away with the necessity of taking Hummel's testimony on Blackwell's island and would also hasten the conclusion of the case. No agreement had been announced however, when the morning proceedings were taken up.

The state began by calling several eye-witnesses to the tragedy, who declared Thaw's conduct impressed them as rational.

One of the witnesses was Warner Paxson, engineer of Madison Square Garden. He said that just before the killing of Stanford White, one of the performers on the stage made a remark about challenging somebody to a duel.

"Was the performer, who passed the remark, Harry Hudson?" asked District Attorney Garvan.

Shots Followed Quickly.

"I don't know. Harry Thaw's shots followed the remark so quickly I thought they were a part of the play."

Dr. Francis Maguire, the Tombs prison physician was called by Mr. Jerome to testify as to Thaw's conduct in jail, but his testimony was barred out when Mr. Littleton raised the objection as to professional privilege between physician and patient.

Abraham Snydecker, a former employe of Howe & Hummel, who testified last year that he witnessed Evelyn Nesbit's signature to the affidavit, which charged Harry Thaw with cruelties, next was called to the stand. The affidavit was signed by Evelyn Nesbit in the Madison Square tower when she was in company with Stanford White.

Snydecker's testimony was objected to by Mr. Littleton as immaterial, but was allowed to go in by Justice Dowling. When shown the photographic copy of the signature, however, the witness said he could not positively identify it, although he recognized his own signature underneath that of the Nesbit girl. Snydecker swore that the girl glanced through the document and declared its contents were true. After the paper was signed it was turned over to Mr. Jacobson, another Hummel clerk, who went to the tower with the witness.

Syndecker was confronted with his testimony of last year, and explained several discrepancies by saying he remembered the events more clearly this time.

Roger O'Meara Called.

Mr. Jerome here sprung a surprise by calling Roger O'Meara, former chief of detectives of Pittsburg, to the stand. O'Meara has been a prominent figure in the Thaw defense work. Mr. Jerome asked him if he had been connected with the Pittsburg detective force, and upon receiving an affirmative reply, said:

"That's all."

Mr. Littleton caused a smile by saying he could not think of any questions to ask the witness.

"With the exception of the testimony of Mr. Hummel, this is all the evidence the state will have to offer," said Mr. Jerome.

It had been rumored for some time that the district attorney would not call any insanity experts on rebuttal, and this statement confirmed it.

It was reported Mr. Jerome would contend, in his summing up to the jury, that no competent case of mental irresponsibility under the law had been made out by the defense.

Another conference of attorneys followed Mr. Jerome's announcement.

It finally was agreed that Hummel's testimony at the last trial should be read to the jury, and that the Thaw will also should be read.

Hummel is now confined in the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island, serving a sentence for subornation of perjury. He was too ill to appear in court, and it was first proposed that the court should go with the defendant to the island to take his testimony. The agreement of counsel did away with the necessity of making such a trip.

therefore would be extremely rigid.

One speaker, in reply, said if China refused to listen to reason, Japan should send a military force and compel her to do so.

Viscount Hayashi laughingly turned the tables upon the speaker by asking him if he would guarantee the result of the expedition.

Good humored throughout, Viscount Hayashi raised considerable laughter by his ready responses to the opposition, which did not develop any special antagonism to the government's policy concerning emigration.

THE COME AND SEE SIGN

This sign is permanently attached to the front of the main building of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

What Does This Sign Mean?

It means that public inspection of the Laboratory and methods of doing business is honestly desired. It means that there is nothing about the business which is not "open and above-board."

It means that a permanent invitation is extended to anyone to come and verify any and all statements made in the advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Is it a purely vegetable compound made from roots and herbs — without drugs?

Come and See.

Do the women of America continually use as much of it as we are told?

Come and See.

Was there ever such a person as Lydia E. Pinkham, and is there any Mrs. Pinkham now to whom sick woman are asked to write?

Come and See.

Is the vast private correspondence with sick women conducted by women only, and are the letters kept strictly confidential?

Come and See.

Have they really got letters from over one million, one hundred thousand women correspondents?

Come and See.

Have they proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands of these women?

Come and See.

This advertisement is only for doubters. The great army of women who know from their own personal experience that no medicine in the world equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female ills will still go on using and being benefited by it; but the poor doubting, suffering woman must, for her own sake, be taught confidence, for she also might just as well regain her health.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

DROPS OUT OF SIGHT

Rev. F. S. Honeywell Has Mysteriously Vanished From Scene.

Takes Revolver and It is Feared Has Killed Himself.

Echo, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—This section of Yellow Medicine county is wrought up over the strange disappearance of Rev. F. S. Honeywell, who vanished from his home at Wood Lake last Thursday and nothing has been heard of him. On that day he left his home during the forenoon, and the family had evidently been waiting for him to return, and although becoming more anxious as time passed, had made no attempt to locate him up to yesterday. Things connected with his church work had not been just satisfactory of late; and as several strange things had occurred, his friends fear he has lost his mind.

Presiding Elder Cowgill of Redwood Falls was here yesterday to look matter up. He telephoned Mr. Honeywell to meet him in Echo, but instead his wife and daughter appeared, reporting his disappearance as above. Steps were then taken to institute a search from Wood Lake, but up to this time nothing has been heard from the missing man. He is reported to have left his insurance policies and other papers on the table in his room, but took a revolver with him. This gives rise to a fear that he may have taken his own life.

Mr. Honeywell took charge of the Wood Lake and Echo M. E. churches last October, being transferred from Westbrook, Minn., where he had been stationed the past two years. His work had been satisfactory for a time, but later troubles seem to have entered into his life.

A wife and a large family of children are anxiously awaiting news of his whereabouts.

PACK OF WOLVES ATTACK TRAPPER

Fires Three Shots, All He Had, and Takes to Heels.

Marquette, Mich., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Just now when the wolves in his locality are pretty bold Earle Sharpe, a trapper who lives on a homestead near the Huron Mountain club, will not visit his traps without taking a liberal supply of ammunition. He has formed this resolution because of a thrilling experience he went through a few days ago when he was attacked by five big wolves. He fired all the ammunition he had, three shots, without effect, and then sought safety in flight.

Sharpe was out on the lake and was tending his traps when he first saw the pack of wolves advancing across the ice. At the time they apparently had not noticed him. As they approached he crouched behind an ice hummock and from a point of concealment saw them come closer and closer. The leader, who was about three rods in front of the other four, Sharpe says was the largest wolf he ever saw in his six years' experience in the north woods. He waited until they were about fifty yards away, and still loping toward him, when he fired the first shot. Instantly the pack broke, and as the wolves fled in five different directions Sharpe discharged his remaining two cartridges at their retreating forms. He saw that he had missed all three shots.

His only refuge lay in running and he beat a hasty retreat pursued by the hungry pack. Luckily the animals did not follow him after entering the timber, otherwise he would have been forced to climb a tree and perhaps spend the night in the cold.

A DISTINCTIVE HOTEL

St. Regis Not Only the Finest but the Most Comfortable in New York

SOME POINTS IN ITS FAVOR

None of New York City's great hotels has been more talked about than the St. Regis, at Fifth avenue and Fifty-fifth street. Recognized as the finest hostelry in the world, its chief claim to popularity lies in the fact that it offers the largest measure of refined personal comfort at standard prices.

The St. Regis has come to be recognized as the leading living and dining establishment in New York. It is not an experiment, but a well established necessity in the city's hospitality. It has been tried and tested by thousands, and not found wanting. It represents a superior phase of hotel life and stands unrivaled for comfort and homelikeness. On this subject the London Times, in an article published soon after the St. Regis opened its doors, remarks: "If a great art connoisseur planned to furnish a house so that it would give the highest pleasure and comfort to his intimate personal friends, he could do no more than the St. Regis does for all its guests."

For some unaccountable reason, living at the St. Regis has been considered by many as a luxury beyond their means, and all sorts of foolish and exaggerated reports have been circulated regarding the prices prevailing there. The truth is, that the cost of living at the St. Regis is no greater than at other first class hotels, and, considering its exceptional accommodations and service, it is even less. This is shown by the fact that a beautifully furnished room of large size may be had for $4 a day, or the same, with private bath, for $5 a day. Parlor, bedroom and bath from $12 upward. The restaurant charges are no higher than in other first class hotels.

Mr. Denton was unconscious for half an hour. He was taken to the Trimountain hospital in an ambulance. It was found he had received several severe cuts about the head and face. RED BLOOD

How It is Made—The Importance of Keeping the Supply Pure. How to Tell When Your Blood is Out of Order.

The supply of the blood in the body depends on the character of the diet, and the ability of the stomach to digest and assimilate the blood forming elements from the food eaten. When the stomach is weak, the supply of blood is naturally decreased, and if this condition is allowed to continue the blood becomes thin and weak, the skin pale, and the body emaciated.

Strong digestion makes good, red blood, and special care should be taken to keep the stomach in good trim. For this purpose there is no medicine so good as Beecham's Pills; the best stomach corrective, a gentle laxative and safe regulator of the liver and kidneys.

If your cheeks are pale, flesh flabby, nails white, the extremities cold, or blotches on the face, your blood is poor, and you need a course of Beecham's Pills. A few doses taken as directed will make decided improvement in your looks and feeling. These pills purify the blood and make red cheeks, by insuring sound digestion, strong stomach and regular habits.

Nineteen men started in the 142-hour walking contest.

MORROW TO MANAGE TEAM

Former Major Leaguer Secured to Handle Duluth White Sox.

Duluth will not be caught napping, when the opening of the baseball season comes around. The business-like manner of making arrangements leaves no doubt in the mind of any of the fans that there will be a league in the northern country next year and Duluth will be a big part of it.

W. E. Morrow of Aurora, Ill., a former major league player, who has managed teams in the Pacific Coast and Texas State leagues, has been signed to manage the Duluth club and he has already twenty-five players in line to try out for positions. They include all of last year's team, with the exception of McCormick, Helding and Cummings.

The squad will assemble in Aurora, April 25 and exhibition games have already been booked with Aurora, Elgin and Freeport. It is probable other games will also be arranged and the team will arrive in Duluth about a week before the opening of the season, which will be May 15 or so.

The league circuit has not yet been definitely decided, but a meeting will be called within a few days. Superior is more than a possibility. An attempt is now being made to secure a down-town park there and an outside man will put in a club. Grand Forks will also be in and Fargo, Brandon, Duluth and Winnipeg are assured.

HEUSTON DEFEATED.

St. Louis, Jan. 28.—Jerome Keogh of Buffalo last night defeated Thomas Hueston of St. Louis, world's pool champion, in the first block of a series of 600 points to be played for the world's championship, by a score of 212 to 150. Keogh's high run was 34; Hueston's, 21.

SPORTS OF THE DAY

NO RECORDS ARE BROKEN

But Big New York Athletic Carnival is Good Exhibition.

Melvin Sheppard's Inability to Participate is Disappointment

New York, Jan. 28.—Despite the fact that no records were broken, the athletic carnival of the Pastime A. C., held at Madison Square garden last night was one of the best meets witnessed here for some time. The throng was disappointed by the absence of Melvin Sheppard from the special 100-yard race. GETS PERFECT CENTER.

Jeffersonville, N. J., Man Accomplishes Seemingly Impossible Feat.

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 28. — Rudolph Gute of Jeffersonville, N. Y., accomplished what small arms shots have always considered an impossible feat in yesterday's opening shoot of the indoor 22-calibre rifle leagues tournament. Gute, in the bull's eye event, registered a perfect center. The mark was a 4-inch black carton and the distance seventy-five feet.

Harry Harrison of Rochester, who holds the world's championship for rapid firing boat his own record of 199 by firing twenty more shots in one minute. In this event the contestants use automatic rifles with a capacity of ten shells, but they must do their own loading.

Shooting is to continue daily throughout the week. The feature event in the championship for the premier honors of the United States.

Members of the Duluth Ski club and ski riders throughout the Northwest welcome the fall of snow, which has come during the past few days. It will serve as a big boom for the great Scandinavian sport, which has languished somewhat this year on account of the lack of snow.

Duluth is the only city in the entire country, perhaps, which has had the pleasure of seeing a ski tournament this year. By dint of vigorous scraping of the frozen earth and hauling with teams snow was secured to spread over the slide and give the riders an opportunity for practice. Two tournaments were pulled off and they were successful, although the records were no doubt affected by the lack of snow and the warm weather, which melted what snow was on the slide and made the going rather uneven.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., had a tournament scheduled for a week ago last Sunday, but on account of lack of snow the club was unable to pull it off. There was one scheduled for Eau Claire and it is doubtful if there was snow enough to permit of its being held. The Ishpeming riders have not yet been on their hill and Ashland, Munising and several other towns have had the same experience.

But now the snow has come in something of a bountiful measure and the covering of the earth is probably a forerunner to a heavy fall to come before the end of this month. The members of the Duluth club and ski riders, who will probably enter for the tournament, were becoming rather anxious, for fear that the amount of snow would be slight for the big national tournament to be pulled off in Duluth next month.

But now there is no fear of such a condition arising. The amount of snow now on the ground will give the Duluth club plenty for the pulling off of their tournament. The Duluth riders and those in other cities in the district will have an opportunity to practice and the national tournament will see the riders in their best form.

The people in charge of the national tournament are preparing to boom it. And well they may. The Duluth hill is the largest in the United States. Ole Feiring jumped 199 feet on a 200-foot run of the hill. With 300 feet to go he may be expected to materially increase that jump. Olaf Junnum, the Coleraine rider, jumped 114 feet on the interior Ishpeming hill, with its short slide, last year. With a 300-foot slide at a better angle, he will certainly better that mark here and there will be numerous other riders here in good shape to go after the marks.

The world's record is 138 feet made in Switzerland last year by Leif Berg. The record is not likely to be broken on the Duluth hill this year, as it is an exceptional one. But the American record of 114 feet, made by Ole Feiring at Red Wing last year, is doomed this season and it is worth a part of anybody's time and trouble to make the trip to Duluth to see the trick done.

As one watches the ice boats scooting around on the bay before the wind, he thinks they are traveling pretty fast. Get on one of the boats before a pretty fair wind and your breath is nearly taken away. You travel seemingly too fast for belief. If you are going twenty miles an hour, you are willing to swear that you are easily making 100 miles. But 100 miles an hour in plain figures looks like too fast for even the greatest of racing automobiles.

John Beck, an ice boat owner at Washburn, Wis., proved, however, that 100 miles an hour isn't too fast for an ice boat. In the face of a gale last week, his ice boat traveled a distance of seven miles in four minutes, a rate of 105 miles an hour. At least, that is the story sent out to the newspapers throughout the country.

Beck tells a thrilling story of the trip. He says his boat went into the wind at just the right angle and he held the sail in place, while at the same time hanging on to his seat for all he was worth. He had a hard time hanging onto his place. He didn't realize how fast he was traveling at the time, but he almost lost his breath. When he finished the trip and looked at the time, he did lose it. His boat is strongly made or it would never have withstood the trip. A mishap would have sent Beck hurling to his death.

There is nothing but Beck's unsupported word to go for the record, but if one has ever taken a trip on an ice boat, he can well believe that the trip was made in the time named.

Fred Beell and Billy Maynard are at it now. Maynard let slip something in Des Moines, Iowa, the other day about his ability to beat Beell. The Marshfield man took it up and is now threatening to chase Maynard off the map, unless he consents to meet him in public or private. He offers to bet $1,000 to $500 that he can beat Maynard in a two out of three catch-as-catch can match, and from the words he uses in expressing an opinion of the former Duluth man, he undoubtedly means it.

Although local sports would like to see Maynard and Beell wrestle, if they ever succeed in getting together, it is doubtful if anybody in Duluth would care to stake a proposition, or even pay money to see anything in which Bert Shores-Billy Maynard-Young Hackenschmidt is mixed up. He's a good wrestler when he wrestles, but his business acumen and love for reputation gets the best of his wrestling ability and sinks it down. If the mach is to be pulled off in Duluth, local people would demand strong assurances that Maynard will appear on the mat, before they will dig up the price of a cardboard entrance.

Pittsburg, Jan. 28.—Leo Jones of St. Louis, Mo., won the grand final in the 2-mile event of the tournament being held here for the world's roller skating championship. The finish was sensational, Jones defeating Ollie Moore, the champion of the 1-mile event, by a very small margin. Summaries:

Second heat—W. H. Wilson, Pittsburg, won; Carl Sanford, St. Louis, second. Time 6:11 1-5.

Third heat—Ollie Moore, Charlesvolx, Mich., first; Leo Jones, St. Louis, second. Time, 6:08 4-5.

Grand final—Jones, first; Moore, second; Emmanuel, third. Time, 6:10 2-5.

REISLING OUT FOR GOOD.

Application of Ball Player for Reinstatement is Again Refused.

Cincinnati, Jan. 28.—The application of Player E. C. Reisling for reinstatement was yesterday rejected by the National Baseball commission; which declared that he had presented no new testimony, and that there were no extenuating circumstances. His application had been several times heretofore rejected.

PLAN TRIP TO CANADA

Northern Hockey Team Negotiated for Games at Port Arthur.

Team Takes Over Management of Athletic Park Skating Rink.

Arrangements for a game with the Columbia team of Superior at Athletic park next Friday night have fallen through and the Northern hockey team is casting about for other games. It is possible the boys will go to Port Arthur, Can., for three games the fore part of next week.

A letter was received from the manager of the Arena team at Port Arthur offering the Duluth boys good inducements to make the trip to the Canadian town, with the understanding that return dates at Duluth would be given the Port Arthur seven. The Northern boys will accept the offer and negotiations are now on for the games at Port Arthur Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. In case Port Arthur accepts, the Duluth boys will leave here Saturday night, returning Thursday or Friday of the following week.

In invading the Canadian town, the Duluth boys will be none too sanguine in their hopes for success, as they will be entering the home of hockey across the border. But their successes in the Northwest this year have given them confidence in their ability to cope with ordinary amateur teams and they are willing to at least try conclusions with the Port Arthur seven.

The members of the Northern team have taken over an interest in the open rink at Athletic park and they intend to boom skating for the remainder of the winter. With that end in view, they have made arrangements to have a band at the rink every Wednesday night for the remainder of the skating season, and they hope to get all the skaters out and into the sport again. Hockey has not been a financial success thus far this year and the boys are considerably in debt. They hope to raise some of their obligations by funds derived from conducting the skating rink and by efficient management, they hope to make the Athletic park rink an ideal place for winter recreation.

SUTTON PLAYS IN POOR FORM

New York, Jan. 28.—George Sutton of Chicago successfully defended his title as world's champion at 18.2 balk line billiards against Ora C. Morningstar of this city, at the Lenox Lyceum last night. Sutton won by a score of 500 to 399 in 67 innings.

Sutton's best runs were 33, 74 and 56. With a rather poor showing, and with an average of under nine, Morningtar did not play up to anything like hi uual form.

Hoppe Defeats Cutler.

Don't Bake Beans

With all your trouble you can't get anything half so good as Van Camp's

It isn't your fault, but you lack the facilities.

It requires a fierce heat to break down the fibre of beans, and you cannot apply it.

That is why home-cooked beans are hard to digest. That is why you regard them as heavy food.

Beans, above all foods, need to be factory cooked.

Our ovens are heated to 245 degrees That's why our beans are digestible

And we bake in live steam, so all are baked well without browning or breaking. That's why they are mealy, yet nutty.

They are baked in the cans—the beans, the tomato sauce and the pork all together. Thus their delicious blend.

You can't do as we do, because you lack the facilities. Why bother to try it? Let us cook for you.

Van Camp's pork and beans baked with tomato sauce

We use Michigan beans, picked over by hand from the choicest part of the crop.

Only the whitest, the plumpest, the fullest-grown.

Our tomatoes are not picked green and ripened in shipment, but ripened in full on the vines.

That gives to our sauce its superlative zest.

We could buy beans for one-seventh, and sauce for one-fifth what we pay

We pay $2.10 per bushel for our beans, though beans are sold as low as thirty cents.

We could buy tomato sauce, ready made, for exactly one-fifth what we spend to make it.

No wonder if some brands sell cheaper than ours. But you will never accept them after you once try Van Camp's.

10, 15 and 20¢ per can.

"UNCHURCHED"

By Universalist Committee, But Pastor Opens Up Across Street.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 28.—Rev. E. L. Rexford, one of the most prominent ministers, orators and authors in the Universalist church in the country, has been "unchurched." The action was taken a few days ago in this city by the fellowship committee of the church, but has been kept a profound secret.

The reason for the action of the committee was brought about by internal dissentions in the Universalist church here, of which Dr. Rexford was the paster. It ended in Dr. Rexford resigning the pastorate and opening a new church almost directly opposite his former charge.

"BIFF" WENT HIS FIST

Into Whiskers of the Socialist Who Slurred the Irish.

Hamilton, Ohio, Jan. 28.—It's for Mayor Busse of Chicago, and the Irish on his police force to tip their chepeaux to William McGreevy, an electrician, of this city, at present out of a job.

McGreevy, with several Irishmen, was listening to the address of Arthur Trevelyan, an English Socialist, to the unemployed of Hamilton in Jacob's hall. The Englishman began abusing Mayor Busse and his "Irish police" for stopping the Socialists' parade last week, saying: "Mayor Busse and his Irish coppers would hit you men in the head with a club as quick as they'd kill a rat."

"Why did you pick out the Irish," asked McGreevy. Trevelyan is said to have made a slurring reply. "Biff" went McGreevy's fist into the mop of whiskers on Trevelyan's face and he measured his length on the floor. In two minutes there were forty Irishmen alongside McGreevy. Later, the committee of the Hamilton Socialists apologized for their speaker's rash words, and there were no arrests.

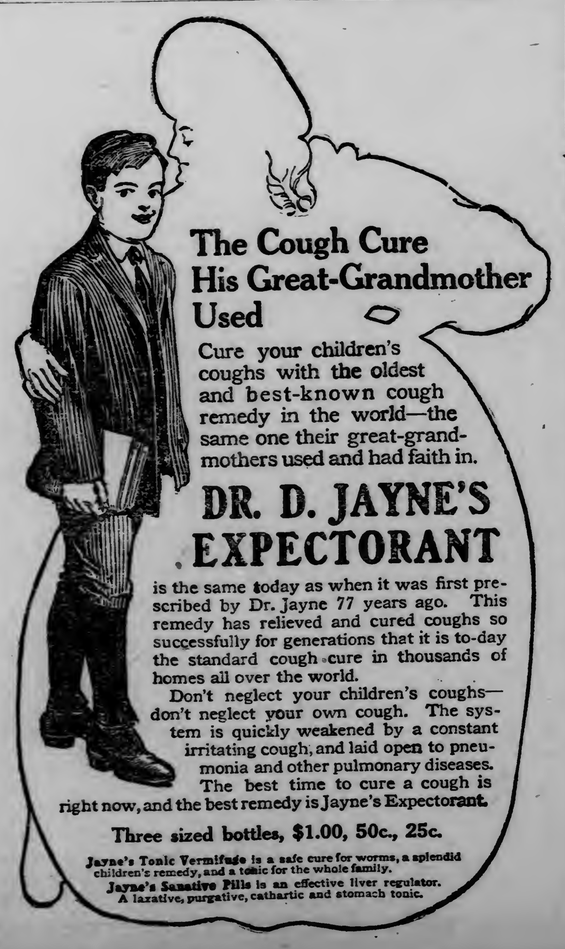

ST. LOUIS CAR CONDUCTOR

Predicted Sex of Every One of His Dozen Children.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 28.—A prenatal culture scientist unknown to fame has been found in this city, who claims to have known from early youth that he has the gift form God, yet in all his fifty-three years has never exerted this influence on any woman except his own wife. Irving G. Emerick is his name, and he is earning about $2 per day as a Page avenue car conductor.

Pointing to his ten living children he said yesterday: "I predicted what every one of them would be before they were born; also, my two other offsprings, now dead."

Emerick declined to reveal his method, but said he never hypnotized his wife to determine the sex of her babes. He added he had always had an ambition to reveal his power in a book, and may yet do so.

IS HELD TO FIRST BOND

Council Refuses to Establish Precedent for Contractor McDonnell.

Little Business Transacted at Short Session of City Body.

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID.

Ordered placing of wires underground on Fourth street, between Sixth avenue west and Sixth avenue east; on Grand avenue between Fifty-fourth and Fifty-ninth avenues west; and on Ramsey street, between Forty-ninth avenue west and Central avenue.

Practically denied that the precedent would be established by reducing amount of indemnity bond fixed by city engineer. Contractor McDonnell's request for a reduction withdrawn.

Board of public works instructed to advertise for bids for construction of West end police station and award contract, subject to approval by the council.

City clerk instructed that copies of report of National Board of Fire Underwriters on Duluth be furnished the water and light commission, board of public works and building inspector, that they might consider changes which might be made to better conditions.

Requisition of board of fire commissioners for $212 for rent of Chief Black's automobile is refused.

Smoke ordinances, prohibiting emission of smoke for more than four minutes in any ten-minute period, passed.

With the quarantine question out of the way, the members of the city council were given a respite last night and a short meeting, with a little discussion between Contractor McDonnell and the aldermen as the only enlivening feature, was the result.

Contractor McDonnell's request that his guarantee bond on the Ramsey and Oneota streets, Jefferson street, Sixteenth avenue east and Twenty-fourth avenue east pavements be reduced to 12 per cent, which has been before the council for some weeks, was the cause of the discussion. The matter had been referred to the city engineer and attorney and they had reported that the reduction would be safe, but would make no recommendations leaving it to the council to take the responsibility.

The committee, led by Alderman Moore, reported against the reduction. The report said that the contracts had ben bid on with the bond fixed by the engineer as a basis. The assessments had been levied on the basis of the bids and, if there was anything to be gained by the reduction of the bonds, it should go to the city, or to the property-holders, who had paid for it. Some of the aldermen stood for the reduction of the bond, on the ground that it was excessive.

Mr. McDonnell injected a little spirit into the proceedings. He said the council had reduced the bond of Contractor Steele on the West Superior street pavement and, when he bid, he believed that similar treatment would be given him. He said Steele had beaten him in bidding for the West Superior street pavement and he didn't think it was fair to reduce the bond of one man and not another.

Alderman Wilson took the stand that the reduction of the bond, which was fixed by the city engineer, would be a bad precedent and would result in every contractor, who did work for the city, coming before the board and asking a reduction of the bond, regardless of its amount, on the grounds that it had been reduced for other contractors. He said that Mr. Steele was in financial straits, when his bond was reduced, and the same might be said for Mr. McDonnell in the same position. He advised against the reduction and Mr. McDonnell consented to withdraw his request. The report of the committee was also withdrawn.

Alderman Filitrault held that it was unjust to demand excessive bonds from the contractors, and on his motion, the city engineer was instructed to report to the council the amount of bond, which would fully protect the city on contracts, and still not be excessive.

The council last night took cognizance of the report of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, which visited Duluth last fall for the purpose of investigating fire protection conditions here, and the board of fire commissioners, board of public works and building inspector were instructed to take the recommendations of the board into consideration. The city clerk was instructed to furnish copies of the report to the board of public works, water and light commission and building inspector and the boards and officers were advised that in the opinion of the council, the recommendations contained in the report are for the betterment of conditions in the city.

By the resolution, they are requested to consider the report, in so far as it concerns their respective departments, and to report to the council in detail, on all items concerning their respective departments, it being the opinion of the council that such recommendations as can be complied with without material expense should be made at once and where material expense would be entailed, that such matters should be taken under consideration by the respective departments and the council.

In compliance with a resolution of the council last night, wires on Fourth street, Grand avenue and Ramsey street will be underground by June 15 of this year. On fourth street, between Sixth avenue west and Sixth avenue east, the companies must place the wires underground by June 1. On Grand avenue, between Fifty-fourth and Fifty-ninth avenues west, and on Ramsey street, between Forty-ninth avenue west and Central avenue, the wires must go into conduits by June 15 of this year. RRamsey street is already paved and Grand avenue and Fourth street will be paved during the coming summer.

In refusing the requisition of the board of fire commissioners for $212 for the rental of Chief Black's automobile during the summer of 1907, the council, in accepting the committee report, took a slap at the practice of city officials in purchasing supplies and then putting in requisitions for them. The committee reported that it advised against granting the requisition of the board of fire commissioners on the ground that it was illegal. It also called attention to the fact that no supplies can be purchased or otherwise contracted for until the requisitions for them have been passed by the council.

* * *

The smoke ordinance, changing the ordinance provisions for the emission of smoke from any consecutive five minute period, to any four minute period in any consecutive ten minute period, was passed on final reading.

* * *

The board of public works reported that it is out of the province of the board to take up the considering of the establishing by the city of a plant for the manufacture of concrete blocks.

"CLUMSY AS USUAL,"

Blurted Queen as King Edward Trod on Her Dress.

London, Jan. 28.—The incompatibility of temper which for a long time has been known to exist between King Edward and Queen Alexander, is beginning to demonstrate itself in public. There is less care being shown by the queen for the presence of a third party. If she is desirous of rating the king she is not deterred by the fact that they are surrounded by strangers and gossips, who are only too ready to add a first-hand anecdote of the king and queen to their reportoire of social slander.

Recently the king and queen paid a visit to Cardiff to open a new dock. As the royal equipage drew up before the entrance to the town hall, the lord mayor stepped forward, opening the door of the carriage containing the king and queen, offered his hand to her majesty to help her alight. The king rose, and, in attempting to follow his spouse, trod on the train of her heliotrope gown. Regardless of the presence of the lord mayor, the queen turned upon him with the contemptuous sneer:

"Clumsy, as usual," she grumbled, as she gathered her train together.

"D—n your dress," commented the king, shrugging his shoulders, as he gave the queen his hand and escorted her in the town hall to luncheon.

OUIDA FOLLOWED TO GRAVE BY HER DOGS.

Florence, Jan. 28.—The funeral of Ouida yesterday was a most pitiful epilougue to her pitiful end. She died amid squalor and poverty, and her body was followed to the grave only by a dozen dogs she had starved herself to feed, and her faithful maid, to whom she left har last manuscripts.

People of Duluth who suffer with sick kidneys and bad attacks want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by cures in Duluth. Here's Duluth testimony:

Mrs. Letitie Cole, of 467 Mesaba avenue, Duluth, Minn., says: "I am pleased to repeat what I have said again and again recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. Five or six years ago, when suffering from disorders of the kidneys, which had become aggravated by over exertion and severe colds, I looked about in vain for a long time for relief, trying many different remedies which were recommended to me, but not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills did I find the long-sought-for benefit. The first dose or two helped me and I continued taking them until the heavy aching through my back and kidneys was gone, and the kidney secretions had become natural. Doan's Kidney Pills improved my health in every way, and the results have been permanent."

THE LEAVES WERE BONDS

And the Duke's Books Represented Fortune of 300,000,000 Francs.

Startling Story Revealed by the Claimant to an Estate.

Vienna, Jan. 28.—Princess Beatrice of Saxe-Coburg, who is engaged to marry Prince Alphonse of Bourbon, the son of Prince Antoine and the Infanta Eulalie, is threatened with a complication that may shear her future husband of one of his titles and much of his fortune. The prince's father is also Duke of Galliera, but a special from Trieste says that a claimant for the title of duke of Galliera has appeared in the person of the grandson of the first duke. The claimant says he is prepared to fight for his title, and at the same time he will sue the Bourbons for 20,000,000 francs. lent by his grandmother, the first duchess, to the present duke's father, the late Duke Anton de Montpensier.

The present duke of Galliera does not deny the financial transaction, but maintains that the alleged loan was an unconditional gift by the duchess to his father, who died ten years ago. The title, he says, was conferred upon him by the king of Italy in 1885, and according to royal diploma will be inherited by his eldest son, the fiance of Princess Beatrice.

"The duke handed my grandmother a bunch of golden keys, numbered like the volumes, saying to her, 'Will you please take down Volume No. 120? I want to become acquainted with my books.'

"The duchess opened the book. The fly leaf proved to be a thousand francs bond, paying 5 per cent interest. And so were the 999 other leaves of the book. The volume she held in her hand represented a million francs.

One Million Francs.

"And every one of the 300 odd volumes on the shelves contained bonds to the amount of 1,000,000 francs.

"The duchess, my grandmother, though, of course, aware that the duke was an extremely rich man, was dumfounded by the immensity of the treasure, which was placed at her unconditional disposal by the duke's death, which occurred shortly after the event described.

"My grandmother had always been noted for her charities, and thus suddenly made absolute mistress of the world's greatest cash fortune, the pleasure of giving became a mania with her."

To this the claimant makes answer as follows:

"The first duke of Gallera was my grandfather, the great Italian financier, Ferrari, who built and acquired an immense fortune by building the railway between Paris, Lyons and the Mediterranean. Pius IX, created Ferrari Duke of Gallera. My grandmother was a noblewoman in her own right, a marquise, member of one of the oldest aristocratic families of Italy.

"Shortly before my grandfather died he invited his wife to enter his library, a room she had never before entered. It proved to be a vault-like apartment, secured by immense fireproof doors. Upon shelves along the steel walls there stood some 300 volumes, all bound in black velvet, with locks of gold.

"For schools, hospitals, old people's homes, asylums, etc., she gave away millions within a few months after the duke's death. She gave indiscriminatly to all who appealed to her, never allowing the slightest inquiry to be made regarding a beneficiary's character.

"Among her grandest gifts was one of 25,000,000 francs for finishing the port of Genoa, on which her late husband had already spent 30,000,000 francs.

"When Leo XIII, celebrated his fiftieth jubilee as a priest, she brought him, in a gold strong box, 1,000,000 francs in new gold pieces. In short, she gave away 150 volumes of her library, which means 150,000,000 francs, in the course of a few years.

"The duke of Gallera left two sons, the elder of whom died quite young, and I am the son of the younger, and only heir.

Cared Not for Riches.

"My father, the younger son, was a a simple man, caring nothing for riches and despising titles. He refused to take the name of duke of Gallera when he became of age, and called himself plain Emilio Ferrari. As a student he lived in a furnished room in the Paris Quartier Latin, and insisted upon making his own living by literary labors and by giving lessons, and not, until shortly before her death could his mother, the duchess, persuade him to accept an annuity of 100,000 francs, a mere bagatelle.

"Afterward he gave up his Italian citizenship and emigrated to Austria, where I was born.

"The duches of Gallera died in 1888, aged 73. As she felt death approaching she asked that her cot be carried into the "library," and there, gazing at the now sadly depleted book shelves, she breathed her last, a wooden crucifix in her hand and the injunction on her lips that all the remaining books be turned over to the poor, as indeed, her last testament provided.

"Thus the poor and charitable institutions got the rest of my grandfather's immense fortune, and nothing remains to me but the slender pension of 100,000 francs per year, which descended from my father, and the claim to 20,000,000 francs, which my grandmother lent to the duke of Montpensier, the late father of the Bourbon prince, who assumed my title of duke of Gallerla.

"The loan was made early in 1870, and I claim principle and interest as the sole surviving heir of Ferrari, the Italian financier, created duke of Gallera by Pope Pius IX."

PRETTY GIRL

Supplies Epidermis for Possibly Fatal Wound of Her Father.

Lorain, Ohio, Jan. 28.—Pretty Jessie McGuire, aged 17 years, displayed her parental love a few days ago by submitting to an operation that may save her father's life. Last July her father John McGuire was badly burned and efforts to graft skin taken from another part of his body failed and it was necessary to graft another person's skin upon the wound. The young lady volunteered to part with the skin necessary and she was put upon the operating table and enough skin to cover the palm of a hand was removed from her thigh and grafted upon her father's wounds.

FINLAND MAY BE ANNEXED

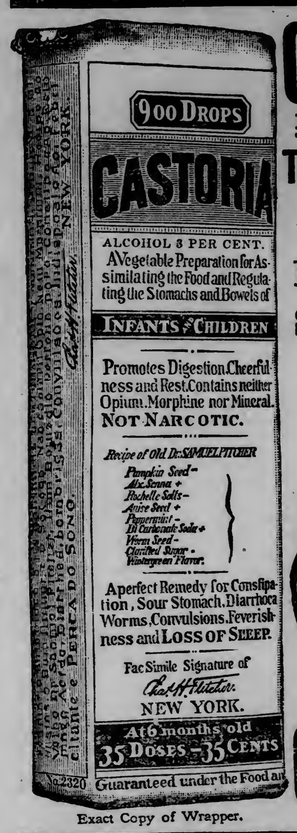

To Russia If Plans of Emperor Are Carried Out.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 28.—A startling report is current both in St. Petersburg and in Helsingfors that the emperor had decided upon the partition of Finland, annexing to Russia the district of Viborg, which formerly was a part of the empire, and sending an army corps to the grand duchy of Finland to overawe any protest. The plan according to the report would involve the retirement of Nicholas N. Gerhardt, the governor-general of Finland, and the appointment of Gen. Von Boeckman, the former aide of Count Bobrikoff, the governor general of Finland, who was assassinated in 1906. This report is strengthened b ythe publication in the Novoe Vremya of an article defending such a step as being in the best interests of Russia.

Inquiry however, in well informed circles, both Russian and Finnish fail to show that such a decision has been made or is contemplated by the emperor although the project is strongly advocated by the party opposed to Finland.

CASHIER ENDS LIFE.

Appleton, Wis., Jan. 28.—A. L. Sloss, cashier of the First National bank of Appleton, committed suicide by blowing out his brains with a shot gun. No reason is known for his act, but it is believed that he became demented, not being strong enough to bear the strain of the amount of business he was carrying on. He was interested in several banks, including one at Wasega, Springfield, Ivanhee, Arlington and Elkton, S. D.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES SHOW A BIG INCREASE

Year Marked by Epidemic of Smallpox and Diphtheria.

Other Interesting Statistics From the Health Department Report.

	1907.	1906.
Total births	1,684	1,517
Total deaths	1,021	1,011
Death rate	7.22	7.49
Scarlet fever cases	118	51
Diphtheria cases	661	217
Smallpox cases	187	22
Deaths of scarlet fever	9	1
Deaths of diphtheria	40	19
Deaths of smallpox	0	0

The prevalence of contagious diseases is the most notable feature of the report of the health department of the city of Duluth, which was completed today, for presentation to the council. The number of diphtheria cases jumped from 217 in 1906 to 661 in 1907; smallpox showed an increase from 22 cases in 1906 to 187 cases in 1907, and scarlet fever, of which there were but 51 cases in 1906, afflicted 118 in the year just closed.

In his summing up of the year's work, Dr. Murray calls attention to the epidemic of contagious diseases, for epidemic it may be called, and cites some of its causes. In the spring, when the lumber camps broke up, men who had been afflicted with diphtheria during the late winter and early spring, drifted into Duluth and spread the disease. Some of them were picked up on the street in serious condition, others were just recovering when they arrived in the city, but still their condition was such as to spread the disease. Still others had only been exposed and were just showing the symptoms of the disease when they arrived in the city.

The epidemic of diphtheria took something of an alarming form in June, when there were eighty-two cases reported to the health department. During the next few months, the number of cases reported was lower, but still higher than normal. In the latter months of the year cold weather increased the number of cases, and the high mark of the year was reached in November when ninety-four cases were reported. December was little better with ninety. The number of deaths of diphtheria patients increased from nineteen in 1906 to forty in 1907, sixteen of those dying being under 5 years of age.

Hospital Needed.

In reviewing the epidemic, the health commissioner takes the opportunity to call attention to the need of a detention hospital for diphtheria patients. He points out that at the present time the annex to St. Mary's hospital, which can accommodate but nine patients, is absolutely the only public place for the treatment of diphtheria patients. Many times during the year, patients discovered in boarding houses had to be quarantined in their rooms and the remainder of the boarders allowed to go and come. They could not be all locked up, and there was no public place to accommodate the patients.

The sum of $15,000 will soon be available for a contagious disease hospital, and the error which prevented the submitting of the charter amendments at the coming election also held up the amendment which was designed to furnish a site for the hospital. The council is urgently requested to do everything possible to secure a site immediately, that the erection of the hospital may go on as soon as the funds are available.

Although there was a marked increase in the number of smallpox cases, the situation as far as that disease is concerned was not entirely unsatisfactory. There were no deaths for the past two years, and the cases during the year 1907 were all of a mild form. Of the number afflicted, 125 had never been vaccinated, and the other sixty-two had been vaccinated in infancy. Consequently, there were no cases of adults who had recently been vaccinated.

The increase in the number of cases and the number of deaths of scarlet fever is a natural condition, no accounting for which can be given. Quarantine measures were employed in dealing with the disease, and at the present time there are only a few cases in the city, and they of mild form. The following table gives the contagious disease conditions in the city by months for the year:

	Diphtheria. No. Quar.	Rec'd Hos.	Cases.	Deaths.

Death Rate Lower.

Another small decrease in the death rate is the satisfactory report this year. In 1906, the rate decreased from 7.74 to 7.49. This year, it goes down to 7.22, which on an estimated population of 77,500 is an excellent showing and upholds well Duluth's reputation as a healthful city.

As is usually the case, pneumonia is the principal cause of death, with 111, and tuberculosis a close second, with 101. In 1906, there were 112 deaths from pneumonia and 96 from tuberculosis. Typhoid caused 26 deaths last year, against 29 the year previous, and cancer 36, against 42 in 1906. Other principal causes of death were: Abscess, 4; accident, 71; alcoholism, 9; anemia, 10; apoplexy, 15; appendicitis, 10; bronchitis, 13; convulsions, 15; heart disease, 61; hemorrhage, 10; meningitis, 52; nephritis, 33; peritonitis, 18; senility, 27.

There were 290 deaths under one year of age and 21 over 80 years of age. Other ages were between 1 and 5 years, 94; between 5 and 10 years, 22; between 10 and 20 years, 71; between 20 and 40 years, 275; between 40 and 60 years, 185; between 60 and 80 years, 83.

There were 598 deaths of males and 363 deaths of females. The single people numbered 579, married 242, widowed 84, and divorced 11. The social conditions of 45 were unknown.

October was the heaviest month, with 98 deaths, and April the lowest with 62. The deaths by months were: January, 73; February, 66; March, 79; April, 62; May, 92; June, 81; July, 76; August, 95; September, 85; October, 98; November, 73; December, 78. There were 294 deaths of people born in Duluth, 261 native born Americans, 374 foreign born, and 36 unknown.

The interment in the cemeteries was distributed as follows: Park Hill, 191; Forest Hill, 181; Calvary, 131; Oneota, 102; Greenwood, 102; Union, 22; Polish, 41; Lutheran, 33; London Road, 7; Jewish, 16; Scholastica, 1; Scandia, 13; shipped, 171. There were 201 people brought into the city hospitals from outside and died here and 65 bodies were shipped into the city from other points.

There were 1,684 births in the city, of which 901 were males and 783 females. The births by months follow: January, 124; February, 138; March, 146; April, 146; May, 124; June, 132; July, 127; August, 139; September, 153; October, 162; November, 130; December, 163.

Brewery Creek.

The report shows satisfactory conditions in the bacteriological laboratory and sanitary inspection departments. The insanitary condition of Brewery creek is mentioned and a strong recommendation made that it be covered immediately. Twelve houses, forty-nine flats and St. Luke's hospital empty their sewage into the creek and the need of a covering for it is deemed just as urgent as for any other sewer in the city. Regular inspections of meat markets, wholesale and commission houses, stables and cattle in regular herds and in railroad yards were made. It is estimated that there are 1,541 cows in the regular dairy herds of the city and 750 owned by private families.

The estimates of the department show that there were 2,270,065 gallons of milk consumed in the city during the year, or 6,221 gallons per day; 255,500 gallons of cream, or 700 per day, and 25,500 gallons of buttermilk, or 70 gallons per day. Of the milk, 515,190 gallons are shipped into the city and 115,300 gallons of cream.

The Garbage System.

The need of a system for the collection of garbage is briefly mentioned and regret expressed that the charter amendment designed to provide such a system had to go over.

CEDAR ISLAND LAKE CASES

The Cedar Island lake land cases, involving the ownership of certain lands in the vicinity of Cedar Island lake, in the iron range district, which are considered very valuable because of ore deposits, and which have been in litigation for the past fifteen years, came up for a hearing in federal court, before Judge Page Morris, today.

C. E. Bailey was the only witness called by the plaintiffs. He testified as to the surveys of the tract, upon the legality of which the ownership will depend. A mass of documentary evidence also was introduced, and with this and Mr. Dailey's testimony the plaintiffs rested their case. At the afternoon session B. F. Bishop was called as the first witness for the defense. He testified as to his knowledge of the lands involved, and said he had first cruised over them as early as 1880.

There are two cases, one brought by W. H. Murphy and others against Malinda Tanner and Michael Cronin, and the other brought by W. H. Murphy and others against William H. Shea, Mary H. Shea and E. L. Raab. The same points are involved in each case, and both are being heard at the same time. There is a formidable array of legal talent lined up on both sides.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS.
"AZO OINTMENT is guaranteed to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days or money refunded. 50c

CITY HALL WART NOW

Assessor Asks More Vault Room for His Office Records.

The wart system, which has sent the county building rambling all over the hillside, may also be applied to the city hall, if the suggestion of City Assessor W. L. Jackson is adopted. The city hall hasn't much room to spread, as it is already flush with the building line on three streets. But the assessor would have the space between the city hall and the police station utilized, and he suggests that the council take such action in the building of a vault for his department.

In his annual report, Mr. Jackson says that on account of the inadequate facilities, hundreds of dollars' worth of valuable records cannot be placed in vaults. Their value is increasing each year, and if a fire should destroy them, they could not be replaced for any amount of trouble and expense. He urges the building of the vault immediately, that the records may not be left in danger of destruction any longer than is absolutely necessary.

The annual report of the assessor shows that the tax rate of 36.30 for state, county school and city taxes, in the aggregate, is the largest in the years since 1900, the rates for which he gives in detail. The rate of 3.48 for state taxes is against 2.78 in 1906; the county tax rate is lowered from 3.22 to 1.83, and the school tax increased from 10.12 to 14.53. The city tax was increased from 14.73, in 1906, to 16.47, in 1907.

The report shows an increased valuation of $38,261,532, divided into $29,635,608 for real estate, and $8,574,924 for personal property. In 1906, the valuation was $36,576,056, the real estate valuation being $28,600,931, and personal property valuation, $7,969,125.

Work Stopped on Addition.
The cold weather of yesterday and today has caused the work on the addition to the old courthouse to be knocked off by A. Johnson, the contractor. Last week the weather was so mild that the contractor was able to make the excavation and push the work on the foundations almost to a finish before the cold spell ensued. Today the weather has been too cold to attempt any stone work, as the mortar would freeze before it could be handled to place.

Power Wire Was Broken.
A break in one of the main lines carrying the current of electricity from the Great Northern Power company's house to the sub-station, caused the power to be shut off a few minutes this noon until the "load" could be shifted over to one of the other machines. The company has a duplicate system to provide against such accidents, and the delay did not last very long. During the time the power was off the street cars were not operating, the fact being all the more noticeable by reason of the fact that the break happened just at the noon hour.

WHEAT HAS FIRM TONE

Market Closes at Higher Prices on This Side.

Flax is Off Half a Point in the Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 28.—American markets were firm during most of the session and at the close today. Covering by shorts cut quite a figure in the day's bulge.

At the opening the market was rather quiet, but trading gained in volume after the first hour. There was little news, and some of it was bearish, but the market was not sent off by it. The world's visible supply of wheat showed a good increase.

Liverpool closed unchanged to ½d lower, Budapest ¾ lower and Paris unchanged to 1¼c lower.

The May option closed ½c higher in Duluth, ⅝c higher in Chicago and New York, ⅜-⅝c up in Minneapolis and ⅝c higher in Winnipeg. The July option closed ½c higher in Duluth, a shade up in Chicago, ⅝-⅝c higher in Minneapolis, ⅜c higher in New York, and ⅞ higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ⅜c lower in Chicago and ⅛d to ¼d higher in Liverpool. May oats closed unchanged in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat was quiet at the opening and values were ¼d higher, followed by a firmer market and a further gain of ¼d. Offerings were light and support better, stimulated by the firmer American cables yesterday, and a bullish private report cabled by the Ogilville Flour Mills company of Montreal. Shorts were nervous and covered some. During the morning there was reaction on the more liberal offerings of La Plata wheat, but again at midday the market was steady due to a fair demand for spot. The market at this time was steady and ¼d higher than Monday.

"Corn was quiet at the start and ¼d higher. The nearby month held unchanged while the distant month gained an additional ¼d. Buying was the result of the snow's report yesterday and the fact that Argentine claims damage to the crop from the recent drought."

Car receipts at Duluth were 121 against 42 last year, and at Minneapolis 167 against 199 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 288 against 238 last year. Chicago received 63 against 16 last year. Winnipeg received 223 against 95 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 462,000 bus. last year 311,000 bus. Shipments, 332,000 bus., last year 138,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 185,000 bus.

Bradstreets report an increase of 1,542,000 bus. in the world's visible supply of wheat. In the United States and Canada. There was a decrease of 238,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 1,008,000 bus., last year 1,215,000 bus. Shipments 929,000 bus., last year 523,000 bus.

The world's visible supply of corn increased 1,158,000 bus.

Wheat trading was rather light during the session in the Duluth market. May wheat opened ⅜c higher at $1.00 bid, went off to $1.00½, reacted to $1.00½ and closed at $1.00⅝, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. July wheat advanced from $1.00¼ to $1.00⅝ and closed at that price, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday.

Durum wheat closed ½c higher and cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was easier and trading quiet. May flax opened unchanged at $1.10½, declined to $1.08¾, rallied to $1.09¾ and closed at $1.09, a loss of ½c from yesterday. July flax closed at $1.22, a loss of ½c from yesterday.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Firm on Good Buying By Commission Houses and Shorts.

Chicago, Jan. 27. — The wheat market opened firm, today, with good buying by commission houses and shorts. The Liverpool market was firm and receipts in the Northwest were below those of last week. May wheat opened unchanged to ⅛c higher, at $1.00¾ to $1.00⅞ and sold at $1.01¼. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 361 cars against 568 cars last week and 154 cars one year ago.

Sentiment continue bullish all day chiefly because of a falling off in receipts at Kansas City. May selling up to $1.02. The close was strong with May up ¾c at $1.01⅛.

The corn market was firm chiefly in sympathy with wheat. May corn opened unchanged to ⅛c higher, at 61¾c to 61⅝c and sold at 61⅜@61½c. Local receipts were 384 cars with 2 of contract grade.

Prices held firm until a short time before the close when they weakened on realizing sales. The close was easy with May ¼c lower at 61c.

The oats market was dull and steady. May oats opened ⅛c higher at 53⅜c and sold at 53⅜c. Local receipts were 272 cars.

Provisions were active and prices were easy because of a 5c decline in the price of live hogs. May pork opened 2½c lower, at $13.02½, lard was 5c lower at $7.95; ribs were 2½c to 2½@5c lower at $6.92½ to $6.92½@6.95.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Holds Strong Owing to Lighter Local Receipts.

Minneapolis, Jan. 28.—Wheat was strong. For the first day in a long time receipts here fell under a year ago, 167 cars against 196. Meanwhile Duluth picked up, with 121 against 42. This made the local trade think that the movement this way has turned lighter permanently. Local elevator stocks increased 175,000 bushels for three days. Minneapolis, May opened at $1.00½, touched $1.08¾@1.08⅞ for low, $1.10 for high, and closed firm at $1.09½. July closed at $1.09⅝.

Cash demand is good. No. 1 northern, 1@1½c over, considerable at 1½c, and No. 2 northern ½c under, No. 2 being relatively firmer today than No. 1. Close: No. 1 northern closed at $1.10½@1.10¾, spot, and $1.10¾ to arrive; No. 2 northern at $1.08¾ spot or to arrive; No. 3 wheat, $1.03¾@1.06¾.

The flour trade was stimulated by the strength in wheat and more domestic orders were entered. There was no export business reported today.

Shipments, 43,327 barrels. First patents, $5.50@5.60; second patents, $5.25@5.50; first clears, $4.30@4.40; second clears, $3.50@3.60.

Corn was firmer and recovered yesterday's decline. No. 3 yellow closed at 55¼@56½c.

Barley was sick. Buyers were doing nothing. Prices were 1c off for the best and 2c to 3c lower for medium to poor stuff, some of which was carried over to unsold. Range, 77@86c. Flax was firmer and sold readily at 2@2½c under Duluth May. Bran in bulk, unchanged, $20.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat acted well today, showing ¾c net gain for May at the close with July price only a shade better than yesterday. The buying of May and selling of July is undoing some spreads by local traders acted for the difference between the two months. Leaders in the Canadian Northwest grain trade are giving out very bullish advices about reserves of milling wheat. Of course this is offset by the bearish messages which come constantly regarding Argentine supplies. The market showed a fair gain during the morning and local brokers thinking this was all there was to the market took the selling side and got short again. Late in the session the cash wheat news was bullish. Kansas City reported good demand about 1c advance.

As the market hardened late in the session the early short sellers switched to the buying side, and this forced the May price to $1.02. Very little wheat could be sold around that figure, and the close was around $1.01½. Receipts showed a decided falling off at Minneapolis and Kansas City today. If this sort of decrease in movement becomes general, it may sustain the market around this level, otherwise selling pressure is likely to force a reaction.

Corn—The weather map this morning was less favorable, but later the forecast for tomorrow was for a cold wave over much of the corn belt. This more than anything else took the edge off the market. Early buying of corn was on a good scale by strong people.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The local coppers again acted well under the lead of Old Dominion and Utah Consolidated. North Butte has been lagging behind lately and is about due for a further advance. Isle Royale, Arizona-Commercial, Shannon, Old Dominion, Centennial, Copper Range, North Butte, Butte Coalition, Greene-Cananea and Utah should all be bought. I firmly believe good news will come out on the coppers, and Amalgamated will lead a sharp advance of ten points. I don't think there is any risk in buying the good coppers at these prices.

Boston to Martin Rosendahl: Coppers opened strong, with activity in Utah Consolidated, Old Dominion, Greene-Cananea, Boston Consolidated, Arizona Commercial and Isle Royale. Our market has broadened out in the last two days, and we think that there has been quite a little profit taking going on, which may result in a reaction. The metal market is stronger, with sales of Electroycite reported at 14⅛ cents.

Butte to Gay & Sturgis: It is believed here that there is something important pending in copper affairs. Many of the Western mine officials of the Amalgamated company have been called to New York on hury telegrams.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Jan. 28.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 5 points on January, but generally 5 to 7 points lower, under local bear pressure and liquidation. During the middle of the session the prices were steady and about 3 to 4 points net highed.

Cotton, spot, closed steady, 10 points lower; middling uplands, 11.15; middling gulf, 11.90; sales, 410 bales. Futures closed steady. Closing bids: January, 10.81; February ,10.82 March, 10.92; April, 10.93; May, 10.98; June, 10.93; July, 10.85; August, 10.65; October, 10.22.

Phillips, who is a young man, was apprehended by the aid of a saloonkeeper, to whom he sold the pictures for $10. They are worth $1,000.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

But Some of the Principal Early Gains Were Wiped Out.

Prices Slowly Receded Owing to the Slackness of Demand.

New York, Jan. 28.—Prices of stocks started upwards with the opening of business today. The volume of transactions was light and gains were generally small. Delaware & Hudson and United States Pipe preferred rose 1 and Reading, Northern Pacific and American Smelting large fractions.

Profit-taking sales made small impression on the market aside from Reading and Northern Pacific, which were held back occasionally when the offerings became too large. There was quite a substantial demand for the well-known stocks, especially Brooklyn Transit and St. Paul, Delaware & Hudson improved 2¾, St. Paul 2, Reading 1⅜, Amalgamated Copper and American Sugar 1⅜, Union Pacific 1¼ and Northern Pacific, United States Steel preferred and American Smelting 1; Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha yielded 2.

Cleveland, C., C. & St. Louis, after rising 2 points, relapsed 10 on the reduction of the semi-annual dividend from 2 to 1 per cent. The rise in the general list was halted, but was afterwards resumed. New York, Chicago & St. Louis second preferred rose 5 points on the increase in its annual dividend from 4 to 5 per cent. Reading's advance reached 2⅜, American Smelting 2, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie 1¾, Pennsylvania and Virginia Iron 1½ and New York Central, Great Northern preferred, the Ore Certificates and Anaconda, American Car and Distillers' Securities 1. American Linseed declined 1⅜. Prices reacted a fraction before noon. Bonds were strong.

The stock market grew more reactionary in the afternoon and much of the day's gains were lost. The recessions averaged about a point for the principal stocks. Canadian Pacific extended its loss 2 points.

The market closed firm and dull. The demand was not sufficient to hold prices, and they slowly receded, wiping out some of the principal gains. There were some late rallies from the reaction, when Reading was marked up again to the top level.

Stock Gossip.

New York—Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co: Hesitancy characterized the trading market today. The opening was higher influenced by the strength of the London market, but shortly the list became irregular, caused by the sharp break in Big 4. The dividend was reduced to 1 per cent semi-annually. The publication of the statement of the United States Steel corporation earnings for the last quarter was waited for with interest and acted as a restraining factor. The report was published just previous to the close and indicated earnings close to $32,000,000, which was slightly better than expected and the list rallied sharply denoting that the report was greatly discounted. Reports are coming from all quarters as to continued attacks and legislation against corporations and the uncertainty of the political situation holds speculation in check.

This is considerably larger than was expected to be shown by followers of the market. The annual meeting of the Steel corporation is in progress in New York today.

COTTON LEAVES FOR WASHINGTON

Takes With Him Plans for St. Louis River Bridge.

Joseph B. Cotton left last evening for Washington, D. C., with plans for the bridge which the United States Steel corporation intends building across the St. Louis river, connecting Minnesota and Wisconsin at the site of the Spirit Lake steel plant.

The plans which Mr. Cotton will submit to the war department for approval, provide for a structure that will be large enough for two railroad tracks, street car tracks and two divisions for teams and pedestrians. The bridge will be an expensive affair. It is expected that it will be at the site of the old Great Northern belt line bridge, just this side of New Duluth.

BAD GANG IS BROKEN UP

In Charles Akin, John McDougal, Chris Thorpe and James Walker the police believe they rounded up a gang of young toughs, who had started on a career which would eventually land them in the penitentiary. All four were in municipal court this morning, Akin, Thorpe and McDougal on petit larceny charges and Walker on a vagrancy charge.

Walker was arrested last Friday morning and the other three Friday night in a room in the Central hotel on Lake avenue south. McDougal and Akin were charged with stealing two sacks of flour from a room in the Metropolitan block and Thorpe and McDougal with entering a boat owned by Capt. Eli Jaques at the foot of Fourteenth avenue west, and carrying off a hammer, some gloves and a few other tools. All of the goods were found in the room in which the boys were arrested.

All were convicted of the charges against them, but Judge Windom was reluctant to give a jail sentence. He said he thought that the boys would do better if there was no stigma of a jail sentence on them. All agreed to leave town by tonight and stay away for a year, and they were released under suspended sentences. McDougal is the only one of the crowd whose family lives in the city.

THE ORE DOCKS ARE INSPECTED

The ore dock, railroad and steamship agents now inspecting dock and mining properties in the Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan districts, as guests of the Oliver Mining company, this morning made a trip to Two Harbors and viewed the dock properties of the Iron Range road located there.

Returning to Duluth on the noon train, the private cars which are carrying the party, immediately were made up into a special and hauled to Superior, where the Allouez docks of the Great Northern road are being inspected this afternoon. Following this, the party will proceed to Ashland, Wis., arriving there this evening, and starting tomorrow for the Michigan districts. The principal stops, after leaving Ashland, will be made at Escanaba and Marquette.

At the meeting yesterday afternoon methods of handling iron ore were discussed in detail. The meeting was held in the office of the Pittsburg Steamship company. John H. McLean, assistant general superintendent of the Oliver company, has general charge of the party. The general object of the inspection and conference is greater economy and better dispatch in handling. A dinner was given the guests last evening at the Commercial club.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS

The Seventh Day Adventists, of which there is quite a little congregation in the city, took out a permit this morning for the erection of a frame church on East Sixth street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues east. The church will cost $1,000 and will be adequate for the needs of the congregation for several years to come. Work will be begun soon and the building will be ready for occupancy some time next spring.

"ROSEATE STATEMENT"

Of Tawney, Concerning Estimated Revenues, Attacked by Fitzgerald.

Washington, Jan. 28.—When consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill was resumed in the house of representatives today Mr. Fitzgerald, New York, attacked what he said was Chairman Tawney's "roseate statement" regarding the estimated revenues for the fiscal year. The people, Mr. Fitzgerald said, would not get as much comfort out of it as Mr. Tawney and his associates had anticipated. He argued that at the present time there was an apparent deficit of $85,000,000 and inquired what prospect there was that conditions would improve. The industrial conditions were not improving, he declared, because great numbers of men were being laid off from work. If the "Roosevelt policies" are continued and there is tariff revision after the election he asked how the problem was to be worked out. A reduced tariff meant less revenue, and taking the logic of Mr. Tawney that the country faced a deficit of $100,000,000 he inquired "what new forms of taxation will the Republicans propose, what additional burden will be imposed in order to meet the growing expenditures of the country?"

BIRDS ARE ON REVIEW

Twelfth Annual Poultry Show Opens in Odd Fellows' Building.

Five Hundred Birds Are Presented, Looking Their Best.

Some 500 Northwestern chickens, not the baser butcher shop element, but the real featherleg aristocracy, are participating in a grand saengerfest in Odd Fellows' temple on Lake avenue this week.

All of which means that the twelfth annual exhibition of the Duluth Poultry association has opened and visitors may view the birds every day, from early in the morning until 10 and 11 o'clock at night, until Saturday.

Although this is the first day of the show, most of the entries are in place and they present a fine appearance, in uniform coops and pens.

Two states are represented in the entries. The birds come from St. Paul, Crookston, Sandstone, Two Harbors, Eveleth, Rice Lake, Wis., Superior, Lake Nebagmon, Wis., and Duluth.

The watch word of the exhibition seems to be: "It is to cackle." Every variety of bird is on the job, from the rare Holland breeds to the most ordinary common or garden variety of fowl. And apart, in a coop of their own are J. W. Nelson's wild mallard ducks. They are dandies, but somewhat unused to society. Secretary Greenfield was nearly put to the necessity of setting out decoys before the ducks would consent to be interviewed. Their exclusiveness is expected to wear off before the show is over. No doubt, they will become brazen enough to start selling their own photographs, after the manner of the snake charmer at the circus sideshow, before Saturday night.

Another interesting coop is that containing David Spence's Lakenvelders, which are very rare. This is a Holland breed and is rarely seen in this country. Mr. Spence's specimens are remarkably fine ones and will pobably attract a good deal of attention while the show is on.

Two cages of pigeons are not the least important of the exhibits either. The collection embraces a number of varieties.

All the standard and fancy breeds are well represented. The white Wyandottes look whiter than any others you have seen around, and the game cocks have a scrappier look than is common. There are some fine specimens of them at the show. Two of them got together this morning and offered a little diversion to those present, until the floorwalker came up and separated the pair.

It looked for a time also, as if a nifty Wyandotte was going to sail into another one. An alarm was sent in and caretakers rushed to the scene of the projected fight. The occasion was the interpolation of an offensive chicken in a coop where there were hanging no welcome signs. The insertion of a partition in the coop soon put an end to strife.

The scoring of the birds began late this afternoon. George D. Holden of Owatonna, Minn., former president of the American Poultry Fanciers' association, is the judge. He is considered one of the best judges of poultry in the country. His work will probably take him two days. By tomorrow afternoon, most of the ribbons will have been placed on the coops. About $700 will be given out in prizes.

Members of the Duluth Poultry association expect this to be the best show they have ever held. The entries are numerous and the quality of the birds excellent.

H. A. Nelson is superintendent of the show, and those in general charge are Secretary J. B. Greenfield and the executive committee, comprising Theodore Hollister, H. A. Nelson, R. R. Forward, Fred Myers and L. A. Larson.

BRAVADO IS EXPENSIVE

Weapon Flashed in Saloon Row for Effect Only.

Owner is Fined for Act—Other West Duluth News.

Pulling a gun on his fellow countrymen in John Doyle's saloon, last night, proved a rather expensive piece of bravado for Wuy Sviler.

A row started in Doyle's saloon last night, in West Duluth, between several Austrians, and Sviler, for dramatic effect alone, for he claims he did not intend to use the weapon, drew a revolver from his pocket.

This act cost him $5 in the municipal court this morning. He was fined for carrying a concealed weapon.

CURLERS BUSY AGAIN.

Recover From Effects of Bonspiel and Play for Trophies.

Those members of the Western Curling club who played in the bonspiel have made up all their lost sleep; have straightened the kinks out of their backs, and have fully recovered from their strenuous four days at the Duluth rink and are now back at the game on their home ice.

Last night all three rinks at the West Duluth club were working. The rink skipped by Louis Silger defeated Henry Hewitt's by the score of 15 to 4; K. A. McDonald skipped a 13 to 2 game in his favor against Frank Ashley, and Walter Everld's rink was defeated by Emil Zauft's by the score of 8 to 6.

The ice was in fine condition, and there was a large crowd of skaters at the rink.

Recovering From Injuries.

Martin Willesen, the engineer for the Duluth Street Railway company, injured yesterday, is reported as doing nicely, and will be moved from the St. Luke's hospital to his home, 617 North Fifty-seventh avenue west as soon as the injured foot is less painful.

Mr. Willesen was on a scaffolding in the engine room of the street railway company's power house, when the scaffolding collapsed beneath him and Antonio Borozzual, fireman, letting them fall several feet to the cement floor below. Several of the large bones were broken in Mr. Willesen's right foot, but aside from that he received no other injury, except a bad shaking up.

EMPLOYES GET GOOD DIVIDENDS

Holders of Oliver Iron Mining Company Stock Well Pleased.

The recent dividend declared by the Oliver Iron Mining company has benefitted a great many of the company's employes in Duluth and on the ranges. The benefit accrues to those holding preferred stock on the profit-sharing plan, the dividend being 65.4 per cent and is paid from the fund accumulated from the sale of stock by the employes.

Under the arrangement those who hold the stock are given total dividends of 125 per cent in five years, or 42 per cent more than the purchase price of the shares, which was $82.50.

It is said that there are something over 200 holders of the stock of the mining company in this district, but not all of them have owned stock five years.

The Pure Food Law.

Secretary Wilson says: "One of the objects of the law is to inform the consumer of the presence of certain harmful drugs in medicines." The law requires that the amount of chloroform, opium, morphine, and other habit forming drugs be stated on the label of each bottle. The manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy have always claimed that their remedy did not contain any of these drugs, and the truth of this claim is now fully proven, as no mention of them is on the label. This remedy is not only one of the safest, but one of the best in use for coughs and colds. Its value has been proven beyond question during the many years it has been in general use. For sale by all druggists.

SUPERIOR NEWS

MURDERED FOR HIS MONEY.

Police Have a Slight Clue in Superior Case.

The discovery that Esmond, the man whose remains were found in a deserted shack in Old Superior yesterday, was murdered for $167.25 that he drew out of the bank, Dec. 31, has caused the finger of suspicion to be directed toward two strangers who accompanied him to the bank on the day in question.

So far as can be learned Dec. 31, was the last day that the murdered man was seen alive. He was unable to write and is supposed to have taken the two men to the bank to identify him, so he could get his check cashed. No special attention was paid to the companions more than to note they were dressed as working men.

The bank officials scout the idea that somebody impersonated Esmond and drew the money out of the bank.

The idea has been advanced that Esmond was induced to draw his money under the promise of being furnished employment elsewhere and that he was surprised and murdered the evening of the day he secured his money from the bank. People who knew the murdered man claim that he was not addicted to the use of liquor.

The body is in a frozen condition and will be held by the coroner for a few days longer in the hope that the mystery may be cleared up before the inquest.

Fur Thieves Sentenced.

Abe Bloom, Maxey Martin and Charles Jeffery, the men who pleaded guilty to the robbery of Lindstrom's fur store last December, were yesterday sentenced to a term of one year each in the state reformatory, one by Judge Vinje and the other two by Judge Smith.

The three men stole furs valued at $2,500 in the aggregate. They were apprehended two weeks after the theft. Jeffery, who was arrested first, gave the police the information that led to the arrest of his companions.

Sent to Reformatory.

Rod McNaughton, aged 29 years, was sentenced to the state reformatory for a term of one year by Judge Smith yesterday for breaking into and robbing a saloon of $25 a few days ago. The young man formerly acted as "booster" for the gambling house, but after these were closed he went to tending bar. McNaughton was put through the "sweatbox" three times before he confessed to the burglary.

Harris Gains His Freedom.

William Harris, the colored man implicated in the shooting affray on Third street, in which Albert Neumann was killed by William Winlock, was discharged from custody yesterday. It was brought out on the trial of Winlock that Harris was acting in self defense when he shot at Winlock. The authorities decided that it would be useless to attempt to secure a conviction of Harris, and he was released.

FORMER HIBBING POLICE CHIEF DIES SUDDENLY.

Cass Lake, Minn., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Donaldson Morrison, a resident of this place, dropped dead in the postoffice here last night while waiting for his mail. The coroner was called and said the cause of death was apoplexy. The deceased was at one time chief of police in Hibbing. None of his relatives could be located. He was buried today.

MEETING IN WEST END

Tessman Followers Will Hold Gathering at Columbia Hall.

An Old Line Republican States Some Plain Facts.

What promises to be the biggest meeting of the Tessman campaign up to date, will be held in Columbia hall, in the West end, this evening.

Among the speakers will be: Emil Tessman, M. J. Harney, William McEwen, Joseph Ward Reynolds, M. H. McMahon and Andrew Nelson.

This is the first big, open meeting that Mr. Tessman has held, and judging from the attendance at the workers' meetings, it will be a record breaker in point of attendance and enthusiasm. Any resident of Duluth who is interested in the present campaign, either from Mr. Tessman's standpoint or from Mr. Haven's, is invited to attend the meeting this evening.

• • •

Two interesting communications were received at the office of The Herald today in regard to the present campaign. One of them came from Ernest Peters, secretary of the trades and labor assembly, and the other was from a prominent local Republican, who encloses his name, but not for publication.

The communications follow:

To the Editor of The Herald:

I see that some of the office-seekers have revived and brought to life the Republican club named for our illustrious martyred president, James A. Garfield, after being inactive during two state campaigns, to elect, or rather try to elect, a Republican mayor, who was selected by a few self-chosen politicians behind closed doors. One of these men was not a legal voter, not having his second papers. It was a secret meeting from which gathering some of the best party workers were driven or herded like sheep into the hallway. I am a member of said club, and have been much pleased to see what noble work they have accomplished in days gone by for the party. One of the men who was so anxious to have the club endorse his candidate, after he failed to nominate the present mayor, if I remember right, refused to publish in his paper, even for pay, a resolution supporting the party's candidate for mayor two years ago, which was passed by the same club. I am surprised that the club would be whipped into line, if they have been, to support a perpetual officeseeker such as Mr. Haven, in my judgment, has shown himself to be. Let us look at the different jobs he has held and others that he has tried to hold. He was alderman for eight years, and during that time landed an appointment for supervisor of the census for St. Louis county, at a salary of $150 per month; county assessorship for one term at a good salary; secretary and manager of one or two county committees during state campaigns, at a good salary. These are the jobs he landed. He tried for, but did not land, the state weighmastership (when the present incumbent was sick at a sanitarium in Michigan), salary $2,500 per year; register at land office; receiver at land office; postmaster, or any other old job laying around loose, such as Mr. Bede's corresponding secretary, at a salary of $100 per month, which he now holds, I am informed. I think Mr. Haven has fed at the public crib about long enough. Don't you? Respectfully yours,
A REPUBLICAN FOR TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Friends of Alderman Haven have been appealing to the foilowers of organized labor for their vote, within the last two weeks. Where does Alderman Haven stand on the labor question? Was he not at one time president of the builders exchange? His record in the council also shows his attitude toward organized labor. On April 16, 1906, during the time the union printers were having their fight with their employers, a contract for some city printing came up, and Alderman Haven was one of those who voted to give the contract to Peachey & Lounsberry, a non-union firm, and at that time one of the chief opponents of the union printers.

Mr. Haven has never showed himself to be friendly to organized labor.
ERNEST PETERS,
Secretary Trades and Labor Assembly.

MAGISTRATE DROEGE

Declines to Resign at Request of Major McClellan.

New York, Jan. 28.—Otto H. Droege magistrate for whose resignation Mayor McClellan has asked because of his connection with certain alleged abuses in the conduct of the night court, has sent a letter to the mayor refusing to give up his office, and inviting the mayor to bring charges against him, if he feels so disposed.

After mailing the letter to Mayor McClellan, Mr. Droege made public a copy of the document. The letter says in part:

"As the only matter for which during my official career I deem myself subject to criticism, is the act of yielding to blackmail, which involves egregious folly, but involves no moral turpitude; and as my resignation would undoubtedly be construed by the public as a confession that I had been guilty of some wrong, I must decline to act on your request."

SCHOOL OF GRAND OPERA TO BE OPENED.

New York, Jan. 28.—Notices have been sent out to the effect that the school of grand opera established by Heinrich Conried in connection with the Metropolitan opera house will be discontinued after this season. The announcement is a blow to the students who have been depending upon this means of gaining a musical education and already plans are under way for the formation of another school to take its place.

POSTERS ARE BARRED.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 28.—The committee of the Newark common council charged with the task of censoring theatrical posters under recent ordinance yesterday refused to permit the posting of fifteen posters of various sizes. At the committee's meeting a delegation of ministers was present by invitation and assisted the committee.

GEORGE HAVEN HAS PNEUMONIA.

New York, Jan. 28.—It is reported that George C. Haven, president of the Metropolitan Opera & Real Estate company, the corporation that controls the Metropolitan opera house, is ill of pneumonia. Mr. Haven is past 70 years old and is well known in society and in financial circles.

HARDWARE MEN MEET.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The retail hardware men of the state met here this afternoon for a two days' session. This is the twelfth annual meeting and the largest attendance is present that has ever graced any events. Elaborate arrangements have been made for the occasion by President Emery of this city and his local associates, including the wholesale men.

VOTE OF WOMEN REJECTED.

Des Moines Club Espouses Cause and Would Invalidate Election.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 28. — The Des Moines Political Equality club, in making the first district court fight in Iowa for the right of women to vote under the Iowa statutes, demands that Judge Brennan declare the election for a new city hall illegal because women were not permitted to vote. Prominent club women testified as to their efforts to vote and of the way they were turned down by the election officials. Miss Grace Ballantyne, the only woman lawyer in the state, who is representing the plaintiffs, roasted the city hall officials unmercifully in beginning her argument.
